CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 4. This law has been the source of much perplexity to two of the most learned commentators, Michaelis and Boothroyd. Michaelis considers it as requiring that every animal killed for common food must first be brought to the door of the tabernacle, and have the blood sprinkled, and the fat consumed as a peace-offering; and this he considers as a temporary law, intended for the wilderness, and afterwards repealed, De. 12. 13, on the entrance to Canaan. Boothroyd proposes to reconcile the passages by supplying a clause found in the Samaritan and Septuagint versions, and which provides, not that animals for common food should be first offered as peace-offerings, but that no peace-offering should be killed anywhere but at the door of the tabernacle. Now an addition to or explanation of a divine law, it is easy to comprehend; but a direct repeal is a reflection on the legislator not to be admitted. The opinion of Michaelis is therefore to be rejected. Neither is it desirable to derive our expositions with Boothroyd from foreign sources. Let us therefore examine whether such resort be necessary. From ver. 5 we learn that the end of the law was, 'that the children of Israel might bring their sacrifices which they offered in the open field to the door of the tabernacle.' Now, as the preamble of an act of parliament explains, and confines the enactment to its proper object; so this exposition of the design of the law, though following after in place, is yet the virtual preamble not to a temporary provision, but to a 'statute for ever, throughout their generations.' The ordinance in Deuteronomy is therefore no repeal, but a mere declaratory enactment to remove any doubts that might arise as to the intention and limits of the former law. C.]

HALLWAY IN THE MUSEUM—CONTAINING ANTIQUITIES OLDER THAN THE TIME OF MOSES. [LEVITICUS, xvii.]—Most of the antiquities now contained in the Gizeh Museum are such as antedate the time of Moses, or else are of such things as were contemporary with him. They nearly all belong to the Ancient or the Middle Empire, and there is no better way to get a proper conception of the magnificence and grandeur of the civilization in the midst of which Moses grew up than to take a walk through the many hallways and rooms of this the most interesting museum in some respects on earth. Sometimes we look into the very faces of the statues representing the men with whom Moses lived. A study of Moses through this civilization heightens our admiration for the man who "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." No man of whom we have any record in history ever sacrificed more of worldly prospects and opportunity than this the greatest leader of Israel.

the LORD, even that man may be [g]cut off from among his people.

10 ¶ And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that [h]eateth any manner of blood; I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people.

11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you [i]upon the altar, to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.

12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, [k]No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.[2]

13 And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, [l]which hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall even[u] pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust.

14 For[v] it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh: for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof;[3] whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

15 ¶ And every soul that eateth that which died[4] of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger, he shall both [x]wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even: then shall he be clean.

16 But [y]if he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh, then he shall bear his iniquity.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Unlawful marriages. 19 Unlawful lusts.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I am the [a]LORD your God.

3 After[b] the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do; and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do; neither shall ye walk in their ordinances.

4 Ye shall [c]do my judgments, and keep mine ordinances, to walk therein; I am the LORD your God.

5 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments; [d]which if a man do, he shall live in them:[1] I am the LORD.

6 ¶ None[e] of you shall approach to any that is near of kin[2] to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD.

7 The [f]nakedness of thy father, or the nakedness of thy mother, shalt thou not uncover: she is thy mother; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

8 The[g] nakedness of thy father's wife shalt thou not uncover: it is thy father's nakedness.

9 The[h] nakedness of thy sister, the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home, or born abroad,[3] even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover.

10 The nakedness of thy son's daughter, or of thy daughter's daughter, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover: for theirs is thine own nakedness.

11 The nakedness of thy father's wife's daughter, begotten of thy father, (she is thy sister,) thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

12 Thou[i] shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's sister: she is thy father's near kinswoman.

13 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister: for she is thy mother's near kinswoman.

14 Thou[k] shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's brother, thou shalt not approach to his wife: she is thine aunt.

15 Thou[l] shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy daughter-in-law: she is thy son's wife; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

16 Thou[m] shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy brother's wife: it is thy brother's nakedness.

17 Thou[n] shalt not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter, neither shalt thou take her son's daughter, or her daughter's daughter, to uncover her nakedness; for they are her near kinswomen: it is wickedness.

18 Neither shalt thou take [o]a wife to her sister,[4] to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, besides the other in her life-time.

2 It was customary in some ancient heathen nations to eat the blood of the animals offered in sacrifice to their idols. The practice is alluded to in Ezek. 33:25. The prohibition of such idolatrous rites may have been in part aimed at here; but the grand reason why blood was not to be eaten is plainly stated; and Delitzsch has shown that the reason is sound and philosophic: 'For the life of the flesh is in the blood.' 'This phenomenon,' he says, 'rests on the ground, that all the activity of the body, especially that of the nervous and muscular systems, is dependent upon the circulation of the blood; for if the flow of blood is stopped from any part of the body, all its activity ceases immediately; a sensitive part loses all sensation in a very few minutes, and muscular action is entirely suspended. The blood is really the basis of the physical life; and so far the soul, as the vital principle of the body, is pre-eminently in the blood.'—P.

4 The text prohibits the marrying of two sisters together. This conduct in Jacob proved a source of vexation both to Leah and Rachel; who were more jealous of each other than of the handmaidens whom they willingly gave to their husbands; and perhaps it would be found on trial, that those who before had lived together in the intimate equality of this near relationship, would be more apt to rival each other, if married to the same man, than strangers would be; at least their jealousies and bickerings would be more unseemly and distressing.—Scott.

Ver. 7. [Devils, literally hairy ones. The Egyptians worshipped an imaginary deity called Pan—which means everything; because, in their mythology, he was considered the principle of all things: he was represented under the figure of a goat, his lower extremities covered with hair; hence the description in the text. Pan and his lascivious crew of satyrs and fauns (pictured as covered with hair) were the woodland deities of a degrading idolatry—and, to preserve Israel from its contagion, sacrifices in the open field were forbidden; and where circumstances permitted, were strictly confined to the door of the tabernacle. The phrase of abhorrence with which this worship is described, is not merely figurative but literal. In every system of idolatry down to this day, prostitution constitutes a part of the impure and satanic worship. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How high is the wisdom of God, by which he can enact what laws of worship, and means of access to him as are best! But to worship him according to our own inventions, to neglect the way of his appointing, so far from being acceptable before God, is both dangerous to ourselves, and considered by him as nearly connected with the idolatrous worship of devils. It is necessary, therefore, on every worshipping occasion, to cleave close to Jesus, as our altar and high-priest, and to the communion of his saints; and, for the preventing of false worship, for the honour of divinely-instituted ordinances, and for the uniting of the church, to adhere strictly to God's appointment, even in things circumstantial; and to prefer public ordinances to private. In this blood of animals, so noted because made an atonement for men, I behold the blood of the new covenant enjoined to me—the blood of Jesus Christ shed for me. Let me, therefore, impressed with the repeated commandments of Heaven, maintain the deepest reverence for it, and everything connected with it, and detest everything murderous or cruel! And let nothing deathful, dead, or dying, nothing that can be torn in pieces, or torn from me, but the ever-living Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be the provision of my soul and portion of my heart! If I am defiled by such things, either I must wash in Jesus' fountain opened, or perish in my sin.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 28. The expulsion of the nations of Canaan, by the alleged command of God, has often afforded a topic of cavil and objection to infidels. The simplest reply to such frivolous charges, is simply this—that for child-murder (see Ps. 106. 37, 38), forbidden in verse 21, the law of every civilized country, till this hour, inflicts a heavier penalty than voluntary expatriation (a penalty that was always within the choice of the Canaanites), even the penalty of death. And if an infidel were invested with the 23 Neither[x] shalt thou lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith; neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto: it is confusion.[5]

24 Defile[y] not ye yourselves in any of these things; for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you.

25 And the [z]land is defiled: therefore I do visit[a] the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself [b]vomiteth out her inhabitants.[6]

CHAPTER XIX.

A repetition of sundry laws.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, [a]Ye shall be holy:[1] for I the LORD your God am holy.

3 ¶ Ye shall [b]fear every man his mother and his father, and [c]keep my sabbaths: I am the LORD your God.

4 Turn[d] ye not unto idols, nor make to yourselves molten gods: I am the LORD your God.

5 ¶ And if ye [e]offer a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, ye shall offer it at your own will.

6 It [f]shall be eaten the same day ye offer it, and on the morrow: and if aught remain until the third day, it shall be burnt in the fire.

7 And if it be eaten at all on the third day, it is abominable; it shall not be accepted.

8 Therefore every one that eateth it shall bear his iniquity, because he hath profaned the hallowed thing of the LORD; and that soul shall be [g]cut off from among his people.

9 ¶ And [h]when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

10 And thou shalt not [i]glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; [k]thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger: I am the LORD your God.[2]

11 ¶ Ye [l]shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another.

12 ¶ And ye shall not [m]swear by my name falsely, neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

13 ¶ Thou[n] shalt not defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: [o]the wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning.

14 ¶ Thou [p]shalt not curse the deaf, nor power, not merely of ruling men, but what he so often attempts—of becoming the god of God, what penalty would he inflict? would he let the child-murderer go free? there are those indeed who would, 'their foolish heart being so far hardened' that they deny all accountability either to God or man—but with the exception of these, 'who, not liking to retain God in their knowledge, are given up to strong delusions,' even infidels will generally acknowledge, that for the crime of child-murder expatriation were a punishment far too gentle; and that they were, as God adjudged them, indeed worthy of death. The corruption of morals indicated by the entire chapter, and the shocking crimes that consummate the national guilt, are indeed sufficient to 'vindicate the ways of God' in the destruction of the Canaanites, and to afford a warning to all nations, that though judgment tarry it never sleeps. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What a place of transgression is our world! Sinful and dangerous is conformity to the men of it; and yet it is little avoided, nay, often much studied by many professors of the true religion! With infinite wisdom has God framed his rules of marriage for avoiding uncleanness, and for spreading of love and friendship among mankind: and yet sinners debase themselves, and violate the dictates of nature, in order to fulfil their filthy and furious lusts, arising from the abominable source of a desperately wicked heart. What need to distrust ourselves, and abstain from every, even the smallest, appearance of evil; for filthy lusts and absurd idolatries ripen, not only individuals, but nations, for ruin; and to observe the judgments inflicted on others would tend to deter us from their sins. As God seldom leaves men to the rage of their lusts, till they forsake him and his institutions, let me, conscious of my own inward readiness to commit the worst of crimes, and in the firm faith of God's infinite excellency, high dignity, and authority over me, of his new-covenant grant of himself, and delightful relation to me, as the Lord my God, cleave closely to his commandments, as an effectual preservative from them. And while I live truly on Jesus' perfect fulfilment of the law, in gratitude for his goodness, let me always abound in the work of the Lord.

CHAPTER XIX. [Ver. 2. There is a most important lesson conveyed in the divine directions—'Speak unto all the congregation: Ye shall be holy.' Religion is not intended as a mere guide for sober age, while licensing of thoughtless youth to 'walk in the light of their own eyes:' it is not intended as a mere check upon the appetites of the poor, while permitting the rich every indulgence of desire: it is not intended as a mere canon for ecclesiastics, which others are authorized to neglect or violate;—it speaks alike to all who desire to be called 'children of God,' and who hope to be 'joint heirs with Christ;' and it demands of all—'Be ye holy, for I the Lord your God am holy.' C.]

Ver. 7. [The passover must be eaten on the night of the day in which it was killed—it must be 'eaten in haste,' and if any remained till the morning, it must be burned with fire. Thus everything connected with it indicated the urgency of the Egyptians for their removal, and the people's anxiety for liberty. But the peace-offering, indicating a state of rest, may remain and be eaten on the second day; and not until the third is its use forbidden. It would then, in a warm climate, have become corrupted; would have ceased to be an emblem of him whose flesh must not 'see corruption;' and therefore is burned (ascends) on the third day, a type of him who on that day arose from the dead. C.]

Ver. 10. [The second specific provision (verses 9, 10) of the Mosaic poor-laws (the first being Ex. 23. 11), and admirably calculated to unite charity with industry, an essential principle in every measure of relief. C.]

Ver. 13. [Compare this punctuality of immediate payment to the humble operative, with the preference the worldly code gives to what are called debts of honour, and let the law of God be judged by the boundless superiority of its moral ordinances. C.]

HALL OF SARCOPHAGI, GIZEH MUSEUM—IN WHICH WERE PLACED THE BODIES OF THE REIGNING CLASSES OF EGYPT. [Leviticus, xix.]—Sarcophagi are the stone coffins in which the rich and distinguished people of Egypt were buried. It was only the rich people who were able to defray the expense of embalming, tomb-building, and the like in vogue among the highest class of the Egyptians. To mummify a body alone cost about $1,250. Some of the sarcophagi must have cost thousands of dollars. But it was because the Egyptians devoted such pains to the preservation of their dead and to the building of tombs that we have to-day such an accurate knowledge of their history, and that we are able to reconstruct the very times in which Moses lived and to get a correct conception of the civilization in all its details in the midst of which he grew up. And as we study Moses in connection with Egyptian history, more and more will our admiration for him be increased, and the more will we be inclined to the conviction that he was led by the spirit of God.

put a stumblingblock before the blind, but shalt fear thy God: I am the LORD.

15 ¶ Ye [g]shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou [h]shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.

16 ¶ Thou[i] shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer among thy people; neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbour: I am the LORD.[3]

17 ¶ Thou[k] shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart: [l]thou shalt in any wise rebuke[4] thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him.[5]

18 ¶ Thou [m]shalt not avenge nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people; but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the LORD.

19 ¶ Ye shall keep my statutes. [n]Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind. Thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed; neither shall a garment mingled of linen and woollen come upon thee.[6]

20 ¶ And whosoever [o]lieth carnally with a woman that is a bond-maid, betrothed[7] to an husband, and not at all redeemed, nor freedom given her, she[8] shall be scourged; they [p]shall not be put to death, because she was not free.

21 And he shall bring his [q]trespass-offering unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, even a ram for a trespass-offering.

22 And[b] the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass-offering before the LORD for his sin which he hath done: and the sin which he hath done shall be forgiven him.

23 ¶ And when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised: [c]three years shall it be as uncircumcised unto you; it shall not be eaten of.

24 But in the fourth year all the fruit thereof shall be [d]holy, to praise the LORD withal.

25 And in the fifth year [e]shall ye eat of the fruit thereof, that it may yield unto you the increase thereof: I am the LORD your God.

26 ¶ Ye [f]shall not eat any thing with the blood; neither shall ye [g]use enchantment, nor observe times.

27 ¶ Ye[h] shall not round the corners of your heads, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard.

28 Ye shall not [i]make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor print any marks upon you: I am the LORD.

29 ¶ Do[k] not prostitute[9] thy daughter, to cause her to be a whore; lest the land fall to whoredom, and the land become full of wickedness.

30 ¶ Ye shall [l]keep my sabbaths, and [m]reverence my sanctuary:[1] I am the LORD.

31 ¶ Regard[n] not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards,[2] to be defiled by them:[3] I am the LORD your God.

32 ¶ Thou shalt [o]rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man, and fear thy God: I am the LORD.

33 ¶ And [p]if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not vex[4] him.

34 But the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you [q]as one born among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself; for ye [r]were strangers in the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

35 ¶ Ye[s] shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in mete-yard, in weight, or in measure.

36 Just balances, just weights,[5] a just ephah, and a just hin, shall ye have: [t]I am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt.

37 Therefore [u]shall ye observe all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: I am the LORD.

how to punish those who, by inhumanly mocking the afflicted, are in reality 'reproaching their Maker,' Pr. 17. 5. C.]

Ver. 19. [This law did not forbid to the Jew the use of mules purchased from another people, but the intentional production of them in his own flock. The whole law was calculated to prevent unnatural commixtures, and to remind Israel that they were a peculiar and separate people. C.]

Ver. 26. [Enchantments being derived from a word signifying a serpent, there is reason to think the law forbids augury or fortune-telling by observation of serpents. Times, that is, what are called fortunate or lucky days, or the reverse: a wretched superstition still lingering wherever second causes are more regarded than the overruling and ever-watchful providence of the Almighty. C.]

Ver. 28. [Cutting the flesh was a common mode of mourning in Egypt, as the murderous suttee is still in India. Printing marks—in modern language, tattooing—has been found almost in all nations. The Britons were so ornamented, rather so disfigured, in the times of Julius Cæsar. The Bedouin Arabs, the New Zealanders, and other tribes, still retain the same barbarous custom. The custom seems to have originated in superstition and idolatry, and, as peculiarly calculated to preserve their powers, receives an emphatic prohibition from the Lord. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In these peace-offerings let me behold Jesus, my peace-maker with God, and speedily receive and live on him by faith. In these gleanings let me observe what care God takes of the poor: nor can I have any true religion without a similar temper. Yea, let me think what gleanings of promises, and deeds of grace, for us poor strangers of the Gentiles, are left in every corner of the Jewish Scriptures. In these forborne trees, let me learn to avoid all rash desires of created enjoyments, or even honouring the Lord with first-fruits not arrived at their perfection. Let me never attempt to alter God's frame of creatures; never attempt to mix works and grace; Jesus' righteousness and my own; his Spirit and my natural abilities; his truth and my own fancies; his ordinances and my own inventions. If I enjoy the directions of God's word and Spirit, let me be ashamed to copy after heathen superstition; but let me carefully observe the positive institutions of my God, and never neglect the weightier matters of the law. If God has delivered his moral precepts so briefly, let me extend my meditations on them: and, in all my obedience, let me be influenced by the firm faith that the lawgiver is JEHOVAH, my God in Christ. Whatsoever is not of this faith is sin. Nor can my obedience be sincere without being universal to all his commandments.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 2. Molech, worshipped either by children passing between two fires, or being placed in the hands, or in the body, of the brazen statue intensely heated, by which means they were instantly destroyed. C.] of Israel, Whosoever he be of [a]the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn in Israel, that [b]giveth any of his seed unto Molech,[1] he shall surely be put to death; the people of the land shall stone him with stones.

3 And I will [c]set my face against that man, and will cut him off from among his people; because he hath given of his seed unto Molech, to defile my sanctuary, and to profane my holy name.

4 ¶ And if [d]the people of the land [e]do any ways hide their eyes from the man, when he giveth of his seed unto Molech, and kill him not;

5 Then I will [f]set my face against that man, and against his family, and will cut him off, and all that go a [g]whoring after him, to commit whoredom with Molech, from among their people.

6 ¶ And the [h]soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people.

7 ¶ Sanctify[i] yourselves therefore, and be ye holy: for I am the LORD your God.

8 And ye [k]shall keep my statutes, and do them: I am the LORD which [l]sanctify you.

9 ¶ For[m] every one that curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death: he hath cursed his father or his mother; his [n]blood shall be upon him.

10 ¶ And [o]the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

11 ¶ And[p] the man that lieth with his father's wife hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

12 And [q]if a man lie with his daughter-in-law, both of them shall surely be put to death: they have wrought confusion;[2] their blood shall be upon them.

13 ¶ If[r] a man also lie with mankind as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

14 And [s]if a man take a wife and her mother, it is wickedness: they shall be burnt with fire, both he and they; that there be no wickedness among you.

15 And[t] if a man lie with a beast, he shall surely be put to death: and ye shall slay the beast.

16 And if a woman approach unto any beast, and lie down thereto, thou shalt kill the woman and the beast: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

17 ¶ And[u] if a man shall take his sister, his father's daughter, or his mother's daughter, and see her nakedness, and she see his nakedness, it is a wicked thing; and they shall be cut off in the sight of their people: he hath uncovered his sister's nakedness; [v]he shall bear his iniquity.

18 And[w] if a man shall lie with a woman having her sickness, and shall uncover her nakedness; he hath discovered[3] her fountain, and she hath uncovered the fountain of her blood; and both of them shall be [x]cut off from among their people.[4]

19 And [a]thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister, nor of thy father's sister; for he uncovereth his near kin: they shall bear their iniquity.

20 And if [b]a man shall lie with his uncle's wife, he hath uncovered his uncle's nakedness: they shall bear their sin; they shall [c]die childless.

21 And [d]if a man shall take his brother's wife, it is an unclean thing;[5] he hath uncovered his brother's nakedness: they shall be [6]childless.

22 ¶ Ye [e]shall therefore keep all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them; that the land, whither I bring you to dwell therein, [f]spue you not out.

23 And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nations which I cast out before you: for they committed all these things, and [g]therefore I abhorred them.

24 But I have said unto you, [h]Ye shall inherit their land, and I will give it unto you to possess it, a land that floweth with milk and honey: I am the LORD your God, which have [i]separated you from other people.

25 Ye[k] shall therefore put difference between clean beasts and unclean, and between unclean fowls and clean: and ye shall not make your souls abominable by beast, or by fowl, or by

1 Molech was an idol of the Ammonites to whom children were burned in sacrifice, or caused to pass through the fire, in order that the rest of the family might prosper.—(Molech, or Moloch, or Malcham, appears to have been one of the most ancient deities of Western Asia. It was especially honoured by the Ammonites and Phœnicians; the latter seem to have identified it with Baal. Human sacrifices were offered up to it, and the mode in which these were offered, at least in later times, was as follows:—A brazen statue of the deity with stretched-out arms was heated by means of an internal furnace. The child was then placed in the outstretched arms, and was thus roasted alive. In the days of Solomon a statue of Molech was erected in the valley of the Kidron, at the southern base of Mount Moriah. The cruelties there enacted, and the curse entailed by them, are mentioned in Je.7.31-34.—P.]

4 The enormities forbidden in ch. xviii. are here declared punishable with death. This punishment, it is supposed, was in many cases inflicted by strangling; in other cases, stoning is appointed; and where the death is declared to be by burning, it is supposed, not burning alive, but consuming the body by fire, after death by stoning. In the case of Achan, he was first stoned to death, though the punishment ordered was that of burning. Jos. 7.25,26. The punishment of adultery by death was not peculiar in eastern countries to the law of Moses. On the contrary, it seems to have been universal among them. Besides the greatness of the crime itself, it led, in the jealous and revengeful passions which it excited, to assassinations and bloody quarrels.—J.

Ver. 4. [But should not charity cover, rather than publish or punish, 'the multitude of sins?' 1 Pe. 4. 8. Yes; charity (fervent charity among yourselves) shall cover the multitude of sins against one another, but may not interfere with the offences of idolatrous murder, which is an offence against God. Such was the judicial law of the Jewish state; the church of Christ has the same law in principle, but with spiritual penalties, because she is spiritual, 1 Co. 5. 5; 10. 20; 2 Co. 6. 14; Ep. 5. 11. C.]

Ver. 20. [Childless has, by some, been supposed to signify, that the guilty parties should suffer death, and so have no children, but this is inconsistent with possible circumstances, as, for example, the crime might be committed in a strange land, where the Jewish law, were it even death, could not be enforced; or the crime might be concealed, so that the infliction of the penalty would not be attempted. By comparing the passage with Je. 22. 30, where Coniah is written childless, with 1 Ch. 3. 16, 17, where we find he had a large family (there called Jeconiah); and then returning to Jeremiah, where he defines childless to mean expulsion for ever from the throne he had disgraced by his wickedness, we will be enabled to conclude that childless necessarily means no more than disinherited descendants are not reckoned to their guilty parents in the public genealogies. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—At what a terrible expense do Satan's votaries readily serve him!—and shall I count anything too dear for the Lord! Miserable is the state of a nation when the vilest idolatries, inhumanities, and abominations break out; and especially when they pass unpunished: but corrupt nature is prone to evil; the commands of God are therefore enforced with the most awful penalties and threatenings of death; and filthy pleasures infallibly issue in fearful punishments: nor are any more exposed to the severe indignation of God than those professors who wilfully imitate the profane world. But honourable, pleasant, and profitable is a course of universal holiness; especially amidst a multitude of temptations and examples to the contrary: and delightful is the study of it, when God, any manner of living thing that creepeth[7] on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean.

26 And ye shall be holy unto me: for I the LORD am holy, and have severed you from other people, [m]that ye should be mine.

27 ¶ A[n] man also or woman, that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death: they shall stone [o]them with stones; their blood shall be upon them.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Of the priests' mourning. 6 Of their holiness. 7, 13 Of their marriages. 9 Of a priest's daughter convicted of playing the harlot. 16 The priests that have blemishes must not minister in the sanctuary.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron, and say unto them, [b]There shall none be defiled for the dead among his people:

2 But for his kin that is near unto him, that is, for his mother, and for his father, and for his son, and for his daughter, and for his brother,

3 And for his sister a virgin, that is nigh unto him, which hath had no husband; for her may he be defiled.

4 But he shall not defile himself, [c]being a chief man among his people, to profane himself.

5 They[d] shall not make baldness[1] upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corner of their beard,[2] nor make any cuttings in their flesh.[3]

6 ¶ They shall [e]be holy unto their God, and not profane the name of their God: for the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and the bread of their God, they do offer; therefore they shall be holy.

7 ¶ They[f] shall not take a wife that is a whore, or profane; neither shall they take a woman put away from her husband: for he is holy unto his God.

8 Thou shalt [g]sanctify him therefore; for he offereth[h] the bread of thy God: he shall be holy unto thee: for I the LORD, which sanctify you, am holy.

2 These prohibitions, enjoined upon the common people, ch. 19. 28, are here repeated for the priests, who might have supposed that they were exempted, and might have imitated the Egyptian priests, who followed these practices, and were particularly careful to shave off all the hair of their bodies every third day.—I.

3 Such barbarous exhibitions of frantic grief are not uncommon among eastern nations. Even Mohammedans in the present day who profess peculiar sanctity, and some other sects, including a few Christians, cut and disfigure themselves, as proofs of devotion to their God. 4 This terrible punishment to be inflicted in this case, was intended to prevent and punish the disgrace that would accrue to religion from such a crime in a priest's daughter; as it would expose as a severe restraint not only upon the priests' children, but would make them duly careful to bring them up in the fear of God.—I.

5 Whenever the high-priest was attending or officiating in the sanctuary, he must not go out on any occasion whatever to leave the service of the living God; nor profane himself by engaging in common employments, or such as would render him ceremonially unclean. The reason assigned, viz. that the crown of the anointing oil of his God is upon him, intimates that more is expected from the Lord's high-priest than from others, because his 'anointing' was typical of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, and was a crown of glory and diadem of beauty; and might denote, being an anointed priest, also his prophetic and regal character as a type of Christ.—I.

as our own God, sanctifies us wholly, soul, body, and spirit; and thus forms us for himself, that we may dwell alone, and show forth his praise.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 1. Defiled—by touching the dead body, entering the house where it lay, following to the grave, or mourning.—Patrick. This prohibition extended to every common priest, except in cases of near kindred, in which, however, though he might be defiled, by the unavoidable demands of affection, still he must not voluntarily defile himself farther. The entire priesthood was a type of Christ, who was 'undefiled and separate from sinners,' He. 7. 26; yet was not ashamed to call his church for which he gave himself, Ep. 5. 25, brethren, He. 2. 11, and who, 'himself having suffered, being tempted, was able (by sympathy and power) to succour them that are tempted.' C.]

Ver. 7. [This verse would seem to imply the possibility of such moral degradation in the priesthood as, to modern ideas, may appear impossible. But it was necessary to guard against the infectious example of the heathen priests, who, in their impure rites, prostituted their wives and daughters. The Mosaic law is even more morally stringent than our translation represents, for zarah does not signify a prostitute, but one who had been humbled.—He is holy—not the husband, but the priest, who, whatever might be his personal character, was ceremonially holy, or dedicated to God, and should be personally holy in accordance with his profession. C.]

Ver. 12. [High-priest, literally, the priest, the great one, who, in respect of his greatness, was the emblem of Christ exalted, with 'a name above every name.' Now, as Christ 'endured the cross for the joy set before him,' He. 12. 2, and was 'anointed with the oil of gladness,' He. 1. 9, a mourning high-priest would not have fitly represented him to the eye of faith. Neither might the high-priest go out of the sanctuary; so Christ, once exalted, 'the heavens must receive till the times of the restitution of all things,' Ac. 3. 21, when he will appear the second time without sin to salvation, He. 9. 28. C.]

Ver. 14. [This peculiarity in the marriage of the high-priest is the emblem of the spiritual marriage of Christ with his church, so beautifully set forth in Scripture. See particularly Is. 54. 5; Ho. 2. 7, 16 (Ishi signifies my husband); 2 Co. 11. 2. C.]

Ver. 17. [Blemish, deficiency, redundancy, or injury of any bodily member, blindness, imperfection of growth, or any unclean disease, excluded from the priesthood, and constituted, as it were, a providential excommunication, not from certain sacred privileges, but from sacred offices. This ordinance forms, 1. A beautiful image of Christ, the 'lamb without blemish,' 1 Pe. 1. 19. 2. Of the holy priesthood (of the church, appointed) 'to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ,' 1 Pe. 2. 5; white, 3. It reads, in the name of God, a solemn rebuke to those parents who, from worldly motives, dedicate the most incompetent members of their families to the service of God in the holy ministry, and to those who, from similar worldly motives, enter into a work for which they know themselves incompetent, and to which they feel no call from the Spirit of God. C.]

Ver. 23. [The priest with a blemish may eat of the holy things, the priest unclean must not taste, lest he die, ch. 7. 20; 21. 2. The reason of the distinction is plain—a blemish is the infliction or correction of God, nor come nigh unto the [e]altar, because he hath a blemish; that he profane not my sanctuaries: for I the LORD do [y]sanctify them.

24 And Moses told it [z]unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 The priests in their uncleanness must abstain from the holy things. 6 How they shall be cleansed. 10 Who of the priest's house may eat of the holy things. 17 The sacrifices must be without blemish. 26 The age of the sacrifice. 29 The law of eating the sacrifice of thanksgiving.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, that they [a]separate themselves[1] from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they profane not my holy name in those things which they hallow[b] unto me: I am the LORD.

3 Say unto them, [c]Whosoever he be of all your seed, among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things, which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be [d]cut off from my presence: I am the LORD.

4 What[e] man soever of the seed of Aaron is a leper, or hath a running issue,[2] he shall not eat of the holy things, until he be clean. And whoso toucheth any thing that is unclean by the dead, or a man whose seed goeth from him;

5 Or [f]whosoever toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, or a man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath;

6 The [g]soul which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he wash his flesh with water.

7 And when the sun is down,[3] he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of [h]the holy things; because it is his food.

8 That[i] which dieth of itself, or is torn with beasts, he shall not eat, to defile himself therewith: I am the LORD.

9 They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, lest they [k]bear sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it:[4] I the LORD do sanctify them.

10 ¶ There shall no [l]stranger eat of the holy thing: a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing.

11 But if the priest [m]buy any soul with his[5] money, he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house; they shall eat of his meat.

The holy things were the sacrifices given to the priests, the show-bread, and whatever was presented to the Lord. When under any uncleanness contracted by their own fault, they must not so much as eat of those things. for which church privileges are the appropriate remedy; uncleanness is the wicked choice of the sinner's own will, and would be sanctioned and encouraged by latitudinarian church-fellowship. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In these ceremonial figures I behold Jesus, my priest for ever, untainted with selfish affections or immoderate passions—I behold him holy, harmless, and undefiled—perfect as his Father who is in heaven is perfect; personally united with an unspotted manhood; graciously united to virgin churches; and spiritually married to washed and sanctified souls; nor ever decoyed from attending his work, no, not by the most powerful temptations. Let me learn likewise what noted examples gospel-ministers ought to be of holiness and purity; what close and earnest attention they ought to give to their work; with what patience and resignation they ought to bear the loss of worldly comforts; how circumspect they ought to be with respect to their marriage and family; and how, as servants, they ought to labour to be perfect and unblemished, even as their Master. Yea, if I name the name of Christ, whatever be my place in his church, let me depart from iniquity, and follow after holiness in all manner of conversation. While God is my portion, as well as my Master, on no account should I desert or neglect his worship; and while my God liveth, never should I sorrow for deceased relations, or withdrawn comforts, as those who have no hope. Since I am a child of Jesus, let me never by whorish pollutions or apostasy discredit him or endanger myself. Since I am betrothed to him, let me never wittingly lay his enemy, an heir of hell, in my bosom. And since God hath promised to supply all my wants, let me cast my cares on him, and firmly trust that he will perfect his work which concerneth me, rendering me perfect, even as my Father which is in heaven is perfect. And let me bless the Lord, that though my infirmities should disqualify me for office in the church, they do not debar me from partaking of Jesus, my sacred provision, in the courts and ordinances of his grace.

THE DRAWER OF WATER FROM THE NILE—THE METHOD OBSERVED IN THE DAYS OF MOSES. [LEVITICUS, xxii: 1.]—We give this picture simply because it illustrates a scene in the land of Moses, and the view we have is a characteristic scene. It is not modern; it is just the very method of drawing water observed in the days of Moses. Labor is so cheap in Egypt and modern machinery so expensive, that labor-saving machines have not yet been introduced into Egypt. Even merchandise can be transported on the backs of camels more cheaply than by railway. The cheapest thing in Egypt is human muscle, and until the Egyptians are educated to a higher plane of life, they will draw water as they have always done. This water is used for irrigating the soil. It is taken from the Nile and poured into little trenches cut through the land, and from these it is emptied into other trenches, until whole squares of the soil are irrigated.

25 Neither from a [d]stranger's hand shall ye offer the [e]bread of your God of any of these; because their corruption is in them, and blemishes be in them: they shall not be accepted for you.[2]

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

27 When a bullock, or a sheep, or a goat, is brought forth, then it shall be [f]seven days under the dam; and from the eighth day, and thenceforth, it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

28 And whether it be cow or ewe,[3] ye shall not kill it [g]and her young both in one day.

29 ¶ And when ye will offer [h]a sacrifice of thanksgiving unto the LORD, offer it at your own will.

30 On the same day it shall be eaten up; ye shall leave [i]none of it until the morrow:[4] I am the LORD.

31 Therefore shall ye [k]keep my commandments and do them: I am the LORD.

32 Neither shall ye [l]profane my holy name; but I will be hallowed among the children of Israel: [m]I am the LORD which hallow you, 33 That[n] brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD.

1 Here the law of the Sabbath is again repeated. Its frequent repetition in such express and solemn terms indicates its importance. It is here intimated in what way it was to be kept, both in religious assemblies for public worship and instruction, and not, as too many suppose, to be spent thereafter either in worldly business or pleasure, but as a Sabbath of the Lord; a holy Sabbath in all their dwellings.—J.

On the day after it, that is, on the 17th, the offering of first-fruits was to be presented. The time of offering was therefore the beginning of April, at which time the barley-harvest commenced in southern Palestine. The wheat-harvest was two or three weeks later. 6 If religion do not possess the first place, it really possesses no place in the heart. It must be lord before and above the world. 30. 29, 30. Against this tendency the Lord directs the provisions of this law. Accordingly the order to the priests to separate themselves from the holy things, imports, that the priests presume not to plead any exemption from the law relating to the use of holy things, upon any plea of office; but rather that they should consider their office as imposing an obligation to a more scrupulous observance of the divine precepts, 1 Ti. 4. 12; Phi. 3. 17; 2 Th. 3. 9; 1 Pe. 5. 3. The extension of this law, and its privileges, to the priest's purchased and permanent servants, as well as family, ver. 11, 13, shadows out the ingathering of the Gentiles to the 'purchased possession,' Ep. 1. 14, and inculcates upon Christians an impressive lesson of the necessity not merely of personal but of family religion. C.]

Ver. 23. [Why this distinction? A vow was a solemn promise made to God, of which it is said, 'The Lord will surely require it,' De. 23. 21; see Ps. 65. 1; 76. 11; Ec. 5. 4. Now, while requiring it, God requires neither more nor less; consequently the sacrifice must present an exact image of the vow; even as the work of Christ was in exact correspondence with the promise of the heavenly grace, 'Lo, I come to do thy will, O God,' He. 10. 7. But the free-will-offering, being, as its very name imports, free, an emblematic freedom, was not rejected on account of any natural defect or superfluity. But let it be remembered, this free-will-offering was to death; and then the consolatory doctrine of God's compassion to our natural defects and superfluities, while it furnishes consolation to the tempted and troubled spirit, Ro. 7. 8–10, 13, 15, 18, 21, 23, 24, totally excludes every unhallowed presumption of 'continuing in sin, that grace might abound,' Ro. 6. 1, and irresistibly enforces the fact, that true believers, whilst they 'become dead to the law by the body of Christ,' are 'married to him who is raised from the dead, that they should bring forth fruit unto God,' Ro. 7. 4. C.]

Ver. 25. [Though by instruction, example, and prayer, believers may aid one another, yet no man can be converted for another; and 'except ye be converted, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven,' Mat. 18. 3. Religion cannot be by proxy, it must be personal. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Beholding in these figures the perfect and permanent purity of my Redeemer's person and nature; the persevering exactness of his obedience; the absolute perfection of his sacrifice of himself, and its unfailing virtue for saving all who believe in Jesus Christ; we may observe that it is altogether necessary to exclude wicked persons, and even scandalous saints, from the more sacred provision of the church, the seals of God's covenant; that every person or work, dedicated to the service of God, should be devoted to him in holiness; and the greatest care be used in meddling with holy things; for cursed is the deceiver that offereth unto the Lord things corrupt or unripe. But especially must we remember, that all delay of the cordial reception and improvement of Jesus Christ, and his fulness, offered for our comfort in the gospel, is infinitely sinful and dangerous, for thus only can we secure access to God; and nothing can powerfully influence us to obedience but a firm faith and deep sense of his redeeming love.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 4. Feasting and holiness are generally esteemed incompatible; but there is no more necessary separation than between God and man. Now God and man we never find reconciled to each other, Ro. 8. 7, unless in the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ, 2 Co. 5. 18–20; so feasting and holiness we will never find united, until we have learned 'to use the world without abusing it,' 1 Co. 7. 31; a lesson which nothing short of 'the renewing of the Spirit,' Tit. 3. 5, can effectuate. C.]

Ver. 5. [The Jews reckoned two concurrent years; the one sacred, relating to religion, the other civil, relating to temporalities. The sacred year began with the equinoctial new-moon in spring; and on the fourteenth day the passover, the parent of all their feasts, was celebrated.—Note, The Jewish feasts begin with the death of the lamb, and the sprinkling of its blood, after which immediately follows deliverance from bondage. So the believer's first joy dates from his knowledge of his Saviour's sorrows; his hunger and thirst are after righteousness, and he is filled, Mat. 5. 6; he keeps the perpetual feast, of a new year of a new life, because 'Christ his passover is sacrificed for him,' 1 Co. 5. 7, 8. C.]

Ver. 17. [Why is leaven so strictly prohibited in the passover, and on so many other occasions? see Ex. 12. 15; 13. 7; 34. 25; Le. 2. 11; 6. 17; 10. 12; and why, in the feast of pentecost (which signifies fifty, and was 16 Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye number [r]fifty days;[5] and ye shall offer a new meat-offering unto the LORD.

17 Ye shall bring out of your habitations two[s] wave-loaves of two tenth-deals: they shall be of fine flour; they shall be [t]baken with leaven; they are [u]the first-fruits unto the LORD.

18 And ye shall [v]offer with the bread seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock and two rams: they shall be for a burnt-offering unto the LORD, with their meat-offering and their drink-offerings, even an offering made by fire, of sweet savour unto the LORD.

19 Then ye shall [w]sacrifice one kid of the goats for a sin-offering, and two lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of peace-offerings.

20 And the priest [x]shall wave them, with the bread of the first-fruits, for a wave-offering before the LORD, with the two lambs: they shall be [y]holy to the LORD for the priest.

21 And ye shall [z]proclaim on the self-same day, that it may be an holy convocation unto you; ye shall do no servile work therein: [a]it shall be a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations.

22 ¶ And [b]when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not make clean riddance of the corners of thy field when thou reapest, neither shalt thou gather any gleaning of thy harvest; thou shalt leave them unto the poor and to the stranger:[8] I am the LORD your God.

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, In[c] the seventh month, in the first day of the month, shall ye have a sabbath, a [d]memorial of blowing of trumpets, an holy convocation.[7]

so called because on the fiftieth day from the passover this feast was celebrated), why, in this feast, is the commixture of leaven directly enjoined? Let it be observed, that a principle is good or bad according to the commixture. Thus, love, commingled with the world, cannot co-exist with the love of God, 1 Jn. 2. 15; but love, commingled with the knowledge of Christ, is very God dwelling in the heart, 1 Jn. 4. 16. Love in the one combination we must expel; love in the other must abound more and more, Phl. 1. 9; 1 Th. 3. 12. It is thus that leaven representing the active principle of the sinner in a state of worse than Egyptian bondage, Ro. 6. 16, is utterly to be cast out; while leaven representing the active principle of a believer 'made free from sin,' Ro. 6. 18, is carefully to be retained. This feast being one of the harvest, the leaven might well represent the secret blessing of increase the Lord had openly given; and being a feast of thanksgiving, would also set forth the secret, yet all-pervading and increasing, quality of grace, as it is written, Am. 4. 5, 'Offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving with leaven;' and again, 2 Pe. 3. 18, 'Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.' For the kingdom of heaven, both in the heart of a single believer and of the whole church, 'is like leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened,' Mat. 13. 33. C.]

Ver. 24. [On account of the trumpets of rams' horns employed in announcing the jubilee, Le. 25. 9, and by Joshua at Jericho, ch. 6. 4, as well as by Asaph, Ps. 81. 3 (for the Hebrew original distinguishes them from the silver trumpets, Nu. 10. 2, 10), many of the Jewish rabbins are of opinion that the feast of trumpets was a memorial of the deliverance of Isaac by the substitution of a ram, Ge. 22. 13: and because the original Hebrew in the text means a shout of a multitude, as well as blowing of trumpets, others are of opinion that it was an anniversary memorial of creation, according to Job 38. 7. Basil and Theodoret considered it a memorial of the trumpet in the delivery of the law on Sinai, Ex. 19. 16; Patrick, as a solemn celebration of the entrance of the civil new year. Both Jennings and Cruden deliver it as an admitted opinion that the Scriptures do not, as in other cases, acquaint us with the occasion of its institution. Now, this being contrary to the analogy of Scripture, in which quotation and comparison constitute (under the Spirit of God) the great instruments of interpretation, let us therefore search the Scriptures, and we will find it recorded, Ps. 81. 3, 'Blow ye the trumpet in the new-moon, on our solemn feast day. For this was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob. This he ordained in Joseph (the sold deliverer) for a testimony, when he (the Lord) went out through (or against) Egypt, where I heard a language that I understood not.' Is not the trumpet sound, therefore, a memorial of the judgment of Egypt and the deliverance of Israel, and of the unintelligible Egyptian tongue? For such is the sound of the trumpet, except blown by an experienced trumpeter, and falling upon the practised ear of the soldier instructed in the secret meaning of the different calls, see Nu. 10. 4; 1 Co. 14. 8. Hence, in the New Testament, the trumpet's voice is always for judgment and deliverance, as in 1 Co. 15. 52; and in the last scenes of Revelation, during the trumpet of the seventh angel, we are told, 'the mystery of God shall be finished,' Re. 10. 7, which terminates in the succeeding chapters, see 11. 15, 18; 12. 9–12; 17. 1; 18. 1, 2, 4; 19. 6, 7, in the judgment and destruction of the mystical Babylon, and the final deliverance of the church of the redeemed. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While I consider these sacred festivals as memorials—of the finished work of creation—of Israel's deliverance from Egypt—of the giving of the law at Sinai—of the provocation of the golden calf, and reconcilement relative to it—and of the Hebrews dwelling in tents—let me also discern them as typical figures of the gospel rests in the apostolic, millennial, and eternal periods. Jesus' person, work, and fulness appear as the end and substance of them all; and the oblations then offered represent to me Jesus, my whole burnt-offering, who kept the law and glorified all the divine perfections in my stead; Jesus, my sin-offering, who pardons every crime; Jesus, my peace-offering, whose sacrifice was acceptable to God, quiets my conscience, and comforts my heart; Jesus, my meat-offering, who is meat indeed for the nourishment of my

CAIRO FROM THE CITADEL—NEAR WHERE THE ISRAELITES SOJOURNED IN EGYPT. [Leviticus, xxiv:1.]—We are viewing this city from the Citadel, which is a small town in itself, and was built by Mohammed Ali. From the Citadel we have a fine view of Cairo. The pyramids are in the distance to the west, and the Nile is seen winding its way toward the sea between. Cairo has a population of about 500,000. It has absorbed into itself and may be called the modern representative of Memphis and Heliopolis, and the surrounding cities of ancient times. The Khedive spends part of the year here. Cairo was the home of the distinguished pasha who aided DeLesseps in opening the Suez canal. It is a strange commentary upon history that this region, once swept by the Pharaohs, should now be under the dominion of a Christian nation. The English soldier is seen on all sides in Cairo.

38 Beside the [t]sabbaths of the LORD, and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your free-will-offerings, which ye give unto the LORD.

39 Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have [u]gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days: on the first day shall be a sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a sabbath.

40 And ye shall take you on the first day the [x]boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm-trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; and ye shall [y]rejoice before the LORD your God seven days.[3]

41 And ye shall keep it a feast unto the LORD seven days in the year. [z]It shall be a statute for ever in your generations; ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month.

42 Ye shall [a]dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths:

43 That[b] your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

44 And[c] Moses declared unto the children of Israel the feasts of the LORD.

3 It was a typical feast. It is supposed by many that our blessed Saviour was born much about the time of this feast; then he left his mansions of light above to 'tabernacle among us,' Jo. 1. 14 and he dwelt in booths. And the worship of God under the New Testament is prophesied of under the notion of keeping the feast of tabernacles, Zec. 14. 16. Jer. 31. The gospel of Christ is 'to dwell in tabernacles,' to sit loose to the world as those who 'have here no continuing city.' . . . for it teaches us 'to rejoice before the Lord our God.' Those are the circumcision, Israelites indeed, that always 'rejoice in Christ Jesus,' Phil. 3. 3. And the more we are taken off from this world, the less liable we are to the interruption of our joys.—Henry.

soul. Yea, they represent to me how his people, and their services offered through him, are the delight of his Father, and the joy of his own heart. In the first-fruits of barley and flour let me behold Jesus in his debasement and glory, as having in all things the pre-eminence, sanctifying the whole harvest of lost men, and all their fruits of righteousness; and as offered to be the present and endless nourishment of my soul. Let them also figure out the lovers of God, who are first-fruits to God and the Lamb; and their ready and acceptable service. In the passover I discern him as our passover sacrificed for us. In the feast of unleavened bread, I see him, as through his whole life, a man of sorrows; but holy, harmless, and undefiled. In pentecost, I behold him exhibited as the law-fulfiller in the apostolic period for the salvation of multitudes. In the feast of trumpets, I hear the gospel sound, from morning to evening of the Christian period, proclaiming a full salvation, through a crucified Redeemer, to all the ends of the earth. In the fast of expiation, I again behold him finishing transgression, and making an end of sin, the sin of a whole lost world, in one day; and having by himself purged away our sins, sitting down at the right hand of the majesty in the heavens, there to appear in the presence of God for us. And in the feast of tabernacles he is prefigured as tabernacling in our nature and world, that we might have familiar fellowship with him, particularly in the apostolic and millennial, but chiefly in the eternal period. Let me bless the Lord for such manifold memorials of Jesus; and especially that our privileges under the gospel are still more excellent, our enemies themselves being judges. Let me observe holy seasons in a holy manner. Let the Sabbaths of the Lord be kept in all our hearts, in all our dwellings, and by all under our care. Let us honour the Lord with the first-fruits of all our substance. While kind to strangers, to the poor and destitute, let us hearken to the joyful sound of salvation to miserable sinners; and, looking on Jesus Christ as crucified for us, let us afflict our souls till God himself wipe away all tears from our eyes; and when our harvest and vintage of labours are ended, then shall we commemorate with pleasure our hardships by the way, and rejoice to change them for an eternal weight of glory.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 11. Blasphemed the NAME, as it stands in the Hebrew, the words 'of the Lord' being supplied by the translators. The Hebrew for blaspheme signifies to gore, as a beast with a horn; to pierce as with a sharp instrument: so it is translated, Is. 36: 6, and well representing the mixture of contempt and hatred of God from which blasphemy springs. The name is evidently that of the Angel of the covenant, of whom God had said, Ex. 23. 21, 'Provoke him not, for MY NAME is in him:' this was he of whom the apostle spoke, Ac. 3. 16, 'There is none other name given under heaven, amongst men, whereby we must be saved.' This is he who 'by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the angels,' He. 1. 4, even 'a name that is above every name,' Phi. 2. 9. All that heard the blasphemer were commanded to lay their hands upon his head, (1) to identify his person; (2) to testify to his guilt; (3) to witness the great truth that sin is worthy of death; (4) to attach the guilt of the whole congregation, were they authoritatively to sanction sin by silence, acquiescence, or approval; and (5) to represent its transference from the congregation to the guilty individual condemned and put to death by command of God, and the concurrence of the congregation.—Note, (1) How careful should Christians be, lest by any timid silence in the sight of the wicked, Ps. 39. 1, 2, by any failure of just and loving reproof, or by any act of joining with them or approval of them, Ep. 5. 11, they should become 'partakers of other men's sins,' 1 Ti. 2. 22. (2) Let blasphemers recollect that awful intimation, Mat. 12. 36; and if 'for every idle word,' then how for every blasphemous word, will they be able to 'give account in the day of judgment?' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in Jesus' light I see light, and feed upon him, especially from Sabbath to Sabbath, let me essay to give light in his church, and be a good savour of Christ, in the feeding of his people with the true bread which cometh down from heaven. Let such as desire to enjoy gospel light never grudge the necessary expenses of it. And never let the pure oil of divine truth be adulterated with the fancies of men. What a mercy is it that they who come to God find a table spread for them in the wilderness; and that on every Sabbath ministers are to provide fresh provision for the souls of their people!—That the saints, in one generation after another, are set upon the table of the church, and especially on Christ, to the honour and delight of JEHOVAH! Let me further observe, that a graceless offspring is often the fruit of an unhallowed marriage; that quarrels usually end ill; and that judges ought to act with deliberation, and yet with impartiality and zeal. I tremble, therefore, at the load of uncontrolled blasphemy which lies unpardoned on Britain; since men have spared the heaven-daring miscreants, till they are so common, that stones would almost be 16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses [b]in mount Sinai, saying,

2 Speak[b] unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into [c]the land which I give you, then shall the land [d]keep a sabbath unto the LORD.

3 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof:

4 But[e] in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the LORD; thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard.

5 That which [f]groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes of thy vine undressed:[1] for it is a year of rest unto the land.

6 And the sabbath of the land shall be [g]meat for you; for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee,

7 And for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land, shall all the increase thereof be meat.[2]

8 ¶ And thou shalt number [h]seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

9 Then shalt thou cause the trumpet[3] of the [i]jubilee to sound, on the [k]tenth day of the seventh month; in the day of atonement[4] shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.[5]

10 And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim [l]liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubilee unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.

11 A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ye [m]shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

12 For it is the jubilee; it shall be holy unto you: ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

13 In[n] the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession.

14 ¶ And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye [o]shall not oppress one another.

[9] Strangers, as well as native Israelites, were to receive the benefit of the law declared in ver. 21, if they suffered wrong, and should suffer no penalty if they did the wrong. It seems also intended here, that strangers as well as native Israelites should suffer the punishment due to blasphemy. Henry here says, 'God would hereby show what provision he had made for man's safety, in punishing those which are enemies to him (God), which should be an argument with magistrates to be jealous for his honour, and to punish those that blaspheme his name.'—I.

[5] The year of jubilee was so called from the Hebrew word jobel, which signifies primarily 'a ram's horn,' and then the sound produced by it. 'The year of jubilee' then is just 'the year of the blowing of the horn;' and is thus analogous in name to the 'feast of trumpets.' The origin of the name is stated in ver. 9. Every fiftieth year, counting apparently from the time when they obtained complete possession of Canaan, was a jubilee. The jubilee year followed immediately on the sabbatical year, so that there were two fallow years occurring together. The three principal enactments for the year of jubilee were as follows:—1. Rest for the soil of the whole country. 2. The reversion of all property to its original owners. 3. Freedom of all slaves among the Israelites. It was, therefore, a year in which God emphatically and mercifully asserted his supreme and sovereign right to, and lordship over, every creature and every thing.—P.

CHAPTER XXV. [Ver. 7. The sabbatical year required, (1) A total cessation from agriculture, but not from pasturage in common between masters, servants, and regular sojourners. (2) Similar commonage of fruit-trees. (3) Remission of debts, De. 15. 2. (4) The public reading of the law, De. 31. 10-13. Whether viewed as a political, religious, or typical institute, nothing can give greater evidence of divine wisdom and goodness. (1) The rest of the land afforded a periodical remedy against the exhaustion of over-cropping, weediness, and the larvæ of insects. (2) It necessitated a septennial increase of cattle from the neighbouring countries, and consequent improvement of breed. (3) It encouraged servants to acquire property. (4) It taught masters a due regard to the interests of servants. (5) It inculcated the doctrine of providence; upon faith in the spiritual, and covetousness in the natural man; and thereby encouraged the one, and condemned the other. (6) It set forth the rest (the sabbatism, keeping of sabbath) that 'remaineth for the people of God,' He. 4. 9;—'Even so, come, Lord Jesus,' Re. 22. 20. C.]

Ver. 9. Jubilee: the derivation of this word is uncertain; the facts included are plain. Some derive it from Jubal, the inventor of musical instruments, Ge. 4. 21, and suppose it to intimate the music of the trumpet with which it was to be introduced; others, as Rabbi Kimchi, derive it from jobel, signifying a ram's horn, because it was proclaimed with trumpets of rams' horns; others derive it from jabal, to restore, because, in the year of jubilee, possessions were restored to their original owners. The Septuagint accordingly renders it remission, and Josephus liberty. Another etymology derives it from jubal, a stream, because, like the stream of time, it carried all things along with it. The English word jubilee is derived immediately from the Latin jubilo, to rejoice with shouting. It is an institute eminently typical of Christ, as the particulars will demonstrate. C.]

Ver. 10. [The Jew might be compelled to surrender his own freedom; he might sell his children, or they might be arrested in payment of their father's debt, see ver. 39; Ex. 21. 2, 7, 8; 2 Ki. 4. 1. But while this compulsory sale of freedom was intended, and admirably calculated, to prevent fraudulent debts, or punish fraudulent debtors; the law of the year of release, Ex. 15. 12, and of the jubilee, was equally calculated to prevent the granting of fraudulent credits, with a view to enslave either the debtor or his family. Viewed as a political institute, the power of parents over their children's freedom amounts not to more than the power of apprenticeship; common, and even necessary, in all civilized nations. The proclamation of liberty was a lovely emblem of our deliverance from 'the bondage of corruption' into 'the glorious liberty of the sons of God,' Ro. 8. 21; and a glorious type of our great according unto the number of years of the fruits he shall sell unto thee:[6]

16 According to the multitude of years thou shalt increase the price thereof, and according to the fewness of years thou shalt diminish the price of it: for according to the number of the years of the fruits doth he sell unto thee.

17 Ye shall not therefore oppress one another; but thou shalt [q]fear thy God: for I am the LORD your God.

18 ¶ Wherefore ye [r]shall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and ye shall dwell in the land in safety.

19 And the land [s]shall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety.

20 And if ye shall say, [t]What shall we eat the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase:

21 Then I [u]will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years.

22 And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store.

23 ¶ The land [x]shall not be sold[7] for ever: for the land is mine; for ye are [y]strangers and sojourners with me.[8]

24 And in all the land of your possession ye shall[z] grant a redemption for the land.

25 If thy brother be [a]waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.[9]

26 And if the man have none to redeem it, and himself[1] be able[2] to redeem it;

27 Then let him count the years of the sale thereof and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession.

28 But if he be not able to restore it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it until the year of jubilee: and in the jubilee it shall go out, and he [b]shall return unto his possession.

29 ¶ And if a man sell a dwelling-house in a walled city, then he may redeem it within a whole year after it is sold; within a full year may he redeem it.

30 And if it be not redeemed within the space of a full year, then the house[3] that is in the walled city shall be established for ever to him that bought it throughout his generations: it shall not go out in the jubilee.

31 But the houses of the villages, which have no walls round about them, shall be counted as the fields of the country: they may be redeemed,[4] and they shall go out in the jubilee.

32 Notwithstanding[c] the cities of the Levites, and the houses of the cities of their possession, may the Levites redeem at any time.

33 And if a man purchase of the [5]Levites, then the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, shall go out in the year of jubilee: [d]for the houses of the cities of the Levites are their possession[6] among the children of Israel.

34 But the field of the suburbs of their cities may [e]not be sold: for it is their perpetual possession.[7]

35 ¶ And if [f]thy brother be waxen poor, and fallen in decay[8] with thee, then thou shalt relieve[9] him: yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee.

36 Take[g] thou no usury of him, or increase: but fear thy God; that thy brother may live with thee.

37 Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase.

38 I[h] am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Canaan, and to be your God.

39 ¶ And [i]if thy brother that dwelleth by thee be waxen poor, and be sold unto [1]thee, thou shalt not compel him to serve[2] as a bondservant:

40 But as an hired servant, and as a sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of jubilee:

41 And then [k]shall he depart from thee, both he and his children with him, and shall return unto his own family, and unto the possession of his fathers shall he return.

p ver. 25, 26. The prices, whether of lands or Hebrew servants, were always to be stated according to the distance of the year of jubilee: and the less the distance the less was to be the price.

5 This was a very equitable law, both for the sojourner to whom the man was sold, and to the Israelite who had been thus sold. The Israelite might redeem himself, or one of his kindred might redeem him; but this must not be done to the prejudice of his master the sojourner. They were therefore to reckon the years he must have served from that time till the jubilee; and then taking the current wages of a servant per year at that time, multiply the remaining years by that sum, and the aggregate was the sum to be given to his master for his redemption. The Jews hold that the kindred of such a person were bound to redeem him, lest he should be swallowed up among the heathen; and we find from Ez. 5. 8 that this was done by the Jews on their return from the Babylonish captivity. 'We, after our ability, have redeemed our brethren the Jews, who were sold unto the heathen.'—I.

4 There is a kind of sentimentalism in these days existing in the minds of some good people which leads them to exclude or ignore all ideas of temporal benefit and blessing as resulting from a faithful observance of God's law. They think it savours of the world, and they imagine that it can only spring from the selfishness of the human heart. Such a view has no sanction in the Word of God. It is in direct opposition to this and many kindred passages. Ps. 3. 9; Mal. 3. 10–12; Mat. 6. 33; Mar. 10. 30. It is even a reflection upon the wisdom, love, and power of God.—P.

expedients, but by eternal principles: but it is to be explained and defended on its own merits, which are these. (1) These services were bought at their just price; not from men-stealers, traffickers condemned of God, Ex. 21. 16, but from the parties themselves. (2) They might be redeemed or manumitted without any legal hindrance, as is evident from the case provided for, Ex. 19. 20. (3) They are under the protection of the law, Jos. 9. 20, 21. (4) By comparing Ju. 1. 27, 28, 30, 33, 35, with 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21, the bond-service, in a most remarkable instance, will be found a mere rent-charge or tribute, either in labour or money, in return for the possession of houses or lands. And farther, from Ezr. 2. 21; Ne. 7. 5, 6, 57, 61; 10. 28, compared with Ex. 12. 44, and with the everlasting covenant with Abraham, Ge. 17. 12, 13, 27, it will appear that bond-servants were (as in the case of Solomon's servants) legally incorporated with the church and kingdom, and entitled to all the covenant privileges of Abraham's lineal descendants. (5) By the Mosaic law every servant, and therefore, in a special manner, the privileged bond-servant, was protected by law from every form of oppression, De. 24. 14, 18. Now a system of servitude, under these restrictions and with these privileges, cannot in any sense be called slavery, nor be employed to countenance slavery: nor does it require any apologetic explanation; for, as God authorized it, it was a system both of mercy and justice: for man's perversion of it, neither explanation, apology, nor defence can be offered. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in these sabbatical years I call to mind the happiness of Adam in paradise, and by faith discern the rest, the liberty, the happiness, the common salvation of a spiritual state, of the gospel period, and of the celestial state, all accepting Jesus' atoning blood, and published and offered to us in the gospel, may I be disengaged from all undue affection to created comforts, and never hasten to be rich, but depend on God for daily bread, in following the ways of religion and charity. In view of my eternal jubilee, let me consider wisely the cases of the poor; study equity in all my dealings; and stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made me free. Blessed be his glorious name—though I have forfeited all my happiness—though I have sold myself a bond-servant to Satan and my lusts—my kinsman-redeemer Christ has paid all my debt, all my ransom! And whom the Son hath made free, they are free indeed! Let me adore his goodness, that, while almost all the world are wilfully in bondage, the true and faithful, according to the Spirit, are made the Lord's freemen.

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 1–46. This chapter, which mostly corresponds with De. xxviii., is a summary of the oracles and providences of God relative to the Jewish nation. In the first part of it we have a summary of much of the contents of those promises already met with, and of the whole of those hereafter contained in the Bible, with respect to the Jewish nation. All the prosperity they met with in the days of Joshua, the judges, the kings, the deputies of the Persian, Grecian, or Roman powers, were but the fulfilment of these predictions. In the second part of it we have a summary of all the threatenings which relate to their nation, whether denounced by Moses, the prophets, Christ, or his apostles. All the miseries which that nation endured under the judges, kings, Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks, and Romans, for about fifteen hundred years—and all the miseries they have endured in their present dispersion among the Gentiles, which have already continued above eighteen hundred years, without any interruption—is but a literal accomplishment of them. The third part has been, in some measure, verified in some of their former deliverances; especially in the mercies which they received in their return from Babylon, and afterwards until the time of Christ. But we expect a more full accomplishment of it in the latter days, when the Jews shall be converted to the Christian faith, and replaced in their own land. ——[Ver. 5. Because God's temporal promises and threatenings were so many, some have thoughtlessly asserted that he urged not the doctrine of a future state; but they who assert this omission 'do err, not knowing the Scriptures;' for when we examine the wondrous catalogue of promises commencing ver. 4, we find at least twelve distinct temporal blessings; but, in addition to these, God promises, ver. 9, his covenant to be established. Now, that covenant was everlasting, not merely with successive generations, but with Abraham individually, personally, Ge. 17. 7, 9, 10. Now, if the covenant between God and Abraham was everlasting, Abraham therein inherited everlasting life; and Israel, in the establishment of that covenant, received the doctrine and the promise of immortality, as well as of the temporal blessings with which it was accompanied, see 1 Ti. 4. 8. Then, turning to the awful threatenings that follow, ver. 16, we find God declaring, ver. 30, 'I will cast your carcasses (dead bodies) upon the carcasses of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you;' that is, you, still living—not them, the carcasses which are dead; a distinct announcement that, 'as it is appointed unto men once to die, so after that the judgment,' He. 9. 27.——Ver. 11. This was typically commenced when the tabernacle service was set up in the wilderness; really commenced when 'the Word became flesh, and dwelt (tabernacled) among us,' Jn. 1. 14; and it will be completed in the 'new heavens and the new earth,' when the great voice shall proclaim, 'Behold the tabernacle of God is with men,' Re. 21. 1, 3.——Ver. 31. Sanctuary signifies a holy place;

5 And your [a]threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time:[5] and ye [b]shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely.

6 And [c]I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid: and I will [d]rid[e] evil beasts out of the land, neither shall the sword go through your land.

7 And ye shall [f]chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

8 And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight; and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.[7]

9 For I will [g]have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and [h]establish my covenant with you.

10 And ye shall eat [m]old store, and bring forth the old because of the new.[8]

11 And [n]I will set my tabernacle among you: and my soul shall not abhor you.

12 And[o] I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people.

13 I[p] am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bond-men; and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

14 ¶ But[q] if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments;

15 And if ye [r]shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break[s] my covenant:

16 I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint[t] over you[9] terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain; for your enemies shall eat it.[1]

5 Threshing commenced on the 'floors' the moment the grain was reaped, viz. from the middle of May to the middle of June—early in the south, and low lands, and later in the north and mountains. So abundant would the crops be that the work of threshing could not be finished till the vintage, which commenced about the end of July; and the labours of the vintage would then occupy the whole time till 'the early rain' in the end of September would prepare the ground for the sowing of the seed.—P.

and though, after the time of David, Israel had but one divinely authorized temple, in Jerusalem, yet from the days of Moses till that time there had been several, which God sanctioned according to their unsettled circumstances, Jos. 18. 1; 1 Sa. 1. 3; 7. 2; 21. 1; 1 Ch. 6. 31; 15. 1; 16. 1. These were, all in their turn, brought into that desolation in which they still remain, a warning to Christian churches to 'repent and do the first works, lest the Lord come unto them quickly, and fight against them with the sword of his mouth,' Re. 2. 5, 16. ——Ver. 35. The law of the Sabbath amongst the Jews was propounded upon the strongest of all reasons—the example and following of God; was delivered with the utmost particularity of detail; was accompanied with the largest promises, Is. 56. 2; 58. 13, 14; was enforced by the heaviest penalties, Ne. 13. 18; Eze. 20. 13, 21, 33; and yet, as with their other laws, it was soon made void, Ne. 13. 15, 21; Eze. 20. 12, 13; 22. 8; Am. 8. 5. Now for this criminal violation of the divine ordinance, God sent the 'King of the Chaldees' 'to fulfil the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths,' 2 Ch. 36. 21. Now Christian nations, upon sound warrant of Scripture, have adopted the weekly memorial of the resurrection of Christ to be their Sabbath; and since the new covenant is ordered, not only upon better promises, Ile. 8. 6, but is fenced with heavier penalties, Ile. 2. 2, 3; 10. 24–31, it deeply interests both rulers and people to contemplate the sabbatical judgments of Israel; and 'if' (on the very account of sabbath violation) 'God spared not the natural branches, let them take heed lest he also spare not them,' Ro. 11. 21. C. — The present state of Palestine is a remarkable and melancholy commentary on this whole prophetic curse:—The 'high places' of Shiloh, Bethel, and Dan are utterly destroyed; the great cities of Samaria, Capernaum, Jericho, Cæsarea, and a host of others, are waste, without inhabitant; the richest and best portions of the land—Phillistia, Sharon, Esdraelon, the valley of the Jordan, Bashan, &c.—are entirely desolate; the remnant of the Israelites themselves are homeless wanderers in the lands of their enemies, while their enemies, who now occupy that country which God gave to Abraham, are astonished at its desolation. P.— Ver. 38. A threatening wonderfully verified in the loss of the ten tribes, 2 Ki. 17. 6, who have been sought for in vain both by Jews and Christians: the proofs in favour of the Affghauns and American Indians being very questionable, and, at best, accompanied with no approach to certainty: see Simon's Hope of Israel; Wolff's Journal, 1831–34; Rose's Scripture Researches; Cotton's Tour to the American Lakes, &c. —— Ver. 41. As circumcision was the sign and seal of God's covenant with Abraham, Ge. 17. 11; Ro. 4. 11, an uncircumcised heart was on them that had not received the grace signified, 'the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh,' 1 Col. 2. 11.——Ver. 45. That the threatenings against the Jews have been fulfilled to the uttermost, is a visible and undeniable fact; that the promises will likewise be fulfilled, God has pledged his covenant word; that Christians should feel more deeply, pray more fervently, and sacrifice more liberally than hitherto for the conversion of Israel to Jesus the Messiah, is acknowledged. From the sign of awakened and increasing interest in their behalf, there is reason to 'thank God and take courage.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How strict is the connection between holiness and happiness! Manifold are the blessings of those who, in a gospel manner, obey God's laws, and great is the favour of God towards them, and intimate his presence with them. His celestial influences produce spiritual gifts and holy dispositions, and the peace of God keeps their hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Their enemies, sin, Satan, the world, and death, are vanquished in him, and the covenant of God stands fast with them for ever and ever. But how dreadful the punishment of such as are obstinate in wickedness! While they wickedly proceed from evil to worse, the judgments of God justly increase in their number and degree; and such as remain unhumbled under afflictions from God, and convictions from their own conscience, have nothing to expect but wrath to the uttermost. Such as dare to contend with their Maker will find the struggle most in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.

29 And[l] ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat.[5]

30 And I will [m]destroy your high places, and [n]cut down your images, and [o]cast your carcasses upon the carcasses of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you.

31 And I will [p]make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will [q]not smell the savour of your sweet odours.

32 And I will [r]bring the land into desolation; and your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it.

33 And I will [s]scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you; and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste.

34 Then [t]shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.

35 As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did [u]not rest in your sabbaths when ye dwelt upon it.

36 And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a [x]faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth.

37 And they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth: and ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.

38 And ye shall [y]perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.

39 And they that are left of you shall [z]pine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them.[6]

40 ¶ If they shall [a]confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me;

41 And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then [b]their uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity:

42 Then will I [c]remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I [d]will remember the land.

43 The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity; because, even because they [e]despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes.

44 And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, [f]I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant[7] with them: for I am the LORD their God.

45 But I will [g]for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors,[8] whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God: I am the LORD.[9]

46 These[h] are the statutes, and judgments, and laws, which the LORD made between him and the children of Israel in mount Sinai, by the hand of Moses.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 He that maketh a singular vow must be the Lord's. 3 The estimation of the person. 9 Of a beast given by vow. 14 Of a house. 16 Of a field, and the redemption thereof. 28 No devoted thing may be redeemed. 30 The tithe is holy, and may not be changed.*

AND the [a]LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When a [b]man shall make a singular vow, the persons shall be for the LORD by thy estimation.[1]

3 ¶ And thy estimation shall be of the male, from twenty years old even unto sixty years old, even thy estimation shall be [c]fifty shekels of silver, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

4 And if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be [d]thirty shekels.

5 And if it be from five years old even unto twenty years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male twenty shekels,[2] and for the female ten shekels.

6 And if it be from a month old even unto five years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male [e]five shekels of silver, and for the female thy estimation shall be three shekels of silver.[3]

7 And if it be from sixty years old and above, if it be a male, then thy estimation shall be fifteen shekels,[4] and for the female ten shekels.[5]

8 But if he be [f]poorer than thy estimation,

[b] A modern historian, if summing up the history and sufferings of the Jews during the past eighteen centuries, could scarcely use language more accurate and graphic than that contained in these verses. The persecutions they endured in Spain, Italy, France, Russia, and Britain, have wonderfully realized the prophetic statement: 'Ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.' Their utter helplessness, their shrinking timidity, their abandonment of every attempt or even thought of defence, have proved the literal truth of the words: 'The sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them: they shall fall when none pursueth; ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.'—P.

7 It is observable, that it is not said the Lord would remember his covenant ratified with Israel at Mount Sinai, but the covenant made with their progenitors the patriarchs long before the Sinai covenant. The future restoration of Israel will be in fulfilment of the Abrahamic covenant, Ro. 11. 25-32. Ga. 3. 15-18. He. 6. 13-20.—Scott.

8 God declares in ver. 43, that notwithstanding the preceding promises, he will execute his threatenings, till 'they accept,' or acquiesce in the punishment of their iniquity as just, and be humbled and repent; and thereafter he would remember his covenant and restore them. They are still preserved a distinct people, evidently for that end.—I.

9 It ought to be observed that the prophetic curses are temporal and physical, and that they have been literally fulfilled. The land has been wasted; the cities have been desolated; the people have been dispersed; their enemies have persecuted them in all lands. By all sound canons of interpretation, therefore, the promises contained in the same prophecy, and uttered in language of the same character and structure, must be understood in a literal and physical sense.—I.

unequal. Disappointments, diseases, evil beasts, sword, famine, pestilences, captivity, and, in fine, death and hell, wait to overwhelm them. How dreadful then is the nature of sin! How certain the ruin of impenitent sinners! Aggravated is their guilt whom mercies cannot engage or corrections deter: and God will be just to give up those to despair, and death, in sin, who give up themselves to work wickedness with greediness. But behold how all who return to God, even though late, are graciously received by him! It is his grace, concurring with his afflictive providences, that softens the stupid and hardened heart, and humbles the sinner; that renders him patient under his troubles, but earnestly anxious to escape from his sins; renders him more solicitous to have the end of afflictions answered than to have the burden of them removed; and then marvellously God remembers mercy in the midst of judgments; and opens to the believing mind a firm foundation of hopes, and gracious source of blessings, in Jesus and his promise of grace! Amidst such fulness of merit, and freedom of promise, none need despair, relying thereon. Blessing God for my pious ancestors, and the benefits I enjoy through them, following in their steps, let me deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world.

SCENE IN GIZEH MUSEUM—SHOWING A STATUE OF RAMESES II., ONE OF THE OPPRESSORS OF THE ISRAELITES. [Leviticus, xxvii.]—In room 25 of the Gizeh Museum there is among many magnificent statues of different Egyptian celebrities a black granite head of a colossal statue of Rameses II. taken from Luxor. Rameses II. is known as one of the oppressors of the Israelites. The man standing to the right of the statue is the guide, E. Brugsch Bey, appointed to conduct our party through the Museum. He was very intelligent and very attentive. This head of Rameses II. was chiseled out of granite 1333 years before Christ was in Egypt with Joseph and His mother. We place this picture here as we have used other pictures to illustrate other chapters in this book because it furnishes a scene from the land of Moses, and by so much as we know the country and the civilization in which he grew up will we be the better able to form a conception of the character of the leader of God's people.

then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

9 ¶ And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD shall be holy.[6]

10 He[g] shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy.

11 And if it be any [h]unclean beast,[7] of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest:

12 And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: as thou valuest it, who art the priest,[8] so shall it be.

13 But if he will at all redeem it, then he shall add[i] a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.

14 ¶ And when a man shall [k]sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand.

15 And if he that sanctified it will redeem his house, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

16 ¶ And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD some part[9] of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: an homer[l] of barley-seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.[2]

17 If he sanctify his field from the year of jubilee, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

18 But if he [l]sanctify his field after the jubilee, then the priest shall reckon unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubilee, and it shall be abated from thy estimation.

19 And if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him.

20 And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more:[3]

A.M. 2514. B.C. 1490.

21 But the field, when it goeth out in the jubilee, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field devoted; the possession thereof shall be [m]the priest's.

22 And if a man sanctify unto the LORD a field which he hath bought, which is not of [n]the fields of his possession, 23 Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubilee: and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD.

24 In the year of the jubilee the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong.

25 And all thy estimations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary:[4] twenty [m]gerahs shall be the shekel.

26 ¶ Only the [n]firstling[5] of the beasts which should be the LORD's firstling, no man shall sanctify it;[6] whether it be ox or sheep: it is the LORD's.

27 And if it be of [o]an unclean beast, then he shall redeem it according to thine estimation, and shall add a fifth part of it thereto; or if it be not redeemed, then it shall be sold according to thy estimation.

28 ¶ Notwithstanding [p]no devoted thing that a man shall devote unto the LORD, of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the LORD.

29 None[q] devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.

30 ¶ And [r]all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD.

31 And if a man will at all redeem ought of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof.

32 And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever [s]passeth under the rod,[7] the tenth shall be holy unto the LORD.

33 He[t] shall not search whether it be good

[9] Though the words some part are supplemental, they are generally admitted to be necessary, as it was not lawful for a man to alienate in this manner his whole patrimony. Good-will to the house of God he was allowed to express, but he was not to impoverish his family.—l.

[l] ch. 25. 15, 16, 27, 51, 52. Fields could only be devoted till the year of jubilee as they could only be sold till then, ch. 25. 10–16.

[8] This conditional penalty was for the purpose of preventing fraud in the performance of religious duties, and the fulfilment of vows. Properly speaking it was the produce and not the soil which was dedicated by vow to God. The land remained with the proprietor, who cultivated it, and paid to the sanctuary the valuation price. The owner might neglect to cultivate, and the land would thus be worthless; or he might sell to another till the year of jubilee—the buyer paying a stipulated sum to the sanctuary, and appropriating the surplus. In either case the land itself would be forfeited, and would pass over into the possession of the priests at the jubilee. The object of the measure was to compel the owner to redeem the property at once, so that the sanctuary might receive the full amount of the vow.—l.

[m] A standard shekel, the standard being kept in the sanctuary to try and regulate all the weights of the land. The value of the shekel was fixed before, Ex. 30. 13, and whereas there had been some alterations, it is again fixed in the laws of Ezekiel's visionary temple, Eze. 45. 12, to denote that the gospel should reduce things to their ancient value.—l.

[6] Sanctify here, as in many instances, does not signify that the thing is made holy by any change in its nature, but merely that it is set apart from a common, and dedicated to a sacred use. Such things could not be thus sanctified, being already dedicated to God, Ex. 13. 2. C.—That is to say, 'consecrate by a singular vow,' because the firstling was the Lord's already; it would have been a solemn mockery to have pretended so to sanctify it, it being already appointed to be sacrificed, if clean: if unclean, the owner might redeem it with its value in money, adding to it a fifth part.—l.

[7] The Jews interpret this phrase of a rod, which they say was tinged with ochre, which the door-keeper of the fold held up, and with which he marked every tenth beast indiscriminately as it passed out. It may well be understood of the ordinary shepherd's crook, still in use in pastoral countries; this sense is countenanced by Mi. 7. 14.—C.

practical Christian rule, there could be no want of witnesses to the heathen, nor of support to them and their families.—Note, We are all devoted in baptism to Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; many at the Lord's table; while many are doubly saved—first, by the 'Lamb without spot,' 1 Pe. 1. 19: secondly, by the 'goodness and mercy that, through his grace, have followed them all the days of their lives,' Ps. 23. 6. Now, as the Jew devoted was brought to the priest to be estimated, let us as 'partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the High-priest of our profession, Christ Jesus,' He. 3. 1; let us come to be estimated, though in utmost poverty, Re. 3. 17, 18; he will not demand beyond our ability, while he supplies the very gifts we are appointed to employ. C.]

Ver. 10. [To promise, to resolve, and to act, not by fixed principles, but by sudden impulses, is dangerous, as it often brings strong temptation to instability and change—two things against which God's children are solemnly guarded, both by example, Ge. 49. 4, and precept, 1 Co. 15. 48; 2 Pe. 3. 17; and against which this ordinance fixes an impassable barrier. C.]

Ver. 29. [It is difficult to imagine how any one, from these words, could have ignorantly or wickedly inferred that the Scripture authorized human sacrifice, or invested any parent with the power of devoting his children to death: surely the merciful law that would not empower a master to injure a servant's tooth ('And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, or his maid-servant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake,' Ex. 21. 27), would not enable a parent to take away his child's life. Let it be observed then, in explanation, that in ver. 28 the law speaks of man or beast devoted to the Lord, but in ver. 29 it speaks of those who are devoted of men, or from among men, whether devoted by God himself, as were the wicked nations for the crimes of child-murder, idolatry, and total dissolution of morals, Ex. 22. 20; De. 7. 1, 2; 20. 10, 17; 25. 19; 1 Sa. 15. 3; or devoted by the Israelites for similar crimes and implacable enmity, Nu. 21. 23. For these, as for other murderers, the law of God provides no pardon—a terrible emblem of that time and state when 'there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation,' He. 10. 27. Thoughtless sinner, think! self-dependent sinner, trusting to to-morrow's repentance, read the awful records, Mat. 25. 10; Lu. 13. 25, and beware lest, at the time of thy purposed return, 'the master may have risen,' and 'the door be shut!'—Note, Some interpret 'be put to death,' not of the actual infliction of that sentence, but of the continuance of service till death; but the words do not seem capable of such translation. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in these devoted things I, with wonder, behold Jesus voluntarily devoted, irredeemably devoted to his Father's service in our stead, and saving us by his precious blood, let me be always cheerful and liberal in his work; but let me never be hasty in my vows, lest I involve myself in difficulties, and repent of my rashness. Never let me or bad, neither shall he change it: and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed.[8]

covet, for my selfish purposes, that which belongs to the Lord; but cheerfully pay my vows, without reserve or change. And though I need not sell my house for his service, yet must I sanctify it to him by his constant worship and fear in the midst of it. And since I myself have been solemnly devoted to his service, let me never be weary of it, or desire a change of my proprietor; but whether I live or die, let me be wholly and only the Lord's.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED # NUMBERS.

This book is so called because it so largely represents the repeated numbering of the Hebrew warriors, Levites, spies, punished transgressors; their oblations, booty, and their journeys, &c., in the wilderness. It contains (1) The principal articles of their history for thirty-nine years; particularly of the numbers, stations, and marching-order of their tribes, i.–iv. ix. x.; the oblations of their princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, vii.; the consecration of the Levites, viii.; observation of the second passover, ix.; departure from Sinai, x.; destruction of the murmurers by a fiery pestilence, and the flesh for which they had lusted– appointment of seventy elders to assist Moses, xi.; Miriam's leprosy and cure, xii.; the search of Canaan by spies, and their punishment for a contempt of that promised land, xiii. xiv.; the punishment of Korah and his companions, and of the people who murmured at it, xvi.; the budding of Aaron's rod, xvii.; the misbehaviour of Moses and Aaron when the people murmured at Kadesh– refusal of a passage by the Edomites– and the death of Miriam and Aaron, xx.; the victory over Arad plague of fiery serpents, and cure of their bites– conquest and division of the kingdoms of Sihon and Og, xxi. xxxii.; the repeated attempts of Balak and Balaam to curse the Israelites, and God's defeating of them, xxii.–xxiv.; the enticement of the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry by Midianitish women, and the revenge thereof in the death of twenty-four thousand Israelites, and the almost utter destruction of the Midianites, xxv. xxxi.; a third numeration of the Israelites, xxvi.; a rehearsal of their journeys, xxxiii.; a delineation of their territory in Canaan, and an appointment of twelve princes to divide it, xxxiv. (2) With these narratives is intermingled a variety of laws concerning the ejection of unclean persons from the camp– suspicion of wives for adultery, v.; Nazariteship—priests' blessing the people, vi.; lighting of sacred lamps, viii.; observance of the passover in the second month, ix.; making and blowing of silver trumpets, x.; and concerning meat-offerings, drink-offerings, heave-offerings, sin-offerings—stoning for breach of the Sabbath—fringes on the borders of their garments, xv.; sacred portion of the priests and Levites, xviii.; purification by the ashes of the red heifer, xix.; inheritance and marriage of heiresses, xxvii. xxxvi.; oblations at sacred festivals, xxviii. xxix.; vows, xxx.; manslayers and cities of refuge, xxxv.

[The book of Numbers has been pronounced the most perplexing in sacred history, and what has perplexed the believing inquirer has afforded ample field for infidel objection: but as to the very being, providence, and attributes of God, there have been, and still are, many alleged objections; we are not to be surprised if similar assaults be made upon any part of his word, nor are we to be discouraged by the perplexities of believing inquirers: the real difficulties of Scripture, for such there are, exhibit the analogy between God's word and works, while they afford the happiest employment to the intellect, inculcate humility, exercise patience, and call to prayer, Ja. 1. 5; Lu. 11. 13; Jn. 14. 26. The chief difficulty of this book arises from the population returns. Jacob's family at their entrance into Egypt amounted but to seventy-five; at the exodus, in little more than two hundred years after, the men are estimated about 600,000, Ex. 12. 37; 30. 26; and at the military census afterwards made, they amount to 603,550, ch. 1. 46. Now, as these numbers would, on the most moderate computation, give a total for the Jewish caravan, independent of the 'mixed multitude,' Ex. 12. 38, that accompanied them, of about 2,400,000; the question arises, How can we credit this increase? To a humble inquiring believer it will be something to be reminded of God's peculiar promise to Abraham, Ge. 15. 5, and here he might rest; while the sceptic and the infidel, if they really sought for truth, not for cavilling, might find a ready answer in ordinary political statistics. Do they not know, that in the average of circumstances, population doubles at least in twenty-five years? That in favourable rural districts it doubles in fifteen years? that Euler calculates its doubling under thirteen, and that Sir W. Petty fixes it at ten years? Now allowing the Mosaic narrative the advantage of these calculations—and candour cannot deny it the most favourable—the imaginary impossibility of the increase from 75 to 2,400,000 totally vanishes; and while the promise to Abraham is seen fulfilled in the numbers of his posterity, the result requires not for its solution a continuous miracle, but merely that providential blessing of fruitfulness which God invariably bestows on peaceful, temperate, and industrious habits. But while the soundness of this solution cannot, upon any historical ground, be statistically gainsaid, all possibility of cavil is removed by considering that the national name and privileges of Israelites were not confined to the lineal descendants of Abraham. This will be evident from the following considerations. (1) Abraham, when childless, expects the son of a servant 'born in his house' to be his heir, Ge. 15. 3. (2) His house-born servants at that period amounted to 318 adult males, Ge. 14. 14. (3) When God renewed his promise, Ge. 17. 13, 27, all his then existing house-born servants, as well as his future purchases, were 'graffed in,' Ro. 11. 17, were naturalized, so to speak, by the sign of the everlasting covenant. (4) Isaac, Abraham's son, 'so far from declining in family prosperity, 'waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great;' and especially had 'great store of servants,' Ge. 26. 13, 14. (5) Jacob, at his return, Ge. 35. 27, had, besides his own children, 'men-servants,' Ge. 32. 5, perfectly able to protect themselves and their cattle, Ge. 33. 15. What accession of property Jacob obtained by the death of his father we are not told; but an incidental statement proves it must have been very considerable. For soon after, Esau removed 'from the face of his brother, for their riches were more than that they might dwell together, and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle,' Ge. 36. 6, 7. (6) Jacob came down to Egypt, not merely with his seventy-five personal descendants, but 'with all that he had,' Ge. 46. 1; see also 47. 1–12. (7) At the new institution of the passover, lest a new dispensation to the seed of Abraham should be construed into the abrogation of the ancient privileges of house-born servants or strangers, the naturalization clause, for so in modern phrase it is named, was explicitly renewed; and 'every man's servant' bought for money, and every conforming 'stranger' was invested with the same rights as 'one born in the land,' Ex. 12. 44, 48. (8) The reality and extent of this privilege of naturalization is still farther illustrated by the special exclusion of the Ammonites and Moabites 'for ever.' De. 23. 3; and still farther by the probationary period prescribed to an Edomite and Egyptian, who might 'enter into the congregation of the Lord in their third generation,' De. 23. 8. And thus, it is evident, the law was understood in the time of Nehemiah, ch. 13. 1–3, for he separated the 'mixed multitude' of Ammonites and Moabites, while the record of the genealogy of 'Solomon's servants,' originally Canaanites, 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21, is faithfully preserved, Ne. 7. 57–61, and they are included in 'the congregation,' ver. 66, and join in the national covenant for reformation, according to the Scriptures, ch. 10. 28.

But if we may thus legally commence our calculations with more than the seventy-five descendants of Jacob, why are they particularized? The answer is easy—to lay a distinct groundwork for the development of providence and the fulfilment of prophecy, and specially to furnish the necessary preparation and evidence for the manifestation of Christ. And when any do farther sceptically ask, 'How could Egypt contain and support so many inhabitants?' the reply is, Measure its extent and observe its unparalleled fertility. 'How could the Egyptians govern so many discontented subjects?' the reply is, Calculate in ancient or modern slave states the small proportion of masters to slaves. 'How could Pharaoh expect to subdue such a numerous host?' the answer is, Calculate how many regular troops would fearlessly assail an unarmed multitude. 'What line of march did they occupy?' the reply is, Who would think of marshalling them in a single line? Not he that by divine instruction ordered the encampments in the wilderness, see ch. ii. But of answering such groundless cavils 'there is no end.' Better for the believer to see in Israel a family carried down with a famishing father in search of food, to a land where they are sustained by the filial love of a son, and the forgiving generosity of a brother; where they become as the sand in number, and yet are enslaved by a cruel tyrant, and from whom they are delivered by the destruction of all their enemies and the blood of a sacrifice—where, in a word, 'Christ is all in all,' exhibited wherever there is salvation, temporal, spiritual, or eternal. C.]

CHAPTER I.

1 God commandeth Moses to number the people. 5 The princes of the tribes. 17 The number of every tribe. 47 The Levites are exempted for the service of the Lord.

A.M. 2514. B.C. 1490.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in [a]the wilderness of Sinai, [b]in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first[1] day of the second[c] month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Take[d] ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers,[2] with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

3 From twenty years old and upward, all that are [e]able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be [f]a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: [g]Of the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur.

6 Of Simeon; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; [h]Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Elishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

11 Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideoni.

12 Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran.

14 Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of [i]Deuel.

15 Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan.

16 These were the [k]renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel.[3]

17 ¶ And Moses and Aaron took [l]these men which are expressed by their names:

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month; and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.[4]

[l] They were 'renowned' or 'called' men of the congregation, because they were 'called' or summoned to the stated assemblies where the business of the nation was transacted; they were 'princes,' because of the nobility of birth arising from primogeniture; and they were 'heads' of thousands, because of the authority which they exercised.—P.

4 In this census no women were reckoned, nor children, nor minors, nor strangers, nor Levites, nor old men. — The census would serve to manifest the faithfulness of God in thus increasing the seed of Jacob; now that they were about to leave the neighbourhood of Sinai, and to resume their journeys; it would prepare for their regular march and encampments, and it would promote the fidelity of their being trained for the wars which were before them.—J.

5 The Masaic census has been called in question, because its several items terminate in ciphers; and well meaning but inconsiderate expositors have had recourse to various conjectures, founded on admitted or discovered additions of ciphers to historical dates and numbers in Grecian and Hindoo history. But such conjectures and parallels are utterly to be repudiated. The solution of the difficulty, if such it seem, lies in the record itself. Moses in the first census expressly declares, not that the men were 600,000, but that they were 'about 600,000,' Ex 12. 37. Neither in the present census is the exact amount of men 'fit to go forth to war' ever given, but 'those that were numbered of them;' and as the Jewish armies were uniformly officered and mustered by 1000, 100, 50, and 10, the quota of each tribe must necessarily terminate in a cipher, Nu. 31. 25. De 1. 15.—Note, As the census for march and for battle is in equable numbers and ranks, but enumerates, for property, each individual, viz. 2. 2c. vii., so in our sojourning and warfare, the church moves in order and communion, and each is concerned for the welfare of his companion, Ro 14.7; but in entering into judgment, 'every man of us shall give account of himself to God,' Ro. 14. 12, and claim the heavenly inheritance only by his personal relation to Christ, 2 Co.5.17.—C.

CHAPTER I. REFLECTIONS.—In this numbered people I discern the true Israel of God, numerous as the sand by the sea-shore; all numbered of Jesus, and written in his book of life; all under his government and laws, declared by his prophets and apostles; all ranked in goodly order in their respective generations, for the wars of the Lord; and all honourably distinguished from the world that lieth in wickedness, and from the mixed multitude of hypocrites. Here likewise I may observe, that ministers and magistrates ought to take heed to every one of the flock over whom the Lord hath made them overseers; that the TOMB OF SULTAN BARKUK—ONE OF THE MODERN PHARAOHS OF EGYPT. [Numbers, i.]—We continue through this book of Numbers to illustrate the life of Moses by pictures taken from the land in which he grew up. The Tomb of Sultan Barkuk is really a mosque or place of Mohammedan worship. There stands above it two superb domes and two minarets. Under the dome at the north are the tombs of the male, and under the dome at the south are the tombs of the female, members of the family. Barkuk belonged to the family of the Circassian Mameluke Sultans who reigned in Egypt from A. D. 1382 to 1517. The limestone pulpit in this mosque and the two minarets are beautiful specimens of stone work. Barkuk was a Circassian slave who raised himself to the throne by setting aside Haggi, a boy of six years and great grandson of Mohammed-en-Nasir. The reign of Barkuk was not peaceful. His intrigues and treachery so exasperated the Emirs that they conspired against him and finally dethroned him in 1389, but he was soon restored and reigned until 1399.

of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war:

31 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Zebulun, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

32 ¶ Of the children of Joseph, namely, of the [s]children of Ephraim,[7] by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

33 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Ephraim, were forty thousand and five hundred.

34 ¶ Of the [t]children of Manasseh, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

35 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Manasseh, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

36 ¶ Of the [u]children of Benjamin,[8] by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

37 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Benjamin, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

38 ¶ Of the [v]children of Dan, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

39 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Dan, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

40 ¶ Of the [x]children of Asher, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

41 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Asher, were forty and one thousand and five hundred.

42 ¶ Of the [y]children of Naphtali, throughout their [z]generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

43 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.[9]

44 ¶ These are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men: each one was for the house of his fathers.

45 So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel;

46 Even all they that were numbered were [b]six hundred thousand, and three thousand, and five hundred and fifty.

47 ¶ But the [c]Levites, after the tribe of their fathers, were not numbered among them.

48 For the LORD had spoken unto Moses, saying,

49 Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel;

50 But thou shalt appoint the Levites [d]over the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof; and they shall minister unto it, and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

51 And [e]when the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down; and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and [f]the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

52 And the children of Israel shall [g]pitch their tents, every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts.

53 But the Levites shall [h]pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel: and the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of testimony.

54 And the children of Israel did [i]according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

r ch. 2. 18, 19; 26. 35, 37, with Ge. 48. 19, 20; 46.20. This tribe was more numerous and honoure-l than that of Manasseh.

7 Jacob, on his death-bed, had foretold the supremacy of Ephraim: the youngest to Manasseh the elder. He guided his hands wittingly, putting his right hand upon Ephraim's head; and when Joseph would have interfered, desiring to appropriate the greater blessing to the elder, his father refused, saying, "He also shall become a great people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations," Ge. 48. 19. We see the fulfilment of the ancient prediction now very distinctly begun. Ephraim's tribe here put before Manasseh, and the tribe of the former outnumbers that of the latter by several thousands. The superiority, as we shall afterwards see, is continued at a future period. Moses, in the blessing wherewith he blessed the children of Israel before his death, says, "They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh," De. 33. 17. "Known unto the Lord are all his works, even from the beginning of all that he hath spoken: one jot or one tittle cannot fall to the ground."—h.

8 At the time when the patriarchs went down to Egypt with their father, Benjamin, it would seem, had more children than any of his brethren: he had ten sons, Ge. 46. 21. Yet, when this census was taken, his tribe was less numerous than any of the rest, except that of Manasseh. On the other hand, Dan had but one son when they went down, and now his tribe exceeds all others but that of Gad. It was thus that the Lord, who giveth no account of his doings, although all events, even the most minute, are according to infinite wisdom, fulfilled his promise to Abraham of a seed more in number than the stars of heaven.—h.

9 The tribe of Judah was much larger than any of the others. Dan stood second, but had 19,200 fewer than Judah. Ephraim and Manasseh together were within 2000 of being equal to Judah. Manasseh was the smallest of the twelve, and Benjamin came next to it. It will be seen by a comparison with the census recorded in ch. xxvi., which was taken at the close of the wilderness journey, that the respective strength of the tribes changed very much during the forty years' wandering.—P.

1 Moses does not inform us what the standard or ensign was. The Jewish rabbis, however, who may sometimes be safely followed, inform us that the ensign of Judah was a lion, of Ephraim an ox, of Reuben a man, and of Dan an eagle. This description is somewhat countenanced by the vision of the cherubim, Eze. 1. 10, and still further by the vision of the throne of God, Re. 4. 7. Still, as the Scriptures are silent, we may not positively affirm or draw any doctrine from these alleged figures; but with certainty we may consider the standard and ensign as a prophetic emblem of "that day when there shall be a root of Jesse, who shall stand for an ensign of the people," Is. 11. 10, and of that gracious promise to his church still in the wilderness, that, "when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him," Is. 59. 19. C. ... The "standard" was the banner of each of the four great divisions of the Israelites mentioned below, while "the ensign" was the smaller flag borne at the head of each subdivision of a tribe.—P.

more honour any one hath conferred upon him, the more active he ought to be in well-doing, according to his station; and to do without delay whatever the Lord requires of him. When I see the numbers of the respective tribes so little proportioned to their families at their entrance into Egypt, about two hundred and fifteen years before, I cannot but think how little even outward things go by common probabilities, and how unstable all created comforts are. When I read the sum total, I see how truly and marvellously God, in a few years, fulfilled his promises in multiplying the patriarch's posterity, notwithstanding all that the Egyptians could do to diminish them. Who likewise but must admire the liberal kindness of God, in forty years' miraculous maintenance of such multitudes of sinners; while he discerns the destructive nature of sin, which, in forty years, buried them all but two in the earth, and all in the wilderness! When I see the Levites distinguished from the rest, let me think how honourably God rewarded their honest zeal against the worshippers of the golden calf: and that ministers ought to be more holy than ordinary saints, to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent the sins of others; and that, though they are not to entangle themselves in worldly business, or in intimacy with carnal men, yet they are not to be idle, but spiritual soldiers of Christ, set for the defence of his church and gospel.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 3. From Ge. 17. 5, in the instance of Abram changed to Abraham, we learn the doctrinal and prophetic intent of Scripture names. This is farther illustrated, Ge. 32. 28, in the case of Jacob changed to Israel. It is applied in the name of Jesus, given to our Lord, Mat. 1. 21, 23, and is applied in the case of Melchisedec, He. 7. 1, 2, which Paul interprets as descriptive of his office. It is therefore right

2 Heb. over against.

3 The Israelites, it appears, encamped in four great divisions, with the tabernacle in the centre. The form of the camp was quadrangular, containing, according to the most careful calculations, something more than 12 square miles. Under each of the four divisions three tribes were placed under one general standard. Between these four great camps and the tabernacle were pitched four smaller camps of the priests and Levites, who were immediately attendant upon it; the camp of Moses and of Aaron and his sons being on the east side of the tabernacle, where the entrance to it was. Judah was placed on the east, and under him he had Issachar and Zebulun. On the south was Reuben, and under him Simeon and Gad. On the west was Ephraim, and under him Manasseh and Benjamin. On the north was Dan, and under him Asher and Naphtali. Every tribe had its particular standard, probably with the name of the tribe embroidered in large letters. See Josephus' Ant. l. xviii. c. 7.—I.

d ch. 1. 30, 31; 10. 16; 26. 26, 27.

4 The prescribed order of encampment was to regulate the order of march. Judah and the other two tribes attached to his banner marching first, Reuben and those attached to his banner marching next, and so forth, as is afterwards specified.—I.

e ch. 1. 20—25; 10. 18—20; 26. 5—7.

5 There is nothing to be observed respecting this camp, but that the tribe of Reuben had the honour to pitch in the midst of it; and the tribes of Simeon and Gad lay on either side of him, under his standard or banner, just as Issachar and Zebulun did on either side of Judah. "There was," says Patrick, "an evident congruity in this. Simeon being his own brother, and Gad the eldest son of Zilpah, the handmaid of their mother Leah, Ge. 30. 10, 11.—I.

7 After the forenamed camps, the tabernacle was to follow, between those two that went before, and the camp of Ephraim and the camp of Dan that came after. They did not therefore march as they lay pitched: for then there was a camp on each side of the tabernacle: whereas when they marched there was none on the sides, but two camps went before it, and two followed it. It is said, as they encamp so shall they act 'forward,' which may refer either to the Levites, the sons of Kohath, or to the two camps forenamed, enjoining that they should march in the same order in which they lay encamped, Judah, e.g. in the midst of Issachar and Zebulun, they being either before and behind, or on either side of him.—I.

8 The order of encamping and marching as here prescribed, is briefly as follows:—Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun encamped on the east of the tabernacle; Reuben, Simeon, and Gad on the south; Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin on the west; and Dan, Asher, and Naphtali on the north. The tabernacle was placed in the centre of a hollow square; but between it and the general encampment were four divisions of the tribe of Levi: the sons of Aaron on the east, before the door; the Gershonites on the west; the Kohathites on the south; and the Merarites on the north. When the camp was broken up the order of march was as follows:—The division of Judah led the van; Reuben with his division followed. Then came the tabernacle, surrounded by the Levites. Next followed the division of Ephraim, and the division of Dan formed the rere-guard.—P.

q ch. 7. 48; 26. 57. Ex. 27. 37, 38. 39. If to this number we add the Levites, and all the women and children below twenty years of age, it will make about three millions of Israelites, besides the mixed multitude.

17 ¶ Then[i] the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward, with the camp of the Levites[7] in the midst of the camp; as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place, by their standards.

18 ¶ On [k]the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim, according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Ammihud.

19 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty thousand and five hundred.

20 And[l] by him shall be the tribe of Manasseh: and the captain of the children of Manasseh shall be Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

22 Then[m] the tribe of Benjamin: and the captain of the sons of Benjamin shall be Abidan the son of Gideoni.

23 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

24 All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were an hundred thousand, and eight thousand and an hundred, throughout their armies: and they shall go forward in the third rank.

25 ¶ The[n] standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side, by their armies: and the captain of the children of Dan shall be Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

27 And[o] those that encamp by him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the captain of the children of Asher shall be Pagiel the son of Ocran.

29 Then[p] the tribe of Naphtali: and the captain of the children of Naphtali shall be Ahira the son of Enan.

30 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

31 All they that were numbered in the camp of Dan were an hundred thousand, and fifty and seven thousand and six hundred: they shall go hindmost with their standards.[8]

REFLECTIONS.—What a God of order is our God in all the churches! With unreserved submission ought we to refer to him the choice of our inheritance for us, and the fixing of the bounds of our habitation. Our life on earth is a movable as well of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers: all those that were numbered of the camps, throughout their hosts, were six hundred thousand, and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

33 But the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

34 And the children of Israel did [r]according to all that the LORD commanded Moses: so they [s]pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers.

CHAPTER III.

1 The sons of Aaron. 5 The Levites are given to the priests for the service of the tabernacle, 11 instead of the first-born. 14 The Levites are numbered by their families. 21 The families, number, and charge of the Gershonites, 27 of the Kohathites, 33 of the Merarites. 38 The place and charge of Moses and Aaron. 40 The first-born are freed by the Levites. 44 The overplus are redeemed.

THESE also are the [a]generations of Aaron and Moses, in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

2 And these are [b]the names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the first-born, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, the[c] priests which were anointed, whom he consecrated[2] to minister in the priest's office.

4 And[d] Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office, in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Bring[e] the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation,[3] before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And they shall keep [f]all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of[f] Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 And[g] thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron, and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they [h]shall wait on their priest's office: and [i]the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

1 Aaron is placed before Moses, not on account of the priestly dignity, but simply because he was three years older than Moses, and so was entitled to the place of first-born, which he had neither sold nor forfeited. See Ge. 7. 7.—Note, When the characters of Moses and Aaron are contrasted, the natural superiority of Moses is unquestionable. Yet Moses assigns to Aaron and his family for ever superiority of rank and office: an undeniable evidence that he acted by God's command. Had he been a mere pretender to a divine commission, he would have sought the aggrandizement of himself and his family—for never has there been an unambitious and disinterested imposter, his not yielding but adjudging the superiority to his brother and his brother's family goes, as far as mere character can go, to prove, not only the absence of selfishness, but the presence of that humility which never was produced by any power but that of the Spirit of God. 5 The other tribes were numbered for purposes of war, consequently only those above twenty years were reckoned. 7 From this and the following chapter we learn the very severe labour to which the Levites were subjected while the journeyings of the Israelites lasted. There was not less than 14 tons 266 lbs. of metal employed in the tabernacle, Ex. 38. 24, besides an immense weight of skins, hangings, cords, boards, posts, &c. Of course it must have been no easy matter to transport it from place to place. The Gershonites, who were in number 7500, had to carry the tent coverings, veils, hangings of the court, cords, &c., ver. 25, 26. The Kohathites, in number 8600, carried the ark, table, candlesticks, altars, and instruments of the sanctuary, ver. 31. The Merarites, in number 6200, bore the boards, bars, sockets, and all matters connected with these belonging to the tabernacle, with the pillars of the court, their sockets, pins, and cords, ver. 36, 37.—I.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 And I, behold, I have [k]taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the first-born that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine;

13 Because [l]all the first-born are mine: for on the day that I [m]smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the first-born in Israel, both man and beast; [4]mine they shall be: I am the LORD.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying,

15 Number the children of Levi, after the house of their fathers, by their families: every male [n]from a month old and upward shalt thou number them.[5]

16 And Moses numbered them, according to the word[6] of the LORD, as he was commanded.

17 And[o] these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And[p] these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; Libni and Shimei.

19 And[q] the sons of Kohath by their families; Amram and Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel.

20 And[r] the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli and Mushi: these are the families of the Levites, according to the house of their fathers.

21 ¶ Of[s] Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them, were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall [t]pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

25 And [u]the charge[7] of the sons of Gershon, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall be the tabernacle, and the tent, the covering thereof, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

26 And the hangings of the court, and the curtain for the door of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and the cords of it, for all the service thereof.

as warlike condition. Here we have no continuing city; let us seek for one to come, which hath foundations, and whose builder and maker is God. But surely it is a high honour to have the presence and ordinances of God amongst us here below. Happy are all his ransomed tribes; they have equal access to him; they all are so marshalled in the church as best answers their abilities; and have God's tabernacle and ordinances placed among them. And it is pleasant and amiable when magistrates, and every one beside in their stations, become protectors and encouragers of the church; and when everything, both in church and state, is regulated exactly according to the command of God.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 2. In a former note (see ch. 2. 3) we have seen the Scripture authority for interpretation of names. In the names of the tribes, there was a national lesson, addressed to rulers: in that of the Levites, an ecclesiastical lesson, addressed to pastors and teachers. Aaron, teacher, mountain of strength. —Note, When Christ, in risen humanity, declared 'All power is given to me,' he immediately added, 'go ye therefore, teach all nations,' Mat. xxviii. The mountain strength of the church lies in faithful teaching.—Nadab, prince, free gift. Abihu, he is my father. The first a title of dignity in the state, the second of productiveness and superiority in the family, yet, for want of attention to paternal teaching, both are cast down from their office and die childless. A warning to the teachers of others to 'ask for the old paths'—the old paths, not of men inventing novelties, but of the Spirit speaking in the Scriptures. The teachers, and fathers, FLOCK OF GOATS, BEDRASHEN, NEAR MEMPHIS WHERE MOSES WAS BROUGHT UP. [NUMBERS, iii: 1.] "These also are the generations of Aaron and Moses, in the day that the Lord spake with Moses in Mount Sinai." This picture is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses, for it illustrates a place near Memphis where Moses was brought up. Bedrashen covers a part of the site of Memphis. On the ground lying around this village, a part of which we see the goats now browsing, and a part farther on where we see the palm trees standing, once stood the proud city of Memphis. Memphis was one of the oldest cities of history, and was founded by Menes, the first king of Egypt. The tract of country in the midst of which Memphis stood has been praised by ancient writers for its fertility. Diodorus speaks of its green meadows intersected with canals and their pavements of lotus flowers. Pliny says there were trees there of such girth that three men could not span them with extended arms.

27 ¶ And[x] of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch[y] on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

31 And [z]their charge shall be the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And [a]Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

33 ¶ Of Merari was the family of the Mahlites, and the family of the Mushites: these are the families of Merari.

34 And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred.

35 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari was Zuriel the son of Abihail: these shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle [b]northward.

36 And [c]under the custody and charge[7] of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto, 37 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords.

38 ¶ But those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, [d]even before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, [e]keeping the charge of the sanctuary for the charge of the children of Israel; and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

39 All[f] that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males, from a month old and upward, [g]were twenty and two thousand.[8]

8 This is one of the chief 'perplexities' of the book of Numbers, inasmuch as the sum total does not agree with the items. The Gershonites were numbered 7500, the Kohathites 8600, the Merarites 6200, total 22,300. To account for this discrepancy, Houbigant supposes an error to have crept into the text of ver. 28, which Kennicot transfers to ver. 22. Either supposition would rectify the accounts, but such summary and unsupported suppositions of error are to be examined with great jealousy, and never to be received without high MS. authority: this is here totally wanting. Let us therefore seek the solution of the perplexity in the law. (1) In this narrative, ver. 6, the tribe of Levi was to be sought out, a phrase in the original, admitted to signify sacrificial offering. See ch. 8. 6–22. (2) In ver. 24, 36 Moses alone enumerates the tribe, and gives the absolute sum total. (3) In ver. 39 we have a new account of 'all that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the Lord.' Now Aaron is not omitted in the one case, nor conjoined in the other, without good cause. (4) We inquire in the law what this cause may be, and whence arose this arithmetical imperfection? Not, we apprehend, from any imaginary error either in the details or summing up, but from legal impurities disqualifying from being offered to God. These might arise, in children, from touching their mother during the forty days of her separation, Le. 12. 2, 4; comp. with 15, 19, 20, 27; or adults from any similar legal impurity, ch. 19. 2. (5) It is now almost superfluous to add, that as every offering must be 'without blemish,' this typical requirement applied to the Levites would produce the typical imperfection of their numbers when examined by Aaron before being 'brought near,' or offered to the Lord for redemption of the first-born of the tribes, a view which is in strict accordance with the words of the apostle, 'The law made nothing perfect.' He. 7. 19.—C.

9 But Aaron and his sons, and all the first-born of the Levites, numbered he not, as they were already the Lord's peculiar property.

1 Why are the first-born among 'so many brethren' so few? Are we here to search after another arithmetical error? No. The solution of the difficulty lies in the Jewish system of family government. (1) Families of daughters were not reckoned. (2) Many families, as in the case of Jacob's twelve separate families, reckon but one first-born, Ge. 46. 3. (3) In many families the first-born would be dead. (4) In some the Jewish law permitted absolute sale, disfranchisement, or substitution, Ge. 25. 31–33, 36, 37. 1 Ch. 5. 1. These, without any other causes, are quite sufficient to account for the fewness of the numbers recorded.—C.

2 It was a singular circumstance, and indicative of the overruling providence of God, that the number of the males of the Levites and the number of the first-born males of all the other tribes should have so nearly coincided. It was so ordained, however, that the coincidence should not be exact. Of the latter there were two hundred threescore and thirteen more than of the former, and for this odd number the redemption money must be paid according to the law. This money, we may suppose, would be given out of a common fund.—J.

REFLECTIONS.—I bless the Lord, who so loved as to give his only begotten Son for a lost world of sinful men, and caused him to redeem them with his hard service, extending to the whole church, and all the concerns of it. But let the awful punishment of such as have profaned the service of God, as if it had been a common thing, excite me to the utmost reverence, care, and diligence, regulated by the divine command. If my work be hard, God will supply me with proper help. If God hath saved my life, he hath a right to dispose of me as he pleases, with respect to my station and work: and it is my duty cheerfully to comply, whether my work be more or less hard or honourable: but the greater the honour the greater is the danger if I mistake. And while I bless God that he hath a tribe of ministers and people, and lament th-among the sons of Levi, after their families, by the house of their fathers,

3 From [a]thirty years old and upward, even until fifty years old, all that enter into the host,[b] to do the [c]work[1] in the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 ¶ This shall be the service of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation, about the most holy things.

5 And when the camp setteth forward, Aaron shall come, and his sons, and they shall take down the [d]covering vail, and cover the ark of testimony with it;

6 And shall put thereon the covering of badgers' skins, and shall spread over it a cloth wholly of blue, and shall [e]put in the staves thereof.

7 And upon the [f]table of show-bread they shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the bowls, and covers to cover[2] withal: and the [g]continual bread shall be thereon.

8 And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same with a [h]covering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof.

9 And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the [i]candlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuff-dishes, and all the oil-vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it.

10 And they shall put it, and all the vessels thereof, within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar.[3]

11 And upon [k]the golden altar they shall spread a cloth of blue, and cover it with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put to the staves thereof.

12 And they shall take all the [l]instruments of ministry, wherewith they minister in the sanctuary, and put them in a cloth of blue, and cover them with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put them on a bar.

13 And they shall take away the ashes from the altar, and spread a purple cloth thereon:

14 And they shall put upon it [m]all the vessels thereof, wherewith they minister about it, even the censers, the flesh-hooks, and the shovels, and the basins,[4] all the vessels of the altar; and they shall spread upon it a covering of badgers' skins, and put to the staves of it.

15 And when Aaron and his sons have made an end of [n]covering the sanctuary, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, as the camp is to set forward; after that, the sons of Kohath shall come to bear it: but they shall not [o]touch any holy thing, lest they die.[5] These things are the burden of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation.

16 ¶ And to the office of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, pertaineth [p]the oil for the light, and the sweet incense, and the daily meat-offering, and the anointing oil, and the oversight of all the tabernacle, and of all that therein is, in the sanctuary, and in the vessels thereof.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

18 Cut[q] ye not off the tribe of the [6]families of the Kohathites from among the Levites:

19 But thus do unto them, that they may live, and not die, when they approach unto the most holy things; Aaron and his sons shall go in, and appoint them every one to his service, and to his burden.

20 But they shall not go in to see when the holy things are covered, lest they die.

21 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

22 Take also the sum of the sons of Gershon, throughout the houses of their fathers, by their families:

23 From [r]thirty years old and upward until fifty years old shalt thou number them; all that enter in [s]to perform the service, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

24 This is the service of the families of the Gershonites, to serve, and for burdens.[7]

25 And they shall bear [t]the curtains of the tabernacle, and the tabernacle of the congregation, his covering, and the covering of the badgers' skins that is above upon it, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

26 And the hangings of the court, and the hanging for the door of the gate of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and their cords, and all the instruments of their service, and all that is made for them: so shall they serve.

27 At[u] the appointment[8] of Aaron and his sons shall be all the service of the sons of the Gershonites, in all their burdens, and in all their service: and ye shall appoint unto them in charge all their burdens.

28 This is the service of the families of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation; and their charge shall be under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.[9]

The golden altar with its vessels was evidently carried not on the shoulders, but by the hands, with sliding staves, ver. 11-14. By the profanation of touching, ver.15, or seeing, ver.20, it was not the intention of Moses either to undervalue or degrade the Kohathites, but to teach that real honour lies neither in office nor privilege, but in fulfilling the part to which Providence has appointed us. If Christ, though 'a son over his own house, He.3.6, 'yet took upon him the form of a servant, and learned obedience by the things which he suffered,' He.5.8, how much more should we beware of 'thinking of ourselves more highly than we ought to think,' Ro.12.3, and how anxious to learn that happy lesson, 'in whatever state we are therewith to be content,' Phi.4.11.—C.

1 Moses, by the command of God, appointed the Levites to their office from thirty, but this seems but to accord with ch. 8. 24, where the Levites are required to begin to wait upon the service at twenty-five years of age. There is, however, no contradiction. At twenty-five they went out to the inferior service of the tabernacle when localized; but, at thirty, they were appointed to the additional service of the 'burden' when the people journeyed. David afterwards fixed the commencement of the Levites term of service at fourty, 1 Ch. 23. 24-28. This change was made because, under David, the church had attained a state of rest and the Levites had no more to bear the burden of the tabernacle. This change may, however, appear rather a grievance than a privilege, and so it would be to carnal men, who desire liberty that they may use it for a cloak to licentiousness; but to the true Levite, the man held captive by Christ, and associated with him, an early call to the service of God, and an early separation from the world, is but an earlier relief from pain, and an earlier advancement to office and to honour. Blessed are they who, like Jeremiah, Je. 1. 5. have been sanctified from the birth, and who, like Timothy, have known from childhood those Scriptures which are able to make wise unto salvation, 2 Ti. 3. 15.—C.

3 The charge of the burden of the sons of Merari was by far the heaviest of all, the particulars of which are enumerated in ver. 31, 32; but at the same time it was so ordered in the providence of God, that the proportion of those in this family who were able to do the work of the tabernacle of the congregation was greater than in either of the other families.—I.

3 Though the sum total of the entire Levites was very small compared with that of the other tribes, yet there would be far more than could be employed at one time in this service. But they might carry by turns, and thus ease one another, and do their whole business expeditiously and cheerfully. It is also to be noticed that besides the servants of the sanctuary, they had their own Levites to remove, and their families to take care of.—Scott.

eternal salvation: it is therefore necessary that we should give the strictest attention to the directions of Scripture. Distressful is the paucity of God's faithful servants; yet are they in his hand, and he proportions their number and ability to their work. But let me especially rejoice, that the whole care of the churches, and of all men, is upon our redeemer: not Levites, in the power of their might, but the almighty Jesus bears and carries us and all our concerns: not the prudent sons of Aaron, but the only wise Son of God rears and dissolves particular churches on earth; rears and dissolves the particular frames of our spirit; dissolves our bodies in death, and again rears them up in the resurrection. He hath destroyed the veil and face of the covering cast over all people; that it is not now death, but life, for us sinful men to behold, and even enter by faith into the holiest of all. Let us therefore, whether ministers or private Christians, draw near with boldness, and behold, as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, that we may be changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS. — In these figures I discern that the church of God on earth ought carefully to be purged from scandalous persons and crimes; and that polluted and dishonest sinners shall be excluded from the celestial mansions. How necessary then to put away all filthiness of the flesh and spirit; and to avoid even the most distant approaches towards dishonesty, particularly with respect to Jesus Christ and his ministers! For those who preach the gospel must live by the gospel. Yea, let me avoid everything which may beget dishonourable suspicions; and, on the contrary, beware of indulging them without sufficient ground. But innocence is the surest comfort and support under the most malignant accusations. How dreadful it is when God's curse is the seasoner of sensual pleasures! Vain is every attempt to conceal our transgressions; for, though waters of jealousy are no more, the eye of God can see, and the voice of conscience will speak out. Yea, often God most strangely brings to light the hidden things of ROAD TO HELIOPOLIS—NEAR THE SITE OF THE UNIVERSITY WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED. [Numbers, v.]—This is a scene on the road from Cairo to Heliopolis, and is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses. For it is generally agreed that Moses was educated at Heliopolis. In that ancient City of the Sun there once stood the most renowned university of the ancient world. And it was in this celebrated school that Moses was trained in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. There is a fanciful tradition told to tourists, who are supposed to believe everything, that Abraham was professor of astronomy in this university, and taught the Egyptians what he had learned of the stars in Chaldea. The road from Cairo to Heliopolis is about six miles in length, and the view we get of it in the above picture shows us some acacia trees on either side with a couple of camels and their attendants. The view is characteristic, and one is liable to meet such a company of peasants any hour of the day.

On the other hand it was calculated to prevent the cruel treatment from husbands which such suspicions might produce, through the hardness of their hearts, when the crime could not be proved, for the rage of jealousy allayed, and it would also lessen the number of hasty divorces.—f.

8 This law is founded upon three principles. (1) Confidence in the miraculous interposition of Providence, when appealed to in a manner not invented by the fancy or presumption of man; but distinctly prescribed by God himself. (2) That the accuser must not act upon slight surmise, but be so far convinced that he testifies his belief in the necessity of the appeal to God, ver. 30. (3) On the power of conscience in the case of an oath, rightly and solemnly administered: the whole law being merely a special example of God's speedy and terrible judgment against every form of perjury. Zec. 5. 3, 4. Mal. 3. 5. That no case of an appeal to this law is upon record, may be accounted for on two grounds. (1) That this appeal could not be made, but in the absence of all other proof; a case that could very seldom occur. (2) Because of the facility of divorce which Moses suffered the Jews to enjoy, 'for the hardness of their hearts,' a facility which was at once their privilege and their punishment. De. 24. 1. darkness; and however they may escape present censure or punishment, whoremongers and adulterers God will judge, and dreadfully punish! Let me therefore abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul: and if I am unjustly accused, let me commit my cause to God, who judgeth righteously, that he may bring me to the light, and cause me to behold his righteousness. Meanwhile let me, with the utmost accuracy, examine how far I am chargeable with spiritual whore-

PILGRIMS FROM THE TOMB OF MOSES—SEEN JUST OUTSIDE THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM. [NUMBERS, vi.]—In the fifth and sixth verses of the thirty-fourth chapter of Joshua, it is said that "Moses died in the land of Moab, and was buried in a valley in the land of Moab over against Bethpeor, but no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day." Notwithstanding the plain teachings of Scripture on the subject the Mohammedans pretend to know where the grave of Moses is. They claim that it is to the south of the road between Jerusalem and Jericho. So, as we were leaving Jerusalem for Jericho, on the 25th day of April, 1894, just outside the walls of the Holy City we met a large number of pilgrims coming in from the so-called tomb of Moses. Upon this occasion the pilgrims appeared to be in a bad humor. They were firing pistols, and talking in a loud tone of voice as though they might be ready for mischief. Our dragoman told us that they were always especially fanatical and irritable on their return from these pilgrimages to the graves of their saints.

strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

4 All the days of his separation[3] shall he eat nothing that is made of the vine-tree,[4] from the kernels even to the husk.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no [c]razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD he shall [d]come at no dead body.

7 He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die; because the consecration[5] of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he is holy unto the[6] LORD.[7]

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall [e]shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

10 And [f]on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring [g]a lamb of the first year for a trespass-offering: but the days that were before [h]shall be lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite: When[i] the days of his separation are fulfilled, he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

14 And he shall offer [k]his offering unto the LORD, one he-lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt-offering, and one ewe-lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin-offering, and one ram without blemish for peace-offerings,

15 And a basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread anointed with oil, and their meat-offering,[8] and their drink-offerings.

16 And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, and shall offer his sin-offering, and his burnt-offering.

17 And he shall offer the ram for a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, with the basket of unleavened bread: the priest shall offer also his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

18 And[1] the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; and shall take the hair of the head of his separation, and [m]put it in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace-offerings.

19 And the priest shall take the sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the hair of his separation is shaven.

20 And the priest shall wave them [n]for a wave-offering before the LORD: this is holy for the priest, with the wave-breast and heave-shoulder: and after that [o]the Nazarite may drink wine.

21 This is the law of the Nazarite who hath vowed, and of his offering unto the LORD for his separation, [p]besides[9] that that his hand shall get: according to the vow which he vowed, so he must do after the law of his separation.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, saying, On this wise ye shall [q]bless[1] the children of Israel, saying unto them,

24 The[r] LORD bless thee, and keep thee:

25 The LORD [s]make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee:

26 The LORD [t]lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.[2]

27 And they shall [u]put my name upon the children of Israel; and I will bless them.

(5) The loss of past time, and its necessary recommencement, in case of any infringement of the vow, ver. 12. (6) Sacrifice after his vow has been legally fulfilled. In every point of this law, the necessity of holiness, and the utter unprofitableness of our best services, is plainly and explicitly set forth. Lu.17.10. The whole law is a beautiful and expressive type of Christ, who was 'separate from sinners'—who really paid his vow, He. 10. 5-7, and offered himself the sacrifice that perfects for ever them that are sanctified, He.10.10.—C.

2 This was apparently the formal 'blessing' or 'benediction' which the priests were to use on all solemn occasions when the people met in public assembly. It is comprehensive and most cheering. It consists of three distinct parts. The first part embodies simple preservation. The second progresses to favour, and favour specially developed in grace or pardon. The third part advances still farther to love—love evidenced in the beaming countenance, and love realized in the peace which the God of love implants in the soul. Preservation is the peculiar work of God the Father; pardon, of God the Son; and peace, of God the Holy Ghost.—P.

dom or apostasy; and particularly observe whether the cross of Christ, and the afflictions of the gospel, are to me a savour of death unto death, or of life unto life.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—In these Nazarites let me behold the blessed Jesus solemnly separated by himself and his Father to the service of God in our redemption:—Jesus, never defiled with carnal comforts or pleasures, nor intoxicated with sinful lusts or worldly cares, nor polluted by his connection with sinners naturally dead in trespasses and sins:—Jesus, who, for Nazarine hair, hath the most noted graces and good works; yea, hath his people growing up into him as their head:—Jesus, never failing, but persevering in his work, and finishing it in his all-comprehensive offering of himself for us; and, in his resurrection, laying aside every token of continued subjection to a just God or broken law. In these Nazarites let ministers also, let saints, separated to the service of God, learn to deny themselves, mortify the deeds of the body, renounce this world and the pleasures of sin or sense, and behave as solemnly consecrated to God alone. Let every breach of their vows, through fellowship with dead and unfruitful works of darkness, occasion repeated application to Jesus' purifying blood, and to more diligence in duty. And, after finishing their course, let them thank God for his gracious assistance, account themselves unprofitable servants, and trust only to Jesus' all-sufficient sacrifice of himself as the ground of their hope and joy.—In this priestly benediction of the Hebrews let me behold Jesus, appointed of God to bless sinful men; yea, becoming blessings to them;—and God discovering his grace, by rendering his ordinances, apparently simple in themselves, gracious for blessing us with all spiritual blessings in Christ. Let me therefore look only to God for what blessings I need; and by faith hold communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in order to the enjoyment of them.

3 And they brought their offering before the LORD, six covered waggons, and twelve oxen; a waggon for two of the princes, and for each one an ox: and they brought them before the tabernacle.

4 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

5 Take[d] it of them, that they may be to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou shalt give them unto the Levites, to every man according to his service.

6 And Moses took the waggons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites.

7 Two[e] waggons and four oxen he gave unto the sons of Gershon, according to their service:[3]

8 And [f]four waggons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari, according unto their service,[4] under the hand of Ithamar, the son of Aaron the priest.

9 But unto the sons of Kohath he gave none; because the [g]service of the sanctuary belonging unto them was, that they should bear upon their shoulders.[5]

10 ¶ And the princes offered for [h]dedicating of the altar, in the day that it was anointed, even the princes offered their offering before the altar.

11 And the LORD said unto Moses, They shall offer their offering, [i]each prince on his day,[6] for the dedicating of the altar.

12 ¶ And [k]he that offered his offering the first day was Nahshon the son of Amminadab, of the tribe of Judah:

13 And his offering was [l]one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them were full[m] of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

17 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

18 ¶ On the second day Nethaneel the son of Zuar, prince of Issachar, did offer.[q]

19 He offered for his offering one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

23 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

24 ¶ On the third day Eliab the son of Helon, prince of the children of Zebulun, did offer:

25 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of [r]fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

31 His offering was one silver [t]charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

36 ¶ On the fifth day Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai, prince of the children of Simeon, did offer:

37 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

[6] This made the dedication a very long solemnity, which lasted twelve days. When these days began it is not easy to determine, but the computation of Jarchi, Aben Ezra, Kimchi, Bechai, Menochius, Tostatus, Sicardus, Serarius very reasonable. He supposes that the tabernacle being erected on the first day of the first month of the second year after they came out of Egypt, seven days were spent in the consecration of it, and of the altar, &c. On the eighth day Moses began to consecrate Aaron and his sons, which lasted seven days longer. Thus the fifteenth day of that month was the first day of unleavened bread, which God commanded (as we read in chap. ix.) to be observed in the first month, and lasted till the two and twentieth. The rest of the month, we may suppose, was spent in giving, receiving, and delivering the presents mentioned in the book of Leviticus. After this, on the first day of the second month, he began to number the people according to the command in the beginning of this book, which may be supposed to have lasted three days. Then on the fourth the Levites were numbered. On the next day, we may suppose, they were offered to God, and given unto the priests; and on the sixth day they were expiated and consecrated, as we read in the next chapter. On the seventh day their several charges were parted among them of which we read in ch. iv. After which the princes, he supposes, began to offer upon the eighth day of the second month, for the dedication of the altar, which lasted till the nineteenth day inclusively; and on the twentieth day of this month they moved, as we read in ch. x. 11, 12. from Sinai to the wilderness of Paran. Patrick.

[8] From the numerous sacrifices, and from the value of the gifts of gold and of silver offered by each of the princes, it has been conjectured that these were not their own private gifts, but rather the contributions of their several tribes. It is not improbable that others may have aided the princes with their contributions.—I.

[9] These sacrifices were much more numerous than the burnt-offering or sin-offering, and for this reason perhaps, that both the princes and people had a share of them, on which they feasted before the Lord.—I.

what is merely voluntary. But the more honour and wealth persons have, the more exemplary they ought to be in laying out themselves and their substance for the Lord. Christ's ministers and people never need to be discouraged by the hard service allotted them; for by their often repeated exercises, or remarkable comfort therein, God can render his ministers expert in their work, or can quickly bring them unexpected assistance in it; and we can scarcely enter on his

2 As the offerings proceed from day to day, it is worthy of remark that they never change either by addition or diminution or quality. The prince of the smallest and poorest tribe offers as the prince of the largest and richest. Had it been otherwise, "emulations," Ga. 5. 20. would have been the immediate result, and the pride of man would soon have mingled in the service, where nought but humility can approach with acceptance, Mat. 18. 4. Ja. 4. 10. C.—It is observable that the offerings of all the princes were alike, each presenting the same amount of silver and gold, and an equal number of victims. This equality in their offerings may have been the result either of agreement among themselves, or of the appointment of God, that there might be no unholy emulation, nor any unseemly boasting in so sacred a transaction. In contributing to the work of God, no motive can be more unbecoming than an intentitious desire of being thought superior to our brethren. We may also observe that Moses, acting under the inspiration of God's Spirit, thought fit to set down distinctly, and at length, the offerings of the princes of every tribe (as he does here and throughout the chapter), though they were the very same, without any difference: that an honourable mention being made of every one apart, none might think themselves neglected. But how consoling is it to reflect that, in God's estimation, the widow's mite is as valuable as the rich man's offering.—I.

a Le. 14. 10. He. 10. 9. 1 Jn. 2. 27. Re. 6. 6.

3 Surprise has been expressed by both Jewish and Christian writers that this work should have gone on upon the seventh day, which they suppose to have been the Sabbath. But there is no proof that this seventh day of offering was a Sabbath day, or if it had, could the people be better employed than in thus consecrating themselves and this service to the Lord? It was already been remarked, that every act in this matter was a religious act, and we can scarcely suppose any thing too holy for the performance of such acts as are here recorded.—I.

4 There were three shekels: the royal shekel, valued at fifteen pence; the shekel of the sanctuary, twice as much; and the common shekel, which differed not from our shilling, Ge. 23. 15. Ex. 30. 13. 2 Sa. 14. 26. Je. 32. 9. Eze. 4. 10. Ne. 5. 15. Am. 8. 5.

b Ex. 29. 40. Le. 6. 20.

5 Upon this day the rebellion and death of Nadab and Abihu occurred, Le. 9. 1: 10. 1. Now the day of this melancholy occurrence is one of the most remarkable in the Jewish dispensation. For example, the eighth was the day of circumcision, Le. 12. 3. The eighth was the day of dedicating the first of the young of animals, Ex. 22. 30. The eighth was the day for cleansing the leper, Le. 14. 10. The eighth was the day of most solemn assembly and peculiar sabbatism, Le. 23. 36, 39: and is called the great day of the feast, Jn. 7. 37. Yet, on this very day, when so many associations combined to honour it, Satan prevails upon pride to render it dismal and disastrous.—C.

6 From the narrative contained in this chapter Scott remarks, that they whom Providence distinguishes as princes, nobles, or wealthy persons, should take the lead and yet the example in every good work; with liberal hearts devising liberal things. But a liberal heart should be under the direction of prudence and discretion; and the circumstances of the times, the state of the church and its ministers, and the necessities of those around them, should be considered, that nothing be wasted in useless expense or vain projects.—I.

7 From the example of these chiefs of Israel, princes and great men, as Cornelius Pellicanus remarks, should learn to be devoutly religious, and to possess the fear and reverence of the Lord God in their breasts; to be strong in faith; far from covetousness; unanimous in their endeavours to do honour to God; to give a good example of faith and good works to others; to seek the profit of their subjects; assist the servants of God; lend their helping hand to the proficiency of true piety; provide the ministers of the church with all things necessary, that religion be not neglected and contemned by their poverty; for the sake of God whom they serve, to do them honour by word and deed, and follow their godly admonitions.—I.

8 Heb. on the days of the eleventh day, ver. 78. The Hebrew form of expression here, and in ver. 78, has something curious in it. It may be literally rendered, on the day the first and tenth day, and, on the day two and tenth day. But this is the idiom of the language; and, to an original Hebrew, our almost anomalous words eleventh and twelfth, by which we translate the original, would appear as strange as his, literally translated, would appear to us.—Dr. A. Clarke.

9 It is instructive to observe the solemn fact so frequently recurring, that, with all his offerings, each brought an offering for sin.—I.

1 It appears by the metal that these chargers and bowls were of, that they were for the use of the altar of burnt-offerings, in the outward court; for all the vessels of the sanctuary were of gold. And I take the chargers to have been offered, for receiving the flesh of the sacrifices when the priests feasted upon it.—Scott.

60 ¶ On the ninth day Abidan the son of Gideoni, prince of the children of Benjamin, offered:[6]

61 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering.

63 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

64 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

65 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Abidan the son of Gideoni.

66 ¶ On the tenth day Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai, prince[7] of the children of Dan, offered:

67 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

72 ¶ On the eleventh day[8] Pagiel the son of Ocran, prince of the children of Asher, offered:

73 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

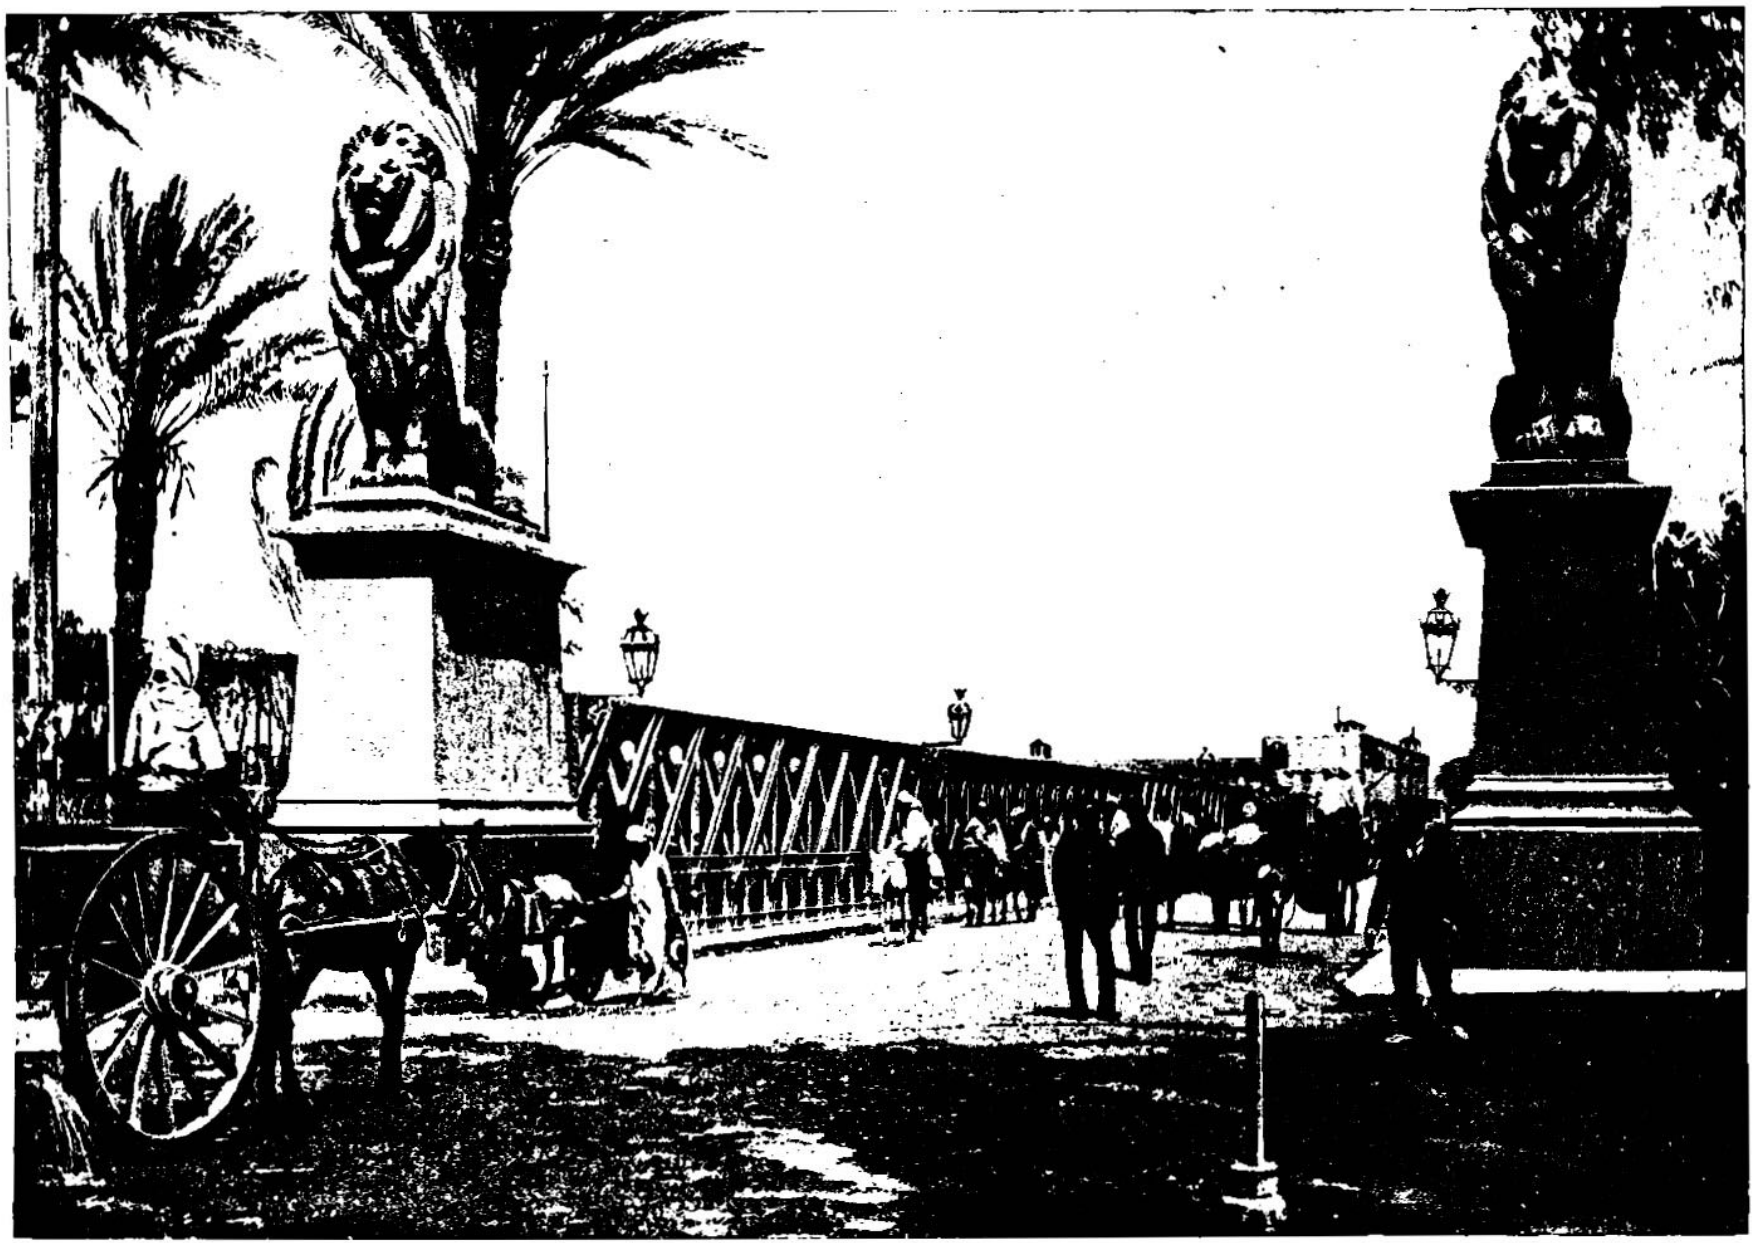
75 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:



76 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:[9]

77 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Pagiel the son of Ocran.

78 ¶ On the twelfth day Ahira the son of Enan, prince of the children of Naphtali, offered:

service without receiving hints of changes and removals death not excepted. Liberal hearts devise liberal things, and are never weary of giving to the Lord. But in our dedications to God we ought carefully to consider what is like to be most useful in his service; and, amidst all, to implore pardon through Jesus our sin-offering. And while every one is careful to do that which is proper in his station, God honourably records the good deeds of his people in the most par-

APPROACH TO THE NILE BRIDGE. [NUMBERS, viii : 1.]—No view, perhaps, could be in greater contrast from the Egypt of Moses' time than the one given above of the approach to the Nile Bridge. Up to 1863, passage of the Nile was made by small ferry boats. Now we have a bridge of iron 1260 feet long, with stone buttresses. A pair of British lions sitting at the entrance of the bridge bespeak the fact that Egypt has passed under the influence of modern times and modern ideas. Across this bridge tourists now always pass to the pyramids. It perpetually presents a scene of life and color. There are donkeys and camels and carts and carriages going and coming throughout the day. Most tourists who visit the pyramids now go from Cairo in carriages, though occasionally a traveler prefers the old time method of traveling on a donkey.

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.[4]

87 All the oxen for the burnt-offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat-offering; and the kids of the goats for sin-offering twelve:

88 And all the oxen, for the sacrifice of the peace-offerings, were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he-goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty.[5] This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was anointed.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 How the lamps are to be lighted. 5 The consecration of the Levites. 23 The age and time of their service.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron, and say unto him, When thou [a]lightest the lamps, the seven lamps shall give light over against the candlestick.[1]

3 And Aaron did so; he lighted the lamps thereof over against the candlestick; as the LORD commanded Moses.

4 And[b] this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold; unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was beaten work: [c]according unto the pattern which the LORD had showed Moses, so he made the candlestick.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Take the Levites from among the children of Israel, and [d]cleanse them.[2]

7 And thus shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them: Sprinkle water of purifying upon them, and let them shave[3] all their flesh, and let them wash their clothes, and so make themselves clean.

8 Then let them [e]take a young bullock with his meat-offering, even fine flour, mingled with oil, and another young bullock shalt thou take for a sin-offering.

9 And thou shalt [f]bring the Levites before the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou shalt gather the whole assembly[4] of the children of Israel together.

10 And thou shalt bring the Levites before the LORD: and the children of Israel shall [g]put their hands upon the Levites:

11 And Aaron shall offer[5] the Levites before the LORD, for an [h]offering of the children of Israel, that they may execute[6] the service of the LORD.

12 And the Levites shall [i]lay their [j]hands upon the heads of the bullocks: and thou shalt offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering unto the LORD, to make an atonement for the Levites.

13 And thou shalt set the Levites [k]before Aaron, and before his sons, and offer them for an offering unto the LORD.

14 Thus shalt [l]thou separate the Levites from among the children of Israel; and the Levites shall be mine.

15 And after that shall the Levites go in to do [m]the service of the tabernacle of the congregation: and thou shalt [n]cleanse them, and offer them for an offering:

16 For they [o]are wholly given unto me from among the children of Israel; instead of such as open every womb, even instead of the first-born of all the children of Israel, have I taken them unto me.

17 For[p] all the first-born of the children of Israel are mine, both man and beast: on the day that I smote every first-born in the land of Egypt I sanctified them for myself.

18 And I have taken the Levites [q]for all the first-born of the children of Israel.

19 And I [r]have given[8] the Levites as a [s]gift to Aaron, and to his sons, from among the chil-

3 The whole value of the silver vessels was £1973 13s. sterling; and of the golden spoons about £109 sterling.—[A more accurate estimate, based upon a fuller knowledge of the Jewish weights, gives the value of the silver offerings at about £380, and the gold at £300, or about £700 in all.—P.]

4 The silver chargers and bowls weigh 2400 shekels, which, at 5s. per oz., amounts to £488, 12 8½d.; the twelve golden spoons, weighing 120 shekels, and estimated at £4 per oz., would make £480, ex. myself, without calculating workmanship, which might vary according to the figuring and finish, from £50 to £200 or even £300 per cent.—C.

The sin-offerings, by twelves, acknowledging in name of the tribes the national rebellions and guilt. The peace-offerings are first by three twelves, which, according to the rule of duplication, Ge. 41. 32, represents a thing firmly established, and speedily to be accomplished. Then they are by sixties, that is, five twelves. Now this peculiarity is not without its signification. For five is the average representation of a family (see note on Ex. 13. 18), and the fives by which the twelves are multiplied represent the families of which the tribes are composed.—C.

ticular manner, and takes pleasure in manifesting his gracious acceptance thereof. But might not these twelve solemn days prefigure the apostolic and spiritual periods, in which princes and nations did, or shall, dedicate themselves and substance to Jesus Christ, our great tabernacle and altar; yea, the glorious fulfiller of all the Levitical dispensation?

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—In these lighted lamps I behold Jesus endowed with the fulness of the Spirit of God, and set up to be the light of the world, the light of the church;—and ministers enlightened in themselves, and set up for lights to others, that they may see to perform the service of the tabernacle. In these Levites I behold Jesus, holy, harmless, and undefiled, solemnly set apart as the Saviour of lost sinners, to the hard service of his debasement; which being finished, and atonement thus made for his people, and every plague averted from them, he retired to his heavenly rest to minister, without fatigue, in the sanctuary above.—But with what holiness, and solemn dedication to God, ought ministers to be prepared for their work! How voluntary their call by their people; and how solemn their ordination to their office! Honourable indeed is their service for Jesus and his ransomed people; if faithful, they become a remarkable mean of turning away God's wrath from nations and dren of Israel, to do the service of the children of Israel in the tabernacle[1] of the congregation, and to make an atonement for the children of Israel; that there be [a]no plague among the children of Israel when the children of Israel come nigh unto the sanctuary.

20 And Moses and Aaron, and all the congregation of the children of Israel, did to the Levites [b]according unto all that the LORD commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did the children of Israel unto them.

21 And the Levites were [c]purified, and they washed their clothes; and Aaron offered them as an offering before the LORD; and Aaron made an atonement for them to cleanse them.

22 And after that went the Levites in [2]to do their service in the tabernacle[2] of the congregation before[3] Aaron, and before his sons; as the LORD had commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did they unto them.

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 This is it that belongeth unto the Levites: From[y] twenty and five years[4] old and upward they shall go in [3]to wait upon the service of the tabernacle of the congregation:

25 And from the age of fifty years they shall cease waiting upon the service[5] thereof, and shall serve no more:

26 But shall minister[6] with their brethren in the tabernacle of the congregation, to keep the charge, and shall do no service. Thus shalt thou do unto the Levites touching their charge.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The passover is commanded again. 9 A second passover allowed for them that were unclean or absent. 15 The cloud guideth the removings and encampings of the Israelites.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the [d]first month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Let the children of Israel also [e]keep the passover at his appointed season.

3 In the fourteenth day of this month at even,[1] ye shall keep it in his appointed season: according to all the rites of it, and according to all the ceremonies thereof, shall ye keep it.

4 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should keep the passover.

5 And they [f]kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month [d]at even in the wilderness of Sinai; according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did the children of Israel.[2]

6 ¶ And there were certain men who were [g]defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day; and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day.

7 And those men said unto him, We are defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not [4]offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and I will [5]hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you, or of your posterity, shall be [h]unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

11 The [i]fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

12 They shall leave[3] none of it unto the morning, nor break any bone of it: according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and [k]forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from his people: because he brought not the offering[4] of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin.

14 And if [l]a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger,[5] and for him that was born in the land.

15 ¶ And [m]on the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the tent[6] of the testimony: and at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire until the morning.

16 So[n] it was alway: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And [o]when the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents.[8] churches; and if faithful and diligent while their strength continues, their people ought to support them decently when they become old and infirm, and Jesus Christ will for ever reward them in the heavenly state.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—We need repeated excitements to the most pleasant and solemn services of God; though it is an infinite favour, that, in these deserts of trouble, we may keep the Lord's solemn feasts. Those who know their value will delight in the observance, and rejoice to see others hungering and thirsting after God's ordinances, even when hindrances are laid in their way. Ministers ought ever to be careful in debarring scandalous sinners from the seals of the covenant; yet, on the contrary, ever cautious and attentive to God's word in determining particular cases. But here let me reflect on the mercy, that though we Gentiles were of old afar off, and in our uncleanness, God hath brought us nigh by the blood of his Son, and hath provided a second, a gospel passover for us! If then we be unavoidably disappointed of public ordinances, let us take the first opportunity of approaching his house or table. Providential hindrances may disappoint us of the means, but cannot, if our hearts be right, deprive us of the grace thereof; God will amply supply our wants some other way: while such as reject God's ordinances will as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents.

19 And when the cloud tarried long[g] upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud abode[1] from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel abode[p] in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.[2]

23 At[q] the commandment of the LORD they rested in their tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

1 The use of the silver trumpets. 11 The Israelites remove from Sinai to Paran. 14, 18, 22, 25 The order of their march. 29 Hobab is entreated by Moses not to leave them. 33 The blessing of Moses at the removing and resting of the ark.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Make thee [a]two trumpets of silver; of [a][b] whole piece shalt thou make them: that thou mayest use them for the calling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps.

3 And when they shall blow with them, [c]all the assembly[1] shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And if they blow but with one trumpet, then the princes, which are [d]heads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee.[2]

5 When ye blow an alarm,[3] then [e]the camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward.[4]

6 When ye blow an alarm the second time, then the [f]camps that lie on the south side shall take their journey:[5] they shall blow an alarm for their [f]journeys.[6]

7 But[g] when the congregation is to be gathered together, ye shall blow, but ye shall not sound an alarm.

8 And [h]the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets: and they shall be to you for an ordinance for ever throughout your generations.

9 And if ye [i]go to war in your land against the enemy that oppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets; and ye shall be [k]remembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies.

10 Also [l]in the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months, ye shall blow with the trumpets [m]over your burnt-offerings, and over the sacrifices of your peace-offerings; that they may be to you for [n]a memorial before your God: I am the LORD your God.

11 ¶ And it came to pass on the [o]twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.[7]

12 And the children of Israel [p]took their journeys out of the wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran.[8]

13 And they first took their journey, [q]according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

14 ¶ In[r] the first place went the standard of the camp of the children[9] of Judah, according to their armies; and over his host was Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

15 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Issachar was Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

16 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Zebulun was Eliab the son of Helon.

17 And the tabernacle was [s]taken down; and the sons of Gershon and the sons of Merari set forward, [t]bearing the tabernacle.

18 ¶ And [u]the standard of the camp of Reuben set forward according to their armies; and over his host was Elizur the son of Shedeur.

19 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Simeon was Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

20 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Gad was Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

21 And the Kohathites set forward, [x]bearing the sanctuary; and [y]the other did set up the tabernacle against they came.

22 ¶ And the [z]standard of the camp of the children of Ephraim set forward according to their armies; and over his host was Elishama the son of Ammihud.

It was bounded on the north by Palestine, on the east by the valley of Arabah, on the south by the mountains of Sinai, and on the west by the Mediterranean. be rejected by him. Habitual neglect of the Lord's supper is a fearful sign of a naughty heart.—Let Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be our pillar of cloud, to direct our motions and rests; and let us be always obedient to his tokens: no safety can be had in going before him; and no comfort can be had in loitering behind him. Let me be ready, with comfort, to see this cloud remove into the eternal state, where I expect a more abiding habitation; that when death comes, I may have nothing to do but to remove; and, even by the way, let God fix my residence and lot as he pleases; and there let me contentedly pitch my tent.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS.—In these trumpets I discern the pure and precious gospel of Christ, and hear its joyful sound proclaiming the sufficiency and suitableness of Jesus and his righteousness, calling sinful men to him and his ordinances, and encouraging them in their journey heavenward, and in their spiritual warfare with sin, Satan, the world, and death. Let me also observe, that even Sinai-visits, the most noted opportunities of intimacy with God, come quickly to an end; and that, in this world, we but remove from one wilderness to another. While, in the Hebrews' orderly march I discern the ransomed of the Lord, directed by the Lion of the tribe of Judah, and having his Father's presence among them, march-

It would seem that when Reuel (or Jethro) went back to his own country, as stated in Ex. 18. 27, his son Hobab remained with Moses, and abode in the camp during the whole period of the sojourn at Sinai. Now when the Israelites approached the borders of Midian proper, Hobab determined to leave them and go to his own country; it would seem, however, that on the earnest persuasion of Moses he remained with the Israelites and acted as their guide.—P.

CHAPTER XI.

1 The burning at Taberah is quenched by Moses' prayer. 4 The people lust for flesh, and loathe manna. 10 Moses complaineth of his charge. 16 God divideth his burden among seventy elders. 31 Quails are given in wrath at Kibroth-hattaavah.

AND when the people complained,[1] it displeased[2] the LORD: and the LORD heard it; and his anger was kindled: and the fire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the [a]uttermost parts of the camp.[3]

2 And the people [b]cried unto Moses; and when Moses [c]prayed unto the LORD, the fire was quenched.[4]

3 And he called the name of the place Taberah:[5] because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

4 ¶ And the [d]mixt multitude that was among them fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also wept[6] again,[7] and said, [e]Who shall give us flesh to eat?

5 We remember [f]the fish which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now our soul is [g]dried away: there is nothing at all, besides this manna, before our eyes.[8]

7 And [h]the manna was as coriander-seed, and the colour thereof[9] as the colour of bdellium.

8 And the people went [i]about and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and [k]baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And when the [l]dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.[1]

10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent; and the [m]anger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

11 And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou [n]afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, [o]Carry them in thy bosom (as a nursing-father beareth the sucking child) unto the land which thou swarest unto their fathers?

ing in goodly order to their heavenly Canaan, let me exert myself to gain others, particularly my relations, to God and glory. There is in him enough for us all. And happy are they, if grace make them forget their father's house, and their own people, to go to the Lord! While, therefore, we have his ordinances with us, let us strive together in prayer for his presence therein; that it may be our effectual defence against enemies, and a source of every necessary comfort.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 1. The cause of complaint is not stated. It may have been from the length and the difficulty of the journey. They were now in the most sterile part of the wilderness of Sinai. It would seem too that the complaints were in a great measure confined to the strangers or slaves, called 'the mixed multitude,' who followed them from Egypt, and who marched not in the midst, but on the skirts of the camp. Upon these the 'fire of the Lord' fell. P.]

Ver. 5. [The murmurings began with the strangers, and soon extended to the Israelites. We can scarcely wonder at men long accustomed to the flesh, the fish, the acid vegetables, and luscious fruits of Egypt, wearying with the sameness of the somewhat insipid manna. Cucumbers, melons, and onions were, and still are, very abundant in Egypt. They form the staple articles of food among the lower classes; and are well suited to the natural wants of man in a hot and dry climate. P.]

Ver. 8. [In Ex. 16. 31 it is said the manna 'was like coriander-seed, white;' here it is said it was like coriander-seed, and in colour like bdellium. The two descriptions agree:—In form the manna resembled coriander-seed; but in colour it was white, like the transparent pale-coloured gum called bdellium. In Exodus the taste is said to be 'like wafers with honey;' here it is compared to 'fresh oil.' There is no discrepancy:—the former description applied to it as fresh gathered; this, as ground, and beaten, and baked. P.]

Ver. 10. [This unmanly, this childish 'weeping' of Israel was addressed, not to God in prayer, but to Moses, ver. 13, in unreasonable petition, or ungrateful reproach; therefore God's anger is 'greatly kindled.' But there are those who are offended when anger is ascribed to God: and why? because the anger of sinful men is often unreasonable, without cause, violent, unjust, and destructive—must therefore the anger of a holy God be necessarily of the same character? To deny that God is angry with sin and sinners because human anger is generally evil, were just as unreason-

13 Whence [p]should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, [q]kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not see my wretchedness.[2]

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me [r]seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them [s]unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee:

17 And I will [t]come down and talk with thee there: and I will [u]take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall [x]bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, [y]Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: (for ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, [z]Who shall give us flesh to eat? for it was well with us in Egypt:) therefore the LORD [a]will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 But even a whole[3] month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you; because that ye have [b]despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?

21 ¶ And Moses said, The people, among whom I am, are [c]six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

22 Shall[d] the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, [e]Is the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.[4]

24 ¶ And Moses went out and told the people the words of the LORD, and [f]gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD [g]came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and [h]took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, they [i]prophesied,[5] and did not cease.[6]

5 To prophesy commonly signifies to foretell or a thing comes to pass; but it also is employed to signify, the explanation of a thing already announced. In this sense it is said, Ex. 7:1, 'Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet,' that is, not a foreteller of futurity, but the expositor of thy sentiments, to Pharaoh. Like Aaron, then, these persons began to expound, apply and enforce the divine word, in exhortation, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness.—C.

6 'And did not cease.' The Hebrew rather signifies, 'and did not add,' i.e. they prophesied during that day while the Spirit remained upon them, but not afterwards. This meaning is supported by the Septuagint and most of the Jewish rabbins. It is probably the true meaning.—P.

Ver. 35. [Hazeroth was the first place after Sinai where the camp remained for a number of days. It was situated four days' march east of Sinai. It is probably identical, as the name would indicate, with the fountain of Hudherah, which lies about 40 miles northeast of Sinai, in the midst of a wild, bleak, and barren desert. There is a larger fountain, called Ain, some distance to the north, and probably the camp may have extended to it. It is on the direct route from Sinai to Kadesh. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How often men sin outrageously immediately after the most solemn exercises, and make the very commandments of Heaven the occasions of such sinning! We often murmur against the dispensations of Providence, even without any shadow of reason; nay, in direct contradiction to every

SITE OF ANCIENT MEMPHIS—WHERE MOSES PASSED HIS YOUTH. [Numbers, xii:1.]—Memphis was the royal residence of the Pharaohs of the Sixth dynasty. It was an old capital of Egypt. It was founded by Menes, the first king of Egypt. Here was the temple consecrated to the worship of Isis, and here was the temple of Apis. To-day it is in utter desolation. Nothing remains above ground but ruins, and these overgrown with palm trees. Material for building old Cairo was brought from Memphis. The most interesting thing connected with this once splendid city is that it was here that Moses was brought up. The great cemetery near the site of Memphis, contains the tombs of the ancient empire, that is, the tombs built during the first eleven dynasties. Among these is the celebrated Step Pyramid.

[4] From De. 25. 9 it appears that spitting in, or rather, before the face, was a legal mode of recording a fact. Moses, by the expression, does not sanction any passionate rudeness of an irascible and unreasonable father, but a legal custom of censuring an undutiful child. From the melancholy records of our Redeemer's trial before Caiaphas, Mat. 26. 67: 27. 30, it seems to have continued as a mark of condemnation; and almost every eastern traveller in modern times has noticed and recorded the prevalence and permanence of the custom.—C.

1 The names of the men who were sent to search the land. 17 Their instructions. 21 Their acts. 26 Their relation.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Send[a] thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a [b]ruler among them.

3 And Moses, by the commandment of the LORD, sent them from the wilderness of [1]Paran: all those men were [c]heads of the children of Israel.

4 And these were their names: Of the tribe of Reuben, Shammua the son of Zaccur.

5 Of the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat the son of Hori.

6 Of the tribe of Judah, [d]Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

7 Of the tribe of Issachar, Igal the son of Joseph.

8 Of the tribe of Ephraim, [e]Oshea[2] the son of Nun.

9 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Palti the son of Raphu.

reason; for ingratitude is the basest vice. Discontented persons loathe their very blessings, and seem solicitous to make themselves miserable; readily preferring the worst things which God withholds to the best which he bestows, and even the filthy pleasures of sin and sense to his unspeakable gift of grace.—It is a fearful mark of the curse of God upon the heart when men repine amidst plenty! Those who follow the people of God for base and carnal ends, quickly become murmurers when they meet with disappointments. A mixture of carnal and self-seeking men are ruinous to the church; and a mixture of carnal affections are the plague of the renewed heart. Through these it is that even the greatest saints are apt to lose their temper, extol their service, quarrel with the disposals of Providence, and distrust the power and kindness of God, when they meet with great provocations from their fellow-creatures—and to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, when they are especially called to reprove them by a contrary conduct. But God often tries his people, chiefly in respect of their most eminent graces, to humble them, and to prove them, when he finds them wanting; for the meekest are ready to wish themselves freed from trials, rather than to glorify God under them; nay, to wish death, when their temper is very unfit for it. But how richly God qualifies men for work when he calls them to it! Let me then never grudge to any the honours for which God hath fitted him; never contemn the government which God hath appointed; never forbid those who act for the honour of God, even though they follow not with us; nor ever neglect to accept the assistance which God affords me in my work, though it should eclipse my renown! But let me always remember that a curse or frown attends even God's granting of that which men ask in a murmuring and peremptory manner, and that he can easily render created comforts a tremendous and destructive plague!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 1. Or Cushite—Cush was the son of Ham, Ge. 10. 6, and father of Nimrod, who founded the first great empire: and this wife is supposed to give offence as a descendant of Ham—whereas Zipporah, who is generally supposed to be now dead, is considered as a descendant of Midian, the son of Abraham by Keturah, Ge. 25 2. But from Ex. 18. 5, 6 it appears that Zipporah had been brought to the camp, at most, a very short time before this event; and as there is no mention of her sudden death, an occurrence not likely to be overlooked, so there is no reason to suppose that Moses had married another wife; but that the offence is taken at Zipporah's real or imaginary influence with her husband. Ethiopia, as a geographical term, is one of very indefinite and general application in Scripture, unquestionably extending both to Asia and Africa, Ge. 2. 13; Eze. 30. 5; 38. 5. But if the name Ethiopian, or Cushite, be taken, not from the country, but the lineage of the woman, Moses had violated no law by his marriage: as God's prohibition on that head extended only to the Canaanites, De. 7. 3. C.——'Ethiopian' is in the Hebrew Cushite. There were two divisions of the Cushites: one settled in Arabia, and mingled with the Joktanites and Ishmaelites: the other crossed into Africa and colonized Ethiopia. The wife of Moses—doubtless a second wife—was not necessarily an Ethiopian; she was probably an Arabian Cushite. Zipporah was a Midianite, and could not therefore be termed a Cushite. P.]

Ver. 3. [These words, as so highly commendatory of Moses, are by some supposed an addition of Ezra, or some other inspired writer: but why indulge suppositions without evidence? The word translated meek may be justly rendered broken, afflicted, in which sense it would be an accurate description of his condition with his relatives and the whole people. But taking the word meek as descriptive of placidity of temper, there is no offence against modesty: because there is no offence against truth. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Too common, but very sinful, are contentions among saints; nor doth anything produce hotter disputes than jealousy of power. Grace, natural affection, duty, and safety, are all trampled under foot when men strive for grandeur and rule. But God takes a peculiar pleasure in vindicating and honouring his faithful ministers or people. He remarks exactly, and justly punishes, the injuries done to those who, from a meek regard to his law, will not avenge themselves. It is dangerous therefore to revile God's servants: they who do it shall at last be obliged to bow to them, and confess their sin. Yea, often God deals most sharply with his principal children when they offend him; and marks the abominable nature of their sin in the filth, pain, or shame of their punishment. But it is becoming when offending saints make the deepest submissions. And acceptable to God, honourable to us, and effectual for our neighbour's advantage, are sincere and affectionate intercessions for those who have injured us. But even while our sins hinder our heavenly journeys, the Lord will take care of our honour and comfort, if once we be penitent and humble.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 17. 'Go up there (or thither) by the Negeb, and ascend the mountain.' The Negeb was the proper name of the region lying along the southern border of Canaan. The mountain was also a descriptive name given to that tract which lay between Jerusalem and Hebron. In going to Canaan from Kadesh their direct course was up the Negeb to the mountain, or, as it is called in the New Testament, 'the hill country.' P.]

Ver. 20. [There was need for courage of the highest order. It was a delicate, a difficult, and a dangerous mission. Great caution, close observation, and manly courage, such as would prevent the judgment from 10 Of the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel the son of Sodi.

11 Of the tribe of Joseph, namely, of the tribe of Manasseh, Gaddi the son of Susi.

12 Of the tribe of Dan, Ammiel the son of Gemalli.

13 Of the tribe of Asher, Sethur the son of Michael.

14 Of the tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi the son of Vophsi.

15 Of the tribe of Gad, Geuel the son of Machi.

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called Oshea[a] the son of Nun, [b]Jehoshua.

17 ¶ And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way [c]southward, and go up into the mountain;

18 And see the [d]land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents, or in strong holds;

20 And what the land is, whether it be fat or lean, whether there be wood therein or not:[5] and be ye of [e]good courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. (Now the time was the time of the first-ripe grapes.[6])

21 ¶ So they went up, and searched the land, from the wilderness of [f]Zin unto Rehob, as men come to Hamath.

22 And they ascended by the south,[7] and came unto [g]Hebron, where Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmai, the children of Anak, were: (now Hebron was built seven years before [m]Zoan in Egypt.)

23 And they came unto the [n]brook of Eshcol,[8] and cut down from thence a [o]branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two[9] upon a staff; and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

24 The place was called the brook Eshcol,[1] because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

25 And they returned from searching of the land after [p]forty days.

26 ¶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the wilderness of Paran, to [q]Kadesh; and brought back word unto them, and unto all the congregation, and showed them the fruit of the land.

27 And they told him, and said, We came unto the land whither thou sentest us, and surely it floweth with [r]milk and honey; and this is the fruit of it.

28 Nevertheless the people be [s]strong that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled, and very great: and moreover, we saw the children of Anak there.

29 The [t]Amalekites dwell in the land of the south;[2] and the Hittites, and the Jebusites, and the Amorites, dwell in the mountains; and the Canaanites dwell by the sea, and by the coast of Jordan.

30 And Caleb [u]stilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.

31 But the men that went up with him said, [v]We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we.

32 And they brought up an evil [w]report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land, through which we have gone to search it, is a land that [x]eateth up the inhabitants[3] thereof: and all the people that we saw in it are [y]men of a great stature.

33 And there we saw [z]the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight as [a]grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight.[4]

CHAPTER XIV.

1 The people murmur at the news. 6 Joshua and Caleb labour to pacify them. 11 God threateneth them. 13 Moses intercedeth with God, and obtaineth pardon. 26 The murmurers are deprived of entering into the land. 36 The men who raised the evil report concerning the land die by a plague. 40 The people that would invade the land against the will of God are smitten.

AND all the congregation [b]lifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept that night.

2 And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses, and against Aaron: and the whole congregation said unto them, [c]Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or, would God we had died in this wilderness![1]

3 And[c] wherefore hath the LORD brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt?

REFLECTIONS.—It is hazardous to indulge our own senses and reasonings, rather than simply to submit to the revelations of God; for often the Lord chooses men's delusions, and permits them to be ensnared by their own unbelieving devices. How often are most of those who are employed in the most important transactions, evil and wicked; and get themselves remarked, chiefly to their lasting dishonour! Yea, the manifold experience of the power of God, and the frequent repetition of his promises, are of little avail with such as have abandoned themselves to the rage of their unbelief. The cowardly heart magnifies every object, and increases every difficulty: and unbelief obstinately concludes every enemy too mighty for us; while zeal for God dares every danger, and faith makes men confident of success. Credit therefore, O my soul, what the Lord hath spoken concerning the heavenly Canaan, and my entrance into it. Let me live by faith, not by sight. Let not unbelief and carnal sense, but faith and hope, be my spies, to enter within the veil. And let repeated tastes of grapes from Eshcol, repeated tastes of intimate fellowship with God, make my heart desire to depart, and be with Christ, which is far better.

4 And they said one to another, [d]Let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt.[2]

5 Then Moses and Aaron [e]fell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And [f]Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, [g]rent their clothes:

7 And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land, which we passed through to search it, is an [h]exceeding good land.

8 If [i]the LORD delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey.

9 Only rebel not ye against the LORD, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are bread[k] for us: their defence is departed from them, and the [l]LORD is with us: fear them not.

10 But all the congregation bade [m]stone them with stones.[3] And the [n]glory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

11 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [o]How long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the signs which I have showed among them?

12 I will [p]smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them; and will make of thee a greater nation, and mightier than they.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, [q]Then the Egyptians shall hear it; (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;)

14 And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: for they [r]have heard that thou, LORD, art among this people; that thou, LORD, art seen face to face, and that thy cloud standeth over them; and that thou goest before them, by day-time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

15 Now, if thou shalt kill all this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will [s]speak, saying,

16 Because the LORD was not able[4] to bring this people into the land which he sware unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

17 And now, I beseech thee, let the power of my LORD be [t]great, according as thou hast spoken, saying,

18 The LORD is [u]long-suffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

19 Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people, [x]according unto the greatness of thy mercy, and as thou hast forgiven this people from Egypt even until now.[5]

20 And the LORD said, I have [y]pardoned according to thy word:

21 But as truly as I live, [z]all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD.

22 Because all those men which have seen my glory, and my miracles which I did in Egypt, and in the wilderness, have [a]tempted me now these [b]ten times,[6] and have not hearkened to my voice;

23 Surely[c] they shall not see the land which I sware unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it:

24 But my servant Caleb,[7] because he [d]had another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereinto he went; and his seed shall possess it.

25 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley.)[8] To-morrow [e]turn you, and get you into the wilderness, by the way of the Red sea.[9]

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

27 How[f] long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me.

28 Say unto them, [g]As truly as I live, saith the LORD, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you:

4 The sin of the heathen, either in Pharaoh, Ex. 5. 2, or the surrounding idolaters, never lay in denying the godhead of Jehovah, but in preferring another God and another mode of worship. In fact the heathen nations seldom or never differed about the being, but about the attributes and offices of their several deities. And, as the attribute of power is always the most observable, Moses therefore 'reasons' with God, Ps. 1. 21, showing that if judgment prevail over mercy, the heathen will attribute it not to want of will, but of power, and so be confirmed in the worship of their worthless idols, to whose superior influence they would attribute Israel's destruction.—C.

9 The English version makes this verse very obscure. It may be rendered thus:—'Now the Amalekites and Canaanites lie in the valley; to-morrow turn and go toward the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea.' It appears that while the spies were searching the land, and the people deliberating after their return, the warlike inhabitants assembled in force in the great valley north of the camp, to intercept their passage. The Lord therefore ordered the people to turn back and march southward through the valley of Arabah, which leads to the Red Sea.—P.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 5. Falling on the face was a customary act, either of worship to God, or obedience to man, Ge. 17. 3; Re. 11. 16; Ge. 50. 18. The act of Moses and Aaron is expressive of profound respect for their brethren; which, in such a case, nothing but divine love could have produced—and of earnest entreaty to avert their foolish and wicked resolution of returning to slavery.—Note, Those who would benefit men must bear with their caprice and ingratitude; and entreat, when they should reprove or command. C.]

Ver. 39. [Mourning is good or evil, according to its fountain and object. Springing from a due sense of sin, and apprehension of mercy, it is 'godly sorrow working repentance to salvation,' but springing from a mere sense of disappointment or loss, it is 'of the world, and worketh death,' 2 Co. 7. 10. C.]

Ver. 40. [The strange resolution to evade or frustrate a threatening by pleading a promise, is not peculiar to rebellious Israel—there are thousands that continue in sin, because they hope for mercy.—For we have sinned—that is, in appointing a captain to return to slavery, Ne. 9. 17. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The headstrong and unmortified passions of sinners hurry them furiously on to their own ruin: and such as are discontented with God's providence, and resolve to mend themselves, always make the matter worse and worse. Unbelieving murmurers are prone to charge God himself with the most base and malicious designs, and to wish for misery, under a pretence of care to avoid it. What an infinite advantage is God's presence and favour! But if he leave us, we become an easy prey to every invader. How noble is it when the abused servants of Christ in meekness instruct them that oppose themselves: if God, peradventure, will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth: though often they draw upon themselves barbarous treatment from such as they labour to save. But God tenderly remarks the dangers of his faithful servants, and interferes for their relief in the critical moment. What a blessing to a nation are those who can effectually plead their cause at a throne of grace; wrestle for mercy and forgiveness; and fill their mouth with arguments from God's own honour, power, declared mercy and patience, and their own former experience thereof! God is ready graciously to hear and answer such intercessions, even when he will not forbear showing his indignation at the sins which have provoked him. He keeps an exact account of men's conduct, that he may reward or punish it in due time. Terribly offensive to him is the contempt and discrediting of his promises, and most effectual for provoking him to abandon the guilty to irretrievable and everlasting ruin! But ringleaders in guilt, and presumptuous adventurers, in opposition to God's express command, often fall under distinguished marks of his wrath, and are made pledges of the final destruction of those whom they have seduced to or encouraged to sin. Take heed, therefore, O my soul, lest I be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin; lest there be in me an evil heart of unbelief, departing from the living God: and fear, lest a promise being left me of entering into his rest, I should seem to come short of it through unbelief! but let me be a man of another spirit than the world, and let me singly cleave to and fully follow after the Lord. If for so doing men revile and persecute me, God will amply reward me with an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

29 Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me,

30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I sware[1] to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.[2]

31 But your [h]little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know[i] the land which ye have despised.

32 But[k] as for you, your carcasses, they shall fall in this wilderness.

33 And your children shall wander in the wilderness [l]forty years, and [m]bear your whoredoms, until your carcasses be wasted in the wilderness.

34 After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even [n]forty days, (each day for a year,) shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years; and ye shall know [o]my breach of promise.[3]

35 I the LORD have said, [p]I will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

36 ¶ And the men which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him, by bringing up a [q]slander upon the land,

37 Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land, [r]died by the plague before the LORD.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of the men that went to search the land, lived still.

39 And Moses told these sayings unto all the children of Israel: and the people [s]mourned greatly.

40 ¶ And they [t]rose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised: for we have sinned.

41 And Moses said, [u]Wherefore now do ye transgress the commandment of the LORD? but it shall not prosper.

42 Go not up, for the LORD is not among you; that ye be not smitten before your enemies.

43 For the Amalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and ye shall fall by the sword: because ye are turned away from the LORD, therefore the LORD will not be with you.

44 But they [x]presumed to go up unto the hill-top: nevertheless [y]the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and Moses, departed not out of the camp.

45 Then the Amalekites came down, and the Canaanites[4] which dwelt in that hill, and smote them, [z]and discomfited them, even unto [a]Hormah.[5]

2 From Jos. 14. 11. 22. 23. we learn that Eleazar and others now present did afterwards enter into Canaan. Is not this a contradiction? 3 The phrase translated 'breach of promise' occurs but this once, so that there is no resource in comparison. The meaning must therefore be sought in the word itself, and the analogy of other divine truths. To say, with some, that the promise being conditional and the Israelites having failed in their part, God means to tell them he is not bound to his part of the engagement, is really to explain nothing. For even admitting the phrase 'conditional promise,' still it is merely an abbreviated name for both a promise and a threatening implied or declared, the one to the believing and obedient, the other to the unbelieving and rebellious; and as the fulfilment of the promise would be no disannulling of the threatening, so the infliction of the threatening would be no 'breach' of the promise. The literal translation will best explain and convey the meaning of the passage: 'Ye shall know my rising up against you, my displeasure, my indignation,' which sense of the words is confirmed by the following verse.—C.

5 Now commenced the thirty-eight years wandering. Of their journeys during this long period, and of the 'great and terrible wilderness' into which they were driven, not a single record has been preserved. The name Tih, 'wandering,' which the desert south of Palestine still bears, seems to be the only local memorial of it. Sacred history remains silent until, after the lapse of the thirty-eight years, another generation, under the same aged leaders, however, appear once more around the Sacred fountain of Kadesh.—C.

CHAP. XV.

1 The date and place of the divine communications contained in this chapter are not mentioned. It would seem from ver. 22, 23 that it must have been a considerable time after the giving of the law on Sinai, and consequently it could not have been during the first sojourn of the people at Kadesh. The regular diary breaks off at the close of chap. xiv., and is not again resumed till chap. xx. It is probable, but still not entirely certain, that the revelations made and the incidents recorded in ch. xv.—xix. took place during the thirty-eight years' wandering, though neither time nor place is indicated.—F.

3 Here is stated the quantity of those meat-offerings and drink-offerings which necessarily attended other offerings; but not the quantity of such as were offered by themselves. Le. i.—vi. ch. xxviii. xxix.

4 There were two sorts of strangers among the Israelites; some that entirely embraced and professed the Jewish religion, into which they were admitted by circumcision, &c.; others that lived among them by permission, having renounced all idolatry, but who had not yet submitted to the Jewish faith. The former sort are understood here.—Patrick.

46 So the men went up into the hill-top: but the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and Moses, departed not out of the camp.

45 Then the Amalekites came down, and the Canaanites[4] which dwelt in that hill, and smote them, [z]and discomfited them, even unto [a]Hormah.[5]

1 The law of the meat-offering and the drink-offering. 14, 29 The stranger is under the same law. 17 The law of the first of the dough for an heave-offering. 22 The sacrifice for sins of ignorance. 30 The punishment of presumption. 32 He that violated the sabbath is stoned. 37 The law of fringes.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,[1]

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [a]When ye be come into the land of your habitations, which I give unto you,

3 And will make an [b]offering by fire unto the LORD, a burnt-offering, or a sacrifice in performing[2] a vow, or in a free-will-offering, or in your solemn feasts, to make a [c]sweet savour unto the LORD, of the herd, or of the flock;

4 Then shall he that offereth his offering unto the LORD bring a [d]meat-offering of [e]a tenth-deal of flour, mingled with the fourth part of an hin of oil.

5 And the fourth part of an hin of wine for a [f]drink-offering shalt thou prepare with the burnt-offering or sacrifice, for one lamb.

6 Or for a ram, thou shalt prepare for a meat-offering two tenth-deals of flour, mingled with the third part of an hin of oil.

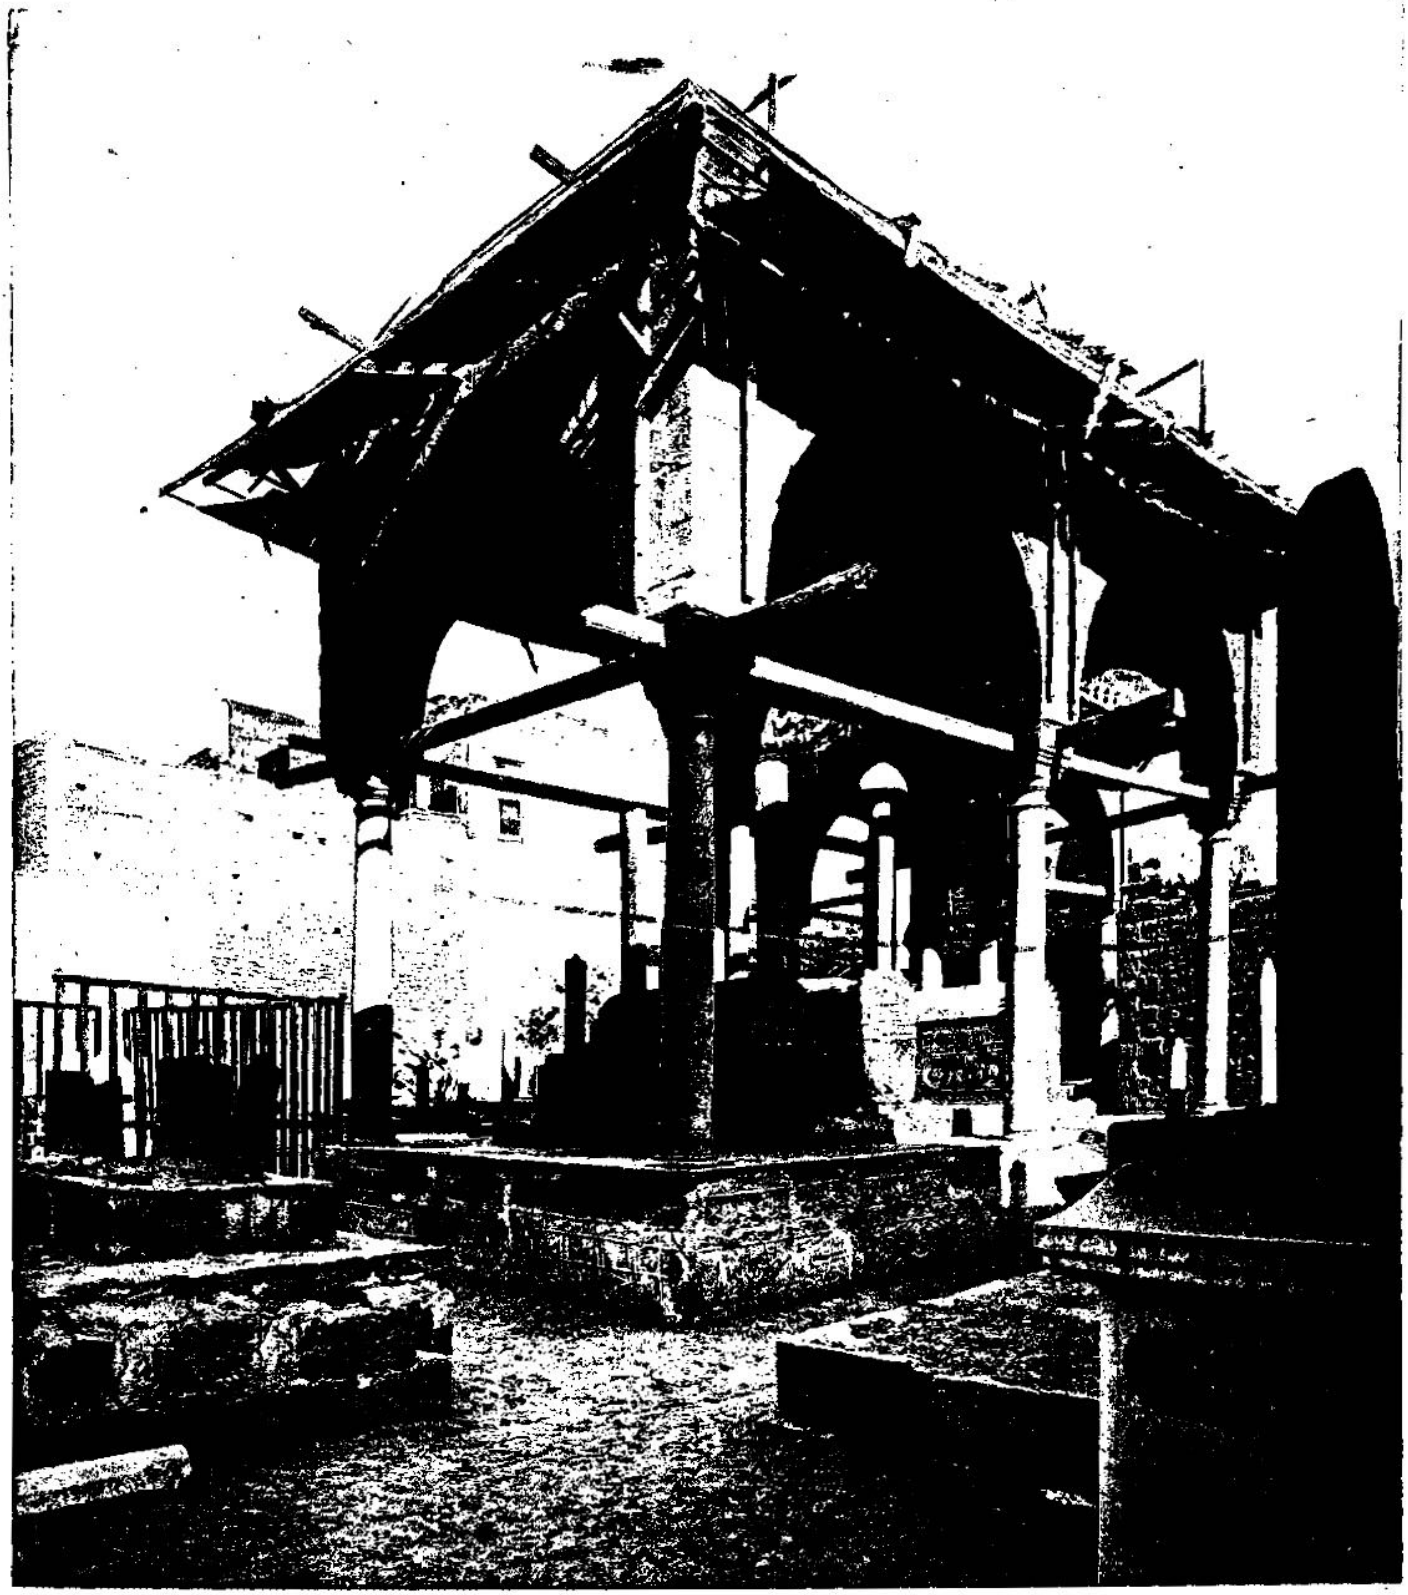
7 And for a drink-offering thou shalt offer the third part of an hin of wine, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

8 And when thou preparest a bullock[3] for a burnt-offering, or for a sacrifice in performing a vow or peace-offerings unto the LORD;

9 Then shall he bring with a bullock a meat-offering of three tenth-deals of flour, mingled with half an hin of oil.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink-offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

11 Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.



12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one, according to their number.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if a stranger[4] sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 38. Fringes, called in the New Testament the 'hem or border of the garment,' Mat. 9. 20; 23. 5. Being many, in separate detail, yet united in one garment: the fringes were the emblems or memorials of many commandments united in one law. The ribband, lace, or rather thread of blue, surrounding or pervading the whole, represented the one principle of the law—the unchanging love of God. And being the chief-priestly colour—for the robe of the ephod was all of blue. Ex. 28. 31—it reminded every believer that he was a priest of God, and bound to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, 1 Pe. 2. 5. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold the propriety of a just proportion in our religious services, and the care of TOMBS OF THE MAMELUKES—IN THE REGION WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL SPENT SO MANY YEARS IN EGYPT. [NUMBERS, XV.]—Beyond the citadel in Cairo there are a number of beautiful tombs extending along the eastern side of the city, known as the tombs of the Mamelukes. The ruins of these tombs bear traces of great artistic merit, some of the minarets being exceedingly beautiful. From the galleries in the minarets the muezzins summon the faithful to prayer five times a day. The muezzin in a kind of sing-song tone utters the following: "Allah is great! I testify that there is no other god but Allah! And Mohammed is the prophet of Allah! Come to prayer! Come to worship! Allah is great! There is no god but Allah!" These tombs are now falling to decay as all things belonging to the civilization of Egypt are falling to decay. This ancient land of the Pharaohs and the children of Israel, by the strange mutations of history is now under the dominance and influence of a Christian nation.

15 One[g] ordinance[5] shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 One law, and one manner, shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you,[6]

19 Then it shall be, that when ye eat of [h]the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave-offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the [i]first of your dough for an heave-offering: as ye do [k]the heave-offering of the threshing-floor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave-offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And if ye have [l]erred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

23 Even [m]all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward, among your generations;

24 Then it shall be, if ought be committed by ignorance,[7] without the knowledge of the congregation,[8] that all the congregation shall offer[n] one young bullock for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, with his meat-offering, and his drink-offering, according to the manner,[9] and one kid of the goats for a sin-offering.

25 And the [o]priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin-offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

5 From the Jewish people being surrounded by idolatrous nations, it was necessary to have but one form of worship; and as that only which was prescribed by the Almighty was genuine, no other could be tolerated. It might also signify that in due time the Gentiles would be fully admitted into the church.—I.

8 There are two laws for sins of ignorance, Le. iv. Nu. xv. The first for the wilderness, the second for Canaan. But why are there two laws for the same case? They are not for the same case. The law in Le. 4. 2 is enacted for cases where the congregation, priest, or ruler, or people, have 'erred,' and 'not observed' all the commandments, that is, for any mere neglect arising from ignorance. The law in Nu. 15. 22 is enacted for cases where the sin of ignorance is 'against any of the commandments of the Lord,' not a mere neglect, but a direct infraction. The distinction is well expressed in these words:—'We have left undone the things which we ought to have done: and we have done those things which we ought not to have done.'—C.

5 This is the only example in Scripture of a capital punishment for breach of the Sabbath, although the complaints against the guilt are frequent in Nehemiah, Ezra, Ezekiel, &c. It was as a sin of presumption that this Sabbath-breaking was punished: God had declared, Ex. 31. 13, 17, that the Sabbath was 'a sign' between him and the Israelites for ever. This violation must have been found, upon investigation, to have been intended to express open contempt for God and his covenant.—C.

28 And the [q]priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

29 Ye [r]shall have one law for him that sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 ¶ But the soul that doeth ought [s]presumptuously,[1] (whether he be born in the land, or a stranger,) the same reproacheth the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people:

31 Because he hath [t]despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off;[2] his iniquity shall be upon him.

32 ¶ And, while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the [u]sabbath-day.[3]

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and [z]stoned him with stones, and he died;[5] as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and [a]bid them that they make them fringes[6] in the borders of their garments, throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue.

God to have his ministers decently provided for! But chiefly behold the agreeable nourishment and heart-cheering consolations of the Holy Ghost, which attend the offering of our Redeemer once for all! Behold the kindness of God in inviting the Gentiles to his church, and presaging their entrance into it in due time in such a multitude of laws, favourable to strangers! Behold how the Lord must be honoured with the first-fruits of all our substance! But especially behold the indispensable necessity of Christ, as our propitiation for sin, however inadvertently it be committed; and the infinite danger of wilful and presumptuous sinning exemplified in this violation of the Sabbath! Is it not shameful that we should need memorials of obedience to the laws of God, so great and gracious—nay, God, even our own God! Enter then, my soul, into the spirit of these things. While I live on Jesus' flesh and blood, and rely on his atonement alone, let me cheerfully give myself, and all that I have, to the Lord. Never dare to sin against light and love; to violate the Sabbath of the Lord my God, by thinking my own thoughts, speaking my own words, doing my own ways, or finding my own pleasures. But let his law be written on my heart; and every providence, every enjoyment, be improved by me as an excitement to holy obedience!

CHAPTER XVI. REFLECTIONS.—It is hard for the best of characters to stand before envy. Unsanctified honours often puff up men to their own destruction: and if God exalt them above most of their brethren, they can endure to be in subjection to none. Yea, God permits unsanctified professors, especially ministers and magistrates, to go often the most fearful lengths in sin. Every act of disobedience to or contempt of God's vicegerents in the church or state, is by him accounted rebellion against himself: and often would sinful nations be utterly ruined, were it not for the intercession of those saints whom they abuse and persecute. But God can, and sometimes does, execute upon presumptuous sinners the most terrible correspondent justice. And though, with care, he distinguishes between the more and the less guilty, yet he sets up proper memorials of his judgments, that others may hear and fear to do wickedly. But notwithstanding, hardened sinners, who survive, forget the most awakening alarms, and return to their persecution of God's servants! Yet still, in the most endearing manner, ought we to promote the welfare and salvation of those who have injured us; and when we are maliciously accused, the greatest comfort is the testimony of a good conscience. How like unto their master Christ do ministers act, when they expose their very lives to prevent the ruin of such as abuse them! And quickly the Lord repents him of the evil, when, earnestly entreated by such as, along with himself, are abused by sinners. Let me now, with trembling, remember my faults this day.—How often have I, as these rebels, gone about to establish my own righteousness, and refused to submit to the laws of Christ; and and that ye seek not [c]after your own heart, and your own eyes, after which ye use to go a whoring;

40 That ye may remember and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God.

41 I[d] am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD your God.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The rebellion of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram. 23 Moses separateth the people from the rebels' tents. 31 The earth swalloweth up Korah, and a fire consumeth others. 36 The censers are reserved to holy use. 41 Fourteen thousand and seven hundred are slain by a plague for murmuring against Moses and Aaron. 46 Aaron by incense stayeth the plague.

NOW [a]Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi; and Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; and On, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men:[1]

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, [b]famous in the congregation, men of renown:

3 And they gathered themselves together against[c] Moses, and against Aaron, and said unto them, Ye take too much upon you,[2] seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the LORD is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?[3]

4 ¶ And when Moses heard it, he [d]fell upon his face:

5 And he spake unto Korah, and unto all his company, saying, Even [e]to-morrow[4] the LORD will show who are his, and who is holy; and will cause him to come near unto him: even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him.

6 This do; [f]Take you censers, Korah and all his company;

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to-morrow: and it shall be, that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take [g]too much upon you, ye sons of Levi;

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi;

9 Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel [h]hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near[5] to himself, to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?

10 And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: and seek ye the priesthood also?

11 For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together [i]against the LORD: and [k]what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?[6]

12 ¶ And Moses sent to [l]call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; which said, We will not come up:

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up [m]out of a land that floweth with milk and honey to kill us in the wilderness, except thou [n]make thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover, thou hast not brought us [o]into a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou put out[7] the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was [p]very wroth,[8] and said unto the LORD, [q]Respect not thou their offering:[9] I[r] have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.[1]

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Korah, Be thou and all thy company [s]before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow:

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

19 And Korah gathered [t]all the congregation[2] against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

20 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

21 Separate[u] yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them [v]in a moment.

22 And [w]they fell upon their faces, and said, O God, the God of the [x]spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, [y]Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.[3]

25 And Moses rose up, and went [z]unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, [a]Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side:

1 The word translated 'took,' though last in our version, is the first in the Hebrew; and being in the singular number, must therefore denote the act, not of the whole company, but of Korah their leader. The true meaning of the verse seems to be—'Now Korah the son of Izhar, &c., took even Dathan, &c.; and On, the son of Peleth (Dathan, Abiram, and On, being all sons of Reuben. See De. 11. 6), and they rose up before Moses, &c. Some high authorities, following the Septuagint and several MSS., read 'sons of Reuben.' thus attempted to thrust him from his office of priest and king over the people of God, in order that I might usurp his place! How often have I refused to come at his call, and offered strange incense before him? How often, the moment in which I had witnessed the awful justice of Heaven, and obtained a distinguished deliverance, have I returned to my former iniquities! And remarkably is it of the Lord's mercies that I am not consumed! not swallowed up alive into hell by an opening earth! not burned with fire from heaven! But here let me admire the wonderful zeal and love of my great High-priest, when he ran from his throne of glory and Dathan and Abiram came out, and [d]stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

COLUMNS OF THE TEMPLE SERAPEUM, PUTEOLI—A TEMPLE BUILT OF MARBLE TAKEN FROM THE COUNTRY IN WHICH MOSES GREW UP. [NUMBERS xvi.]—This picture of the temple of Serapeum, at Puteoli, standing near the place where St. Paul landed upon his first missionary journey to Italy, is placed in connection with the name of Moses in this chapter because it was a temple built in honor of an Egyptian god. Plutarch asserts that Serapis was Osiris after he had passed into the subterranean world. As if to complete the idea of a temple to an Egyptian deity the Corinthian pillars found in this marble structure are from Africa. This temple consisted of a square court enclosed by forty-eight marble and granite columns with forty-three small chambers adjoining. The portico rested on six Corinthian columns, three of which remain. In the center of the court stood a circular temple surrounded by sixteen marble pillars. By four flights of steps the interior was approached where statues of Serapis, now in the museum at Naples, were found.

28 And Moses said, Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do [e]all these works;[4] (for I have not done them [f]of mine own mind;)

29 If these men die the common death[5] of all men, or if they be [g]visited after the visitation of all men, then the LORD hath not sent me:

30 But if the LORD [h]make a new thing,[6] and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they go down quick into the pit, then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 ¶ And[i] it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them:

32 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and all the men that [j]appertained [k]unto Korah, and all their goods.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel that were round about them [l]fled at the cry of them:[8] for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there [m]came out a fire[9] from the LORD, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.[1]

36 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are [n]hallowed.

38 The censers of these [o]sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar: for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: and they shall be [p]a sign unto the children of Israel.[2]

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brazen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar:

40 To be [q]a memorial unto the children of Israel, that no [r]stranger,[3] which is not of the seed of Aaron, come near to offer incense before the LORD, that he be not as Korah, and as his company: as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

4 The infatuation and waywardness of this generation of the Israelites are astonishing. Some have supposed that they imagined Moses and Aaron to have used some secret arts for the destruction of the rebels, and they spoke of them as the people of the Lord, as if their death had not been a judgment from God. It is more probable, however, that the ground of their charge was a belief that Moses and Aaron might, by their prayers, have prevented their awful punishment.—J.

5 Of the precise nature of that plague we are not informed. It may have been in the form of a sweeping epidemic—such as the disease commonly called Indian cholera—which has still been to select, as it were, particular localities, and to be restrained by Providence at particular boundaries; or it may have been inflicted by a destructive wind, whose ravages are directed and confined in particular currents. Note, In this example of pious and generous zeal for intercession, Aaron is a special type of Christ, 'standing between the living and the dead, having put away sin, returning, as an atoning priest, to Moses the representative of a law condemning but now satisfied law, Ro. 10. 4.—C.

1 The large body of the people were manifestly deeply implicated in the rebellion of Korah. The 250 princes of renown who joined with him were men held in high estimation. They were the champions of the unruly mob; and they were put forward to oppose that supremacy which Moses had so long exercised. When they were consumed by fire from the Lord, the mob was awed and terrified for the moment; but terror soon gave way to rage, and they charged Moses and Aaron with the murder of their leaders. The plague again struck terror into their hearts; and now that they might have visible proof that Moses and Aaron were not usurpers, but were the chosen of the Lord, this miracle of the rod was wrought.—C.

41 ¶ But [s]on the morrow all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured[4] against Moses and against Aaron, saying, Ye have killed the people of the LORD.

42 And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, the cloud covered it, and the [t]glory of the LORD appeared.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 Get[u] you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And they [v]fell upon their faces.

46 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and [w]put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an [x]atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation; and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he [y]put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

48 And he [z]stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed.[5]

49 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, besides them that died about the matter of Korah.

50 And Aaron [a]returned unto Moses, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the plague was stayed.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Aaron's rod among all the rods of the tribes only flourisheth. 10 It is left for a monument against the rebels.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod, according to the house of their fathers, of [a]all their princes, according to the house of their fathers, twelve rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation [b]before the testimony, where I will meet with you.

5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod whom I [c]shall choose shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, whereby they murmur against you.[1] when he came among dying sinners—himself exposed to all their miseries—to stop the plague of sin, already begun in the woes of life, the stings of conscience, and the sentence of death; and to bring in everlasting righteousness and redemption. How superior his priesthood! If they did not escape who despised Moses and Aaron, how shall I escape if I despise Jesus the great High-priest, Jesus the King in Zion.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 6. There were originally but twelve tribes, but when Joseph was increased into Ephraim and Manasseh, Ge. 48. 17, they became thirteen: afterwards when the tribe of Levi, instead of being numbered for war, was chosen of God for his service, instead of the first-born of every tribe, Nu. 1. 47; 3. 41, the tribes were again reckoned as twelve, Levi ceasing to be counted. As in this narrative 'every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece, and the rod of 6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and [d]every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece,[2] for each prince one, according to their fathers' houses, even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

7 And Moses laid up the rods[3] before the LORD in the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was [e]budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.[4]

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.[5]

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [f]Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token against the rebels;[6] and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

11 And[g] Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, [h]Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

13 Whosoever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?

1 The charge of the priests and Levites. 8 The priests' portion. 21 The Levites' portion. 25 The heave-offering to the priests out of the Levites' portion.

AND the LORD said unto Aaron, Thou, and thy sons, and thy father's house with thee, shall [a]bear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou, and thy sons with thee, shall bear the iniquity[1] of your priesthood.

2 And thy [b]brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be joined unto thee, and minister unto thee: but thou, and thy sons with thee, shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and the charge of all the tabernacle; [c]only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that neither they nor ye also die.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: and a [d]stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And [e]ye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar; that there be no[f] wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Behold, I also have given thee [l]the charge of mine heave-offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel; unto thee have I given them, [k]by reason of the anointing, and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever.

Aaron was among them,' there were in all thirteen rods. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is very desirable to prevent all disputes among the people of God; but often very difficult to extinguish some men's pretensions to what was never theirs. Abundant is the grace of God, who will even work miracles to prevent the sin and ruin of such as have rebelled against him: and what a mercy is it when a minister's call to his office is manifested by his success therein; and if sinners, even at the last, be brought to repentance! Nothing, surely, but a remarkable bestowal of gracious influence will effectually stop all murmurings against the dispensations of God, and bring sinners to submit to them. But in this budding rod let me not only behold the fruitfulness of the Aaronic priesthood, in its usefulness to the people, and the certain succession of priests while the ceremonial period continued, with the speedy justice which overtook the invaders thereof: but let me chiefly remark the eternal, the sole high-priesthood of our Lord Jesus, manifested by the blessed effects of the gospel rod of his strength in the conversion, sanctification, and comfort of sinful men.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 7. The sphere of the priest's labours is here distinctly defined. It embraced the offering of all sacrifices upon the altar; it embraced 17 But the [a]firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the [a]wave-breast and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 All [b]the heave-offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: it is a [c]covenant of salt[6] for ever before the LORD unto thee, and to thy seed with thee.

20 And the LORD spake unto Aaron, [d]Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: [b]I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

21 ¶ And, behold, I [e]have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 Neither must the children of Israel henceforth [d]come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, lest they bear sin, [7]and die.[8]

23 But the Levites shall [f]do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity. It shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, [f]that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance.

24 But[9] the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave-offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes, which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up [h]an heave-offering of it for the LORD, even a tenth part of the tithe.[9]

27 And this your heave-offering shall be reckoned[1] unto you, as though it were the corn of the thrashing-floor, and as the fulness of the wine-press.[2]

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave-offering unto the LORD of all your tithes which ye receive of the children of Israel; and [i]ye shall give thereof the LORD's heave-offering to Aaron the priest.

29 Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave-offering of the LORD of [k]all the [3]best thereof, even the hallowed part thereof, out of [4]it.

30 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the thrashing-floor, and as the increase of the wine-press.

31 And[l] ye shall eat it in every place,[5] ye and your households: for it is [m]your reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation.

32 And ye shall bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the best of it: neither shall ye [n]pollute the holy things of the children of Israel, lest ye die.

besides the performance of all duties and service within the tabernacle, whether in the holy or the most holy place. No Levite could enter the tabernacle on pain of death. In most cases 'the veil' means the curtain which separated the holy from the 'holy of holies;' here, however, it is taken for the outer veil or door of the tabernacle. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The ministerial work is necessary and important; and the greatest care and diligence is necessary to render a person faithful in it. He must not only put away sin from himself, but take all care to prevent it in others. And extensive is the account that must be given to God, not only for himself, but for others under his care. How needful then is it that all in their stations, particularly parents, masters, and magistrates, should exert themselves to render the ministry comfortable and successful! God will have his servants decently provided for in the church, and in the heavenly state; nor will ever a godly people fail to make a liberal provision for a gospel ministry. But base are the minds of those ministers who, having a competency, entangle themselves with the affairs of this life, or desire to excuse themselves from being charitable out of what God hath brought to their hand! And may I not also, in all this, discern the extensive charge, faithful labours, and glorious rewards of my Redeemer; and his improvement of all to his Father's honour and his people's good!

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—Behold how polluted are men, dead in trespasses and sins—much more abominable than the beasts that perish! To carnal reasoning, some of God's ordinances appear absurd. How strange is it to make ashes, mingled with water, the mean of purification from the deepest defilement! But it is infinitely dangerous to contemn the least of his institutions. These ceremonies are indeed insufficient to take away sin; for the most remarkable of them for atonement or purification spread the defilement! But the meaning here is concerning Christ and his church. Being apprehended by the chief priests and elders of Israel, slain without the camp, burned in the furnace of his Father's love; and his blood, his life, offered to God for the completion of his justice: the virtue of his death, connected with the clean water, the pure influences of his Spirit, doth, in all generations, purge his people's consciences, and all their concerns, from dead works to serve the living God. Let it then be the care of my soul to begin, continue, and end my life, with a believing applica-

MOUNT OF OLIVES, FROM THE TEMPLE PLATEAU—A VIEW CHRIST WITNESSED MANY TIMES. [Numbers, xix:3.]—"And ye shall give her unto Eleazer the priest, that he may bring her forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face." The bodies of those animals offered for the sin of the congregation were burnt outside the camp, teaching that sin had no proper place in the city of God. In accordance with this view our Lord suffered without the gate. "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth unto him without the camp bearing his reproach." Above is a picture of the Mount of Olives from the Temple Plateau in Jerusalem. Upon the spot where this picture was taken the rites and ceremonies were perfected of which Jesus Christ was the living fulfillment.

ward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.[2]

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a [a]man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and [b]lay them up without the camp in a clean place; and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel for a water of separation:[3] it is a purification for sin.[4]

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be [c]unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

11 ¶ He that [m]toucheth the dead body of any man[5] shall be unclean seven days.[6]

12 He shall [n]purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

13 Whosoever [o]toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent; [p]All that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days:

15 And every open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

16 And whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

17 And [q]for an unclean person they shall take of the ashes[7] of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and running[8] water[9] shall be put thereto in a vessel;

18 And [r]a clean person shall take hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave:

19 And the [s]clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day; and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But [t]the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut off from among the congregation, because he hath defiled the sanctuary of the LORD: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him; he is unclean.

21 And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that [u]he that sprinkleth the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even.

22 And [v]whatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean; and the soul that toucheth it shall be unclean until even.

CHAPTER XX.

1 The children of Israel come to Zin, where Miriam dieth. 2 They murmur for want of water. 7 Moses smiting the rock bringeth forth water. 12 God is displeased with Moses and Aaron at Meribah. 14 Moses at Kadesh desireth a passage through Edom, which is denied him. 22 At Mount Hor Aaron resigneth his place to Eleazar, and dieth.

THEN came the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin in the [a]first month: and the people abode in [b]Kadesh; and Miriam died there, and was buried there.[1]

2 ¶ And there was no water for the congregation: and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.

3 And the people [c]chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died [d]when our brethren died before the LORD!

4 And [e]why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle[2] should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto [f]this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

6 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly [g]unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they fell upon their faces: and [h]the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

7 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

8 Take [i]the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and [k]speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod from before the LORD, as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock; and he said unto them, [l]Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?[3]

[2] The heifer was not brought to Aaron the high-priest, but to Eleazar his son, for the high-priest must not render himself unclean, Le. 21.10-12. In this distinction Aaron was the emblem of our High-priest Jesus; while Eleazar represents those who, like Paul, acknowledging themselves to be 'chief of sinners,' 1 Ti. 1.15, yet having, like him, 'obtained mercy,' 1 Ti. 1.13, are commissioned to legal fellow-sinners to the 'blood of sprinkling, and the 'washing of regeneration,' Tit. 3.5.—C.

All the great sacrifices which were offered for sin, though they purified those for whom they were made, became themselves impure. The sins of those that offered them were laid upon them. In all this they were typical of him who was made sin for us, though he knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God by him.—J.

[1] The diary or regular narrative of the 42 years' travels of the Israelites is here taken up again after an interval of thirty-eight years, and taken up on the same spot where it had been dropped. A continuous history is given from this time till they entered Canaan. This second visit to Kadesh appears to have been prolonged like the first. It was signalized also by some solemn incidents. The first was the death of Miriam. The next was a murmuring of the people because the supply of water failed. The sacred spring could not meet the wants of such a multitude, especially as the flocks and herds were now assembled at it. A second time God gave them water by a miracle.—P.

[3] It is said in ver. 12 that Moses did not believe God fully in this instance. The nature of his sin, and the manner in which incredulity manifested itself, are not very clearly shown; but probably they may be indicated in the last clause of ver. 10. It is plain that Moses was in a state of great excitement. His customary meekness had deserted him. He spoke to the people in passionate language:—'Hear now, ye rebels.' The words which follow ought to be thus translated:—'Can we fetch you water out of the rock?' Have I power to do this? There is want of faith here. Then he acted passionately, striking the rock twice, instead of merely speaking to it, as if physical force would be required to bring the water.—P.

tion thereof. It is death, it is despair, if I neglect it. Having fellowship with him in his resurrection, by justification and regeneration, I shall, in due time, enter on his eternal Sabbath, without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 1. This was in the first month of the fortieth year after the departure from Egypt, comp. ch. 33. 38; ver. 28 of this chapter, and De. 1. 3. The intermediate thirty-seven years Moses passes over in silence. The reason of this silence may be collected thus:—Moses wrote, not for curiosity, that he might satisfy it; nor for national vanity, that he might flatter it: but for God, that he might glorify him; and for man, that he might instruct him. Moses wrote, as the historian of providence and redemption; by the one to show how the world is governed, how sin is restrained, overruled, and punished; by the other, 11 And Moses [m]lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the water[n] came out abundantly; and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye [o]believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye [p]shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 This[q] is the water of Meribah;[4] because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was [r]sanctified in them.

14 ¶ And Moses [s]sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath befallen us;

15 How [t]our fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers:

16 And [u]when we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt; and, behold, we are in [x]Kadesh,[5] a city in the uttermost of thy border.

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, [y]through thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells; we will go by the king's high-way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, [z]We will go by the high-way; and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay for it: I will only (without doing any thing else) go through on my feet.

20 And he said, Thou shalt not go through. [a]And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel [b]turned away from him.[6]

22 ¶ And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, and came unto mount Hor.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying, 24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the water of Meribah.

25 Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

29 And when all the congregation saw that

5 Kadesh presents one of the greatest geographical difficulties in the whole Mosaic itinerary. Majus and commentators generally agree that Kadesh-barnea and Kadesh are two distinct and distant places. Kadesh-barnea they place on the frontier of Palestine, about midway between the southern extremity of the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean; and Kadesh, where Miriam died, in the mountains of Edom, about midway between Eziongeber on the Red and Zoar on the Dead Sea. This point of geography, it must be observed, is altogether conjectural, there being no certain landmarks nor continuous historical records, as in other instances, by which the locality can be determined. A high probability, however, is derived from ch. 33. 36, where it is said, 'They removed from Ezion-geber (which is in the Elanitic Gulf of the Red Sea) and pitched in the wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh,' and 'removed from Kadesh and pitched in Mount Hor.' Now this Kadesh is evidently in the direct or most convenient road to Mount Hor, but the Kadesh-barnea of the ordinary scriptural maps lies far to the north-west. Again, we find the Israelites, when the spies returned from Canaan, encamped in Kadesh, ch. 13. 26, and from De. 1. 19, 20, 24 we find that Kadesh identified with Kadesh-barnea. Upon the whole, therefore, we are induced to conclude that Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea are two names, not for one spot or town, but for one extensive district, and that, according to Eusebius, it was in the neighbourhood of Mount Hor, near Petra, the capital of Arabia Petræa, and where the tomb of Miriam was still pointed out in his time.—C.

6 Edom had a conventional but not a moral right to refuse the passage. The conventional right was founded on will and power — the moral right on kindness and mercy—but Edom was of Esau, the other of God, and therefore should have predominated. But even a moral right is not always to be enforced; so Israel 'turned aside,' but neither from fear nor weakness, but at the commandment of God, De. 2. 4, 5, and in the exercise of that charity that 'seeketh not her own,' but 'suffereth long and is kind,' 1 Co. 13. 4, 5.—C.

how mercy is exhibited, sin pardoned, and holiness established. C.]

Ver. 12. [The sin of Moses and Aaron is recorded, but not particularized, unless in so far as it may be inferred from the narrative. Amongst the internal evidences of the divine mission of Moses, we must rank the unparalleled candour with which he records his sin and his punishment. No hypocrite, imposing upon others —no enthusiast, imposing upon himself—has ever recorded or admitted his own errors. The deceiving hypocrite cannot afford to let in the light. The self-deceived enthusiast has not discovered his own darkness. The sin of Moses seems to have consisted, (1) In angrily and provokingly calling the people 'rebels.' (2) In going beyond the divine command, ver. 8, merely to 'speak unto the rock,' and smiting it twice, either in anger or unbelief, or both. (3) In strange and unaccountable unbelief in the promise of God, of which he had had so many trials. (4) In the expression, 'must WE fetch water?' he seems to attribute the miracle to himself and Aaron, rather than to God. Lord! what is man! Moses thy servant, meekest of men, is chafed into unseasonable anger, and he that talked with thee face to face has fallen under thy deserved displeasure! 'Let us fear therefore, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of us should seem to come short of it,' He. 4. 1. C.]

Ver. 16. [Kadesh, the 'holy' place or city, was originally called En-Mishpat, 'the fountain of judgment.' It is described as being in the 'Wilderness of Paran,' and also in the 'Wilderness of Zin.' Paran was the general name of a large region; Zin the specific name of a section of it. There is no trustworthy evidence to show that Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea were different. They were different names for the same place. The site of Kadesh is now marked by the fountain of Weibeh, at the foot of the hills on the eastern side of the great valley of Arabah, opposite the highest peaks of Edom. P.]

Ver. 21. [The Israelites were prevented for some reason from entering Canaan from the south, and were therefore compelled to pass along the eastern side of the Dead Sea, and cross the Jordan. The territory of the Edomites lay between the camp at Kadesh and the east bank of the Jordan. If not permitted to pass through Edom, a long, dreary, and dangerous journey must be undertaken through the desert of Arabia. Hence the message to the King of Edom, and the fair and urgent request for permission to pass through his land. When refused they were obliged to turn due south so as to sweep round the southern border of Edom. P.]

Ver. 23. [Mount Hor was within Edom. The camp of the Israelites was stationed doubtless in the great valley, at the western base of the range of which Hor is one of the peaks. The traditional tomb of Aaron still exists on the rocky summit of Mount Hor. It is a rock-hewn cave, surmounted by a small domed building. On the west it looks down into the Arabah where the encampment lay; on the east it looks into the wild and strange ravine and ruins of Petra. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Much of our time is spent as a tale that is told, passed away in God's wrath, without anything worth remarking. And death at length makes quick and repeated inroads in families which have been long forborne. Miriam, Aaron, and Moses now die all in one year. And as it was with them, so God often writes indignation upon the death of his own people, who are saved in the Lord their God: for in the chastisement of his choicest saints he is severely strict, as, indeed, their sins dishonour him in a distinguished manner. Children readily imitate their parents in their wickedness. Bad customs and tempers cleave close to men, and show themselves whenever an occasion presents itself: and those are often ready to wish for death who are very unfit for it. Men's principal friends are often treated the worst; but the mercy and power of God are exerted for the relief of sinful rebels against him. Yet, alas! how prone are the best of men to unbelief under long or repeated trials, and to passion under great provocations! and often reproaches, just in their matter, may be very sinful in their manner. How lasting are quarrels between families and nations! and how inveterate the hatred of Edomites of the world against the church and people of God! little of earthly comforts can we hope for in our way to the Canaan above! but when believers look most beautiful on the borders of the grave, and when faith disarms death of all its terrors—when they depart deliberately and cheerfully into the joy of our Lord—how comely and how comfortable! And it is a peculiar joy to dying ministers to see the cause of God transmitted into the hands of zealous and faithful successors. But let me not bid adieu to Aaron, the saint of God, till I behold in him, as in a figure, Jesus, the great High-priest of my profession! Seasonable and divinely solemn was his call to his work! with an unmeasurable unction of the Holy Ghost, and perfect purity of nature, was he prepared for it. By his miracles; his destruction of his Jewish and Gentile opposers; by the marvellous influence of the gospel rod of his strength, is his office confirmed and ratified of God! He delivers as believers from spiritual slavery; justifies and sanctifies them; leads them up through this wilderness world; and he can well speak to their respective cases and doubts. He is our sole High-priest, and the spiritual Father of all such as are made priests unto God: and with amazing holiness, courage, labour, patience, and pity he executes his work. At the expense of his life he averted the plague of infinite justice from his unreasonable abusers: and having finished his work o:

Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Israel with some loss destroy the Canaanites at Hormah. 4 The people murmuring are plagued with fiery serpents. 7 They repenting are healed by a brazen serpent. 10 Sundry journeys of the Israelites. 21 Sihon is overcome, 33 and Og.

AND when [a]king Arad[2] the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came by the [b]way of the spies, then he fought against Israel, and took [c]some of them prisoners.

2 And Israel [d]vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then I [e]will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And [f]the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities:[3] and he called the name of the place [g]Hormah.

4 ¶ And they journeyed from mount Hor, by the way of the Red sea,[4] to [h]compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much discouraged[5] because of the way.

5 And the people [i]spake against God, and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and our soul loatheth this light bread.

6 And [k]the LORD sent fiery serpents[6] among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

7 ¶ Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, [l]We have sinned; for we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee: pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the LORD said unto Moses, [m]Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

9 And [n]Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole; and it came to pass, that if a [o]serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

10 ¶ And[p] the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in Oboth.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and pitched at Ije-abarim,[7] in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sun-rising.

12 ¶ From thence they removed, and pitched in the [q]valley of Zared.[8]

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for [r]Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the book[9] of the wars of the LORD, What he did in the Red sea,[1] and in the brooks of Arnon,

15 And at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, [s]and [2]lieth upon the border of Moab.

16 And from thence they went to [t]Beer; that is the well, whereof the LORD spake unto Moses, [u]Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

17 ¶ Then Israel [v]sang this song, Spring [3]up, O well; sing[4] ye unto it:

18 The [w]princes digged the well, the nobles of the people digged it, by the direction of the [x]lawgiver, with their staves. And [y]from the wilderness they went to Mattanah;

19 And from Mattanah to Nahaliel; and from Nahaliel to Bamoth;

20 And from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the country[5] of Moab, to the top [z]of Pisgah, which looketh toward [a]Jeshimon.[6]

21 ¶ And [b]Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

22 Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards; we will not drink of the waters of the well; but we will go along by the king's high-way, until we be past thy borders.[7]

7 The kingdom of Sihon extended along the mountain range and plateau east of the Jordan, from the river Arnon on the south to the Jabbok on the north. It thus intervened between the place where the Israelites were now encamped and the river Jordan. Moses therefore was compelled either to obtain by diplomacy or to force a passage through it. The region now occupied by the Amorites had formerly belonged to the Moabites; but the latter were driven out by Sihon.—F.

obedience, he publicly and willingly, upon Mount Calvary, resigned himself unto death, leaving his robes of finished righteousness to all who believe.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 1. The word translated 'spies' is in the Syriac and other ancient versions rendered 'places.' The Septuagint and other authorities consider it a proper name, and render it 'the way of Atharim.' There seems, however, no good reason for departing from our English version. For if, contrary to the ordinary opinion of geographers, it be incorrect—an opinion, be it observed, of no more than conjectural authority—and if Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea be but two names for one place, see note ch. xx., then Israel, now at Kadesh, would naturally enter Canaan 'by the way of the spies.' C.— When the people were encamped at Kadesh it would seem that the warlike inhabitants of the Negeb and southern Canaan had established an army of observation in the mountains near them, prepared to defend the passes, and to make an attack on any favourable opportunity. The opportunity offered when the Israelites turned southward. Then the enemy attacked them in the rear, and took some prisoners. But they paid dearly for a temporary advantage. F.]

Ver. 5. [The line of march from Mount Hor was down the great valley to Ezion-gaber at the northern end of the Gulf of Akabah; then eastward across the mountain ridge to the plateau of Arabia. Here they encountered their greatest difficulties. The plateau is destitute of verdure and water. It is a dreary undulating expanse, covered with flints and debris of limestone, exposed to the parching heat of an unclouded sun. The Israelites traversed it at the very worst season, about the end of August. F.]

Ver. 9. [It signifies such a pole as was the banner-staff of the tribes, to which they were accustomed to look in decamping and marching.—He lived. The sending of the serpents was an acknowledged judgment, the cure an evident miracle. There seems no good reason for denying the serpent to be a type of Christ, Jn. 3. 14, on the alleged ground of its being a name of Satan. Christ was made sin and a curse for us, 2 Co. 5. 21; Ga. 3. 13, and appeared, not a sinner, yet in the very 'likeness of sinful flesh,' Ro. 8. 3. The sight of this serpent healed so, says our Lord, 'Look unto me, and be ye saved,' Is. 45. 22; He. 12. 2. C.]

Ver. 10. [It ought to be observed that only a very few of the stations are here mentioned. A pretty full list is given in Nu. xxxiii. On reaching Oboth the worst of the journey was passed: they were on the borders of the rich pasture-land of Moab, east of the Dead Sea. F.]

Ver. 14. [Book or narrative. There is no necessity for translating it book, and then conjecturing whether the passage be a quotation from a Moabitish poem, or Mosaic book of directions to Joshua, and now lost.—Wars of the Lord, that is, wars directed by his providence and word, for punishment of wicked nations.—Red Sea, or as some think 'at Suph,' which they suppose the name of a place in the neighbourhood. Does it not more likely mean the Red Sea as in the text, and particularize it as the place where the wars of the Lord began, and closing with Pisgah, from which Moses viewed the full extent of the promised land? C.]

Ver. 16, 18. [They went is supplied by the translators. The correctness of the insertion is questionable, as the passage seems rather to commemorate the progress of the wars of the Lord than the journeyings of Israel. The words, 'by direction of the lawgiver, with their staves,' are rendered by some high authorities, 'by a decree upon their borders.' The authorized version is, however, admitted to be literal; and the mention of staves perfectly intelligible, as intimating the providential ease with which the work of digging was accomplished, and abundance of water obtained. C.— Ver. 18. This spirited ode was sung by the people, and appears to have been inspired by some signal act of divine power and mercy on the banks of the Arnon.

MOSQUE OF OMAR AND JEWISH QUARTER—WHERE CHRIST DROVE THE MONEY CHANGERS FROM THE TEMPLE. [Numbers, xxi:8.] "And the Lord said unto Moses, make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that everyone that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live." The Mosque of Omar now stands upon the site of the ancient Temple. The Temple summed up in itself all the meaning of the tabernacle. Jesus Christ, who taught in the Temple and drove the money changers from the Temple, and claimed it as His Father's house, summed up in Himself all the meaning of the tabernacle and the Temple, and was the full living expression of the entire process of type and rite and shadow and sacrifice which preceded Him as so many means of training, and object lessons in the history of the Jewish race.

23 And[e] Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border; but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And [f]Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the villages[8] thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.[9]

27 Wherefore they that speak in [1]proverbs[2] say, Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built and prepared:

28 For there is a [g]fire gone out of Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon: it hath consumed Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon.

29 Woe to thee, Moab! thou art undone, O people of [h]Chemosh![3] he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters, into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

30 We have shot[4] at them; Heshbon is perished even unto [i]Dibon, and we have laid them waste even unto Nophah, which reacheth unto Medeba.

31 ¶ Thus Israel [k]dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moses sent to spy out [l]Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

33 ¶ And[m] they turned and went up by the way of Bashan: and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he and all his people, to the battle at Edrei.[5]

34 And the LORD said unto Moses, [n]Fear him not: for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land; and thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

35 So they [o]smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

The greater part of it is flat table-land, of extraordinary fertility, and celebrated for the richness of its pastures. Edrei, one of its capital cities, stood near the centre of the kingdom, on a rocky promontory which shoots out from the south-west corner of the wild and rugged province of Argob. Its ruins are from two to three miles in circuit, and still bear the ancient name. That section of it lying along the base of the mountains at the north-east angle of the Dead Sea was called Arboth-Moab. It was due east of Jericho, and was separated from the plain of Jericho by the river Jordan. It is a low plain, partially covered with a white nitrous crust, intersected by deep gullies and watercourses, and studded with shrubberies of tamarisk, acacia, and myrtle. The beauty and fertility of this great plain, with the rapid river running through it, must have reminded the Israelites of Egypt.—P.

2 Balak's first message for Balaam is refused. 15 His second message obtaineth him. 22 An angel would have slain him, if his ass had not saved him. 36 Balak entertaineth him.

AND the children of Israel [a]set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab,[1] on this side Jordan[2] by Jericho.

2 ¶ And Balak the son of Zippor saw [b]all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

3 And Moab was sore [c]afraid of the people, because they were many; and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

4 And Moab said unto the [d]elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 He[e] sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor, to [f]Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his [3]people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, they [g]cover the face[4] of the earth, and they abide over against me.

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, [h]curse me this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.[5]

7 And the elders of Moab, and the elders of Midian, departed with the [i]rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, Lodge here this [k]night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me. And the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

---

Perhaps it was the discovery of a copious spring by which the thirst of the fainting multitudes was assuaged. The Hebrew words may be thus rendered:—

> 'Spring up, O well! Sing ye unto it!
> The well, the princes digged it,
> The nobles of the people excavated it;
> With the sceptre—with their staves.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Continued courage and dependence upon God are highly necessary, that at last we may prove more than conquerors. Religious vows, when properly conducted, are likewise sometimes profitable. But upon what inconsiderable temptations, prevailing lusts, formerly punished, again break forth! Often the long continuance of God's mercies with men render them cheap in their eyes. But let us remember it is hazardous to offend God, who hath so many instruments of justice at his beck; and that sufferings for sin should lead us to repentance for it; especially since God is so ready to forgive the penitent, and to turn away his wrath. But, oh unspeakable mercy! as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so Jesus Christ, the Son of man, was lifted up on the cross, and is now lifted up in the gospel, for the cure of all those deadly maladies contracted from the seduction of the old serpent the devil—when we look to him by faith! In all our wanderings on earth God can grant us wells of comfort, and fill our mouths with his praise: he can bestow noted victories in favour of his people, even on this side death. And what easy work it is to conquer the strongest enemies when God's time is come, and he helps us by his grace! Yet in these victories let me observe, that they who intend mischief to others, often fall into the pit which themselves have digged; that worldly possessions are changeable and frail; and especially that ill-gotten gain is seldom long enjoyed.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 4. Midian, in which Jethro the father-in-law of Moses was priest, was situated near Horeb. How then do the Moabites, who lay at a great distance to the north, enter into consultation with the Midianitish elders? Some think there were two Midians, and it may have been so. But as Moses gives no note of distinction, this opinion does not seem probable. Those who reflect in how many parts of the world the British people are settled, will easily comprehend how the Midianites may have had possessions both at Horeb and in Moab. Nor are we to be surprised at the special consultation with the Midianites. The history of Jethro sufficiently testifies his political sagacity, Ex. 18. 10–12, 14, 29, and it is by no means improbable that his kindred in Moab may have been distinguished by similar qualities. C.—— See note on Ex. 2. 15. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Relations by blood are sometimes the bitterest enemies to one another, and seek to ruin those who might expect kindness from them. The most awful things in religion, imprecations of divine wrath not excepted, are often transformed into ordinances of the devil: and sinners, with great expense and toil, court the assistance of hell, when they might have freely from heaven whatever they need. Yea, great men, who scorn to worship their Maker, frequently cringe as slaves to the very slaves of the devil! What inestimable value do carnal men put upon earthly riches and honours, as if these were sufficient to determine to anything! And there is great need to realize eternal things, that nothing temporal may be able to decoy us. But religion is sometimes put on as a cloak by those who have no real regard to it. And the most presumptuous claims to God, and pretence of high regard to his will, are used when they would gladly counteract it. Wicked messengers indeed rarely report the whole of the truth as it really is; and the Lord often apparently indulges dissemblers in their

9 And [1]God came unto Balaam,[6] and said, What men are these with thee?

10 And Balaam said unto God, [m]Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying,

11 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: come now, curse me them; peradventure I shall be able to overcome them,[7] and drive them out.

12 And God said unto Balaam, [n]Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people: for they are blessed.

13 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land: for the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

14 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.[8]

15 ¶ And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from[9] coming unto me,

17 For [o]I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, [p]If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, [q]tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, [r]If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them:[1] but [s]yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam [t]rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 ¶ And God's anger was kindled [u]because he went:[2] and the [v]angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. (Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.)

23 And [y]the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field; and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a [z]path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side.[3]

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and [a]crushed Balaam's foot against the wall: and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, [b]where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she fell down under Balaam: and [c]Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the LORD [d]opened the mouth of the ass; and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I [e]would there were a sword in mine hand, for now would I kill thee.

30 And the ass said unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, upon which thou hast ridden[4] ever since[5] I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, [f]Nay.

31 Then the LORD opened the eyes of Balaam, and he [g]saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he bowed down his head, and [h]fell flat on his face.

32 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, [i]Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out to withstand thee,[7] because thy way is [k]perverse before me:

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I [l]had slain thee, and saved her alive.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, I [m]have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it displease thee,[8] I will get me back again.[9]

35 And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, [n]Go with the men: but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

36 ¶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, he [o]went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, which is in the border of [p]Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore camest thou not unto me? am [q]I not able indeed to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have [r]I now any power at all

[6] That Balaam was by profession a believer in, and by office a priest of, Jehovah, there can be no reasonable doubt. And that God should honour such a man with a vision and a commission need not appear strange, when it is considered that Balaam bears a testimony in Moab that a better man could not have borne, because he would not have been induced to accompany the messengers for love of reward, Jude 11.—C.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1, 14, 28 Balak's sacrifice. 7, 18 Balaam's parable.

AND [a]Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here [b]seven oxen, and seven rams.

2 And Balak did as Balaam had spoken; and Balak and Balaam offered on every altar a bullock and a ram.

3 And Balaam said unto Balak, Stand by thy [c]burnt-offering, and I will go: [d]peradventure the LORD will come to meet me; and whatsoever he showeth[1] me I will tell thee. And [e]he went to an high place.

4 And God [f]met Balaam: and he said unto him, I have [g]prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

5 And the LORD [h]put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt-sacrifice, he and all the princes of Moab.

7 ¶ And he [i]took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from[k] Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, [l]Come, curse me Jacob; and come, defy[m] Israel.

8 How[n] shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

9 For from the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him:[2] lo, the people shall [o]dwell alone;[3] and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

10 Who can count [p]the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel?[4] Let [q]me[5] die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his![6]

11 And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? I took thee to [r]curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

12 And he answered and said, [s]Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my mouth?

13 And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see [t]but the utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all; and curse me them from thence.

14 ¶ And he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of Pisgah,[7] and [u]built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

15 And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt-offering, while I meet the LORD yonder.

16 And the LORD met Balaam, and [v]put a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.

17 And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his burnt-offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken?

18 ¶ And he took up his parable, and said, [w]Rise up, Balak, and hear; hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor:

19 God[x] is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

20 Behold, I have received commandment to bless; and he hath blessed; and I [a]cannot reverse it.

21 He [b]hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel:[8] the [c]LORD his God is with him, and the shout of a king[9] is among them.[1]

22 God[d] brought them out of Egypt; [e]he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn.

23 Surely[f] there is no enchantment [2]against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel: [g]according to this time it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, What hath God wrought!

24 Behold, [h]the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

25 ¶ And Balak said unto Balaam, Neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 23. That ignorance and superstition may coexist with the profession though not with the light and power of true religion, is a well-known and melancholy fact. Ignorance and superstition are always prone to seek and to expect to accomplish their ends by some mysterious charm of their own invention, or derived from dark tradition. REFLECTIONS. — What a costly parade in religion will the worst of men make, in order to obtain their wicked ends? But fearful is their disappointment who think to make God their debtor by their services. All instruments are in his hands, and he can indulge to hypocrites the most amazing manifestations of himself, when it is for the advantage of his people; or make use of the worst of instruments to carry on his most excellent works. But beautiful is the appearance of God's church, when everything therein is regulated according to his prescriptions. Happy and safe are they who have the gracious, the almighty, and faithful God for their protector and portion: though troops overcome them, they shall overcome at the last; and be more than conquerors, through him that loved them: he will make their enemies to acknowledge the sovereign dominion, unchanging care, and almighty power of their God, till they who hate the life will wish to die the death of the righteous. But, alas! how obstinate and unwearied are sinners in their wicked courses, and in

1 Balaam, leaving divinations, prophesieth the happiness of Israel. 10 Balak in anger dismisseth him. 15 He prophesieth of the Star of Jacob, and the destruction of some nations.

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as at other[a] times, [b]to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.

2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel [c]abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and the [d]Spirit of God came upon him.[1]

3 And[e] he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open[2] hath said;[3]

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God, which [f]saw the vision of the Almighty, falling[4] into a trance, but having his eyes open;

5 How [g]goodly are thy tents, O Jacob! and thy tabernacles, O Israel!

6 As the [h]valleys are they spread forth, as gardens[i] by the river's side, as the [k]trees of lign-aloes, which the LORD hath planted, and as cedar-trees beside the waters.

7 He shall [l]pour the water out of his buckets, and his seed shall be in many waters; and his king[m] shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted.

8 God[n] brought him forth out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn: he shall eat up the nations his enemies, and shall break their bones, and pierce them through with his arrows.

9 He[o] couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion; who shall stir him up? [p]Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

10 ¶ And Balak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and he smote his hands together: and Balak said unto Balaam, I called thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

11 Therefore now flee thou to thy place: I thought to promote thee unto great honour; but, lo, the LORD hath [q]kept thee back from honour.

12 And Balaam said unto Balak, [r]Spake I not also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying,

13 If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak?

14 And now, behold, I go unto my [s]people: come therefore, and I will [t]advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people in the [u]latter days.

15 ¶ And he [v]took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said;

16 He hath said, which [x]heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:[6]

17 I shall see [y]him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh:[7] there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of [z]Moab, and destroy[9] all the children of Sheth.[1]

18 And [a]Edom shall be a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies; and Israel shall do valiantly.

19 Out of Jacob shall come [b]he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

20 And when he looked on Amalek, he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was [c]the first of the nations, but his [d]latter end shall be that he perish for ever.[2]

21 And he looked on the Kenites,[3] and took up his parable, and said, [e]Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock:

22 Nevertheless the Kenite[4] shall be wasted, until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.[5]

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas! who shall live when God doeth this?

24 And [f]ships shall come from the coast of Chittim,[6] and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever.

running from one refuge of lies to another! And it is always necessary for the saints to watch and pray, since, unknown to them, their enemies may be adding one attempt after another to destroy them.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 1. He would not again, in his magical and superstitious manner, consult God, but resolved to curse them without asking God's leave. —[Superstitious confidence in the repetition of a few words was common amongst the heathen, and constituted the principal part of their prayers, Mat. 6. 7. The Jews, in times of their ignorance, entertained, and many of them do still entertain, a similar belief; hence they have as ignorantly, as superstitiously and falsely, accused our Lord of stealing the Tetragrammaton, or mysterious name of JEHOVAH, out of the temple, and working his miracles by its repetition. Many have seen, even in professing Christian countries, a few words from the New Testament, or from some vain tradition, written on parchment or paper, and hung around the neck or on the shoulders for the cure of diseases. Such superstitious belief seems to have influenced Balaam, until, having now made three experiments by sacrifice, he is compelled to give up the vain attempt at enchantment. C.]

SARCOPHAGUS DRINKING TROUGH NEAR NAZARETH—NEAR WHERE CHRIST WAS BROUGHT UP. [NUMBERS, xxiv: 17.] Balaam's Prophecy of Christ: "I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel." Just a little way from Nazareth as you pass toward Cana of Galilee, you reach a little village where there is a fountain and an ancient sarcophagus. These sarcophagi, found in many places in Palestine, are said to date from the time of the Romans. This picture is given here because it illustrates a scene in the neighborhood of Nazareth, often passed over by Christ when he was a boy. It illustrates the prophecy by Balaam which refers to Christ. This is a characteristic scene. We have the thorny cactus, the olive trees, the donkey and the little Arab boy.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and [f]returned to his place: and Balak also went his way.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Israel at Shittim commit whoredom and idolatry. 6 Phinehas killeth Zimri and Cozbi. 10 God therefore giveth him an everlasting priesthood. 16 The Midianites are to be vexed.

AND Israel abode in [a]Shittim,[1] and the [b]people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.[2]

2 And they [c]called the people unto the sacrifices of their gods:[3] and the people did eat, and bowed down to their gods.

3 And Israel [d]joined himself unto Baal-peor:[4] and the [e]anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, [f]Take all the heads of the people,[5] and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, that the fierce anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said unto [g]the judges of Israel, Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

6 ¶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman, in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, who were [h]weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 And [i]when Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a [k]javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. [l]So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

9 And [m]those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Phinehas,[n] the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, (while he was zealous for my sake among them,) that I consumed not the children of Israel in my [o]jealousy.

12 Wherefore say, [p]Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace:

13 And he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an [q]everlasting priesthood; because he was [r]zealous for his God, and made an atonement for the children of Israel.[6]

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri the son of Salu, [s]a prince of a chief house[7] among the Simeonites.[8]

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cozbi, the daughter of [t]Zur; he was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

extent, flourishing state, remarkable increase, and marvellous power of the spiritual kingdom of Christ. ——[Ver. 6. Trees of lign-aloes, ahalim (Aquilaria Agallochum of botanists), is a tree which grows in Northern India and Central Asia. Its wood is very fragrant, and was much prized on this account by the ancients. It is entirely different from aloes. An essence is obtained by pounding the wood, and then pouring boiling water upon it, when the essence floats. P.——Ver. 7 'Waters shall flow out of his two buckets; and his posterity shall be by many waters.' The meaning is—that Israel is likened to a man carrying two pails of water, after the eastern mode, upon his shoulders; and out of these water, the emblem and source of all richness, flows abundantly. His posterity too would grow up by many waters—in the most fertile regions of the earth. P.——Agag was king of the Amalekites, 1 Sa. 15. 8, and it is probable it was the hereditary title of the monarchs of this people. For Israel to be higher than Agag, is to have power over the most inveterate of their enemies.——Ver. 8. The animal meant is uncertain—the rhinoceros, such as was seen by Campbell in South Africa, the head of which is lodged in the museum of the Missionary Society of London, seems to answer best both to the name unicorn, and to mighty strength: which is described as his distinguishing attribute. C.]

Ver. 17–19. These predictions had their accomplishment in the victories and conquests of the Hebrews over the Moabites or Edomites, and neighbouring nations, in the days of Ehud, Gideon, and Jephthah, Ju. iii. vii. xi.; David, 2 Sam. viii. x.; Jehoshaphat, 2 Ch. xx.; 2 Ki. iii.; Uzziah, 2 Ch. xxvi.; and after the Chaldean captivity, in the time of Hyrcanus and Alexander Janneus; and perhaps may have a further literal accomplishment when the Jews take possession of Canaan. They may also relate to the conquests of the heathen nations to Jesus Christ under the New Testament.

Ver. 20. The Amalekites were once one of the principal nations around Canaan, and were the first who attacked the Israelites; and therefore gradually destroyed by them in the days of Gideon, Saul, David, Hezekiah, and Esther.—[This statement has reference to antiquity and power. The Amalekites were a very ancient race, and they were among the most powerful of the clans of Western Asia. They have long disappeared, and not a trace of them remains. P.]

Ver. 21. Perhaps these Kenites were not the posterity of Jethro, but rather an Arabian tribe who were neighbours to the Amalekites, and were at last carried captive by the Assyrians, about the time of Hezekiah or Manasseh.

Ver. 24. This was fulfilled when first the Greeks, and afterwards the Romans, invaded Asia, subdued Assyria, Canaan, and the places about; and when their respective empires were, not long after, brought to ruin: the Greeks about one hundred years before Christ, and the Romans about A.D. 476; and will be more fully accomplished in the ruin of the Popish and Turkish empires. —[Eber is generally supposed to have given name to the Hebrews, though some eminent authorities assign a different etymology. It appears from Ge. 10. 25 that he had two distinguished sons, who became the heads of many distinguished tribes; for 'he also' Boothroyd reads 'they also,' viz. the Assyrian land force, and the naval power of Chittim, shall perish for ever. The Assyrian monarchy has already perished, so likewise have the Greek and Roman powers by which Eber (the Jews) was 'afflicted.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Wretched indeed are those who are, by their conscience, excluded from the carnal enjoyments of this world, and notwithstanding live in these lusts which will exclude them from heaven: for great light may abound in the head, when there is nothing but naughtiness in the heart. Often sinners are proud of those gifts which God bestows upon them for the benefit of his people: and their knowledge, being cursed, is an effectual hindrance of true wisdom. But numerous and large are the blessings which God bestows upon faithful people! they may be an eyesore to Satan and his agents; yet God lays an effectual restraint upon their most inveterate enemies; and he will at last convince his opposers of the emptiness and folly of all their devilish devices for thwarting his purposes, or annoying his people. What infinite knowledge is there in God! he perfectly discerns every circumstance of nations and persons, ages unnumbered, before there is the smallest appearance thereof. He sees all changes to the end, all the destruction and havock which sin will make in the world of one nation after another. But blessed be the Lord, who hath raised up a Horn of salvation in the house of his servant Jacob;—a Star to enlighten the Gentiles, and be the glory of his people Israel;—a Captain of salvation to go forth conquering and to conquer. But let me not dismiss this eastern sorcerer Balaam, with his high pretences to religion, his glorious speeches, and his noted intimacy with God, without seriously inquiring, What am I—what have I—what do I—what desire I—more than he?

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS.—If the devil's agents prevail not against the church one way, they will try another. But let us remember, that no enchantment can hurt us but that of our own lusts; that one sin leads to another; and that few temptations are more dangerous than the lustful love of women. If once the heart be ensnared, the miserable slave of lust and beauty may be enticed to anything sinful. Nothing more endangers the soul's final apostasy from God than yielding to the solicitation of fleshly lusts: nor doth anything more effectually secure the justice of God and despair of hell. Yea, general distempers and loathsome diseases are the fruit of general and loathsome iniquities: and such sinners quickly become impudent in their crimes. It is necessary therefore to punish sins with great impartiality, as the higher men are the more aggravated and hurtful is their offence. A well-timed and prudent zeal for the honour of God, in opposition to prevailing abominations, is a remarkable blessing to nations and churches. And God greatly honours and rewards such as dare to be bold and impartial in his cause for ridding a land of sin, and rescuing it from plagues. But friendship in sin quickly issues in mutual hatred and ruin; and tempters to sin are tormented with trouble. But in Phinehas may I not discern Jesus, whose zeal for his

1 The sum of all Israel is taken in the plains of Moab. 52 The law of dividing among them the inheritance of the land. 57 The families and number of the Levites. 63 None were left of them who were numbered at Sinai, but Caleb and Joshua.

AND it came to pass [a]after the plague, that the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying,

2 Take the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, [b]from twenty years old and upward, throughout their fathers' house, all that are able to go to war in Israel.

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them in the [c]plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

4 Take the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward; as the LORD [d]commanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt.[1]

5 ¶ Reuben,[e] the eldest son of Israel: the children of Reuben; Hanoch, of whom cometh the family of the Hanochites: of Pallu, the family of the Palluites:

6 Of Hezron, the family of the Hezronites: of Carmi, the family of the Carmites.

7 These[f] are the families of the Reubenites: and they that were numbered of them were forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty.[2]

8 And the sons of Pallu; Eliab.

9 And the sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram which were [g]famous in the congregation, who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the LORD:

10 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah,[3] when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men: and they became a [h]sign.[4]

11 Notwithstanding [i]the children of Korah died not.

12 ¶ The[k] sons of Simeon after their families: of [l]Nemuel, the family of the Nemuelites: of Jamin, the family of the Jaminites: of [m]Jachin, the family of the Jachinites:

13 Of [n]Zerah, the family of the Zarhites: of Shaul, the family of the Shaulites.

[u] The assertion that the spirit of this Mosaic commandment is opposite to the Christian precept of 'loving our enemies,' is founded either in inexcusable inattention, ignorance, or perversity. To vex a wicked man by opposing, thwarting, exposing, and disappointing him, is no breach of charity: but an exercise of it in favour of his victims. To 'smite' the seducer of innocence, the demoralizer of youth, is so far from being contrary to love, that it is frequently a merciful exercise of it, even towards the guilty, whom it serves to arrest in his career of evil.—C.

Boothroyd's translation removes the seeming contradiction. 'And the earth opened her mouth and swallowed them up; and when this company died, a fire devoured Korah and the 250 men.'—C.

[5] The largest decrease of any of the tribes, viz. 37,100, comp. chap. 1. The special cause is unknown, but a conjecture, not improbable, assigns it to their more shameless criminality, as appears in the conduct of Zimri, one of their princes, ch. 25. 6, 14. C. — The remarkable difference of the rate of increase and decrease in the several tribes, might give occasion for much curious investigation. The most striking points are the astonishing increase in Manasseh, and the still more astonishing decrease in Simeon. The former, from being numerically the lowest of the tribes at the former census, is at this become the sixth; and the latter, from being the third, has become the lowest of all, having lost not very much less than two-thirds of its former numbers. For the increase of Manasseh it is difficult to discover any other cause than the Lord's blessing upon the house of Joseph; but as to the decrease in Simeon, it is not without reason conceived that this tribe sustained the principal loss in the matter of Baal-peor.—*Pict. [8] Increase, 1900. C. — This was a vast number to spring from one man, considering that Benjamin, who had ten sons, wanted nearly one of this number. We may here give, at one view, the results of a comparison between the census at Mount Sinai and the present. The total number was nearly the same. They were now 1820 fewer than they were then; but seven of the tribes had increased in number, Judah having increased 7900, Issachar, 9300, Zebulun, 3700, Manasseh, 20,300, Benjamin, 12,200, Dan, 1700, Asher, 13,300, Naphtali, 19,400; whereas five tribes had decreased 37,300, Simeon, 37,100, Gad, 5150, Ephraim, 8200, and Naphtali, 8,400. From this comparison Henry remarks 1. That as the three tribes that were encamped under the standard of Judah, who was the ancestor of Christ, were increased, for his church shall be glorified and multiplied. 2. That none of the tribes had increased so much as that of Manasseh, which in the former account was the smallest of all the tribes, only 32,200; while here it is one of the most considerable: and his brother Ephraim, which then was numerous, is here one of the least. Jacob had crossed hands upon their heads, and had preferred Ephraim before Manasseh. Why? perhaps the Ephraimites had prided themselves too much in, and had trampled upon their brethren the Manassites; but when the Lord saw that Manasseh was despised, he thus multiplied him exceedingly, for it is his glory to help the weakest, and raise up them that are cast down.—C.

[1] Decrease, 800. Total increase, 59,000. Total decrease, 61,000, leaving a comparative decrease of 2000.—C.—The relative strength of the tribes was now very different from what it had been at the exodus. Judah still held the first place, and Dan the second; but Simeon, which originally stood third, was now last of all, having shrunken to less than one-third of its former number. Manasseh, too, was now far more powerful than Ephraim, having risen from the lowest to the sixth place among the tribes.—B.

great usefulness and fame. What alteration Providence makes in families, tribes, and nations, and what havock death makes of mankind, in a short time! Exactly, though gradually, are the threatenings of God's word accomplished! but amidst all the changes of this world, his faithfulness abides the same: yea, with care and wisdom he fixes even the outward lot of his people; and the promises of his grace are sure to the faithful; and in the enjoyment of them we ought therefore to be attentive to his gracious disposal.

MEJDEL ESH-SHEMS—NEAR WHERE MOSES AND ELIAS APPEARED ON THE MOUNT. [Numbers, xxvii.12-23.]—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel," etc. Mejdel esh-Shems is on the road from Banias to Damascus. It is a Druse village, and is at the foot of Mount Hermon, near the place where, according to tradition, Christ was transfigured when Moses and Elias appeared with Him. It is true that Moses was not permitted to cross the Jordan, but it is a striking evidence of the truth that our career does not end with death that Moses, though buried on the other side of Jordan, appears upon this side during this crisis in our Lord's life, when before His disciples He seemed to hold back the veil that separates time from eternity, and disclosed the glories of the spiritual world.

1 The daughters of Zelophehad sue for an inheritance. 6 The law of inheritances. 12 Moses, being told of his death, sueth for a successor. 18 Joshua is appointed to succeed him.

THEN came the daughters of [a]Zelophehad, the son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of Manasseh the son of Joseph; and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Tirzah.

2 And [b]they stood before Moses, and before Eleazar the priest, and before the princes[1] and all the congregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

3 Our[c] father died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the LORD in the company of Korah; but died in his own sin,[2] and had no sons.

4 Why should the name of our father be done[d] away[3] from among his family, because he hath no son? Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.

5 And Moses [e]brought their cause before the LORD.

6 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

7 The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou [f]shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them.

8 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter.

9 And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren.

10 And if he have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren.

11 And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his [g]kinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel [h]a statute of judgment; as the LORD commanded Moses.[4]

1 They presented themselves before the highest court of judicature, consisting of Moses, the high-priest, and the heads of the congregation. It would seem that this court was held close by the tabernacle, and also, perhaps, that Moses might the more readily consult the Lord in any difficult case. It is said that in after times the Sanhedrim used to follow the tabernacle, always holding their judicial meetings in the place where the tabernacle rested. It is good to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways. —J.

2 Rosenmüller translates the passage 'in the company of Korah who died in his own sin;' our English version seems, however, the true meaning of the passage. The daughters do not deny that their father died in the wilderness as a just punishment for his early unbelief or murmuring, but evidently intimate and plead his penitence, as he had not joined the party of Korah at a time when the opposition to Moses and Aaron, and defection from the worship of Jehovah, were on the point of becoming universal, ch. 16. 49.—C.

4 The Jewish Law of inheritance provides, (1) That on the demise of the father, the land descends to the sons. (2) If there be no sons, it descends to the daughters. (3) If no daughters, the brothers of the deceased become heirs. (4) If no brethren or paternal uncles, the land passes to the grand-uncles, or brothers of his father. 1 The Israelites were now about to enter Palestine. They might therefore think that under the new circumstances in which they would there be placed the same close attention to the letter and forms of the ceremonial law which was observed in the wilderness, would not now be required. To remove any such impression the leading commands were given afresh, and some new and more precise instructions were added.—P.

14 For ye [l]rebelled against my commandment in the desert of Zin, in the strife of the congregation, to sanctify me at the water before their eyes: that is the water of Meribah in Kadesh, in the wilderness of Zin.

15 ¶ And Moses spake unto the LORD, saying,

16 Let[m] the LORD, the God of the spirits[6] of all flesh, set a man over the congregation, 17 Which[n] may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the LORD be not [o]as sheep which have no shepherd.

18 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [p]Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man [q]in whom is the spirit,[7] and lay thine hand upon him;

19 And set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation; and give him a charge in their sight.

21 And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall [s]ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the LORD: at his word shall they go out, and at his word they shall come in, both he, and all the children of Israel with him, even all the congregation.

22 And Moses did as the LORD commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation:

23 And he laid his hands upon him, and [t]gave him a charge; as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, these daughters of Zelophehad let me manifest a strong faith in the promises of God, a strong desire after the better country, and a tender regard to my parents' honour; so shall my labour not be in vain in the Lord. While I observe, that it is appointed for all men once to die: that God's faithful children are often most severely chastised for their sin: but that in death believers retire to their best friends, to their unchanging and eternal rest;—while I profit by the death of others, whom I have seen depart before me in peace and comfort:—let me, with Moses, kindly accept God's warnings of my own death.—Let me manifest a deep concern for the welfare of the church after I am gone; and rejoice that Jesus liveth, and is appointed of God as her Governor, to put all true believers in possession of the promised rest.—And let me, with Joshua, cheerfully comply with God's call to the hardest work, and always act according to his inspired directions.

CHAPTER XXVIII. [Ver. 1. It is remarkable that Moses does not refer back to these commands as already given, but proceeds to deliver them as if promulgated for the first time: the reason is obvious—Moses not only means to show the things to be observed, but to exemplify God's method of teaching; which, like all other teaching, consists largely of repetition, see Jn. 14. 26. It is also worthy of remark that the book of Leviticus is generally delivered as a directory how the ordinance is to be observed; here we have a positive command that it must be observed in due season. The phrase due season renders it probable that during the journeyings in the wilderness religious ordinances had been greatly neglected; indeed there is a constant tendency, even in spiritual men, to 'weary in well-doing,' and many an admonition and promise do they require to persuade them that in due season they shall COLUMN AND STATUE OF THE VIRGIN, NAZARETH—NEAR THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY. [NUMBERS, xxviii and xxix.]—In the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth chapters of Numbers we have the round of sacrifice daily, weekly, monthly, and annually drawn out in its fullness and symmetry. The sacrifices of the Old Testament combined regularity with variety; there was some sacrifice for every day, and for every week in its seventh day, and for every month in its first day, and for every year in its seventh month. Through these and their great festivals, all the interests and events of life were embraced, showing that the whole of life was to be consecrated to God. So Christ, who summed up all this meaning in His own life, died for us that it might be possible for all to make a perfect self-surrender to God. We give, to illustrate these two chapters, the column and statue of the Virgin at Nazareth, in the city of our Lord's boyhood.

5 And [e]a tenth part of an ephah of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil.

6 It is a continual burnt-offering, [f]which was ordained in mount Sinai for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

7 And [g]the drink-offering thereof shall be the fourth part of an hin for the one lamb: in the holy place shalt thou cause the strong wine to be poured unto the LORD for a drink-offering.

8 And the other lamb shalt thou offer [h]at even: as the meat-offering of the morning, and as the drink-offering thereof, thou shalt offer it, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

9 ¶ And [i]on the sabbath-day two lambs of the first year without spot, and two tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with oil, and the drink-offering thereof.

10 This is the burnt-offering of every sabbath, [k]besides the continual burnt-offering, and his drink-offering.[4]

11 ¶ And [l]in the beginnings of your months ye shall offer a burnt-offering unto the LORD; two[m] young bullocks, and one ram, seven lambs of the first year without spot;

12 And[n] three tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with oil, for one bullock; and two tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with oil, for one ram;

13 And a several tenth-deal of flour, mingled with oil, for a meat-offering unto one lamb, for a burnt-offering of a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

14 And their drink-offerings shall be half an hin of wine unto a bullock, and the third part of an hin unto a ram, and a fourth part of an hin unto a lamb: this is the burnt-offering of every month throughout the months of the year.

15 And one [o]kid of the goats for a sin-offering unto the LORD shall be offered, besides the continual burnt-offering, and his drink-offering.

16 ¶ And[p] in the fourteenth day of the first month[5] is the passover of the LORD.

17 And[q] in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast: seven days shall unleavened bread be eaten.

18 In the [r]first day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no manner of servile work therein:

[7] It is observable that there is not so much as one peace-offering ordered in all this chapter, which was a sort of sacrifice that was most for the benefit of those that brought them to the altar: but all burnt-offerings (except a few sin-offerings), which were wholly for the honour of God, and acknowledgment of his sovereign dominion over them, and of the duty they owed him. And as the sin-offerings were shadows of that great sacrifice of God's own Son, which was one day to be offered for the sins of men, out of his own infinite love to them; so the whole burnt-offerings (which were always of the most perfect creatures, the finest flour, the choicest fruits of the earth, and the best liquor) were shadows of that excellent degree of piety, which the Son of God intended to bring into the world, which would move men, out of love to God, to give themselves wholly up to him, and devote all they had, even their own lives, to his service.—Patrick.

REFLECTIONS.—Fully, yea, infinitely answerable is Jesus Christ and his fulness to the wants of every day, every week, every month, every year, every ordinance, and every case. Let me therefore spend each hour, each period of my time, in beholding him as my God-honouring, sin-pardoning, peace and comfort procuring sacrifice! let me always live on him, and to him; and bless the Lord that, these shadows being done away, he is set before us evidently as crucified in the gospel.

[7] In ver.17,20,23,26, 29, 32, the bullocks decrease by one each day. The meaning of such sacrificial peculiarities is sometimes revealed by Moses or explained by Paul, at other times, where neither give any explanation, we must have recourse to analogy, which, in a certain limited extent, is a safe guide: and at times, though the 'veil of Moses' be taken from our face, we must yet acknowledge that we 'see as through a glass, darkly.' In the present case there is no small difficulty in giving any reason for this diminution as the Scriptures are everywhere silent on the point. Still, it seems highly probable that the bullock, as the emblem of labour, Ps. 22. 4, being the animal daily subtracted from the sacrifice, might be intended to remind the offerers that every day of sacrifice (God was diminishing their amount of labour, and bringing them nearer to rest in God. Some have imagined the daily diminution in the sacrifice to shadow forth the gradual disappearance of the Jewish dispensation, but there appears neither authority nor emblematic analogy by which this conjecture can be supported; though certain of the Jewish rabbins consider it as pointing to the gradual dimination of the nations, until all shall have come under the rule of Messiah, and 'there shall remain no more sacrifices but those of thanksgiving, prayer, and praise.'—C.

[8] It is worthy of special remark, that in each of these feasts there is a peculiar sacrifice for the day, but to every day is invariably retained 'the continual burnt-offering.' This is almost wise and admirable appendage, and originating from a deep insight into the human heart. Religious excitement, like every other excitement, has a constant tendency to engross the heart, and to render it negligent of ordinary duties. Therefore, both before and after these august and impressive ceremonials the ordinary, the every-day business of religion is scrupulously enjoined, even to the minutest particular. —Note. The little things of religion—if we so call any parts of religion—do not set us free from the weightier matters; neither do the greater things of religion supersede our attention to the little, Mat. 23.23.—C.

[9] This is called 'the great day of the feast,' Jn. 7. 37. yet the sacrifices were fewer than upon any other of the feast-days. This might well serve to teach the Israelites not to trust to the multitude of their sacrifices for pardon, peace, or other blessings, but to the one offering for atonement, to which, since the days of Abel, the eye of faith had always been directed. He 11.4. The Jewish rabbins affirm that upon this day it was customary to draw water from the pool of Siloam, and to pour it mixed with wine upon the sacrifices. This custom is not intimated either by Moses or any of the prophets, though the rabbins attempt to deduce it from Is. 12. 3. And it is not improbable that our Lord alluded to it when he cried, 'If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink;' thereby turning an unauthorized, pompous, and useless ceremony, into an occasion of calling the attention of the people to spiritual duties enjoined and the spiritual privileges promised by God.—C burnt-offering, every day a he-goat for a sin-offering, and seventy oxen in all for a burnt-offering during the seven days, as well as every day two rams and fourteen yearling lambs, with the requisite meat-offerings and drink-offerings. Whilst, therefore, the number of rams and lambs was double the number offered at the passover and feast of pentecost, the number of oxen was fivefold: for, instead of fourteen, there were seventy offered during the seven days. This multiplication was distributed in such a way, that instead of there being ten offered every day, there were thirteen on the first day, twelve on the second, and so on, deducting one every day, so that on the seventh day there were exactly seven offered; the arrangement being probably made for the purpose of securing the holy number seven

1 Vows are not to be broken. 3 The exceptions of a maid's vow, 6 of a wife's, 9 of a widow's, or of her that is divorced.

AND Moses spake unto the [a]heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, [b]This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

2 If a man [c]vow a vow unto the LORD,[1] or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not break[2] his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

3 ¶ If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth;[3]

4 And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

5 But if [d]her father disallow her in the day that he heareth, not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul,[4] shall stand; and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

[1] From a reference to the foregoing chap. ver. 1, it will appear that the vows here intended are chiefly vows of things to be dedicated to God, as they are placed in contact with free-will offerings and sacrifices positively enjoined. In this case, the vow being found lawful, a man is bound, even were he a son in his father's house, provided the vow were of his own property.—C.

[3] A daughter unmarried, and resident with her father, and a wife bound by the law of her husband, may have any vow set aside by the authority of the father or husband; provided it be disallowed so soon as discovered. But this is no dispensing power exercised by either. It is accompanied by no mental reservation: it is subject to no positive rule, or previous or tacit/y known interpretation, whereby it can be disannulled. It is a line marked out by God, previous to the vow, and beyond which the vow cannot pass. If it therefore fail in the word it is not violated in fact, for it was made under a condition that cannot be fulfilled, and therefore fails to the ground, as if it had never been made.—C.

[5] Boothroyd translates it 'his iniquity,' which seems the true sense, for if the wife intended to fulfil the vow, and was prevented, she cannot be charged with iniquity: whereas the husband is guilty by going beyond the authority conferred by the law of God. C.—'Her iniquity.' The pronoun shows in the Hebrew that the woman is meant. In the case cited, should the husband by any act of arbitrary power prevent his wife from fulfilling a just vow, then he would bear the sin which she would have had to bear had she broken the vow of her own accord.—P.

8 But if her husband disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 ¶ But[f] every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

10 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath;

11 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her, and disallowed her not; then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void; and the LORD shall forgive her.

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, [g]her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.

14 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day; then he establisheth all her vows, or all her bonds, which are upon her: he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her in the day that he heard them.

15 But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard them; then he shall [h]bear her iniquity.[5]

REFLECTIONS.—In these numerous and complex oblations, and their often-repeated occasions, I remark the insufficiency of the Jewish ceremonies. Yet I cannot but behold and admire the one oblation of the Redeemer himself, so fully completing all justice, pardoning sin, procuring peace, and securing life and comfort for every believer. In virtue and usefulness so answerable to, but in glory so infinitely transcending, them all.—But while I travel through such groups of typical feasts and oblations, let me, illuminated by gospel light, stop to behold in them the blessed new promise of grace; let me view it in its gracious origin, glorious power, wonderful construction, important parts, condition, and promise; its wise, effectual, and infinitely useful administration, and its delightful properties; as all my salvation and all my desire! Here let me contemplate Jesus in his savoury and saving names, his wonderful natures, his glorious person as God-man, his endearing excellences and qualifications, his saving offices of Mediator, Saviour, Redeemer, Prophet, Priest, and King, and his heart-captivating relations to God and men; let me consider his infinitely diversified but necessary states of humiliation and exaltation, his delightful labours of love in undertaking for us, assuming our nature, obeying and suffering in our stead, rising from the dead, ascending to glory, appearing in the presence of God as our advocate, and returning to judge the world, to complete and carry to the highest our eternal salvation; while I admire all his fulness, natural or communicative, as lodged in him for sinful men. Let me behold the ten commandments as a broken covenant of works fulfilled, magnified, and made honourable for me, in having the Lawgiver himself its obedient subject, fulfilling at once both its precept and penalty in the highest degree, and in the most disadvantageous circumstances, amidst poverty, reproach, distress, persecution by men, temptation and harassment by devils, and under an infinite load of sins borne, will of God fixed, and pain inflicted on him.—Thus all my sins, all the sins of a lost world, were borne by the Son of God, suffered for by him, removed from him and from us in our respective justification, destroyed in us by sanctification, marvellously improved by providence for our good, and their fruits shall be finally and perfectly abolished in our glorification. Thus a great and everlasting salvation was effected for sinful men—for ME—devised in God's everlasting deep love, secured with the blood of his Son, freely offered in the gospel, powerfully applied by the Holy Ghost, and in time and eternity is enjoyed in full right of marriage, law, and sonship, and in the most delightful possession. Thus the spirituality, self-existence, infinity, eternity, unchangeableness, independency, greatness, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth of the most High, the great JEHOVAH, are vindicated from all reproach, all the injury done to them by sin is fully resented, and themselves glorified to the highest; and in consequence hereof they all appear smiling and breathing forth unbounded love and mercy to sinful men—to sinful ME. Thus a redeeming Godhead, in all his persons, perfections, purposes, works, fulness, and property, is offered to, bestowed on, enjoyed, and to be for ever enjoyed, by rebellious men—by rebellious ME—as my ALL and in ALL.—Let me then observe, that my whole life, whether I fast or whether I feast, whether I weep or whether I rejoice, ought to be a life of faith on the Son of God, who loved me, and thus gave himself for me; and that, while I study to have as many solemn feasts on his death as I can, I ought never, morning or evening, to neglect the daily service of God in my closet and my family.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—In order to our more perfectly obeying what the Lord requires of us by his gracious authority, it is often useful and necessary that we bind ourselves by new bonds of self-engagement: and the obligation of such engagements is solemn and awful, and therefore should be made with great deliberation, and care be taken that the

with the Hebrew army, 1 Sa. 4. 4, 5; but, ver. 7, it is acknowledged that its presence, upon such an occasion, was altogether unprecedented in former wars. In 1 Sa. 14. 18 the ark is called for by Saul in the day of battle; but the Septuagint, and many high authorities, for ark read ephod, which seems the more probable reading; so that the inference, that the ark was ordinarily carried with the Hebrew army is much weakened. But in 2 Sa. 11. 11 the ark seems decidedly to have been in the camp in the days, and with the cognizance and approbation, of David, and as David was a scrupulous observer of divine ordinances, we are disposed to join with those who conceive that Phinehas took the ark as one of the 'holy instruments.'—C.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 2. This is one of the passages against which infidelity has uttered its fellest and fiercest assaults. We may not pollute the page, nor the reader's eye, with its foul speeches. But we may ask the infidel, Do you believe God to be the moral Lawgiver and Ruler of the world? If you deny, we cease to argue with the madness of atheism. But if God be acknowledged as the Lawgiver and Ruler, then has he not a right to enforce his own laws by appropriate penalties? Nature, as it is called—though surely nature is but another name for the will, laws, and government of God—nature has often swept away by earthquake, pestilence, or famine, her tens and hundreds of thousands: yet surely nature has not been arraigned for the deed! Why then should God be arraigned at the bar of [illegible]roud and unholy infidelity for punishing a wicked people by the hand of man? No sane man will accuse God, under the name of nature, in the one case, and none but a hopeless infidel will accuse him under his real name on the other. C.]

Ver. 5. [The muster of the army, upon this occasion, seems to be neither in proportion to the population of the tribes nor the military exigency of the case. That each tribe however comparatively weak, should be required to furnish a military contingent as numerous as the strongest, would to human wisdom seem unreasonable. But divine wisdom intends, by this apparent disproportion, to teach some great and important lessons. (1) That every man, and every community, is to furnish for God's service all that God requires, according as his providence bestows, without any relative comparison of what means others have, what sacrifices others make, or what service they render, or may be able to render, to God and his cause. (2) This equality of draught from unequal numbers is farther intended to inculcate the important lesson, that all real honour is derived from devotedness and zeal in the cause of God and his truth, and therefore it was necessary that every tribe should have an equal opportunity of exhibiting those qualities and securing those honours. See Jn. 12. 26.—Note, What an admonition does this equality of array suggest to churches! Some are few in number, and poor in worldly resources, but as God requires every one of his tribes to send its thousand to the war, so does he require each of his churches to make equal sacrifices to provide for his service, and equal exertions to bear witness to his truth. And true it is, for our encouragement, there are churches whose fewness in number, and poverty of means, have neither damped exertion nor denied success. C.]

Ver. 7. [Not all the males of the whole nation, as appears from Ju. 6. 7, but of the 'garrisons of the cities and castles,' ver. 10, by whom and their accomplices they had formerly been seduced, ver. 16, and were now opposed. And these the Lord commanded them to slay for sins, that when individualized still continue in these countries to be punished with death, and which instead of being diminished in atrocity by being nationalized, as was the case with the Canaanites and Midianites, became by their universality the more abominable in the sight of a holy God. See the horrible catalogue, Le. 18. 21-27, and the sentence of the righteous Judge, ver. 24-30. C.]

Ver. 14. [From the omission of any reference to Joshua as general, and the rebuke given indiscriminately to all the captains, it seems certain that the army had no commander-in-chief, but that each tribe had sent forth its own quota under their own leaders. This avoided all suspicion of favouritism, and removed every cause of jealousy, until circumstances required still greater concentration of counsel, and the character of Joshua as a leader had earned for him an indisputable claim to the first rank. C.]

Ver. 17. [Every male. The killing of 'every male among the little ones' has been censured by infidels as an act of cruelty unworthy the character of a merciful God. That children, however, die in infancy, infidels cannot deny, and if that death takes place by God's will, wherein does it differ from the death here inflicted by God's command? If it be replied, the ordinary death of children is natural. The answer is easy: what in this case is nature but the result of certain organic laws? and what are organic laws, but the result of God's will? So that we arrive, in spite of infidelity, at the point of God's will in the one case, and command in the other. If the infidel deny that death is the result of God's will, then he becomes an atheist, with whom it is generally vain to argue: for he who is mad enough to deny the being and government of a God, is certainly not sane enough to comprehend any rational argument. See Ps. 14. 1. The infidel who in this case accuses the 'God of the Jews,' accuses, at the same time, the 'God of nature,' whom infidels, in general, pretend to acknowledge and worship, and whom, therefore, even upon their own principles, they dare not openly condemn. The sentence against the males is against the perpetuation of a wicked community; the sentence against the women is in condemnation of lewdness, seduction, and idolatry. C.]

Ver. 18. [The assertion that Moses, in this verse, permitted the people to retain the 'women children' for concubines is one of the most monstrous that frontless infidelity has ever had the hardihood to pronounce. For, not to speak of other parts of the law already promulgated, as Ex. 20. 14; Le. 19. 20, the restrictions, De. 21. 11-14, will sufficiently demonstrate that the direction in the text was merely a permission to hold them as bond-women, a class who were amply protected against every form of oppression, and endowed with many privileges, for which see note on Le. 25. 46. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Short-lived is success in sinning, and at last most dearly bought. Enticers to sin therefore ought to be held as our worst enemies, and treated accordingly: especially since God takes the greatest delight in comforting and honouring those who have been singularly zealous for his cause. And it is easy for him to accomplish great exploits, whether by many or by few. Our humane tenderness, carried to an excess, often spares our most dangerous enemies and the most guilty criminals. But everything, even in war, ought to be conducted with a sacred regard to religion, strict equity, and brotherly kindness; and the whole success thankfully ascribed to God. And after

Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the LORD.[6]

17 Now therefore [q]kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.[7]

18 But all the women-children, that have not known a man by lying with him,[8] keep alive for yourselves.

19 And [r]do ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

20 And [s]purify all your raiment, and all that is made of skins,[9] and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.[1]

21 ¶ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

22 Only[t] the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead,

23 Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean; nevertheless it shall [u]be purified with the water of separation: and all that abideth not the fire, ye shall make go through the water.

24 And[x] ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey[2] that was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation:[3]

27 And divide the prey into [y]two parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation:

28 And levy a [z]tribute unto the LORD of the men of war which went out to battle; one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep:

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for [a]an heave-offering of the LORD.

30 And of the children of Israel's half thou shalt take one portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the flocks,[4] of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, which [b]keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD.

31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand, and seventy thousand, and five thousand sheep,

[6] The character of Balaam is most extraordinary. It is full of inconsistencies: and yet on a close and thorough examination of it we are forced to admit that it is not without parallel. In the history of the Church Balaam knew God and feared him; but it was the fear of a cringing slave. He was ambitious and covetous, and he was most fertile in schemes for the purpose of hiding his covetousness, and gratifying his ambitious designs, while professing to obey and honour God. He never ventured on an open act of transgression. He had not courage for that. But he adopted secret and indirect measures to accomplish the foul purposes of his heart. He blessed the Israelites with his mouth, because he was compelled to do so by the Spirit of God: but he advised a system of wily, gross, and fiendish temptation, which entailed upon the Israelites a fearful curse. Never did man more richly deserve death than Balaam.—P.

[5] It appears that in after times the kings were wont to appropriate the spoil, or a large portion of it, to themselves; and that this was a common practice among the chiefs of other nations is well known to every one at all acquainted with classical antiquity. But we have no intimation of the least portion so reserved by Moses for himself or family. These shared the common lot of the Levites. The disinterestedness of the leader of Israel, and his strict obedience to the Lord's commands, are conspicuous on every occasion. We have had opportunity of remarking this in many instances.—J.

Yet, when the officers made a muster of the troops after their return from the war, they found they had not lost a single man. This circumstance struck them as so decisive an evidence of God's interposition, that, out of the spoils they had taken they offered an oblation to the Lord, "an atonement for their souls." Bishop Watson.—The success of this detachment had been very extraordinary, so small a company defeating such multitudes, and taking so large a spoil; but far more extraordinary was the fact that in the enterprise not one individual had been slain. The Midianites, no doubt, would make resistance; but the hand of God was conspicuous in that their resistance was altogether without effect. No wonder that gratitude constrained the captains to present a voluntary offering to the Lord.—J.

The Greeks, before distributing the spoils, dedicated a part of them to the gods, by whose assistance they supposed they had attained them, and the soldiers, out of their portions, frequently did the same. For the fulfilment of this purpose, they adopted various methods; sometimes they collected the spoil into a heap and set it on fire, at other times they consecrated them as offerings in their temples. ## CHAPTER XXXII.

1 The Reubenites and Gadites sue for their inheritance on the east side of Jordan. 6 Moses reproveth them. 16 They offer him conditions to his content. 33 Moses assigneth them the land. 39 They conquer it.

NOW the [a]children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of [b]Jazer, and the land of Gilead,[1] that, behold, [c]the place was a place for cattle;[2]

2 The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 Ataroth,[d] and Dibon, and Jazer, and Nimrah,[e] and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Shebam,[f] and Nebo, and [g]Beon,

4 Even[h] the country which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle.

5 Wherefore, said they, if we have [i]found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and [k]bring us not over Jordan.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall [l]ye sit here?

7 And wherefore [m]discourage[3] ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them?

8 Thus did your fathers, when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea to see the land.

9 For [n]when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

10 And the [o]LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, [p]from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, because they have not wholly followed me;[4]

12 Save [q]Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun: for they have wholly followed the LORD.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them [r]wander in the wilderness forty years, until all the generation that had done evil in the sight of the LORD was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, an [s]increase of sinful men, to augment yet the fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.[5]

15 For if ye [t]turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness, and ye shall destroy all this people.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, [u]We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones:

17 But [v]we ourselves[6] will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities, because of the inhabitants of the land.[7]

18 We will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance:

19 For we [w]will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

20 ¶ And [x]Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the LORD to war,

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him,

22 And the land be subdued before the LORD; then afterward ye shall return, and be [y]guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and this land shall be your possession before the LORD.

23 But [z]if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure your sin will find you out.[8]

24 Build you cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

26 Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead;

27 But[c] thy servants will pass over, every

[1] The particular geography of many cities and districts mentioned in Scripture is often little more than conjectural. Still there are great landmarks, so to speak, by which the sacred historian can be followed. The text affords a striking example both of the conjectural and the known. Of the position and limits of the land of Jazer, for example, nothing more is accurately known than that it was somewhere in the neighbourhood of Gilead. But the land of Gilead is identified by means of the distinguished mountain range which has continued since the days of Moses so much an object of history that its locality cannot be mistaken, and its very name (now written Djelaad) continues nearly unaltered. The 'land of Gilead' extended from the river Hieromax on the north to Nebo on the south. Its beauty and fertility have been celebrated by modern travellers with an enthusiasm that well accounts for the anxiety of the Reubenites and Gadites to obtain possession, and for the jealousy of Moses lest the love of ease, and of the 'pleasant land,' should tempt them to forsake their brethren and provoke their God.—C.

[2] The pastures upon the table-land of Moab, among the mountains of Gilead, and on the eastern bank of the Jordan, are far superior to any in Palestine, and notwithstanding centuries of neglect and desolation, they are not surpassed in Western Asia. To this day it is 'a place for cattle;' and is a favourite resort of the nomad tribes, whose whole wealth is in their flocks.—F.

[4] Now, says the objector to the divine mission of Moses, if Moses was in error why does he mistake the intentions of the Reubenites and Gadites, and accuse them of designs they deny having ever entertained? The answer is plain —the objector should first prove that they did not entertain the purpose that Moses deprecates. This proof the objector never can furnish; wherefore, further answer is unnecessary.—C.

[5] That is, 'we ourselves,' the speakers and leaders, will 'all' go, with such quotas of the tribes as may be required. The two tribes and a half amounted to 110,580, and of these we learn (Jos. 4. 13) that 40,000 went over Jordan, leaving 70,580 to guard the families and flocks against the Midianites, Ammonites, and Idumeans.—C.

[6] The whole country had been already subdued by Moses, the cities captured, and the people either slain or driven out, see ch. xxi. How is it, therefore, that the 'inhabitants of the land' are mentioned here? The natural explanation is this. On the east of Moab and Gilead lay the wide plains of Arabia, thinly peopled by nomad tribes. Thither the conquered Amorites fled, and they would naturally hover along the borders, watching any opportunity to attack the Israelites, and reoccupy their country.—F.

[7] The Greek and Arab translators render, 'And ye shall know your sin when evils befall you.' If the persons concerned prevaricated and so imposed upon men, or if they afterwards refused to fulfil their engagements, God would most certainly detect and expose their wickedness, and in fact configin punishment on them for it. REFLECTIONS.—The love of the world, and the pride of life, frequently hasten men in their earthly settlements. Though such, even in this world, often issue in early and frequent disasters; and it is a fearful symptom when the rising generation tread in their fathers' sinful steps, and grow worse and worse. How base is it to desire our own rest and ease, when God's man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith.

PAUL LANDED IN ITALY. [NUMBERS, xxxii: 23.]—"But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the Lord: and be sure your sin will find you out." There is no truth better illustrated by the ruins of ancient cities than the one contained in the verse we quote above. In Egypt, in Assyria, in Greece, in Italy, the ruins of great cities teach in mute silence the truth that the sins of nations find nations out and the sins of individuals find individuals out. Before us are the melancholy ruins of a great theatre that stood in Puteoli. Here men and beasts contended for one another's lives for the gratification of a depraved populace. This whole region overlooking the Bay of Naples is now practically deserted. It has been well said that there is no statute of limitation in regard to the debt of sin. Wherever a people disregard the plain laws of God written in nature and in the constitution of their own lives they must pay the penalty of a fearful doom.

28 So concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle before the LORD,[9] and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do:

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be ours.

33 And [d]Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh[1] the son of Joseph, [e]the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

34 ¶ And the children of Gad [2]built [f]Dibon,[3] and Ataroth, and [g]Aroer,

35 And Atroth, Shophan, and [h]Jaazer, and Jogbehah,

36 And [i]Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, fenced cities; and folds for sheep.

37 And the children of Reuben built [k]Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim, 38 And Nebo, and Baal-meon, [l](their names being changed,) and Shibmah; and gave other names unto the cities[4] which they builded.

39 And the children of [m]Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

40 And Moses gave [n]Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein.[5]

9 [a]Before the Lord. From Nu. 10. 28, 29, it will be seen that the Reubenites and Gadites marched immediately before the Kohathites, who bore the sanctuary, in which were the ark and mercy-seat, the visible tokens of God's immediate presence. They are therefore [b]directly required to pass over [c]before the Lord.—C.

The conquests of the sons of Manasseh in Gilead, as recorded, ver. 40, &c., afford, however, a better reason for the grant to them, than even that which was pleaded by their brethren, see ver. 4, and the validity of which was admitted by Moses, and evidently approved by the whole nation.—C.

The other, lying between the rivers Jabbok and Hieromax, belonged to Og king of Bashan, and was conquered by and allotted to the half tribe of Manasseh. A portion of this northern section of Gilead was captured by Jair, and its villages received the name of Havoth-Jair, 'villages of Jair.' Kenath was one of the chief cities of Bashan, and was situated on the western slopes of the mountain range which bounds the plain of Bashan on the east: it is now called Kunawât, and its ruins are some three miles in circuit, and are among the finest east of the Jordan.—P.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Two and forty journeys of the Israelites. 50 The Canaanites are to be destroyed.

THESE are the [c]journeys of the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt with their [b]armies, under the hand of Moses and Aaron.

2 And Moses wrote their goings out according to their [c]journeys by the commandment of the LORD: and these are their journeys according to their goings out.[1]

3 And they [d]departed from Rameses in the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month; on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out [e]with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians.

4 (For [f]the Egyptians buried all their firstborn, which the LORD had smitten among them: [g]upon their gods also the LORD executed judgments.)

5 And the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.

6 And they [h]departed from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness.

7 And they [i]removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baal-zephon: and they pitched before Migdol.

8 And they [k]departed from before Pi-hahiroth, and passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham, and pitched in Marah.

9 And they [l]removed from Marah, and came unto Elim: and in Elim were twelve fountains of water, and threescore and ten palm-trees; and they pitched there.

10 And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red sea.

people are in hardships and need our assistance! But how wise to improve past experiences, as means of preventing future iniquities. Yea, it is prudent to remove every monument of idolatry, lest it should entice us to offend. A holy indignation against sin, in whatever form it appears, is commendable and useful. But since the best of men often uncharitably mistake their neighbours' words or designs, and judge before they hear, it is therefore proper that everybody be allowed to explain himself; that every article of our agreements be precisely stated, and fully understood, at the making of them, that there may be no disputing afterward; and that the strictest equity, and the tenderest affection, may be maintained among the people of God, who are all brethren in Christ Jesus.

CHAPTER XXXIII. [Ver. 2. The Israelites in going from Egypt to Canaan did not proceed along one direct line of route. They were led from place to place, sometimes back, sometimes forward, by a divine guide. For thirty-eight years they were literally 'wanderers,' moving apparently from pasture to pasture, and from fountain to fountain, like one of the great nomad tribes of Arabia. The full history of these wanderings is not given. All the places through which they passed are not mentioned. Even the few stations whose names are recorded cannot all be identified. It is consequently impossible to trace the footsteps of the Israelites in every part of the wilderness journey. There are, however, several leading stations which have been identified; and taking these as landmarks, it is not difficult to determine the general line of march. It would seem that Moses first wrote the diary which is given in Exodus, Leviticus, and the early chapters of Numbers; then by divine command he wrote this summary, supplying the names of many stations not given in the diary. It forms a most valuable topographical document. P.]

Ver. 10. [The plain at the mouth of Wady Taiyibeh must be the place of the encampment by the sea. It is a wild lonely spot. The sublime scenery of the Sinai mountains here first bursts upon their view: the glittering granite peaks, the gorgeous colouring of the nearer cliffs, the deep blue sea, and away far beyond it the pale outline of the African coast. P.]

Ver. 13. [The sites of Dophkah and Alush are unknown. The route from the Wilderness of Sin to Rephidim was in all probability up Wady Feiran, which affords a tolerably easy and wide approach from the coast-plain of Sin to Sinai. In it is the copious fountain of Feiran; and it ought to be noted that between Sin and Rephidim there was no complaint of want of water. Perhaps Feiran may be identical with Dophkah or Alush. P.]

Ver. 36. [The Israelites were twice at Kadesh; once on the second, and once on the fortieth year of their journey, Nu. 12. 16; 13. 2, 26, 33; 20. 1. In this chapter the first visit is not noticed. In the extended narrative in Nu. x.-xii. there are only two stations mentioned between Sinai and Kadesh; here no less than seventeen are enumerated. The question arises, Were all these visited during the first journey to Kadesh? or do any of them belong to the second? The former 12 And they took their journey out of the wilderness of Sin, and encamped in Dophkah.

13 And they departed from Dophkah, and encamped in Alush.

14 And they removed from Alush, and encamped at [n]Rephidim, where was no water for the people to drink.

15 And they departed from Rephidim, and pitched in the [o]wilderness of Sinai.[2]

16 And they [p]removed from the desert of Sinai, and pitched at Kibroth-hattaavah.[3]

25 And they removed from Haradah, and pitched in Makheloth.

26 And they removed from Makheloth, and encamped at Tahath.

27 And they departed from Tahath, and pitched at Tarah.

28 And they removed from Tarah, and pitched in Mithcah.

29 And they went from Mithcah, and pitched in Hashmonah.

30 And they departed from Hashmonah, and encamped at Moseroth.

31 And they departed from Moseroth, and pitched[t] in Bene-jaakan.

32 And they removed from Bene-jaakan, and encamped at [u]Hor-hagidgad.

33 And they went from Hor-hagidgad, and pitched in Jotbathah.

34 And they removed from Jotbathah, and encamped at Ebronah.

35 And they departed from Ebronah, and encamped at [w]Ezion-gaber.

36 And they removed from Ezion-gaber,[5] and pitched in the [x]wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh.

37 And they [y]removed from Kadesh, and pitched in mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.

38 And [z]Aaron the priest went up into mount Hor at the commandment of the LORD, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first day of the fifth month.

39 And Aaron was an hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in mount Hor.

40 And [a]king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.

41 And they [b]departed from mount Hor, and pitched in Zalmonah.

42 And they departed from Zalmonah, and pitched in Punon.

43 And they [c]departed from Punon, and pitched in Oboth.

44 And they departed from Oboth, and pitched in Ije-abarim,[6] in the border of Moab.

45 And they departed from Iim, and pitched in Dibon-gad.

46 And they removed from [d]Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon-diblathaim.

47 And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, and pitched in the mountains of Abarim, before Nebo.

48 And they departed from the mountains of Abarim, and pitched [e]in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho.[7]

49 And they pitched by Jordan, from Beth-jesimoth even unto [f]Abel-shittim, in the plains of Moab.[8]

50 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

51 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [g]When ye are passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan;

52 Then ye shall [h]drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures,[9] and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places.

53 And ye shall dispossess the inhabitants of the land, and dwell therein: for I have given you the land to possess it.

54 And [i]ye shall divide the land by lot for an inheritance among your families; and to the

These are 'the encampment at the Red Sea,' ver. 10, at Dophkah, and at Alush, ver. 13. Exodus was written when the events were fresh in the memory of the witnesses, less important removals were therefore omitted; but Deuteronomy was written when that generation had died, and the minuter movements of the fathers are recorded for the instruction of their sons. Creighton's map of Palestine places Rithmah a little way S.W. of Kadesh-barnea: but the map of the Sunday-school Union, London, places it to the south, and at the distance of about 70 geographical miles. The whole is mere conjecture, and therefore void of authority. It is wiser and better to acknowledge ignorance of such details, and to rest in the great historical fact which nothing can gainsay, that the Hebrews were now entered upon those 'wanderings' to which they were condemned because they 'tempted the Lord;' and on account of which he 'sware in his wrath they should not enter into his rest.'—C.

It was situated about 60 miles nearly south of Sinai. But though its place is known by means of the peculiar rocks from which its name was derived, signifying the back bone of a man, as well as by historic record, yet its very ruins have disappeared. Like other encampments of the Israelites it retains a name—more distinguished than some, it has a local habitation—but like Israel it has fallen, by sin, under the displeasure of Jehovah, and has been swept of all its commerce and riches by the besom of a righteous destruction.—C.

7 All the stations from Kadesh to Arboth-Moab are not given here. Others at which the people encamped on their route southward to Ezion-gaber are mentioned in De. 10. 6, 7. Immediately after leaving Kadesh they crossed the Arabah to the foot of Mount Hor, where Aaron died. After thirty days' mourning they set out on their long but final journey. The rate of travel must have been very slow. They must have lingered at places, and zigzagged through the desert in search of water and pastures. Passing down the Arabah once more, they turned eastward at Ezion-gaber, which stood at the northern extremity of the Gulf of Akabah. They swept round the southern and eastern borders of Edom, and passed through a desert wild and waterless. At length the territory of the Edomites was passed, and the people encamped at 'Ije-Abarim (the mounds of Abarim'), in the border of Moab.' Two more stages brought them to the banks of the Arnon, on crossing which they entered the land of the Amorites. The wilderness was now left behind, but the wanderings had not yet drawn to a close. Their eyes and hearts were fixed upon Canaan — the country west of the Jordan. They wished to enter it by the shortest and easiest road. They consequently asked of Sihon a passage through his borders. It was refused. A new struggle was made, the whole country east of the Jordan was conquered, and two tribes settled there.—P.

8 Whether this enumeration contains the entire, or only the principal movements and encampments, is unknown. Analogy would lead us to conclude that it records not the various daily marchings, but merely the departures and encampments. Moses does indeed give a brief epitome of the history of the Jews; but history is not his object. Providence and redemption are his object, and history is the means by which his grand object is attained.—C.

appears more probable. In giving the summary contained in this chapter Moses would scarcely have omitted the first visit to Kadesh, had he been enumerating the stations as well after as before that visit. It is more natural to suppose that he gives a full list of the places of encampment between Sinai and Kadesh; and then, omitting all notice of the thirty-eight years' wandering as not properly pertaining to the journey to Canaan, he takes up the narrative again at the close of the second visit. This theory, however, is not free from difficulties. According to ver. 36 the people marched direct from Ezion-gaber to Kadesh; and the stations from Moseroth to Jotbathah were passed in succession before reaching Ezion-gaber. But these stations are identical with those mentioned in De. 10. 6, 7, where they afterwards encamped when going from Kadesh to Ezion-gaber, comp. Nu. 21. 4; De. 2. 8; they consequently lay between these places, and in the Arabah. The Israelites must therefore have traversed the Arabah several times. The most direct line of route was rarely, if ever, followed. The people appear to have directed their course right and left, back and forward, passing and repassing the same spots, in obedience to their divine guide. Two points alone are fixed between Sinai and Kadesh; these are Hazeroth and Ezion-gaber. The latter they must have approached from the north; and after encamping there, they turned back again northward. In going from Hazeroth they probably went down Wadys el-Ain and Wetir to the shore of the gulf; then along the shore past Ezion-gaber, and up the Arabah; then back down the Arabah to Ezion-gaber, and finally up it to Kadesh. MONASTERY NEAR BETHSAIDA—WHERE CHRIST PERFORMED MANY OF HIS WONDERFUL WORKS. [Numbers, xxxiv:11.]—"And the border shall descend and shall reach unto the side of the sea of Chinnereth eastward." We give this view of the monastery near Bethsaida, because it stands upon the side of the sea of Chinnereth, now called the Sea of Galilee. This monastery is near the city of Bethsaida, one of the towns in which Christ performed so many of his wonderful works and one of the towns upon which he pronounced a woe. We are looking here toward the east. We see the upper Gadarene country there beyond the Sea of Galilee, and the gradual falling of the country as it slopes toward the sea on the north. Tourists stop here and find good accommodations in this monastery. According to prophecy, it really has been more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon than for this place.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 The borders of the land. 16 The names of the men which shall divide the land.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, and say unto them, [a]When ye come into the [b]land of Canaan, (this is the land that shall fall unto you for an inheritance, even the land of Canaan, with the coasts thereof,)[1]

3 Then [c]your south quarter shall be from the wilderness of Zin, along by the coast of Edom, and your south border shall be the utmost coast of the [d]salt sea eastward.

4 And your border shall turn from the south to the ascent of [e]Akrabbim, and pass on to Zin: and the going forth thereof shall be from the south to [f]Kadesh-barnea, and shall go on to Hazar-addar,[g] and pass on to Azmon.

5 And the border shall fetch a compass from Azmon unto the [h]river of Egypt,[2] and the goings out of it shall be at [i]the sea.[3]

6 And [k]as for the western border, ye shall even have the great sea[4] for a border: this shall be your west border.

7 And this shall be your [l]north border: from the great sea ye shall point out for you mount Hor.[5]

8 From mount Hor ye shall point out your border unto [m]the entrance of Hamath; and the goings forth of the border shall be to Zedad.

9 And the border shall go on to Ziphron, and the goings out of it shall be at [n]Hazar-enan: this shall be your north border.

10 And ye shall point out your [o]east border from Hazar-enan to Shepham.

11 And the coast shall go down from Shepham to [p]Riblah, on the east side of Ain; and the border shall descend, and shall reach unto the side[6] of the [q]sea of Chinnereth[7] eastward.

12 And the border shall go down to [r]Jordan, and the goings out of it shall be at [s]the salt sea: this shall be your land,[8] with the coasts thereof round about.[9]

13 And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, This is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the LORD commanded to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half-tribe:

14 For[t] the tribe of the children of Reuben, according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad, according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance, and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance:

15 The two tribes and the half-tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sun-rising.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 These[u] are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you; [v]Eleazar the priest, [w]and Joshua the son of Nun.

18 And ye shall take one prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance.

19 And the names of the men are these: Of the tribe of Judah, [x]Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

20 And of the tribe of the children of Simeon, Shemuel the son of Ammihud.

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad the son of Chislon.

3 The land here described in Moses is much smaller than that originally given to the patriarchs and promised to Abraham, see Ge. 15.18. The southern border began at the southern end of the Dead Sea; it ran due south up the great valley of Arabah, past the ascent of Akrabbim (a line of cliffs across the valley) to Kadesh; thence it went westward across the 'wilderness of wandering' to the torrent (not the river, as in Ge. 15.18) of Egypt, i.e. Wady el-Arish.—P.

9 The eastern border has several well-known boundaries:—Riblah on the Orontes: Ain, the great fountain of the Orontes, a few miles west of Riblah; the Sea of Chinnereth or Galilee; the Salt or Dead Sea. The eastern border, therefore, beginning at Kuryetein, was drawn west by south across the plain to Riblah, thus excluding the territory of Damascus. Thence it turned due south, down the valleys of Cœle Syria and the upper Jordan to the Sea of Galilee; and then followed the Jordan to the Dead Sea. The whole country east of the Jordan was thus excluded from the land.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—It is useful to remember and record God's providences, for the after direction or comfort of ourselves and others in future trials and temptations; for this world is but a waste howling wilderness, and the condition of churches and saints therein always changing and unsettled.—But the believing recollection of God's dispensations will enable us cheerfully to pass on, while we discover how he preserves his people in all, and sets their mercies and judgments the one over against the other,—guides them with his counsel while here, and afterwards brings them to glory! But dangerous and infectious is intimacy with wicked men, and with the unfruitful works of darkness! Carefully then ought professors of the true religion to avoid it, and to remove out of the way whatever might occasion temptation or stumbling.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 3. The map commences at the south, because that was the quarter with which the Hebrews were best acquainted, as lying next Egypt. South quarter, that is, south extremity eastward, before the line turns northwards.—Coast of the Salt Sea, that is, point of the Dead Sea, called salt, because it is salter than other seas. So great is the quantity of salt in solution in its water, that bodies float in it that sink in any other water. By Salt Sea eastward, some geographers understand Ezion-gaber, on the Red Sea, and draw the southern line thence to the eastern or Pelusic branch of the Nile; but ver. 12 seems to fix the name Salt Sea to the Dead Sea, into which Jordan empties itself. C.]

Ver. 4. [A trifling and well-authorized change in the translation by Boothroyd completely reconciles this description with the geographical features of the country, and with history. 'Your south border shall wind to the ascent of Akrabbim, and pass on to Zin, and thence extending to the south of Kadesh-barnea, and from Azmon the boundary shall wind about to the river of Egypt.' C.]

Ver. 9. [The Mediterranean was the western border. On the north the border commencing at the sea ran towards Hor ha-Hor, 'the great mountain,' i.e. the culminating point of Mount Lebanon on the north, where it attains an elevation of nearly 10,000 feet. From thence the line was drawn towards Zedad, now called Sudud, on the great plain due east of the extremity of Lebanon. But before reaching Sudud it bent north to Ziphron, a town near Hamath; and then struck south-east to Hazar-enan ('the town of the fountains'), now called Kuryetein. P.]

Ver. 17. [This was a narrow territory when considered as a gift from God. But its very narrowness marks his wisdom as well as his goodness. God intends to make his people his witnesses to the world, and their narrow territory forces them to do their duty abroad; while their religious institutions are ever recalling them home. Besides, it is a gross mistake that the greatness of a nation depends upon its extent of territory. The most distinguished nations, both in ancient and modern times, have been cooped up in narrow territorial limits. And be it remembered, the great drama of providence, in which Israel still acts so conspicuous a part, is not yet closed. He was a Jew, according to the flesh, who will yet claim 'the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost ends of the earth for a possession.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is necessary to bring our mind to our lot, since God sets the bounds to it: and, though a small portion of this world may be allotted to the people of God, yet is that small portion fertile and well protected. How instructive the boundaries of this promised land! the memorial of Heaven's justice on Sodom at the south-east: the memorial of Egyptian bondage on the south-west; the wilderness of their wandering on the south; the goodly mountain Lebanon on the north; the great sea, that emblem of eternity, on the west; and Jordan, that river of God, on the east. Thus are we surrounded with mementoes of our state. But, in all, infallible is the accomplishment of God's promises, whatever hard warfare and wearisome waiting may be necessary to precede it. Let me therefore, even now, raise up my weary spirit—Jesus, the Prince of all the tribes of ransomed men, shall quickly assign me my share in his celestial Canaan!

22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bukki the son of Jogli.

23 The prince of the children of Joseph, for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hanniel the son of Ephod.

24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel the son of Shiphtan.

25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zebulun, Elizaphan the son of Parnach.

26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan.

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 These[a] are they whom the LORD commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.[1]

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 Eight and forty cities for the Levites, with their suburbs, and measure thereof. 6 Six of them are to be cities of refuge. 9 The laws of murder. 31 No satisfaction to be taken for murder.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 Command[a] the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites, of the inheritance of their possession, cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.[1]

4 And[b] the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits[2] round about.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits,[3] and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And [c]among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be six cities for refuge,[4] which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to them ye shall add[5] forty and two cities.

1 The tribes are not mentioned here in such order as they were at their first numbering (ch. 1. 5, 6, &c.), or at their second (ch. 26. 5, &c.); yet great exactness, and a particular direction of God, may be noted in their placing here, for they are set down according to their situation which they had afterwards in the land of Canaan; as if Moses foresaw who should be next neighbours one to another. — Patrick.

4 The cities of refuge among the Israelites were widely different from the asyla among the Greeks and Romans, as also from the privileged altars among the Roman Catholics. Those among the Hebrews were for the protection of such only as had slain a person involuntarily. They were necessary, because the old patriarchal law still remained in force, viz. that the nearest akin had a right to avenge the death of his relation by slaying the murderer; for the original law enacted, that whosoever shed man's blood by man should his blood be shed; and none was judged so proper to execute this law, as the man who was nearest akin to the deceased. As many rash executions of this law might take place, it was deemed necessary to mollify its claims, and prevent injustice: and the cities of refuge were judged proper for this purpose. — Clarke.

9 These cities were conveniently situated so as to be accessible to the various districts of the land, and we learn that the best provision was made for the manslayer's easy and safe fleeing thither. The roads that led to them were kept in good repair, and that he might not miss the way, posts were erected, where several roads happened to meet, bearing the inscription, 'city of refuge.' Do not these cities of refuge remind us of the salvation of the gospel of our blessed Lord, the only refuge provided for perishing sinners to flee to 'from the wrath to come!' To them there seems to be allusion in He. 6. 17, 18. — I.

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [g]When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan,

CHAPTER XXXV. [Ver. 4. The Septuagint reads 'two thousand cubits' both in the 4th and 5th verses; but the Hebrew MSS. are decidedly in favour of the present reading: how then are these two accounts of measure to be reconciled? Thus—the measure of 1000 cubits, ver. 4, is from the wall: the measure of 2000 cubits, ver. 5, is not from the wall, but from the city itself: the first 1000 cubits constituting the suburbs of the wall, a part which in the neighbourhood of walled cities is often occupied by houses; the second 2000 cubits constituting what is called the field of the suburbs, Le. 25. 34, and appropriated to agriculture and cattle. The extent of the walls is not given, but the land thus measured would form a square of about three-quarters of a mile in every direction from the walls; a very small concession, when the cities thus appropriated were in all but 48, Jos. 21. 41, when it is remembered that the Levites are estimated at 46,000 males and females, Le. 26. 62, a number that must be greatly increased by the requisite servants. Still more distinct will this moderation appear, when it is remembered that the Levites never had exclusive possession of these cities, but held them in common with the tribes amongst whom they resided; and what superiority in the possession of the whole city and district the secular tribes conceded to the Levites, beyond their individual occupancy, does not appear: compare Jos. 21. 17 with Ju. 19. 15, 16; and Jos. 21. 13 with 2 Sa. 5. 5.—Note. Amongst the incidental evidences of the divine mission of Moses must be reckoned, (1) This extreme moderation in providing for his own tribe. (2) The ready acquiescence of the Levites to be literally disinherited, and allowed little more than a lodging-place, where their brethren were so richly endowed: had either been impostors, they must have acted on worldly motives; and worldly motives have never yet produced self-denial, when there was power and opportunity to attain to self-aggrandizement. Let us be sure that to practise the self-denial of Christ is always our best argument for Christ, Phi. 2. 6. C.]

Ver. 11. [According to the Jewish law, the kinsman of any one who was killed had a legal right, and held it an imperative duty, to avenge the death by slaying the aggressor. The appointment, therefore, of these cities was an institution of great wisdom and mercy; while it afforded an expressive and eminent type of Christ as the refuge of sinners. (1) The slayer flies, ver. 11, because the avenger follows: so the sinner has fled to Jesus, He. 6. 18. (2) They protect till the judgment sits: so must all appear at the judgment-seat of Christ, 2 Co. 5. 10, when believers obtain a public that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer when he meeteth him.

CAMELS FEEDING AT NAZARETH—ON THE HILLS OVER WHICH CHRIST WALKED. [Numbers, xxxv:9-34.]—We give here a picture taken from a scene in Nazareth, the city of our Savior, to illustrate the cities of refuge referred to in the thirty-fifth chapter of Numbers. The cities of refuge may hardly be considered a type, but they constitute an illustration of Christ as the sinner's refuge. The cities of refuge were near every portion of the land, and Christ as the Son of God is near us all. Within the cities of refuge there was no condemnation, and so there is no safety for sinners except in Christ. To leave the city of refuge was to meet destruction, so we cannot go away from Christ but at the peril of our hopes. These camels were being taken from Syria into Egypt.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly [c]without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait;

23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm;

24 Then the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood, according to these judgments:

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall [f]abide in it unto the death of the high priest,[3] which was anointed with the holy oil.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; [h]he shall not be guilty of blood:[4]

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for a [i]statute of judgment unto you, throughout your generations, in all your dwellings.

30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the [k]mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die.[5]

31 ¶ Moreover, [l]ye shall take no satisfaction[6] for the life of a murderer, which is guilty of death;[7] but he shall be surely put to death.

32 And ye shall take no satisfaction for him

3 Maimonides views this in the light of a prudent charity to the man-slayer, and to the relations of him that was slain, since by this means the man-slayer was kept out of the sight of the avenger of blood, who might have been tempted some time or other to fall upon him if he had come in his way; but by long absence his anger might be mitigated, at least by the death of the high-priest, the most excellent of all persons, and most dear to any one in the nation, which made the public grief when he died so great that men forgot their private resentments.—A.

Among the Arabians compensation is admitted, and is very common—having indeed been sanctioned by their lawgiver, but God requires that in every case the murderer shall be punished with death. The design of the cities of refuge was to afford shelter only to the unintentional slayer, but the murderer could be dragged forth to punishment from the very horns of the altar.—A.

4 This law extended only to heiresses, for many of their great men and priests married wives of other tribes and countries; and other women, who had brethren to inherit, were free to marry into any other tribe, though it seems they generally confined themselves to their own. If their brethren died after they were married into another tribe, they could not inherit, but the estate went to the male heir. The design of this law was to keep the tribes distinct, and hereby to fulfil the prophecies, particularly those respecting the Messiah. As this law affected only heiresses, there are numerous instances of women marrying out of their own tribes. And by reason of such marriages, as Ainsworth remarks, 'there might be kindred between Elizabeth the mother of John the Baptist, who was of the daughters of Aaron, and Mary the Virgin, the mother of our Lord, who was of the lineage of David and tribe of Judah.'—A.

1 The inconvenience of the inheritance of daughters 5 is remedied by marrying in their own tribes, 7 lest the inheritance should be removed from the tribe. 10 The daughters of Zelophehad marry their father's brothers' sons.

AND the chief fathers of the families of the children of [a]Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel;

2 And they said, [b]The LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken[1] from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: [2] so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

4 And when the jubilee[3] of the children of Israel shall be, then [c]shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

5 ¶ And Moses commanded the children of Israel, according to the word of the LORD, saying, [d]The tribe of the sons of Joseph hath said well.

acquittal through his grace, Mat. 25. 34, 40. (3) There were cities of refuge on both sides of Jordan, so the sinner finds Christ a refuge on earth, as he will find him his glory in heaven, Jn. 14. 1–3. (4) These cities were not only for Israel, but for the stranger and sojourner: so is Christ a refuge for Jew and Gentile, Ro. 2. 10, and all who follow him count themselves strangers and pilgrims on the earth, He. 11. 13. (5) These cities refused protection to the murderer; so Christ refuses salvation to the unbelieving and impenitent, the unregenerate and unsanctified, Mat. 25. 41, 46. (6) The congregation being the legally constituted judges, were the administrators of this refuge and deliverance, ver. 25; so the church is appointed to afford instruction and comfort by the ordinances, and deliver penitent sinners, by a merciful discipline, from the snare of the devil, Ga. 6. 1. (7) The guilty who have fled for refuge must abide in the city till the death of the high-priest, ver. 25; so must the sinner abide in Christ, Jn. 15. 4, 6, 7, constantly bearing about in his body the dying of the Lord Jesus, 2 Co. 4. 10. (8) At the death of the high-priest the guilty returns to his possession, ver. 28; so by faith in the death and resurrection of Christ, as delivered for our offences, and raised for our justification, Ro. 4. 25, we enter into possession of the earnest of the Spirit, 2 Co. 5. 5, and abide in faith, waiting for the adoption, the redemption of the body, Ro. 8. 23. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What care God takes to arrange his ministers in the church and world as best promotes the edification of his people! Often, for that purpose, as in the case of the Levites, he turns a curse into a blessing. At the same time it is his will that his ministers should be suitably provided for, that they may not be embarrassed with carnal care or labour: and to provide for a gospel minister ought to be the great care of every people. Such as minister to us in spiritual things have a right to reap our carnal things; and such as are engaged in gospel administrations should, as far as possible, disengage themselves from every worldly care. Never, therefore, should we receive worldly portions without devoting a part of them to the Lord or the benefit of his church. How heinous is the guilt of hating and murdering our neighbours! And it is presumptuously wicked for such as are in power to permit wilful murder to pass without the due punishment of death. But if men sinfully indulge their escape, God's sword will in due time reach them. Yet, on the contrary, care ought to be taken that none be punished but upon sufficient examination and full proof; and that none be punished with death for anything done contrary to his intention. But what a lively type of Jesus are these cities of refuge! What murder of God—of Christ—of our souls—of our neighbour—of time—of ordinances—of mercies and judgments—we commit ignorantly and in unbelief! and if death overtake us loitering in our sins, we must perish in them! But Jesus, in his person, covenant, blood, power, and grace, is a safe and comfortable refuge set before us in the gospel. He is everywhere near to flee to; and the way to him is plain and clear. Strangers, Gentiles as well as Jews, have equal access to him. Him that cometh to him he will in no wise cast out; and in him we must abide for ever, that we may be safe. But how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation!—if we sin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth!—if we tread under foot the Son of God—count the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and do despite unto the Spirit of grace!

CHAPTER XXXVI. REFLECTIONS.—It is command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them marry[5] to whom they think best; [e]only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry:

7 So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe: for every one of the children of Israel shall [f]keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers.

8 And[g] every[6] daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.[7]

9 Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe; but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance.

10 ¶ Even [h]as the LORD commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad:

11 For[i] Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Noah, the daughters of Zelophehad, were married unto their father's brothers' sons.

12 And they were married into the [8]families of the sons of Manasseh the son of Joseph; and their inheritance remained in the tribe of the family of their father.

6 This law is here made general, although the Talmudists are of opinion that it was designed only for that generation, and that after the first division of the land by Joshua, even heiresses might marry into any tribe. The restriction in the case of heiresses was recognized by the Attic laws. They ordained that an heiress should not marry out of her kindred, but choose of herself and her estate to one of the nearest of kin to her. Plato made the same provision, suggesting that if there was a want of near kindred, it should descend to her father's brother, or the children of the grandfather, some of whom he ordains should marry her.—J.

prudent to foresee difficulties, that we may avoid them: and in laws, covenants, and other affairs, to have every point so fixed that no disorder or dispute may arise in after-times. But let us remember that it is most profitable to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways; for often he defers his directions till men perceive the necessity of them: and a ready obedience to his command and will, when known, yea, even to those of our superiors, is necessary and becoming. But, whatever power parents have in the marriage of children, none ought to be forced into marriage connections contrary to their inclination.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED

DEUTERONOMY.

This book is so called because it contains a repetition of many laws formerly delivered. It records the history of Israel during one month before Moses' death, and another after it. Here we have scarcely any new history but what relates to Moses' renewal of the covenant between God and Israel, his charge to Joshua, and his death. Never, except in ch. 31. 14–21, and 34. 4, is God exhibited as speaking to Moses or the Israelites as in the three preceding books. But Moses, just going to leave them by death, in the most affecting manner rehearses to them what God had done for them; and the laws which he had given them, with several explications and additions. This rehearsal was extremely necessary and kind. (1) Many of the laws in respect of their matter, and all of them in respect of their Author and intent, were very important and worthy to be again and again inculcated. (2) The weakness of the Israelites made it necessary that the laws which immediately concerned them should be represented separately from those which concerned the priests and Levites. (3) The persons to whom these laws had been originally published were now almost all dead, and a new generation was grown up, to whom God would have his laws repeated by Moses himself, that, if possible, it might make a lasting impression upon them. (4) They were just going to take possession of Canaan; it was therefore proper that they should be expressly admonished of the conditions upon which they were to hold it. In this, his last speech and dying words, (1) Moses gives a summary rehearsal of what events had happened to them in the wilderness, ch. i. ii. iii.; 9. 7–29; 10. 1–7. (2) He rehearses the moral laws which had been given from Mount Sinai; and, by a variety of motives, drawn from the kindness of God towards them, and from the danger of disobedience, charges and calls upon them to obey them, iv.–xi. (3) With a mixture of moral institutes he inculcates manifold ceremonial and judicial observances: some of which, as of extirpating false prophets and idolatrous cities; making battlements round the roofs of houses; expiating uncertain murder; taking down hanged malefactors in the evening; punishing of rebellious children; distinguishing apparel of the sexes; marriage of captive women and wives of deceased brethren; of divorcing of wives and trial of virginity; of runaway servants, &c., had not before been plainly established, xii.–xxvi. (4) To enforce obedience to these laws, he charges them to surrender themselves solemnly to God at Ebal and Gerizzim as his dutiful servants, who regarded his blessings, and stood in awe of his curses. He solemnly announces the blessings annexed to their obedience, and denounces the curses which would befall them if disobedient, xxvii.–xxxi. (5) After encouraging Joshua his successor, and leaving a song for the people, warning them of their future sins, miseries, and deliverances, and a testamentary benediction for their encouragement, he views the promised land from Mount Pisgah, where he dies, and is buried by God, and lamented by the Israelites, xxxi.–xxxiv.

Still it is dangerous to attempt such violent dislocations, when unauthorized by MSS. Were the geography of the journeyings better known, it is more probable the location of the verse would appear both natural

TOWER OF CASTLE—NEAR WHERE THE TRANSFIGURATION TOOK PLACE. [DEUT., 1:7.]—Reference is made in this verse to Lebanon, and we give a picture of the great Subeibeh Castle, which stands about three miles above Cæsarea Philippi, at the foot of Mount Hermon, which belongs to the general Lebanon range. The top of this castle is 2,300 feet above the Mediterranean Sea and 1,000 feet above the town of Cæsarea Philippi. This is, perhaps, one of the largest castles in the world, and certainly the most massive fortification in all Syria. It is capable of accommodating a whole army, and stands here by the roadside overlooking the boundary between Syria and Palestine. Standing on the top of the tower, we are in sight of Dan, which is just below us, and which marked the northern limit of the Holy Land. This castle is in a state of remarkable preservation, which is probably owing to the quality of the stone, which is very compact and hard as adamant.

Israel,[3] according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

4 After[a] he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth in Edrei:

5 On [1]this side Jordan,[4] in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare[5] this law, saying,

6 ¶ The LORD our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt [2]long enough in this mount:

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and [3]go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the places nigh thereunto,[6] in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

8 Behold, I have set[7] the land before you: go in and possess the land [4]which the LORD sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them, and to their seed after them.

9 ¶ And I spake unto you[8] at that time, saying,[9] I am not able to bear you myself alone:

10 The LORD your God hath [5]multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The LORD God of your fathers [6]make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and [7]bless you, as he hath promised you!)

12 How can I myself alone [8]bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife?

13 [9]Take[9] you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

15 So [1]I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and made[1] them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

16 And I charged your judges at that time, saying, [2]Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him.

17 Ye shall not respect persons[2] in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man, for the judgment is God's: and [3]the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.

18 And I [4]commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do.

19 ¶ And when we departed from Horeb, we went through all that great and [5]terrible wilderness, which ye saw by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, as the LORD our God commanded us; and we came to Kadesh-barnea.

20 And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the [6]mountain of the Amorites,[3] which the LORD our God doth give unto us.

21 Behold,[1] the LORD thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath said unto thee; fear not, neither be discouraged.

22 ¶ And ye came near unto me every one of you, and said, We will send men before [2]us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again by what way we must go up, and into what cities we shall come.

23 And the saying [3]pleased me well: and I took twelve men of you, one of a tribe:

24 And [4]they turned[5] and went up into the mountain, and came unto the valley of Eshcol, and searched it out.

25 And they took of the fruit of the land in their hands, and brought it down unto us, and brought us word again, and said, It is a good land which the LORD our God doth give us.

26 Notwithstanding [5]ye would not go up, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God.

27 And ye murmured in your tents, and said, [6]Because the LORD hated[6] us, he hath and necessary. As the verse stands, it can be easily understood by throwing out the words in Jordan, and, instead of reading it as a parenthesis, understanding it as commencing that part of the history which terminated in the exclusion of Moses himself and the last generation from Canaan, see ver. 19, 34, 35, 37, and demonstrating upon how brief a period the most important events may depend.—C.

3 The Amorites were the most powerful of the tribes which inhabited Canaan at the time of the exodus. They had conquered nearly the whole country east of the Jordan, and they held more or less of the mountain strongholds on the west, from Kadesh on the south to Lebanon on the north. 6 Unbelief gives two characters to God, according to its circumstances. The unbeliever in prosperity and pleasure describes his God 'all mercy.' The same in adversity and pain, murmurs, rebels, and describes him all judgment. So Israel in wilderness pronounced him. The believer ascribes both these attributes to God, and equally blesses him, and trusts him, and loves him, whether he give or take away.—C.

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. Unto all Israel. Taking two scriptural examples as our guides, viz. 2 Ki. 23. 2; Ne. 8. 1–8; 2 Cr. 34. 30, in which we find 'all the people, great and small,' assembled to hear the reading of the law; both 'the men and the women, and all that could hear with understanding;' and considering the great extent to which a strong human voice, with a distinct enunciation, and in a still assembly, may be heard; and remembering that Moses might continue each day as long, at least, as Nehemiah did, ch. 8. 3, 'from morning until mid-day,' and repeat, day after day, the same instructions to different auditors, there will be no difficulty in understanding that he literally addressed this book in consecutive discourses to all Israel 'who could hear with understanding.' C.——This verse, when its purpose is understood, presents no serious difficulty to the interpreter. The object of the writer is to point out definitely where the words which follow were spoken:—Moses spake 'beyond Jordan;' so it is in the Hebrew. The Hebrew phrase 'beyond Jordan,' like the New Testament Peraea, was used as a proper name, to signify the country east of the Jordan independent altogether of the position of writer or speaker. Moses spake 'in the plain;' i.e., as the Hebrew has it, the Arabah, or great valley which intersects Palestine. This Arabah lay 'over against' the Red Sea; it began at the Gulf of Akabah, and extended from it in a straight line to the Dead Sea and Sea of Galilee. It lay between Paran on the west, and Tophel, a town of Edom (now Tufileh), on the east. Three other places are enumerated along its borders, in order to define more fully its extent. P.]

Ver. 2. [The mention of the Arabah appears to have suggested this incidental note of distance. A good part of the route of the Israelites from Horeb to Kadesh lay along it, for the Arabah is unquestionably 'the way of Mount Seir.' The mountain chain of Seir, or Edom, skirts the Arabah the whole way from the head of the Gulf of Elah to the Dead Sea. In fact, as the Gulf of Elah is the natural prolongation of the Arabah southwards, seven out of the 'eleven days' journey' from Horeb to Kadesh would be through the Arabah. This fact may possibly account for the statement in ver. 2, which most commentators have regarded as out of place. The distance from Horeb to Kadesh is about 160 miles. P.]

Ver. 7. [The terms employed in this verse are either proper names, or descriptive appellations, intended to define the country given in covenant-promise to the Israelites:—'The mount of the Amorites (eastern and central Palestine); in the Arabah (plain of Jordan); in the Mountain (hill country of Judah); in the Shephelah (plain of Philistia); in the Negeb (country along the south border of Palestine); by the shore of the sea the land of the Canaanites (Phœnicia); and Lebanon,' &c. This geographical description is exact and exhaustive. P.]

Ver. 14. [To do. In Ex. 18. 24, Moses, by advice of Jethro, chooses men to be, ver. 25, 'heads over the people, rulers of thousands,' &c., who 'judged the people at all seasons; the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.' Again, in Nu. 11. 16, JEHOVAH directs Moses to gather seventy elders to 'bear the burden of the people,' so that he should not 'bear it alone.' But this burden is not the burden of their legal questions, but of their murmurings and complaints; and these are distinct both in time, office, and endowments, from the rulers of thousands, &c.; for these rulers were brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have discouraged[7] our heart, saying, [d]The people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great, and walled up to[8] heaven; and, moreover, we have seen the sons of the Anakims there.

29 Then I said unto you, [e]Dread not, neither be afraid of them.

30 The LORD your God, [f]which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, [g]according to all that he did for you in Egypt before your eyes;

31 And [h]in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place.

32 Yet in this thing [i]ye did not believe the LORD your God,

33 Who[k] went in the way before you, to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to show you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.

34 ¶ And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, and sware, saying,

35 Surely[l] there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I sware to give unto your fathers,

36 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give [m]the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because he hath wholly followed the LORD.[9]

37 Also[n] the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, which [o]standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: encourage him; for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

39 Moreover, [p]your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it.

40 But as for you, [q]turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness, by the way of the Red sea.

41 Then ye answered and said unto me, [r]We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill.

42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, [s]Go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies.

43 So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but [t]rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and went presumptuously[1] up into the hill.

44 And the Amorites, which dwelt in that mountain, came out against you, and [u]chased you, as bees do,[2] and destroyed you in Seir, even unto Hormah.

45 And ye [v]returned and wept before the LORD; but the LORD would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you.

46 So ye [w]abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there.

CHAPTER II.

1 The story is continued, that they were not to meddle with the Edomites, 9 nor with the Moabites, 16 nor with the Ammonites: but Sihon the Amorite was given up to be subdued by them.

THEN we [a]turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, as the LORD spake unto me; and we [b]compassed mount Seir[1] many days.

2 And the LORD spake unto me, saying,

3 Ye have compassed this mountain [c]long enough: turn you northward.

4 And command thou the people, saying, [d]Ye are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in High walls around houses, &c., in these parts of Arabia, are still deemed a sufficient defence against the Arabs, who scarcely ever attempt anything in the way of plunder except on horseback. The monastery on Mount Sinai is surrounded with very high walls without any gate; in the upper part of the wall, thirty-two feet from the ground, there is a sort of window or opening from which a basket, sometimes a rope with a loop at the end, is suspended by a pulley, by which persons and goods are received into and sent from the place.—A.

In wild uninhabited and uncultivated countries, where bees are comparatively few, the force of the comparison will not be easily perceived. Yet, even in the most improved districts they have been known to destroy dogs and horses. Pliny states, that from some districts of Crete they actually expelled the inhabitants, and Ælian declares that some parts of Scythia north of the Danube were so infested with bees as to be inaccessible; and Park, in his Travels in Africa records an instance in which not only himself and his party were put to flight by them, but several beasts of burden actually stung to death. It is possible also there may be more in the comparison than meets the eye; for though we may not on a few examples, affirm it for a general or universal rule, yet more than once have we seen it tried and verified, that he who has the coolness or courage to stand immovably still, and allow the exasperated bees to alight upon him, will remain untouched and unharmed, while those who run away are the object of their deadly hostility. May not the text, therefore, remind a people well accustomed to the dispositions of bees, that had the Israelites stood still the very show of courage would have repelled their enemies? L.

appointed while Jethro was still at Sinai, Ex. 18. 27, but the seventy after Jethro was gone, and Hobab his son remained, Nu. 10. 29, and after the camp had moved from Sinai, Nu. 10. 12. Between the accounts of the appointment of the rulers of thousands, &c., in Exodus and Deuteronomy there is evident difference, but no contradiction. Jethro suggests referring the decision to God, Ex. 18. 23; God directs, and Moses submits the matter to the people's approval, and the rulers to their free election. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It much becomes aged ministers, from time to time, to remind their people of the principal occurrences of Providence towards them, and of their carriage towards God under them: and the nearer their end, the more serious and diligent ought they to be in this work. Its repeated views of the providences and oracles of God, some new and affecting circumstances will readily present themselves, to which we had not formerly adverted, and call forth new expressions of gratitude and praise: and it is beautiful when all the kindness of God is enjoyed, as founded on his spiritual promises. What a mercy is it to a nation when they have judges able, patient, pious, and impartial! But heinous is the guilt when, notwithstanding God's gracious promises and kind providences, we wickedly rebel against him; when, discrediting God's promise and care, we obstinately lean to our own understanding; and when we readily credit everything said in opposition to God's record, and disregard every encouragement to believe it! And men's wilfulness frequently manifests itself in such diversified contradictions to God's will! The most eminent saints share along with the wicked in their temporal miseries. And often they are forced to weep for their sufferings who would not weep for their sins. But, alas! to no purpose is weeping when the door of mercy is once shut. It is but the sorrow of the world, which worketh death.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. 'We went round Mount Seir during many days.' This was literally true. Commencing their journey at Kadesh on the west, they travelled along the western side of the mountain range of Seir or Edom to Ezion-gaber; then they turned and passed close to its southern border; then they turned again and traversed the wilderness of Arabia, close to the eastern border; and they finally entered and marched across Moab on its northern border. P.]

Ver. 23. [This is a most important ethnological note. It proves that the aborigines of Palestine, both east and west of the Jordan, were of one stock, and were of gigantic stature. The different names by which they were called—Rephaim, Emim, Horim, Anakim, Zamzummim, and Avim—were either descriptive epithets, or the inventions of different races of men. The Caphtorim were better known as Philistines. Caphtor was probably a province of Egypt. P.]

Ver. 26. [Does not Moses, by his 'words of peace,' act disingenuously with Sihon, when he knew, if he believed his own record, that he was about to take possession of Sihon's kingdom? No; he acted in perfect sincerity. He required an act of courtesy, of kindness and reciprocal benefit. When churlishly refused, he did not commence hostilities; but when Sihon came to assail him, he assailed him, as an aggressor, and then took possession of the land which God had promised, and which God, as Creator and Lord, had a paramount right to bestow. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What regard God bears to his faithful children; and what temporal favours he bestows, even on their wicked posterity, for their sake! But he hath appointed times for exercising his people's faith, and permitting his enemies' prosperity. He plants and plucks up nations; keeps them in, or turns them down according as they do not obey him, and the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Thus the cursed offspring of Ham, after many ages, Seir,[1] and they shall be afraid of you: [t]take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore.

5 Meddle[u] not with them; for I will not give you of their land, no, not so much as a footbreadth;[2] because I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession.

6 Ye shall [v]buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink.

7 For the LORD thy God hath [w]blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he [x]knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: these forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

8 And when we [y]passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, through the way of the plain from Elath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab.

9 And the LORD said unto me, [z]Distress not the Moabites,[3] neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given [aa]Ar[4] unto the children of Lot for a possession.

10 The [bb]Emims dwelt therein in times past, a people great, and many, and tall as the Anakims;

11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims; but the Moabites call them Emims.[5]

12 The[c] Horims also dwelt in Seir before time; but the children of Esau succeeded them,[6] when they had destroyed them from before them, and dwelt in their [7]stead; [d]as Israel did unto the land of his possession, which the LORD gave unto them.

13 Now rise up, said I, and get you over [8]the brook[8] Zered: and we went over the brook Zered.

14 And the space in which we came from Kadesh-barnea,[e] until we were come over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years;[9] until all the generation of the men of war were wasted[e] out from among the host, as the LORD sware unto them.

15 For indeed the hand of the LORD was against them, to destroy them from among the host, until they were consumed.

16 ¶ So it came to pass, when [f]all the men of war were consumed and dead from among the people,

17 That the LORD spake unto me, saying,

18 Thou art to pass over through [gg]Ar, the coast of Moab, this day.

19 And when thou comest nigh over against the children of Ammon, [z]distress them not, nor meddle with them; for I will not give thee of the land of the children of Ammon any possession, because I have given it unto the children of Lot for a possession.

20 (That also was accounted a land of giants:[1] giants dwelt therein in old time; and the Ammonites call them [hh]Zamzummims;[2]

21 A people great, and many, and tall as the Anakims; but the LORD destroyed them before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead:

22 As[i] he did to the children of Esau which dwelt in Seir, when he destroyed the Horims from before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead, even unto this day:

23 And the [ii]Avims which dwelt in Hazerim, even unto [k]Azzah, the [l]Caphtorims, which came forth out of Caphtor, destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.)[3]

24 ¶ Rise ye up, take your journey, and pass over the river Arnon: behold, I have given into thine hand Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land; begin[4] to possess it, and contend with him in battle.

25 This[d] day will I begin to put the dread of thee, and the fear of thee, upon the nations that are under the whole heaven, who shall hear report of thee, and shall tremble, and be in anguish because of thee.

26 ¶ And I sent messengers [m]out of the wilderness of Kedemoth[5] unto Sihon king of Heshbon with words of peace, saying, 27 Let[f] me pass through thy land: I will go along by the high-way, I will neither turn unto the right hand nor to the left.

28 Thou shalt sell me meat for money, that I may eat; and give me water for money, that I may drink; only I will pass through on my feet,

1 'Mount Seir' is not to be taken as a single mountain around which the Israelites continuously moved. It is evidently the name of an extensive mountain range of about 90 miles from south to north, and about 50 from east to west. To 'possess,' in the language of Scripture, signifies either to go round or to be arrived at a place. Jos. 1. 3. 2. 9. We further meet an example of each application. In the text it evidently applies to an encampment, of which the successive movements were southward towards the Red Sea. Of these movements Moses gives no special record. A melancholy but accurate emblem of human life, of which much is spent in laboriously doing nothing that is worthy of being rescued from oblivion.—C.

3 The expulsion and succession of these now obscure people, of whom we possess but the name, conveys the same lesson with the rise and fall of the mightiest empires, whose fates fill the pages of the most extended history. There is a lesson of mortality upon the gravestone of the urken own stranger as intelligible to reason as the inscription over the departed friend. The one may awaken more emotion, but gives no greater warning, than the other. But as men read monumental inscriptions for curiosity or amusement, so do nations often study history. They see that others mighty and renowned have fallen; they have the causes in luxury or effeminacy: but seldom think, and if told, will not readily admit that to 'forgetfulness of God' are national calamities to be traced, and that, in submission to 'the Son' lies the safety and stability of kingdoms. Ps. 2. 12. 2. 10. While Moses impresses this solemn lesson of instability upon the Israelites, he also encourages them by the example of weaker nations expelling or conquering the mightiest, even as sinners are encouraged to turn to the Lord, by the triumphs of grace in rescuing 'the chief of sinners' from the snare of the devil, 2 Ti. 2. 26.—C.

perish under the patriarch's curse. But the people of God ought to be always generous, forgiving, and disinterested; neither injuring their enemies, nor unnecessarily burdensome to their friends. And the more vain and changeable the possessions of this world are, the more solicitous we ought to be to secure a kingdom which cannot be moved. When nations are ripe for ruin, God permits their proud lusts to plunge them headlong into it: and their barbarous refusals of common kindness issue in their own and their neighbours' destruction. Let me be always content with such things as I have; always tender of dispossessing others of what the Lord has given them. Let my portion be the Lord himself, from which neither hell nor earth can turn me out, or mar my enjoyment, while I live in the hopes of exchanging all my wanderings, fightings, and fears, for that city of God, that house eternal in the heavens.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 5. Argob is, as its name implies, a wild and rocky province of Bashan—a great natural fortress in fact, with tortuous ravines and jagged cliffs, inaccessible except to those acquainted with its passes. It is about 22 miles long by 14 wide. It is a plain, but its surface is elevated above the surrounding country about 30 feet; and is entirely composed of a stratum of basalt, which appears to have been emitted from pores in the ground. It is surrounded by the great plain or table-land of Bashan, which is famed for its richness. The surface of Argob, and of a rugged district which extends many miles to the south-east, is thickly studded with ancient cities; and it is a remarkable fact that the massive walls and houses in many of them remain standing; the streets, though long silent and deserted, are in some places complete as those of a modern town. The city gates and the doors and roofs of the houses are all of stone, and bear marks of the most remote antiquity. These are doubtless those 'threescore cities, . . . fenced with high walls, gates, and bars,' of which Moses here speaks. P.]

Ver. 11. [Rabbath of the children of Ammon. This statement has been employed by objectors as evidence that this book was not written by Moses; while it is charged with an extravagance that is alleged to render the narrative incredible. For neither allegation is there the least ground: (1) Metallic bedsteads have been common in all ages, and are so till this day: in warm countries they would be a real luxury, as preservatives from the annoyance of vermin. (2) That Moses should record the fact for posterity, though well known to his contemporaries, is a matter exemplified in the historical occurrences of every day; and as comparatively few of the Israelites could have actually seen it, to the rest it was therefore a most interesting description. (3) But as Rabbath was not yet taken,

ANCIENT WALL OF ACROPOLIS—ONE OF THE OLDEST RELICS IN ATHENS. [DEUT., ii: 1-23.]—In the first part of the above chapter we have some account of international relationships. A careful study of the Old Testament Scriptures reveals the truth that while the Hebrews were God's peculiar people they were not His only people. All peoples were His, and every nation contemporary with the Jews was raised up for some specific purpose. Greece was far away over the Mediterranean Sea from Palestine, but with a history contemporaneous with that of the Hebrews after their entrance into the promised land under Joshua. The heroic period of Greek history is said to date from B. C. 1400 to B. C. 1200. We give in the above picture an illustration of an ancient, rugged, and ragged relic of the old wall built on the northern side of the Acropolis in Athens. It is interesting thus to view from the standpoint of Jewish history 1400 B. C. a scene in Greece.

29 (As[g] the children of Esau which dwell in Seir,[6] and the Moabites which dwell in Ar, did unto me,) until I shall pass over Jordan, into the land which the LORD our God giveth us.

30 But [h]Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for the LORD thy God hardened his spirit,[7] and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day.

31 And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to [i]give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land.

32 Then[k] Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz.

33 And the LORD our God delivered him before us, and we smote him, and his sons, and all his people.

34 And we took all his cities at that time, and [l]utterly destroyed the men, and the women, and the little ones,[8] of every city; we left none to remain:

35 Only[m] the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took.

36 From[n] Aroer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead, there [o]was not one city too strong for us: the LORD our God delivered all unto us.

37 Only [p]unto the land of the children of Ammon thou camest not, nor unto any place of the river Jabbok, nor unto the cities in the mountains, [q]nor unto whatsoever the LORD our God forbade us.[9]

CHAPTER III.

1 The story of the conquest of Og king of Bashan. 11 The size of his bed. 12 The distribution of the conquered lands to the two tribes and half. 23 Moses' prayer to enter into the land. 26 He is permitted to see it.

THEN we turned, and went up the way to Bashan: and [r]Og the king of Bashan came out against us, he and all his people, to battle at Edrei.

2 And the LORD said unto me, [s]Fear him not: for I will deliver him, and all his people, and his land, into thy hand; and thou shalt do unto him as thou didst unto [t]Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

3 So the LORD our God [u]delivered into our hands Og also, the king of Bashan, and all his people: and we smote him, until none was left to him remaining.

4 And we took [v]all his cities at that time; there was not a city which we took not from them, threescore cities, all the region of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

5 All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates, and bars, besides unwalled towns a great many.

6 And we [w]utterly destroyed them, as we did unto Sihon king of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children, of every city.

7 But[x] all the cattle, and the spoil of the cities, we took for a prey to ourselves.

8 And we took at that time, out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorites, [y]the land that was on this side Jordan,[1] from the river of Arnon unto mount Hermon;

9 Which[z] Hermon the Sidonians call Sirion, and the Amorites call it Shenir;)

10 All[a] the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and all Bashan, unto Salchah and Edrei,[2] cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

11 For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of [b]giants;[3] behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron: is it not in [c]Rabbath of the children of Ammon? nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man.[4]

12 ¶ And[d] this land, which we possessed at that time from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, and half mount Gilead, and the cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites.

13 And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants.

14 Jair[e] the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob, unto the coasts of Geshuri and Maachathi, and called them after his own name, Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day.[5]

15 And[f] I gave Gilead unto Machir.

16 And[g] unto the Reubenites, and unto the Gadites, I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon, half the valley, and the border, g It appears that the Edomites and Moabites sold them victuals, though they did not permit them a passage through their country, ch. 2.3-5.4 Ju.11.17,18.

6 In Seir. In Nu. 20. 21 the King of Edom refuses to let Israel pass through his land, and even comes out to battle—here Moses implies that Israel passed through Edom and purchased necessaries: can both accounts be true? perfectly so. The King of Edom refuses to allow Israel to pass through his immediate personal territory; but the Edomites of another part of Seir, acknowledging, it may be, an imperial supremacy; but exercising at the same time a local and independent jurisdiction, allow them to pass through and trade in their peculiar province. This is a state of things, of which both the ancient and modern history of Europe could furnish many examples.—C.

9 The Ammonites originally possessed the country extending from the Arnon on the south to Gilead on the north, and bounded on the west by the valley of the Jordan. But some time before the advance of the Israelites the warlike Amorites had driven them out from the western part of their territory, and they took refuge along the banks of the upper Jabbok, and in the fastnesses on the eastern slopes of the mountains of Gilead. There they were when Moses made his successful campaign in Gilead and Bashan.—P.

The Hebrew words 'ir-qubbeleth, 'iron bedstead' may mean 'sarcophagus of iron-coloured basalt.' Thousands of these exist in the country. That of Eshmonasser recently found at Sidon, and now in the museum of the Louvre, is a good example of their form and character.—P.]

5 Bashan-havoth-jair must not be confounded with the Havoth-jair mentioned in Nu. 32. 41. The latter were in Gilead, the former in Bashan. That they were distinct and far apart is proved by the following passages:—Jos. 13. 30. 1 Ki. 4. 13. 1 Ch. 2. 22, 23. The word Havoth is from an Arabic root, which signifies 'to collect,' and it therefore means a collection of dwellings of any kind, whether tents, mud huts, or stone houses. The towns called Bashan-havoth-jair appear to have been identical with the 'threescore great cities' of Argob (comp. 1 Ki. 4. 13), of which Kenath was one.—P.

how could Moses tell where the bedstead was? Without our referring to the constancy of divine revelation, does the objector seriously mean to insinuate that no man can tell where any article of curiosity is unless he has actually been in the place? No! this would be too much even for infidelity to assert. (4) But then what shall we say to the dimensions of the bedstead? 'the cubit of a man,' about eighteen inches, would give for the bedstead 13½ feet in length and 6 in breadth; and allowing the bedstead to be, according to common computation, one-third longer than the body, Og would be about 9 feet in height. (5) To escape from the apparent difficulties of the narrative, Boothroyd and others pronounce the passage an interpolation; but for the there appears no sufficient authority; nor does the gigantic size of the monarch present any insuperable difficulty; for, remembering the reverence paid by a semi-barbarous people to gigantic height and strength, and allowing that Og might take advantage of this feeling, and do as other unusually tall men have done, elevate himself a few inches on his sandals, and we find a height rarely indeed attained, but still at times actually exemplified in Europe. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Haughty sinners scorn to be warned by their neighbours' fall, and dare to provoke their own judgments, in which they perish. But, amidst the strongest enemies, all slavish fears are altogether groundless when we have the Lord on our side: he kindly proportions his encouragements to his people's fears, and the terrible appearances of their enemies. There is no might nor counsel against him. The race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Created force is of little avail when God is the opposer. He can deal with giants as with grasshoppers.—It highly becomes those who by faith have entered into their spiritual rest, to look not on their own things, but every man also on the things of others; and to labour till their brethren, and especially Zion, enjoy rest along with them. Every experience of God's power and kindness ought to be improved as an antidote against slavish fears, and an encouragement to follow God in the hardest service: and every glimpse of God's glory quickens the desires after more abundant displays of it. Thankfulness for former mercies is an excellent mean to obtain what blessings we need; and

ENTRANCE TO TIBERIAS. [Deuteronomy, iii:17.]—"The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from Chinnereth even unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, under Ashdoth-pisgah eastward." The Chinnereth referred to in the 17th verse of the third chapter of Deuteronomy is Lake Galilee which we see through this gate of entrance into the city of Tiberias. Herod Anticas was the founder of the city of Tiberias. Through him Roman luxury was introduced into the northern part of Palestine, which extends from the sea of Tiberias to the sources of the Jordan near Cæsarea Philippi. He surrounded the palace which he built in Tiberias with the dwellings for his court, with amphitheaters, bath houses, and temples. Josephus says that in order to make room for all his buildings he was under the necessity of removing several graves found upon the site of the city which he wished to build. There is a tradition that Christ refused to enter Tiberias because it was built upon the graves of the dead of his country.

even unto the [r]river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon;

17 The [s] plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from Chinnereth even unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, [t]under Ashdoth-pisgah eastward.[6]

18 ¶ And [u] I commanded you at that time, saying, The LORD your God hath given you this land to possess it: ye shall pass over armed before your brethren the children of Israel, all that are meet for the war.[7]

19 But your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle, (for I know that ye have much cattle,) shall abide in your cities which I have given you,

20 Until the LORD have given rest unto your brethren, as well as unto you, and until they also possess the land which the LORD your God hath given them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye [x]return every man unto his possession, which I have given you.

21 ¶ And [y] I commanded Joshua at that time, saying, Thine eyes have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the LORD do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest.

22 Ye [z]shall not fear them: for the LORD your God he shall fight for you.

23 ¶ And I besought the LORD at that time, saying,

24 O Lord GOD, thou hast begun to show thy servant thy [a]greatness, and thy mighty hand: for what God is there in heaven or in earth that can do according to thy works, and according to thy might?

25 I pray thee, let me go over and see [b]the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon.[8]

26 But the LORD [c]was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the LORD said unto me, [d]Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter.

27 Get [e]thee up unto the top of Pisgah,[9] and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

28 But [f]charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him; for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see.

29 So we abode in the [g]valley over against Beth-peor.

CHAPTER IV.

1 An exhortation to obedience. 41 Moses appointeth the three cities of refuge on the east side of Jordan.

NOW therefore [a]hearken, O Israel, unto [b]the statutes, and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess [c]the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

2 Ye[d] shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the [1]commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

3 Your eyes have seen [e]what the LORD did because of Baal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

4 But ye that [f]did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for [g]this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

7 For what nation [h]is there so great, who hath God so nigh[2] unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?[3]

8 And what nation is there so great, that [i]hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?

9 Only take heed to thyself, and [k]keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but [l]teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons:

10 Specially the [m]day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that contentment under disappointments is a good evidence that our prayers were not rejected, though we obtain not what we ask. One single slip in the conversation of a saint sometimes renders his most earnest supplications unsuccessful; for God makes his own faithful children the most distinguished examples of his righteous judgments. Often, for their own good, as well as for the good of others, he removes them by death in a considerate manner, when the continuance of their life seems to be most necessary; and yet readily he gratifies their innocent desires, as far as his own honour permits, whenever he finds them penitent. What a comfort is it for dying rulers, in church or state, to leave the flock of God in the hands of faithful successors! and it is pleasing to see aged saints on their death-beds encourage their younger brethren.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 8. I set before you this day. The great evidence for the divine origin of the Bible is in the Bible itself, just as the great evidence for the being and perfections of God is in the works that he has made. 'The heavens declare the glory of God.' None but a God of power, and wisdom, and goodness, could frame a world so mightily, so wisely, and so excellently. And just so, none but God could reveal a law so excellent as that of Moses. It stands as much above all other laws, as the works of God in nature do above the works of men in art. The philosophers and legislators of the world, if met in one great conclave, could not if they would, and would not if they could, compose and promulgate the ten commandments. Were the stars extinguished, and did the sun alone remain in heaven, it would evince, in its solitary majesty, the divinity of its Creator; and were the Bible lost in another deluge, and did the ten commandments alone survive, they would manifest, even to the sinner whom they condemned, that they were the work of a God of infinite wisdom and holiness. C.]

Ver. 33. [Hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire. The tribes were numbered from twenty years old and upwards, Nu. 1. 3, and of these none now remained alive save Caleb and Joshua, Nu. 26. 64, 65; but multitudes were still alive who, at nineteen years of age and downwards, had been present at Sinai, and had heard 'the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire.' These now form a host of witnesses to the truth of the Mosaic narrative, to which no event in merely human history can furnish any parallel. Had their parents had the slightest ground of suspicion against the reality of the miracles of Sinai, or the slightest charge against the veracity of Moses, they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

11 And ye [n]came near, and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst[4] of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

12 And the LORD [o]spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, [p]but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice.[5]

13 And he [q]declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you [r]statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

15 ¶ Take[s] ye therefore good heed unto yourselves, (for ye [t]saw no manner of similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire,)

16 Lest ye [u]corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female,

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

18 The likeness of anything that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth:[6]

19 And lest [x]thou lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath divided[7] unto all nations under the whole heaven.[8]

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of [y]the iron furnace,[9] even out of Egypt, to be unto him a [z]people of inheritance, as ye are this day.

21 Furthermore, the LORD [a]was angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land [b]which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance;

22 But [c]I must die in this land, I must not go over Jordan: but ye shall go over, and possess that good land.

23 Take [d]heed unto yourselves, lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which he made with you, and make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee.

24 For [e]the LORD thy God is a consuming fire,[1] even a jealous God.

25 ¶ When thou [f]shalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and shall do evil in the sight of the LORD thy God, to provoke him to anger;

26 I [g]call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that [h]ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it; ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed.

27 And the LORD shall [i]scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the LORD shall lead you.

28 And there [k]ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which [l]neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

29 But [m]if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart, and with all thy soul.

30 When [n]thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee,[2] even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice;

31 (For [o]the LORD thy God is a merciful God,) he [p]will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers, which he sware unto them.

32 ¶ For [q]ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the [r]one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it?

33 Did ever people [s]hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?

34 Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation[3] from the midst of another nation, by [t]temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

35 Unto thee it was showed, that thou they would have trained up a generation still more unbelieving, more fickle, more ungrateful, and more rebellious than themselves. But truth and grace have triumphed in the conversion of the children, while appetite and habit have effected the destruction of the parents.—Note, How exactly do these two generations correspond, on the great national scale, with the condition of every descendant of Adam! The 'old man' walks by 'sight,' disbelieves, and dies disinherited; the 'new man' walks by 'faith,' lives, and enters into rest. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Blind and hardened indeed are the hearts of men, which need such earnest and repeated inculcation of the plainest duties. And greatly important are the statutes and testimonies of God, which are worthy of all these enforcements. Oh with what solemnity and fervour ought ministers then to preach the truths of God! His glory, and the eternal salvation or ruin of mankind, are deeply concerned in them. Let me receive every article of their divine message with the deepest awe and the most solemn regard: and while I have an ear to hear, let me hear what the Spirit saith to the churches, as said to myself. Let me walk in all the commandments of the Lord blameless. Let every carnal representation of the true God, every deviation to idols, be the detestation of my soul. And, remembering God's tenderness with me, and relation to me, let me exert all my care and skill in raising up men to the honour of Jesus Christ my elder brother. Let every manifestation of God's character or providence encourage and animate me to close walking with him. And if I choose not that sin should become my punishment, let me never make it my pleasure. But let the immutability of God's love, and his readiness to show mercy to returning prodigals, lead me to a speedy and a mightest [u]know that the LORD he is God; there is none else beside him.

36 Out[x] of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee; and upon earth he showed thee his great fire; and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire.

37 And [y]because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt;

38 To[z] drive out nations from before thee, greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

39 Know[a] therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the LORD he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else.

40 Thou shalt [b]keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, [c]which the LORD thy God giveth thee, for ever.[4]

41 ¶ Then Moses [d]severed three cities on this side Jordan,[5] toward the sun-rising;

42 That the slayer might flee thither, which should kill his neighbour unawares, and hated him not in times past; and that, fleeing unto one of these cities, he might live:

43 Namely, [e]Bezer in the wilderness, in the plain country of the Reubenites; and [f]Ramoth in Gilead, of the Gadites; and Golan in Bashan, of the Manassites.[6]

44 ¶ And this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel:

45 These are the [g]testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which Moses spake unto the children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt;

46 On [h]this side Jordan, in the valley over against Beth-peor, in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel [i]smote, after they were come forth out of Egypt:

47 And they possessed his land, and the land [k]of Og king of Bashan, two kings of the Amorites, which were on this side Jordan, toward the sun-rising;

48 From[l] Aroer, which is by the bank of the river Arnon, even unto mount [m]Sion, which is Hermon, 49 And all the plain on this side Jordan eastward, even unto the sea of the plain, under the [n]springs of Pisgah.

CHAPTER V.

1 A commemoration of the covenant in Horeb, 6 the ten commandments. 22 At the people's request Moses receiveth the law from God.

AND Moses called [a]all Israel,[1] and said unto them, [b]Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep and do [2]them.

2 [1]The [c]LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 The LORD [d]made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.[3]

4 The[e] LORD talked with you face to face in the mount, out of the midst of the fire,

5 (I stood [f]between the LORD and you at that time, to show you the word of the LORD: for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount,) saying,

6 ¶ I[g] am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.[4]

7 Thou[h] shalt have none other gods before me.

8 Thou[i] shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth:

9 Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: [k]for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

10 And[l] showing mercy unto thousands[5] of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

11 Thou[m] shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

12 Keep[n] the sabbath-day to sanctify it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee.

13 Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work;

14 But the seventh day is the [o]sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor [p]thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou.

15 And [q]remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy

4 If the words of Moses were from God, and if the land was given by God, for ever to Israel, who are they to day out of possession for nearly two years? can the Bible be the word of God, if it have failed so long? It can; for God is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; 2Pe. 3.9; the temporary, though long continued, exile of the Jews being one of those very predictions, the very fulfilment of which will rise up in judgment against unbelief, convicting this contentious children of disobeying their own senses, as much as of rejecting the word of the Lord. C.

1 How could 'all Israel' even hearing the statutes, to all ranks from twenty years old and upwards, attend in one place to hear the Law of Moses? The answer is easy. It is not said, that they all attended, but that all were called. (2) But even if all in the utmost application of the word were required to attend at one time, it is not necessary to infer that they attended at the other; but successively. C.

6 The mercy of God is held out as a motive to obey the law of God, though the law itself holds out no mercy to the transgressor. In the preface God simply asks to them as their Redeemer, and it is only in this view that a sinner can yield it obedience. The mercy of God is here promised to thousands; not only of individuals, or to great multitudes to the third and fourth generation, but to successive generations to the end of time. The Lord's dealings with the posterity of Abraham, who believed his word, loved him, and kept his commandments, illustrate this promise.—F.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 21. The varieties of expression used, in relating the same thing, by 'holy men of God,' who spoke as they were moved by 'the Holy Ghost,' is never without some important use, that will sooner or later be found out. A remarkable instance occurs in this verse. In many of the catechisms and other books authorized by Romanists, the second commandment, forbidding image worship, is omitted; but to make up the number ten, the tenth commandment is divided into two. The transposition, however, in the text demonstrates the invalidity of the division, and the folly as well as sin of adding to or diminishing from the words of the Lord. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Sinful men must have God's will declared to them, line upon line, precept upon precept. But the promise of grace, made in Jesus Christ, is the great foundation of all our holy obedience; and there can be no happy promise of hearty repentance for sin. And, recollecting the manifold, the distinguishing manifestations of God to me, and to his people, let me never forget my superior obligations; but, while I enjoy his peculiar blessing, return him peculiar honour.

KIRJATH JEARIM—WHERE THE ARK OF THE COVENANT RESTED IN THE HOUSE OF ABINADAB. [DEUT., v: 22.]—"These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more; and he wrote them in two tables of stone and delivered them unto me." We give here a picture of Kirjath Jearim because when the ark of the testimony was brought from Bethshemesh it rested in this place in the house of Abinadab. The immeasurable distance of the religion of Israel from that of surrounding nations may be determined from the fact that the Israelite bowed himself before a holy place in which God was represented in His law and as revealing Himself as holy and just and demanding corresponding traits in His people. The Egyptian bowed before a shrine also, but when that which was contained in it was disclosed it was seen to be a cat or a crocodile or some animal lower in nature than man. The Israelite looked above him, the Egyptian looked beneath himself.

MOSQUE OF OMAR AND TURKISH QUARTER, JERUSALEM—IN THE PLACE OF THE TEMPLE WHERE CHRIST TAUGHT. [DEUT., v: 33.]—"Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess." We give a picture here, as illustrating the results of failing to observe God's law, the Mosque of Omar, a Mohammedan place of worship standing on the very site of the magnificent temple built by the people of God. Every Jew and every Christian who makes a visit to Palestine resents in his own feelings the presence of an alien people in the land of the Hebrews and of Christians. But we are all forced to admit that this land would have belonged to Jews and Christians forever had they been true to the ten commandments and to the Son of God, the embodiment of the ten commandments in living form.

God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm: therefore the LORD thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath-day.

16 ¶ Honour[r] thy father and thy mother, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee; [s]that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

17 Thou[t] shalt not kill.

18 Neither shalt thou commit adulterie.

19 Neither shalt thou steal.

20 Neither shalt thou beare false witnesse against thy neighbour.

21 Neither[u] shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife, neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field,[6] or his man-servant, or his maid-servant, his ox, or his asse, or any thing that is thy neighbour's.[7]

22 ¶ These[x] words[8] the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more: and he [y]wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

23 And it came to pass, [z]when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came neare unto me, even all the [a]heads of your tribes, and your elders;

24 And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath showed us his glory, and his greatnesse, and we[b] have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth.

25 Now therefore why should we die? [c]for this great fire will consume us. If we heare[9] the voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die.

26 For [d]who is there of all flesh that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

27 Go [e]thou neare, and heare all that the LORD our God shall say; and speake thou unto us all that the LORD our God shall speake unto thee, and we will heare it, and do it.

28 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me; and the LORD said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: [f]they have well said all that they have spoken.

29 Oh[g] that there were such an heart in them, that they would feare me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever![1]

30 Go say to them, Get you into your tents again.

31 But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will [h]speake unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possesse it.

32 Ye [i]shall observe to do therefore as the LORD your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turne aside to the right hand or to the left.

33 Ye shall [k]walke in all the wayes which the LORD your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your dayes in the land which ye shall possesse.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The end of the law is obedience. 3 An exhortation thereto. 20 What they are required to teach their children concerning it.

NOW these are the [a]commandements,[1] the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go[2] to possesse it;

2 That thou mightest [b]feare the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee; thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the dayes of thy life; and that [c]thy dayes may be prolonged.

3 ¶ Heare[d] therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milke and honey.

4 Heare, O Israel; [e]The LORD our God is one LORD:

5 And[f] thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soule, and with all thy might.

6 And [g]these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart;

7 And thou [h]shalt teach[3] them diligently

7 On comparing Ex xx. with Dn. v. there appear such varieties in the fourth, fifth, and tenth commandments, that infidels have charged the whole with contradiction; and consequently either part or whole with untruth—whilst the opponents of the full divine inspiration of Scripture have adduced them as evidence that whilst the thought was inspired, the words were resigned to the selection of the writers. A single answer will serve to refute the objection of the infidel, and to remove the difficulty of the believer—the answer lies in recollecting (1) That Israel had now been in possession of the ten commandments for almost forty years, and must therefore have been well acquainted with such a brief original document. (2) That to such well-known and original document Moses refers when he says, 'Keep the Sabbath-day to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee;' that is, not as he does now for the first time command, but as he hath already commanded at Sinai. This view is farther confirmed in ver. 15, where the time of the commandment is again referred—not to the present repetition and comment, but to a past and acknowledged occasion. Again, it is said in ver. 16, 'Honour thy father and thy mother, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee,' clearly referring to the Sinai original of the commandment, a reference which evidently continues to the end of ver. 21.—C.

2 From a word that signifies to reiterate, repeat, do the same thing again. This is the great principle of all instruction—line upon line, precept upon precept. When some children had answered admirably in a scriptural examination, a stranger inquired by what mystery they had made such attainments? The answer was most instructive. 'By having the same thing repeated to them perhaps five hundred times.'—C.

duty between God and a soul but through his mediation. Public promises of duty between God and parents bind the children to all generations, and it is at their peril if they become ashamed of them. But all obedience to God's law must be immediately founded on what God is, and is to us, and hath done for us. And, oh! what great pleasure God takes in granting himself to be our God in Christ! Often he repeats this grant even in the short abridgment of his law; and many hundred times in the Bible,—that wherever we read, hear, or meditate, we may be constrained to believe that he is God, even our own God, by his spiritual grant of himself to us. Indeed, every peculiar circumstance which men can be in hath its own peculiar enforcements of duty to God and our neighbour. In what a solemn manner was God's law delivered! and it is a mercy that we have his word written for us, for the greater certainty and the better spreading thereof. But it is still a greater mercy that we have one Mediator between God and men—the man Christ Jesus; and so receive the law as fulfilled in Christ: and it is most acceptable to God when sinful men, terrified by the holy law, kindly flee to Jesus and his mediation; when our hearts are right with him; and especially when the views of his promise, his law, and the mediation of Christ and our own vows, concur in animating us to the greatest exactness in all holy obedience.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 4. Hear, O Israel. This is one of the passages the Jews inscribe on their phylacteries, and which they regard as one of the most pregnant with divine truth and instruction. The words are spoken not merely as instructions from Moses to Israel, but as a confession of faith common to Moses and Israel: 'Hear, O Israel, JEHOVAH our Elohim is one JEHOVAH.' The words assert most emphatically the unity of the Godhead in the singular—JEHOVAH; while they equally assert the plurality of the persons by the plural—ELOHIM. The unity of the Godhead is asserted in opposition to 'the gods many and lords many' of the heathen; while the plurality of persons is asserted as the foundation and key to the great mystery of redemption. That the Jews understood ELOHIM to be plural, and that it included the doctrine of the TRINITY,

MOSQUE EL-AKSA, WITH BASIN WHERE OUR SAVIOR HELD THE CONVERSATION WITH THE LAWYER. [DEUT., vi: 4-10.]--Upon one occasion Christ was approached by a lawyer tempting him and enquiring of him concerning the law. The language our Savior used in replying to this lawyer is found in this sixth chapter of Deuteronomy between the fourth and tenth verses. We give a picture of the Mosque el-Aksa which stands upon part of the grounds once occupied by the temple, and is doubtless near the spot where our Savior stood when he held the conversation with the lawyer. The language used in this part of Deuteronomy is made more sacred because it was quoted by our Savior during his temptation in the wilderness. The Mosque el-Aksa is not far from the Mosque of Omar. North of the Gothic porch of the mosque is a marble fountain called the cup, and beneath this fountain is a very large reservoir or basin into which it is said the water from the Pools of Solomon were once conveyed unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

8 And thou [i]shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

9 And thou shalt [k]write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.[4]

10 And it shall be, when the LORD thy God shall[l] have brought thee into the land which he sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities which thou buildedst not;

11 And houses full of all good things, which thou filledst not; and wells digged, which thou diggedst not; vineyards and olive-trees, which thou plantedst not; [m]when thou shalt have eaten and be full;

12 Then beware lest thou forget the LORD, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.[5]

13 Thou [n]shalt fear the LORD thy God, and serve him, and shalt swear by his name.[6]

14 Ye [o]shall not go after other gods, of the gods of the people which are round about you;

15 (For[p] the LORD thy God is a jealous God among you:) lest the anger of the LORD thy God be kindled against thee, and destroy thee from off the face of the earth.

16 ¶ Ye[q] shall not tempt[7] the LORD your God, as ye tempted him in Massah.

17 Ye [r]shall diligently keep the commandments of the LORD your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes, which he hath commanded thee.

18 And [s]thou shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the LORD: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the good land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers;

19 To [t]cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the LORD hath spoken.

20 ¶ And [u]when thy son asketh thee in time to come,[8] saying, What mean the testimonies,[9] and the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD our God hath commanded you?

21 Then thou shalt say unto thy son, [x]We were Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt, and the LORD brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand:

22 And the LORD showed signs and wonders, great and sore,[1] upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, [y]before our eyes;

23 And he brought us out from thence, that [z]he might bring us in, to give us the land which he sware unto our fathers.

24 And the [a]LORD commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the LORD our God, for our good always, that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day.

25 And [b]it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the LORD our God, as he hath commanded [2]us.

CHAPTER VII.

2 And when the LORD thy God [b]shall deliver them before thee, and thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor show mercy unto them:

3 Neither [c]shalt thou make marriages[2] with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they [d]will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: [e]so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

l The Jews in the present day strangely observe this in the letter, but neglect it in the spirit. At their stated hours of prayer they bind upon the arm a little case containing strips of parchment, on which this and other portions of the law are written. They also bind a similar case, containing other texts, on the forehead. It is a very common custom, too, in the East for Jews to inscribe over their doors, and round the walls of their rooms, long texts of the Pentateuch. Thus do they fulfil the law outwardly; but in thought, word, and act they deliberately and systematically ungod it. P.

is beyond question. Hear Simeon Ben Joachi, 'Come and see the mystery of the word Elohim. There are three degrees, and each degree is by itself alone; and yet they are all one, and joined together in one, and are not divided from each other.' C.]

REFLECTIONS. Godliness is profitable for all things: it hath the promises of this life and of that which is to come: and unbounded is the happiness of all those who have the one only God for their all and in all. But in the important business of religion, it is necessary to lay a good foundation, by faith in God as our God, and to attend to the various duties thereof according to the degree of their importance. In this respect the word of God is a most precious treasure and useful instructor; and contains the most extensive ground of holy meditation and heavenly discourse. With awful reverence should God be regarded and enjoyed, particularly in swearing of oaths. And it is altogether inconsistent with the truth of religion to entertain sloth and unconcern for the glory of God or the lasting welfare of his church. What an important and laborious work ought we to make of the religious education of our children and servants! It is very necessary to instruct them in the knowledge of God's remarkable appearances for his church, as well as in the doctrinal principles or laws of revelation; and that no obedience can be accepted of God, but what is performed in regard to him as our God in Christ, and is universal respecting all his commandments.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 1. The Hittites were descended from Heth, the second son of Canaan; they were located in the time of Abraham in and around Hebron, Ge. 10. 15; 23. 3, sq. The Girgashites were also descended from a son of Canaan, and appear to have settled near the Sea of Galilee, Mat. 8. 28. The Amorites appear also to have been Canaanites, and were the most numerous and powerful tribe in the country. They spread widely, were a warlike race, and occupied large districts of the mountain ranges both east and west of the Jordan. Canaanite is sometimes used as a generic name for the whole descendants of Canaan; sometimes as the special name of the Phœnicians. In the latter sense it is employed here. The Perizzites were not of the same race as the others. They were an aboriginal tribe like the Rephaim, and occupied strongholds among the mountains of Judah and Ephraim. The Hivites, descendants of Canaan, founded Shechem, Gibeon, Beeroth, and a little principality under Mount Hermon, Ge. 34. 2; Jos. 9. 3, &c. The Jebusites had their stronghold on Zion; and they held it and the surrounding territory down to the time of David. P.]

Ver. 2. [Nor show mercy. Was not this prohibition of mercy cruel? No. It is a prohibition enforced upon every judge who tries and condemns a criminal. The judge who shows mercy to the murderer is himself a guilty copartner in the next murder the culprit perpetrates. 6 ¶ For[e] thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The LORD [h]did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; (for ye were the fewest of all people;)[4]

8 But [i]because the LORD loved you, and because he would [k]keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bond-men, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

9 ¶ Know therefore that the LORD thy God, he is God, the [l]faithful God, which keepeth covenant [m]and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments, to a thousand generations;

10 And [n]repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

11 Thou shalt therefore [o]keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 ¶ Wherefore it shall come to pass, [5]if [p]ye hearken to these judgments, and keep and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he sware unto thy fathers:

13 And he [q]will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee; he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

14 Thou [r]shalt be blessed above all people: there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD [s]will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest,[6] upon thee; but [t]will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

16 And thou shalt [u]consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have[7] no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be a snare unto thee.[8]

17 If thou [x]shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I; how can I dispossess them?

18 Thou [y]shalt not be afraid of them; but shalt well remember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt:

19 The[z] great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched-out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out; so shall the LORD thy God[9] do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

20 Moreover,[a] the LORD thy God will send the hornet[1] among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

21 Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is among you, [b]a mighty God and terrible.

22 And the LORD thy God will [c]put [2]out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.[3]

23 But the LORD thy God shall deliver them unto[4] thee, and shall [d]destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

24 And he shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven: there shall no man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them.

25 ¶ The[e] graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein: for it is an abomination to the LORD thy God.

26 Neither [f]shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; for it is a cursed thing.

CHAPTER VIII.

An exhortation to obedience in regard of God's mercy and goodness in his dealings with Israel.

ALL [a]the commandments which I command thee this day shall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers.

2 And [b]thou shalt remember all the way which the LORD thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments or no.

3 And he humbled thee, and [c]suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou

Were it not for the rifle some districts would be almost uninhabitable. It was a wise and merciful arrangement, therefore, that the ancient inhabitants were expelled by little and little; for had they been driven out at once, at a period when wild beasts were far more abundant than now, and when the rifle was unknown, the occupation of the country would have been almost an impossibility.—P.

Ver. 6. [Holy people. A special or peculiar people, as quoted from the Septuagint, 1 Pe. 2. 9: the original import of the word is that of a private property fenced around for protection. To hate God, is not merely to hate him personally—which thoughtless sinners think impossible—but it is to hate the restraint of his commandments, or the holiness of his injunctions, which the feelings and the conduct of sinners do constantly exemplify. C.] knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORD doth man live.

4 Thy[d] raiment waxed not[1] old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years.

5 Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, [e]as a man chasteneth his son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee.

6 Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, to [f]walk in his ways, and to fear him.

7 For the LORD thy God [g]bringeth thee into a good land; a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills;

8 A land of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig-trees, and pomegranates; a land of oil-olive[2] and honey;

9 A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack any thing in it; a [h]land whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.[3]

10 When[i] thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the LORD thy God for the good land which he hath given thee.

11 Beware[k] that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day:

12 Lest when thou [l]hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein;

13 And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied;

14 Then thine heart be [m]lifted up, and thou forget the LORD thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage;

15 Who [n]led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were [o]fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water; who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint;

16 Who[p] fed thee in the wilderness with manna, which thy fathers knew not; that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end;

17 And thou [q]say in thine heart, My power, and the might of mine hand, hath gotten me this wealth.

18 But thou shalt [r]remember the LORD thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day.

19 And it shall be, [s]if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish.

20 As the nations which the LORD destroyeth before your face, so shall ye perish;[4] because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the LORD your God.

Does not the reference to raiment, in immediate contact with the manna—confessedly a miraculous food continued for forty years—lead rather and decidedly to the conclusion that the raiment was also miraculously preserved?—a beautiful emblem of that indestructible 'wedding garment' of a Saviour's 'righteousness, which is unto all and upon all them that do believe,' Mat. 22.11. kind, even with respect to their life or death; they may submit whatever they have into the hands of his justice. It is dangerous to contract marriage or cultivate intimacy with wicked persons, particularly such as are of a false religion; and absurd is the expectation, that by such means we shall convert them, when God hath warned us that they will corrupt and seduce us. The faith of God's free love and mercy in keeping and redeeming us most graciously constrains to holy obedience; and what profit and pleasure is there in the faithful service of God! the most difficult duties are easily performed when we attempt them in the faith of God's promised presence and assistance. Why should we fear our strongest enemies, though greater and mightier than we are! If God be for us, who or what can be against us! Though our conquest be gradual, it shall be complete at last: and in all our strugglings let us beware of covetousness; for to enrich ourselves, even with the spoils of a false religion, may issue in our ruin; and it is therefore very important to remove and avoid every temptation to sin.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 2. To know. Not as if God sought to make a discovery of something unknown to God in the heart of man; 'for he knew what was in man,' Jn. 2. 25; but that, by showing man to himself, he might humble him, by making him sensible of 'the plague of his own heart.' 1 Ki. 8. 38. C.]

Ver. 3. [By every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live. Our Lord quotes these words in answer to the temptation of Satan, Mat. iv., exciting him to command 'stones to be made bread.' They contain three important facts: (1) That man is naturally supported by food. (2) That the production of food, and the power of digestion and nutrition, greatly and mainly depend upon the 'word of God.' The truth of this statement is evidenced by the productive powers of all countries where the gospel even comparatively prevails, when contrasted with the 'parched land' of the 'rebels' against God, Ps. 68. 6; and still farther, when the power of conscience is taken into account in all its bearings upon guilt, enmity, pardon, or peace with God; the influence of which, upon bodily health, is matter of daily experience. (3) That the real life of man resides not in the body, that bread can sustain, but in the soul; of which 'the word of God,' heard and believed, is the only efficient nutriment, Is. 55. 3. C.]

Ver. 8. [Olive-oil was, and still is, one of the staple products of Palestine. The Hebrew word debash, here translated 'honey,' may signify a conserve or syrup of grapes, which is now largely used in Palestine as an ordinary article of food. Its Arabic name is dibs, manifestly identical with the Hebrew. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—With great care and skill should ministers promote holiness among their people; and there is need to turn promises and providences every way, to lead men to Jesus, the tree of life. To mortify our pride—commemorate our peevishness—and render the wisdom, holiness, and mercy of God familiar, let us observe the frowns and smiles of God's providence towards us. Trials are as necessary as deliverances; nor can anything hinder God from supplying us in the greatest straits. If the enjoyment of an earthly Canaan, much more should the faith of the heavenly inheritance, animate to an earnestness in universal holiness and gratitude. But how difficult is it to maintain humility of mind amidst remarkable prosperity! or fellowship with God amidst a flow of earthly enjoyments! for this purpose, let me always remember that forgetfulness of God, ingratitude, and pride, bring into the prosperity by which they are occasioned the most fearful curse; and let me wisely observe the providences of God in my lot. To humble me, and discover my own naughtiness, let me remember the wilderness-straits to which I have been reduced. To recommend JEHOVAH to my heart, let me consider what he hath done for me, and promised to me. Let every peculiar excellency in my lot be a mean of elevating my heart to God himself, my goodly inheritance. In the day of my adversity, let me be joyful in him; and in the day of my prosperity, let me consider that all comes from him, and may be withdrawn at his pleasure; and while the loving-kindness of God allures me to holiness, let his terrors awe and deter me from sin.

CROSSING THE JORDAN—THE SACRED RIVER OF CHRISTENDOM. [DEUT., 12 : 1.] —"Hear, O Israel; Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, cities great, and fenced up to heaven." We give here a picture of the natives crossing the Jordan in a ferry-boat. The manner of crossing illustrated above, however, was totally different from the way the children of Israel crossed that river under the leadership of Joshua. They forded it. There are a great many fords in the river. Dr. George Adam Smith describes the Jordan as a rapid, muddy water with zigzag curves, and the depth varying from ten to twelve feet in the sixty-five miles of descent. The descent is 610 feet from the sea of Galilee and is sometimes over forty feet a mile. Jordan means down comer.

the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness[2] the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land; but [f]for the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.

5 Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land; but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and [g]that he may perform the word which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Understand therefore, [h]that the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiff-necked people.[3]

7 ¶ Remember,[i] and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

8 Also[k] in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you, to have destroyed you.

9 When I was [l]gone up into the mount, to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights; I neither did eat bread[4] nor drink water:

10 And[m] the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone, written with the finger of God; and on them was written according to all the words which the LORD spake with you in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly.

11 And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the [n]tables of the covenant.

12 And the LORD said unto me, [o]Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore the LORD spake unto me, saying, [p]I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people.

14 Let[q] me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

15 So [r]I turned and came down from the mount, and the mount [s]burned with fire: and

[2] Let us mark with what specialty God dwells upon the fact, that the children of Israel were not installed in Canaan for their righteousness. but that the seven nations were driven out before them for their wickedness. Self-righteousness is the constitutional disease of human nature a disease ever recurring, even under the regimen of grace. God therefore suits the remedy to the disease: and no less than three times (ver. 4, 5, 6) repeats the solemn denial of Israel's righteousness as the moving cause of his providential decisions. — Note. The abundance of grace is the sole ground of salvation; the wickedness of men the sole ground of judgment. — C.

[4] Unlike most of the miraculous recitals of Moses, for which we have the national attestation; for this we have no direct evidence beyond his own personal testimony; and wherefore should infidelity question, doubt, or deny that testimony? What end of self-interest had Moses to serve by it? what vainglory could he derive from it? — None! Independent of the evidence which his miraculous works and prophetic endowments bear to his divine commission, his character alone is sufficient pledge for the veracity of his statement. Should infidelity deny the truth of the statement on any alleged impossibility of Moses sustaining so long a fast; it must do so, not merely by denying the miraculous power of God, but by forgetting all the laws by which mind operates upon body; and by which certain organic functions may be more finely suspended, while the vital energy of the mass is still unimpaired. — Note. This miraculous fasting is intended to afford a practical illustration of the fact declared Ich. 8. 3. that 'man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord.' — C.

[6] The whole object of Moses in recounting the various acts of sin and rebellion on the part of the Israelites is to show them that it never could have been on account of any righteousness on their part that God was pleased to give them Canaan, instead of reward they richly deserved punishment. That punishment was only averted by the repeated and earnest intercession of Moses. The Canaanites were driven out of their country because of sin; and the Israelites were introduced into it in the richness of divine mercy. — P.

the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And [t]I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you.

17 And[u] I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.[5]

18 And [x]I fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

19 (For [y]I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you.) [z]But the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the LORD [a]was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

21 And [b]I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust; and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

22 And at [c]Taberah, and at Massah, and at Kibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath.

23 Likewise when the LORD sent you from [d]Kadesh-barnea, saying, [e]Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

24 Ye have been [f]rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.[6]

25 Thus [g]I fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights,[7] as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.

26 I [h]prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O Lord GOD, destroy not thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

27 Remember[i] thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin;

28 Lest[k] the land whence thou broughtest us out say, Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS. — The greater our enemies and impediments in the way of our duty, the more shall the power of God be magnified in our overcoming them. God can easily find instruments to execute his justice upon a people devoted to destruction; and his promises and threatenings are most certainly performed in their due time. Though judgment may be delayed, yet sin will at last make the most fearful havoc in nations and families, however great and powerful; and yet it is hard to keep the very worst of men from trusting and glorying in their own fancied works of righteousness. But to keep us humble amidst many and great mercies, let us search the records which conscience keeps of our sins. Nothing but obstinate blindness can support us in a good opinion of ourselves. But thanks be to God that, where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound; thanks for that infinite mercy, that such a wicked generation have brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 Yet they are thy [f]people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power, and by thy stretched-out arm.

CHAPTER X.

1 God's mercy in restoring the two tables, 6 in continuing the priesthood, 8 in separating the tribe of Levi, 10 in hearkening unto Moses' suit for the people. 12 An exhortation to obedience.

AT that [a]time the LORD said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou breakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And [b]I made an ark of shittim-wood,[1] and hewed[c] two tables of stone like unto the first, and [d]went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And he wrote on the tables,[2] according to the first writing, the ten commandments,[3] which the LORD spake unto you in the mount, [e]out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me.

5 And [f]I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made; and there they be, [g]as the LORD commanded me.

6 ¶ And[4] the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera: [h]there Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead.

7 From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

8 ¶ At that time the LORD [i]separated the tribe of Levi, to [k]bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, to stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and to bless in his name, unto this day.

9 Wherefore[l] Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD is his inheritance, according as the LORD thy God promised him.[5]

1 In Ex. xxxvii. the formation of the ark is ascribed to Bezaleel, here to Moses. But this is no contradiction, inasmuch as, in all languages, a man is said to do that which another does under his direction and authority. Thus Solomon is said to have built the temple, not by his own hands, but by the expenditure of his money, and the agency of his servants. C.

That the Lord promised to do, as is stated in Ex. 34. 1 "I will write upon these tables," &c. From ver. 28 of the same chapter, it might at first sight appear that the words were written by Moses: "And he wrote;" but a more examination shows that the pronoun refers to JEHOVAH. P.

5 It seems probable that the reason for the insertion of the note of travel in ver. 6, 7, was the fixing of the exact time and place when the Levites were formally declared to have no allotted possessions beyond their brethren. The journey here noted was part of the final one from Kadesh to the plains of Moab. Hence to lay down the Arabah, and was consequently in fear that course which they had taken on a previous occasion (see note on Nu. 33. 38). Some of the stations are the same, though not in order. How happened this? The whole narrative, however, is very obscure. It ought to be remembered that we have here only an outline of Moses' final address to Israel. Such isolated facts of history are mentioned as bore upon the object he had specially in view—to press upon them the necessity of full obedience to the law. P.

8 This is mentioned as a durable of divine mercy. Notwithstanding all the sufferings and perversions they endured in Egypt, God blessed them with such increase as had never been known. a most prevailing intercessor to stand in the gap to turn away the Lord's wrath and indignation from them.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 6. Mosera. Biblical critics generally concur in rejecting ver. 6–9 as an interpolation originating in the mistake of some transcriber. But this is a mode of solving a difficulty always to be regarded with much jealousy; and when, as in this case, it is unsupported by authority of Hebrew MSS., it is utterly to be rejected. The two itineraries stand thus: Nu. xxxiii., Moseroth, Bene-jaakan, Hor-hagidgad, Jotbathah. De. x., Beeroth of Bene-jaakan, that is, of the children of Jaakan, Mosera, Gudgodah, Jotbath. Now where in all this lies any insuperable difficulty? Let Bene-jaakan, as is common with other names, signify both a large district and a particular place, and the whole difficulty disappears. Thus, in the itinerary of Deuteronomy, they depart from Beeroth in the district of Bene-jaakan, and encamp at Moserah, another name of the place called Bene-jaakan; and in the itinerary of Numbers, they depart from Moseroth, another name for Beeroth, and encamp in the particular place called Bene-jaakan, another name for Mosera. The difficulty supposed to arise from the separation of the tribe of Levi at Mount Sinai, and not at Jotbath, as here asserted, will be solved by recollecting that the special separation of Levi here recounted refers to the disinheritance of the tribe, ver. 9. Upon the apparently different localities assigned to the death of Aaron no stress can be laid, inasmuch as we are totally ignorant of the exact geographical positions of the several stages of the journeyings, and of the extent of the districts designated by the different names. To account for the introduction of these four verses without any seeming connection—let it be recollected, that it is to account for the safe-keeping of the tables of the law and the ark, by the special appointment of Eleazar to succeed Aaron in the priesthood, and the whole tribe of Levi to attend upon the ordinances. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy is it that the law, as a command, is fulfilled and hid in Christ, our gospel-ark! And what a sure token of divine favours yet in store for a people when God raises up faithful ministers and earnest wrestlers at a throne of grace! Marvellous indeed are God's returns of love for hatred—of mercies for rebellion and provocation; and inexcusable, therefore, is disobedience to a God so great and gracious! But it is honourable and becoming to walk in love, as God himself walketh. It is a most fearful proof of the corruption of our nature, and the necessity of a gracious change, that we need so much urging to that which is so remarkably at once our great duty and interest. But let me always retain in mind the wonderful character and the peculiar mercies of my God, the God of Israel; esteem it my glory to belong to him; and make him the only object of my fear, my praise, and joy.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 12. The changing seasons, which God himself regulates, made Palestine fertile. In Egypt human labour and skill regulated the irrigation by which the land was made productive. In Palestine the 'early rain' of autumn moistened the GREEK CHURCH, NAZARETH—NEAR ST. MARY'S WELL. [DEUT., x: 12-22.]—"And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul," etc. Above we have a picture of the Greek Church in Nazareth, the city of our Savior. This can be very aptly placed in connection with this portion of the Word of God concerning the importance of the Law, for without Jesus Christ the Law cannot be obeyed, for "what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit." The Greek Church in Nazareth is just above St. Mary's Well, where the Mother of Jesus often came to draw water.

CHAPTER XI.

1 An exhortation to obedience. 2 by their own experience of God's great works. 8 by promise of God's great blessings, 16 and by threatenings. 18 A careful study is required in God's words. 26 The blessing and curse is set before them.

THEREFORE [a]thou shalt love the LORD thy God, and keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, alway.

2 ¶ And [b]know ye this day: for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen [c]the chastisement of the LORD your God, his greatness, his mighty hand, and his stretched-out arm,

3 And [d]his miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land;

4 And what he did unto the army of Egypt, unto their horses, and to their chariots; how he made the water of the Red sea to overflow them as they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day;

5 And[e] what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place;

6 And [f]what he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben; how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the substance[1] that was in their possession,[2] in the midst of all Israel:

7 But your eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did.[3]

8 Therefore[g] shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may be strong, and go in and possess the land whither ye go to possess it;

9 And that ye [h]may prolong your days in the land, which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give unto them, and to their seed, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 ¶ For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot,[4] as a garden of herbs:

11 But [i]the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven;

12 A [k]land which the LORD thy God careth[5] for: the [l]eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year, even unto the end of the year.[6]

13 ¶ And it shall come to pass, [m]if ye shall hearken diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul,

14 That [n]I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain, and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

15 And [o]I will send[7] grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat, and be full.

16 Take[p] heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them;

17 And then the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he [q]shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

18 ¶ Therefore shall ye [r]lay up these my words in your heart, and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 And[s] ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 And thou [t]shalt write them upon the door-posts of thine house, and upon thy gates:

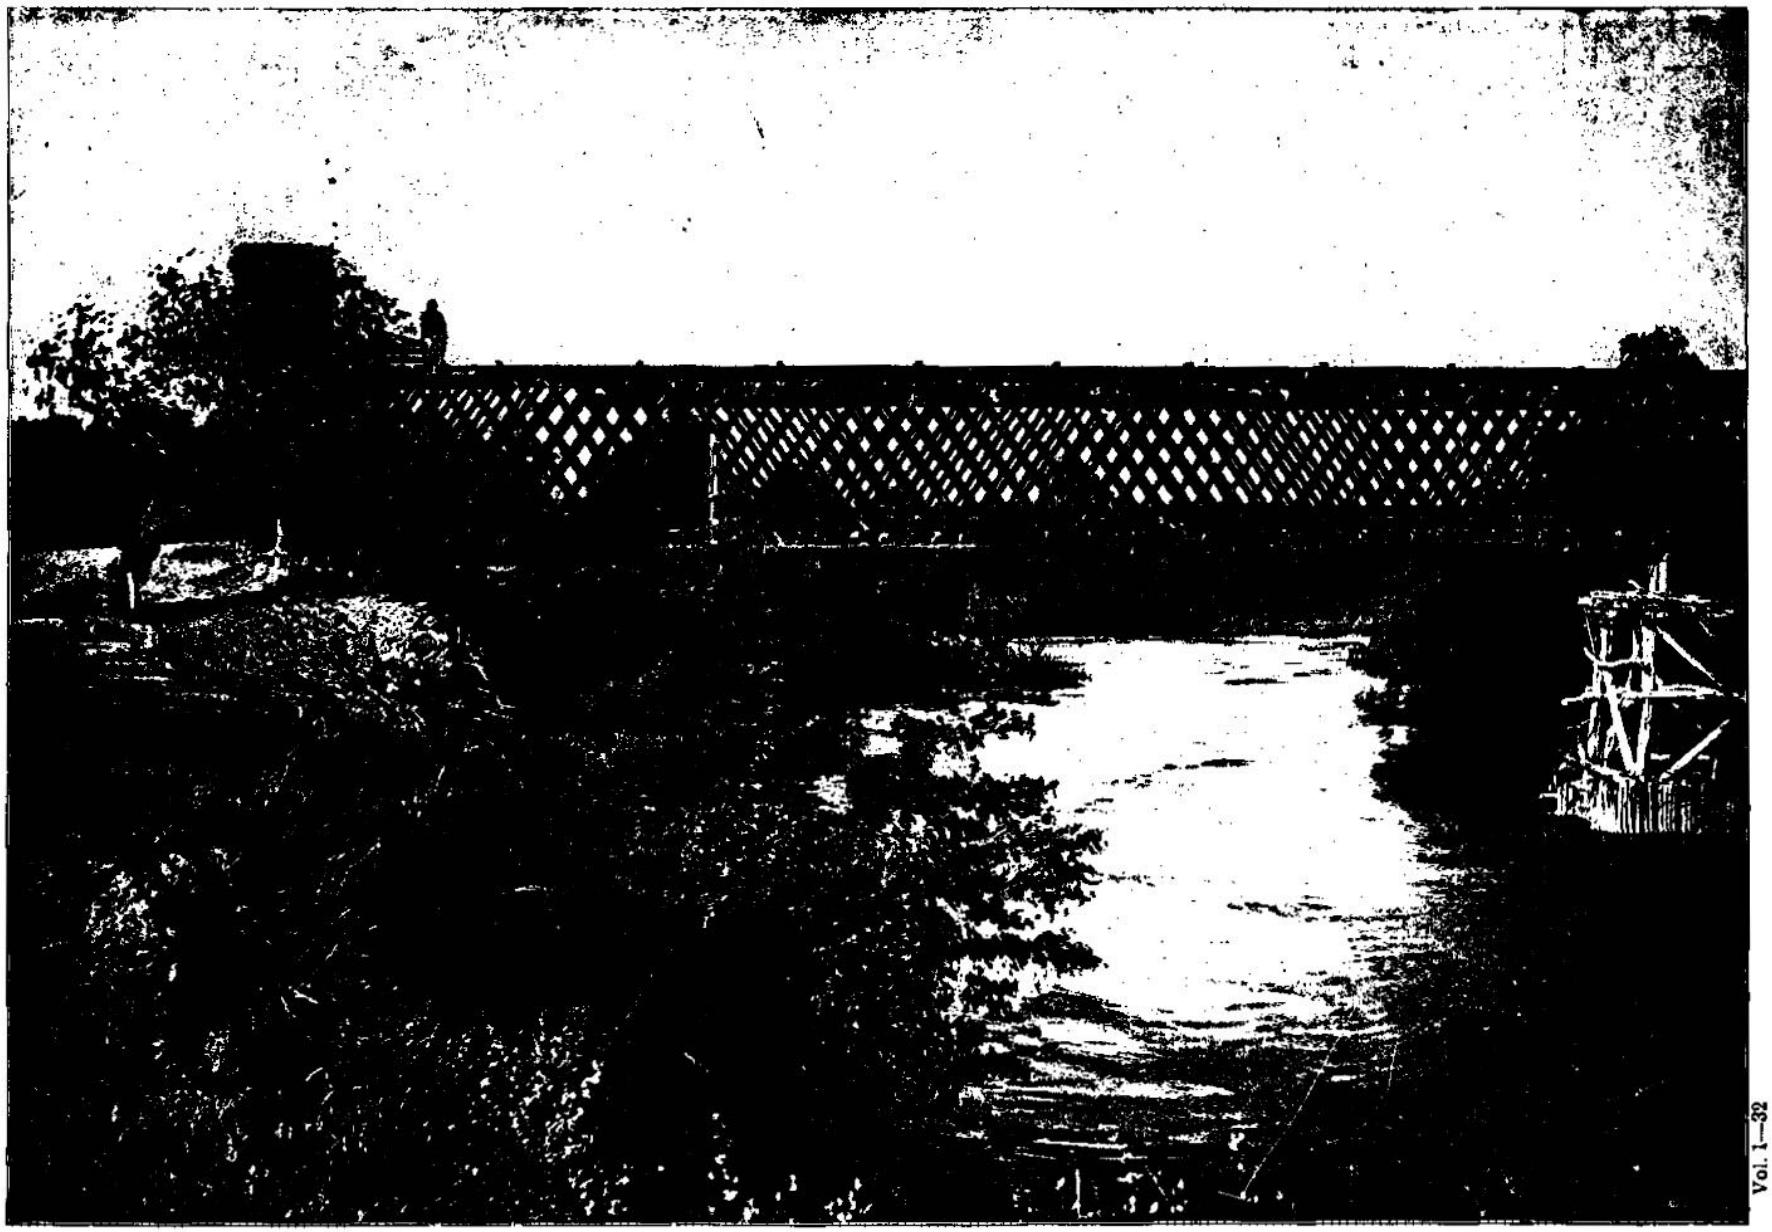
21 That your [u]days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth.

22 ¶ For [x]if ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you, to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him;

23 Then[y] will the LORD drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

24 Every[z] place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea, shall your coast be.[8]

25 There [a]shall no man be able to stand before you: for the LORD your God shall lay the fear of you, and the dread of you, upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, as he hath said unto you.



26 ¶ Behold, [b]I set before you this day a blessing and a curse;[9]

27 A[c] blessing, if ye obey the command-

parched soil, and prepared it for the sowing of the seed. The 'latter rain' of early spring brought the grain crops to maturity. The bright sun of summer ripened the grapes and other fruits. Thus were 'the eyes of the Lord always upon' the land. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Thus let my love to the LORD always work in holy obedience to all his commandments. Let the remembrance of his early kindness to me and mine, and his awful judgments on others around me, stir me up to the utmost circumspection in my conduct. God's mercies should leave an impression on us which neither time nor age should ever efface. And while sins shorten men's days, and cause countries to spue out their inhabitants, yea, often into ruin, let me carefully observe God's kindness, even in outward things. Mercies coming from the immediate hand of God are doubly sweet. Godliness hath the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come. But if we refuse to be influenced by God's mercies, we must sink under his judgments. When the heart is filled with the knowledge and love of God's word, the tongue will be as the pen of a ready writer in speaking of divine things. Let me, therefore, by all means, labour to fix a deep sense of spiritual things upon my own soul, and be careful to transmit the knowledge of them unto men: for true religion stamps a reverence on its professors, which keeps even their enemies in awe of them; and godliness, transmitted with our possessions, is the surest way to perpetuate them in our families. How plain and evident, in God's word, is the way to happiness and misery! And if men will not see, will not walk aright, their blood must be on their own head. Since, then, the blessings and curses

THE BRIDGE OVER THE JORDAN—NEAR WHERE THE JEWS SET UP IN DAN THE GOLDEN CALF. [DEUT., xi:31.]—"For ye shall pass over Jordan, to go in to possess the land which the Lord your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein." The particular bridge illustrated in the picture is over the Hasbany prong of the Jordan. It is called the Bridge of Jacob's Daughters. It is three miles from Dan, and on the direct road from Jerusalem to Damascus. The Jordan as we see it in the picture is very wild because of the deep gorge through which it dashes down. The banks on either side are lined with oleanders, willows, honey-suckles and other sweet and flowering shrubs. The noise of the water, and the charming scent of the flowers, together with the natural scene combine to make this place romantic and beautiful. The bridge is very old, and is assigned by tradition to the time of the Romans.

ments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day:

28 And a [d]curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known.

29 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt[e] put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal.[1]

30 Are they not on the [f]other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the[2] champaign [g]over against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh?[3]

31 For ye [h]shall pass over Jordan, to go in to possess the land which the LORD your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein.

32 And ye shall observe [i]to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Monuments of idolatry are to be destroyed. 4 The place of God's service is to be kept. 15, 23 Blood is forbidden. 17, 20, 26 Holy things must be eaten in the holy place. 19 The Levite is not to be forsaken. 29 Idolatrous practices are not to be inquired after.

THESE are the [a]statutes and judgments which ye shall observe to do [b]in the land which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, [c]all the days that ye live upon the earth.

2 Ye[d] shall utterly destroy all the places wherein the nations which ye shall possess[1] served their gods, upon the high [e]mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree.

3 And ye shall overthrow[2] their altars, and [o]break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images [f]of their gods, [f]and destroy the names of them out of that place.

4 ¶ Ye [g]shall not do so unto the LORD your God.[3]

5 But [h]unto the place which the LORD your God shall choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his [i]habitation[4] shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:

6 And [k]thither ye shall bring your burnt-offerings, and your sacrifices, and your tithes, and heave-offerings of your hand, and your vows, and your free-will-offerings, and the firstlings of your herds and of your flocks:

7 And there ye [l]shall eat before the LORD your God;[5] and ye [m]shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.

8 Ye shall [n]not do after all the things that we do here this day, every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes.

9 For ye are not as yet come to the rest [o]and to the inheritance which the LORD your God giveth you.[6]

10 But when ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the LORD your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that [p]ye dwell in safety;

11 Then there shall be [q]a place which the LORD your God shall choose to cause his name to dwell there: thither shall ye bring all that I command you; your burnt-offerings, and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave-offering of your hand, and all your choice[7] vows which ye vow unto the LORD.

12 And ye shall [r]rejoice before the LORD your God, ye, and your sons, and your daughters, and your men-servants, and your maid-servants, and the Levite that is within your gates; forasmuch as he hath [s]no part nor inheritance with you.

13 Take[t] heed to thyself, that thou offer not thy burnt-offerings in every place that thou seest:

14 But [u]in the place which the LORD shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee.

15 ¶ Notwithstanding thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee: [v]the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, as of the roe-buck, and as of the hart.

16 Only[v] ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

17 ¶ Thou[z] mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds, or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy free-will-offerings, or heave-offering of thine hand:

18 But[a] thou must eat them before the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD thy God

They are in sight from 2,000 to 2,800 ft., extending from east to west in lines near y parallel, with the beautiful valley of Shechem or Sychar, now called Nablous, about 900 paces between them. They are about a league in length, and approach in form to a semicircle. Mount Ebal to the north. Travellers have represented Mount Gerizim as more fertile and picturesque than Ebal, so that the two mountains in their natural aspect and condition were, in some degree, emblems of the blessing of fertility and beauty, and the curse of barrenness and deformity.—C.

It is reasoning as appears to be as follows:—Are they not beyond Jordan, that is, on its western side, in the direction in which the sun sets; are they not in the land of the Canaanites, who live in the Arabah facing Gilgal; are they not beside the terebinths, or plains of Moreh? The mention of the Arabah and Gilgal is connected with the territory of the Canaanites, and not with the situation of Ebal and Gerizim: while the last clause of the verse refers to the mountains, and has no connection with the Arabah or Gilgal. —P.

[4] The divine institutions of Moses all looked forward to a fixed place of worship, instead of the movable tabernacle constructed in the wilderness: and while they inculcated the worship of God in spirit everywhere — saying 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart'— yet certain outward acts of worship were strictly reserved for one place. This precaution was intended to guard against the inventions of will-worship and peril of idolatry, while it also typified the merging of all divine institutions into the one temple of the body of Christ, and the concentrating of all worshippers around his one sacrifice. [6] It seems that when the Israelites were in the wilderness, many of the ceremonial observances enjoined in the law were omitted. It was often matter of necessity to do so. There would no longer be any excuse or plea for them. —P.

Nor was this joy merely personal, but extended to all the household, embracing in its benevolence the Levite, the widow, the poor, and the stranger —Note, Family religion is an indispensable Christian duty, but to be efficient it must be united with that 'charity which is kind,' and instead of being exhibited in moroseness or austerity of aspect, manner, or government, should be conducted with that 'joy in the Holy Ghost' that 'adorns the gospel of God our Saviour,' and governs the household by the authority of love, rather than by the hand of power. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Abominable to God is all will-worship. And it is impossible to reconcile the worship of God and mammon—of Christ and Belial. But, in the best-ordered churches on earth, something will still be defective. Perfect purity is reserved for the heavenly Canaan: and therefore, in cases of necessity, some ordinances of worship may be omitted, which in other circumstances would render us highly culpable. The excellency of worship lies not in any pompous form, but in its exact correspondence with God's prescriptions. Let me then not merely cease from evil, but learn to do well. Let me attend to, and improve, every instituted ordinance of fellowship with God. Let his institutions, not any custom or law of men, whether under the best or the worst of governments, be the standard

28 Observe[l] and hear all these words which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the LORD thy God.

31 Thou[o] shalt not do so unto the LORD thy God: for every abomination[8] to the LORD which he hateth have they done unto their gods; for even their sons and their daughters they have [p]burnt in the fire to their gods.[9]

9 This horrible worship was notoriously practised by the Carthaginians, a people who had emigrated from Canaan. Christians can now scarcely imagine such combined folly and wickedness possible. of my religious observances. Let not only my solemn eating and drinking at his table, but even my ordinary refreshments, be conducted according to his prescriptions, and intended chiefly for his glory. And never should his ministers be straitened, or his poor starved, while I am able to relieve them.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 3. Proveth you. Our Lord informs us, Mat. 24. 24, that 'there shall arise false Christs and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that (if it were possible) they shall deceive the very elect.' And Josephus relates the fulfilment of this prophecy (Ant. xx. 7; Wars, ii. 13), when many impostors persuaded the people to follow them into the desert, promising to show them great signs and wonders in evidence of their commission; and again (Wars, vii. 11) he records the influence of one to entice the Jews to go up into the temple, which being set on fire, even contrary to the anxious wish of Titus, by one of his soldiers, 6000 perished in the flames. A sign or wonder requires three things to render it evidence of a divine commission: (1) Prophecy, in which we have the assertion of omniscience. (2) Fulfilment, in which we have the evidence of power. (3) Consistency with known and divinely established principles, in which we have the evidence of truth, which is uniform and necessarily accordant in all its parts. The first evidence might be imitated by great sagacity; the second, by extraordinary skill; and therefore the third is required, which never can be imitated by any impostor. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Provoking to God, and dangerous to men, is the sin of idolatry, with respect to the object or means of worship; yet sinners are much set upon it, and need to be held back by the greatest restraints. With what care, what zeal, what impartiality, ministers and magistrates ought therefore to oppose the very first appearance of it! No testimony, however strongly supported, is admissible against the revealed truths of God. No pretence of inspiration from God, no semblance of miracles, no tie of natural affection, ought to make us connive at the seducers. Though

8 Thou shalt [n]not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shalt thine eye [o]pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him;

9 But [p]thou shalt surely kill him: thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death,[3] and afterwards the hand of all the people.

10 And thou shalt [q]stone him with stones, that he die; because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.[4]

11 And [r]all Israel shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you.

12 ¶ If [s]thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the LORD thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying,

13 Certain men, [t]the children of Belial, are gone[u] out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known;

14 Then shalt thou [v]inquire, and make search, and[5] ask diligently: and, behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you;

15 Thou shalt surely [w]smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword.

16 And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shall burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the LORD thy God; and it shall be an heap for ever; it shall not be built again.

17 And there shall cleave nought of the cursed[x] thing to thine hand; [y]that the LORD may turn from the fierceness of his anger, and show thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers;[6]

18 When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

3 There is nothing more remarkable in the Mosaic institutions than the perfect publicity of trial in the court, the accuser and the witnesses. Such publicity is, far above all other devices, the best protection both of private safety and public liberty. Even where the cause is more the cause of God than of man, and where idolatry is the charge, the accuser can whisper nothing in the private ear of jealous and self-interested authority, the accused cannot be charged with a crime unknown to himself, and entrapped by examinations, or forced by torture to bear witness against himself. The accusation must be public; the court must be public; the witnesses must be two or more; they must be confronted with the accused, who must have agreed and, lastly, the accuser if the accused be found guilty must in this case become in his own person, one of the public executioners, thus committing his character in the openest manner to the truth of the charge alleged.—C.

6 Here again the excellence of the divine law is most apparent: nothing is to be taken on vague report, no encouragement is to be given to private spite or public jealousy, torture is held out to covetousness, but as the white city cannot be sued in court, there are perhaps too strong for the law, so long as their guilt is unproved; the authorities must (1) enquire: (2) make search: (3) ask diligently; and, if there remain the benefit of a doubt, the city must receive it; and, until the report be proved certain, no proceedings can be taken against them.—C.

2 Derived from a Greek word, intimating that the 'hinder part of the body is white.' The Arabic translators consider it a species of wild goat. Gesenius, deriving it from a word signifying to spring or bound, refers it to a species of gazelle or antelope.—C.

3 These animals are now specified for the first time, probably because the people were about to enter Canaan, where they abounded. In the desert most of them were not found, and consequently it was useless to name them when the law regarding clean and unclean beasts was first promulgated. The ox, 'bakar,' is perhaps a generic name for all animals of the antelope kind having twisted horns. Tzebi, 'the roe-buck,' is the ordinary gazelle, which is so common in the plains of Syria. Ya'alzarur, 'the fallow-deer,' is the oryx, a large species of antelope with long horns, twisted like a piece of rope. It abounds among the mountains of Arabia and Eastern Syria. I have seen some splendid specimens near Palmyra. Akko, 'wild goat,' is probably a species of gazelle, for the Hebrew name of wild goat is yael. See 1 Sa. 24. 2. Dishon, 'pygarg,' is the Oryx addax, a large antelope with long twisted horns. Te'o, 'wild ox,' is supposed to be the Nubian oryx, which is found in Arabia. Zemer, 'chamois,' is in all probability the wild sheep, formerly abundant in Southern Palestine, and still found on the borders of Egypt.—P.

4 The characters of unclean beasts, birds, and fishes, can be easily distinguished, but the species can seldom be more than conjectured. Such minute knowledge was unnecessary to the great ends of the law, and therefore is wisely withheld. The Scriptures do indeed possess everything that can excite curiosity and study, so far as they are useful. But whenever we approach the limits of mere arrangement and nomenclature, the Scriptures become silent.—C.

YE are[a] the children of the LORD your God. Ye[b] shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes for the dead:

2 For[c] thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God; and the LORD hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself, above all the nations that are upon the earth.

3 ¶ Thou[d] shalt not eat any abominable thing.

4 These[e] are the beasts which ye shall eat: The ox, the sheep, and the goat,

5 The hart, and the roe-buck, and the fallow-deer, and the wild goat, and the [1]pygarg,[2] and the wild ox, and the chamois.[3]

6 And [f]every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleft into two claws, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that ye shall eat.

7 Nevertheless [g]these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof; as the camel, and the hare, and the coney: for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you.

8 And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, nor touch their dead carcass.

9 ¶ These[h] ye shall eat of all that are in the waters; all that have fins and scales shall ye eat:

10 And [i]whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat; it is unclean unto you.

temptations be doubly bewitching which come through those whom we love, and hope of secrecy and security in sin is a great snare to lead men into it, yet let us remember, that to conceal or protect such criminals is to render ourselves partakers in their crimes. If they are become obstinate in their evil way, they ought no longer to be reckoned as conscientiously mistaken persons, but as children of Belial, who are perfectly lost to all manner of virtue, and become nuisances and plagues to both church and state. If their quality or multitude protect them from human justice, the justice of God will shortly find them out; for all that depart from him shall surely perish. But in our zeal for the pure worship of God, we must at once testify our detestation of idolatry or superstition, and plainly manifest that in our zeal we have no eye to promote our own carnal advantage. And whatever power magistrates may have from God to punish such evil-doers, for the preservation of the true religion where it is, they can show no warrant for the exertion of force in the propagation of it.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—If I am the Lord's—if by his love, his blood, through my faith, he hath saved me from the world—let me never affect conformity to the foolish, sinful, and barbarous customs of it. If God himself be my God and my ALL, let me never idolatrously mourn for the death of relations, as if I had nothing left, or had no hope. If my body be the temple of the Holy Ghost, bought with Jesus' blood, let me never disfigure or deform it. If I live on meat which cometh down from heaven, let me never dishonour my Provider and Portion by a base lusting after, or catching at, anything earthly and vile. Such as are not satisfied with the lawful gratifications which God allows them, will never be satisfied in the gratification of their lawless lusts. And though, under the gospel, I am not so restricted from the flesh of animals, yet I am no less restricted from intimacy and fellowship with unclean sinners, and their works of darkness and death. Here likewise I may learn, that there is need of frequent and diligent COURTYARD OF THE ENGLISH ORPHANAGE—NEAR THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY. [DEUT., xiv: 21.]—"And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the Lord thy God." All the sacrifices and offerings made to God in the Old Testament history of the church were types of the sinless One who was to come, and who was to bear in his own body the sins of the whole world. "For by one offering, He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."—Hebrews, x: 14. "But with the precious blood of Christ as of a lamb without blemish and without spot."—I. Peter, i: 19. "That he might present it to himself a glorious church not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy, and without blemish."—Eph., v: 27. We give as an illustration of this portion of Scripture a scene in Nazareth where the great offering without blemish, Jesus Christ, grew up.

22 ¶ Thou shalt [s]truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year.

23 ¶ And thou [t]shalt eat before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithe of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the firstlings of thy herds and of thy flocks; that thou mayest learn to fear the LORD thy God always.

28 ¶ At the end of three years thou [y]shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates:

29 And the Levite, (because [z]he hath no part nor inheritance with thee,) [a]and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; [b]that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hand which thou doest.[8]

[8] It appears from this command that the whole tithe produce of every third year, instead of being taken up to the sanctuary, and dedicated to God there, was to be collected in each town and village, and distributed among Levites, strangers, fatherless, and widows. To encourage the people to exercise this act of self-denial and charity, a special promise is attached to it in the last clause of ver. 29.—P.

CHAPTER XV.

1 The seventh year a year of release for the poor. 7 It must be no hindrance to lending or giving. 12 An Hebrew servant, 16 except he will not depart, must in the seventh year go forth free and well furnished. 19 All firstling males of the cattle are to be sanctified unto the Lord.

AT the end of [c]every seven years thou shalt make a release.

2 And this is the manner of the release: Every creditor that lendeth[1] ought unto his neighbour shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD's release.

3 Of[b] a foreigner thou mayest exact it again, but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release;

4 Save[2] when there shall be no poor among you;[3] for the LORD shall [c]greatly bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it:

5 Only[d] if thou carefully hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all these commandments which I command thee this day.

6 For the LORD thy God blesseth thee, as he promised thee: and [e]thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.[4]

7 ¶ If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates, in thy land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou [f]shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother;

8 But[g] thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.

9 Beware[h] that there be not a thought[5] in thy wicked[6] heart, saying, The seventh year, the assembling before God, to render us faithful in his service; that the ways of religion abound with joys and pleasures, and afford the surest grounds of thankfulness; and that there is the greatest advantage in kindness to God's ministers, the poor, the fatherless, and widows. Let him therefore demand what he will for his service out of my outward estate, and may I give it cheerfully and seasonably! God loveth a cheerful giver; and will supply all my need, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 1. Release. The intelligent Brown Patterson, in his note on this passage in the commentary of his revered relative, understands by release, a mere suspension of the demand for the current year. Le Clerc and Michaelis are of the same opinion, and Josephus must be understood as agreeing with them, as he mentions the extinction of debts every fiftieth year, and is silent about it on the seventh. From considering the whole passage to ver. 12, we are nevertheless convinced that this was another specimen of the Mosaic poor-laws, and that it required the entire extinction of all the money debts (but no others) of the absolutely poor. A law which, as an auxiliary to the other Mosaic poor-laws, we believe to be more preservative of good character in the poor, more exciting to benevolence in the rich, more encouraging to individual industry, and in the end more economical to the nation, than any other poor-law of mere human devising. C.]

Ver. 6. [Lend. The Jews, ever since the time of their dispersion, have been known in Europe as the most active money-agents; the very circumstance of their dispersion giving them means of intelligence and management which no other people possess; and by their power over the rates of exchange, and of giving or withholding credit to governments, they have largely influenced the destinies of many nations in whose counsels they never appeared. C.]

Ver. 8. [Lend. Ex. 22. 25 provided against the extortion of usury from the poor; the text enforces the duty of lending. Together they form an important branch of the Mosaic poor-laws, and an essential requisite in Christian character. C.]

Ver. 9. [Cry unto the Lord against thee. Not in the language of imprecation or curse against him who refuses to supply the idle or the profligate, but in the language of a suffering child, crying to its heavenly Father in its distress, and making known its wants to him who 'feeds the ravens when they cry,' and 'will not disregard the sighing of the needy.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In this year of release I behold the acceptable, the evangelical, and the eternal year of God's redeemed; in which we, infinite debtors to the law and justice of God, are justified from all things: and we, bond-sinners of mankind, are restored to our liberty, and enriched by his grace with blessings innumerable and everlasting. But let me think also how irreligious and inhumane is severity towards poor but honest debtors; it entails a curse upon our property. And it is base to make God's kindness to the poor an occasion of our unkindness to them. To refuse lending to them, if industrious, when we have God to be their surety, who will repay us with usury, is absurd: but especially it is dangerous to have their cry ascending to heaven against us. And often will it be found, what we call prudence, in withholding from them, is held extremely sinful and criminal before God. He knows and remarks every thought of our hearts; year of release, is at hand; and thine eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought, and he cry unto the LORD against thee, and it be [h]sin unto thee.

10 Thou shalt [k]surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.[7]

11 For the [l]poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, [m]Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.

12 ¶ And [n]if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years, then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee.

13 And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou [o]shalt not let him go away empty:

14 Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy floor, and out of thy wine-press: of that wherewith the LORD thy God hath blessed thee thou shalt give unto him.

15 And thou [p]shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee: therefore I command thee this thing to-day.

16 And it shall be, [q]if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee; (because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee;)

17 Then thou shalt take an awl, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant [r]for ever:[8] and also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise.[9]

18 It shall not seem [s]hard unto thee when thou sendest him away free from thee; for he hath been worth a [t]double hired servant to thee, in serving thee six years: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest.

19 ¶ All[u] the firstling males that come of thy herd, and of thy flock, thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work with the [x]firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep:

20 Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year, in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

21 And[y] if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the LORD thy God:

22 Thou shalt eat [z]it within thy gates; the unclean and the clean person shall eat it [1]alike as the roe-buck, and as the hart.

23 Only[a] thou shalt not eat the blood thereof; thou shalt pour it upon the ground as water.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The feast of the passover, 9 of weeks, 13 of tabernacles. 16 Every male must offer, as he is able, at these three feasts. 18 Of judges and justice. 21 Groves and images are forbidden.

OBSERVE the [a]month of Abib, and keep the passover unto the LORD thy God: for [b]in the month of Abib the LORD thy God brought thee forth out of Egypt by night.

2 Thou shalt therefore [c]sacrifice the passover unto the LORD thy God, of the flock and the herd, in the place which the LORD shall choose to place his name there.

3 Thou[d] shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, even the bread of affliction; (for [e]thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt in haste;) that thou mayest remember the day when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt all the days of thy life.

4 And[f] there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee in all thy coast seven days; [g]neither shall there any thing of the flesh, which thou sacrificedst the first day at even, remain all night until the morning.

5 Thou mayest not [h]sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee:

6 But at the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the passover [i]at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt.

7 And thou shalt [k]roast and eat it in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose; and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go unto thy tents.[1]

8 Six[l] days[2] thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly[3] to the LORD thy God; thou shalt do no work therein.

9 ¶ Seven[m] weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn.

10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with[4] a[n] tribute[5] of a free-will-offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee:

11 And thou [o]shalt rejoice before the LORD

It is an absolute for ever where no limitation exists, as when it is said, 'The Lord shall endure for ever,' Ps. 9. 7; or a relative for ever, where such limitation is either implied or declared.—K.

[9] This form of precedure was gone through under the cognizance of the magistrate, Ex. 21. 5, 6. Whatever was the meaning or origin of this practice, it was one common in the East, and is very frequently alluded to by ancient heathen writers. Some such regulations were of great importance both to the slave, to shew that there was on the one hand no claim to detain him beyond the period of release if he did not desire it, and on the other no pretence for turning him off when old or enfeebled, or unable to provide for himself. It appears from the passage that female servants were purchased for labour only as well as males, and that they were under the same regulation.—J.

[1] When the passover was first instituted, the lamb was ordered to be killed in each house, the blood sprinkled on the door-posts, and the flesh roasted and eaten within. Here a great change is made. They were expressly forbidden to kill the paschal lamb in their houses; the lambs were all to be taken to the tabernacle or temple, and killed there by the priests alone. It will be observed, too, that the killing of the lamb is here called a sacrifice, i.e. an animal slain and offered to God as an ex; iation for sin. So the apostle says, 'Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us.' The passover was one of the three great feasts which it was necessary for all adult males to observe in Jerusalem.—P.

and it is not so much the gift as the temper of the giver that he regards. Servants likewise ought to be treated with tenderness and kindness, especially if found faithful.—It is important to watch against every suggestion which may divert us from our duty, or discourage us in it.—But while in these firstlings I see Jesus, and all his redeemed, devoted to the honour of God, according to their respective purity and stations, let me think with what exactness everything belonging to the Lord ought to be used in his service in the very manner prescribed by himself.

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 21. Trees near unto the altar of the Lord. The famous Roman law of the twelve tables enjoined the planting and preservation of sacred groves—the law of God expressly and repeatedly denounces them, De. 12. 3. The reason of the difference is plain; heathenism sanctioned a system that not only legalized but attempted to sanctify impurity, by the character of its deities and the nature of their worship; nay, according to the testimony of Pliny (b. xii. c. 1), the heathen not only adored the images glittering with gold and silver, but the groves themselves, and their solemn silence. In a warm climate, the temptation to retire to shady groves being great, God proportions to that circumstance the frequency and speciality of their prohibition. C.]

12 And [p]thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt: and thou shalt observe and do these statutes.

13 ¶ Thou[q] shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine.[6]

14 And[r] thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates.[7]

15 Seven[s] days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD shall choose: because the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands; therefore thou shalt surely rejoice.

16 ¶ Three[t] times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose; in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and [u]they shall not appear before the LORD empty.

17 Every [x]man shall give as he is able,[8] according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee.[9]

18 ¶ Judges[y] and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates,[1] which the LORD thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgment.

19 Thou[z] shalt not wrest judgment: thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift: for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the words[2] of the righteous.

20 That[a] which is altogether just[3] shalt thou follow, that thou mayest live, and inherit the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

21 ¶ Thou shalt not plant thee [b]a grove of any trees near unto the altar of the LORD thy God, which thou shalt make thee.

3 The necessity of courts of appeal, and of final resort, has been discovered in all civilized countries; but in such courts of human institution much is left to the opinion of the judge, in cases of a novel form; and much to the influence of former decisions, without any very special regard to the principle upon which they were founded. The Mosaic supreme court differed from such courts chiefly in this: it allowed no latitude for the personal opinions or feelings of the judge; no influence to precedent, by whomsoever pronounced; but tied both the interpretation of the living judge and the influence of ancient precedent down to the letter and spirit of the divine law, ver. 11, as strictly as it bound the people to implicit obedience. —C.

4 Heb. not to hearken.

5 This passage has been confidently pleaded for the power assumed by the priests of Rome in matters of faith, and for the implicit obedience she exacts to her decrees. But the doctrinal power here allotted to the Jewish priests, ver. 9, 12, is not extended to any authoritative definitions or expositions in matters of doctrine or faith, but to civil cases, between plea and plea; cases of assault, between stroke and stroke; and cases of felony, between blood and blood. In fact, the Levitical priests were not merely the servants of the altar, but certain of them were the civil and criminal judges of the land; and, in this point of view, serve as no example to the Christian minister, who, like his Master, must say to all such secular offices and duties, "Who hath made me a divider over you?" blemish, or any evil-favouredness: for that is an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

2 ¶ If there be found among you, within any of thy gates which the LORD thy God giveth thee, [b]man or woman that hath wrought wickedness in the sight of the LORD thy God, in transgressing his covenant,

3 And hath gone and served other gods, and worshipped them, either [c]the sun, or moon, or any of the host of heaven, which I have not commanded;

4 And it be told thee, and thou hast heard of it, and [d]inquired diligently, and, behold, it be true, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought in Israel:

5 Then [e]shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, unto thy gates, even that man or that woman, and shalt stone them with stones till they die.

6 At[f] the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death.[2]

7 The[g] hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterward the hands of all the people: so thou shalt put the evil away from among you.

8 ¶ If[h] there arise a matter too hard for thee in judgment,[3] between blood and blood, between plea and plea, and between stroke and stroke, being matters of controversy within thy gates; then [i]shalt thou arise, and get thee up into the place which the LORD thy God shall choose;

9 And thou [k]shalt come unto the priests the Levites, and unto the judge that shall be in those days, and inquire; and they shall show thee the sentence of judgment.

10 And thou shalt do according to [l]the sentence which they of that place which the LORD shall choose shall show thee; and thou shalt observe to do according to all that they inform thee:

11 According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee, and according to the judgment which they shall tell thee, thou shalt do: thou shalt not decline from the sentence which they shall show thee, to the right hand, nor to the left.

12 ¶ And the man that [m]will do presumptuously, and will not hearken[4] unto the [5]priest that standeth to minister there before the LORD thy God, or unto the judge, even that man shall die: [n]and thou shalt put away the evil from Israel.

REFLECTIONS.—Is it not shameful, that even the most solemn ordinances of our fellowship with God should need to be so frequently inculcated upon us? But since Jesus, our passover, hath been sacrificed for us, and our pentecost, the effusion of the Holy Ghost by an ascended Saviour, is fully come, and the tabernacle of God is in manhood, and is with men upon earth; with holy joy and gladness let us, and others instigated by us, observe our solemn feasts, and keep our eyes always fixed upon the Lamb of God. And while we ourselves are comforted of Christ, let us remember that it is both honourable and godlike to follow his example, and to manifest a tender regard to the poor and afflicted. Let us observe likewise, that magistrates are necessary for the regulation of mankind: and should be so placed that people may have easy access to them; and it is becoming that, in all their ministration, they show themselves of proper abilities

18 And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously.

14 ¶ When[o] thou art come unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, [p]I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me;

15 Thou [q]shalt in any wise set him king over thee whom the LORD thy God shall choose: one from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee: thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy brother.

16 But he shall not [r]multiply horses[6] to himself, nor cause the people to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as the LORD hath said unto you, [s]Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.

17 Neither shall he [t]multiply wives to himself, that his heart turn not away; neither shall he [u]greatly multiply to himself silver and gold.

18 And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of [v]this law in a book, out of that which is before the priests the Levites:

19 And [w]it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life; that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law, and these statutes, to do them:

20 That [x]his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left; to[a] the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he and his children, in the midst of Israel.[7]

6 This prohibition is founded upon principles natural and moral. (1) Canaan was a land of mountains and defiles, and unfit either for the rearing of horses or the use of cavalry. (2) God seeks to prevent intercourse with Egypt, which was anciently famous for horses. (3) He would restrain the spirit of conquest, which, in eastern countries, has been chiefly fostered by the possession of a numerous cavalry. (4) He would repress that spirit of extravagance and gambling—though the world calls them by gentler names—which is generated, especially among the rich, by the competition of horses: and which, in all countries where it has been fostered, has resulted in the dissolution of the manners of all ranks.—C.

7 The law here referred to, which the king was to copy, or have copied, for his private use and guidance, unquestionably signifies the Pentateuch—the whole of it as it was preserved in the keeping of the priests. What a noble lesson this is for the kings and rulers of the earth! The law of God should be their constant study; their guide in the management of public affairs; their rule of life in private.—P.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 The Lord is the priests' and Levites' inheritance. 3 The priest's due. 6 The Levite's portion. 9 The abominations of the nations are to be avoided. 15 Christ the prophet is to be heard. 20 The presumptuous prophet is to die.

THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, [a]shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance.

2 Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren; [b]the LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

3 ¶ And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a [c]sacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep; and they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw.

4 The[d] first-fruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give him.

5 For the LORD thy God hath [e]chosen him out of all thy tribes, to stand to minister in the name of the LORD, him and his sons for ever.

6 ¶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel, where he sojourned, and come [f]with all the desire of his mind unto the place which the LORD shall choose;

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, [g]as all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD.

8 They shall have like portions to eat, [h]besides that which cometh of the sale of his [1]patrimony.

and remarkable integrity. But dangerous is it, in the worship of God, to copy after the example of wicked and idolatrous men; his worship is pure and spiritual; he regards not the external appearance; but they who worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 12. At first sight this seems a hard law, and even cruel, that the person who should object to or fail to carry out the sentence of priest or judge in any civil case should be put to death. It would have been both unjust and cruel had the priest been a mere temporal ruler; but he was the commissioned minister of God, and it is implied here that in cases of great difficulty and delicacy, such as those referred to, he should ask counsel of God. God, therefore, was the real judge in the case; and a refusal to submit to his judgment was treason against heaven. P.]

Ver. 14. [I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me. Moses, foreseeing by the prophetic spirit that the tide in popular opinion would one day turn in favour of monarchy, so far from pronouncing any authoritative opinion concerning theoretical forms of government, addresses himself, by divine direction, to propound the true maxims and principles of all government. And when the period foreseen by Moses arrived, and the people demanded a king, 1 Sa. viii., the displeasure of Samuel neither arose from any sense of wounded pride or disappointed ambition, nor from any abstract objection to the kingly form of government, but from the self-will and practical atheism of the people, who never thought of consulting God upon so great an organic change, though Samuel was with them with Urim and Thummim. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—We ought to honour the Lord with the best that we have—the best of our time and abilities, the best of our age and strength. But apostasy from the true religion to the worship of idols is extremely wicked and ruinous. It is necessary that the execution of malefactors be as public and solemn as possible, that others may hear and fear. But, in matters of life and death, nothing less than the clearest evidence should be admitted. Great care must be taken at once to maintain the just rights of subjects and the lawful authority of magistrates: and we must obey, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake. To rebel against the lawful orders of government is to commit treason against the majesty of heaven. But, in order to secure respect to their government, magistrates ought to be deliberately set up: they ought to avoid whatever gratifies their lust or tends to corrupt them. God's word should be the supreme standard of their determinations. Piety, prudence, humble condescension, and equity should run through the whole of their conduct. No day should pass without reading of God's word. The fear of God powerfully induces to an obedience to his commands. And the higher our station is, the more exemplary and humble our conversation ought to be. Religion is the best security of thrones, and every other honour: and even in this world there is a great reward in keeping God's commandments.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 3. And the two cheeks and the maw. There is a difference between the Levitical portion here described, and that in Le. 7. 3. The reason of the difference seems to be, that the direction in Leviticus referred to the temporary allowance in the wilderness, that of the text to the permanent provision in Canaan; see De. 12. 1. C.——Delitzsch says, 'That this arrangement was not at variance with the command in Le. 7. 32, sq., but simply enjoins a further gift to the priests on the part of the people, in addition to those portions which were to be given to the Lord for his servants, is sufficiently evident from the context, since the heave-leg and wave-breast belonged to the offerings of Jehovah mentioned in ver. 1, which the priests had received as an inheritance from the Lord; . . . and also from the words of the present command, viz. that the portions mentioned were to be a right on the part of the people, on the part of those who slaughtered slain-offerings. P.]

Ver. 10. [Divination. This appears to be a general name for all the particular forms that follow, viz.—Observer of times. Some derive it from a word signifying a cloud; others, amongst whom is Gesenius, from a word signifying an eye. This is the most probable meaning, and includes every form of threatened injury to person or property from what is called an evil eye.—An enchanter. A pretended diviner by serpents, or the positions and movements of other animals.—A witch. One who resorts to charms, &c., for the injury of another.—A charmer. Most probably those who pretended to charm serpents, and produce strange effects by rhymes and incantations.—Consulter with familiar spirits. According to the Hebrew, a consulter with Ob. Thus, the Pythoness at Delphi, in Greece, pretended to be inspired by Apollo.—Wizard. 'A cunning man,' one who pretended to know secret things, past, present, or future.—Necromancer. One who pretended to consult or raise the dead, as the word signifies. —All these pretended arts are the products of ignorance, the nurses of superstition, and the forerunners and abettors of idolatry, and therefore most righteously condemned of God. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Since God hath provided subsistence for ministers, they ought never willingly to entangle themselves in worldly business—farming, merchandise, or the like: for those who love God's ordinances as they ought, will not grudge to contribute to their support. None ought to supplant another with respect to what the Lord hath allotted him. But a worldly-minded minister is a SCANDAL to his profession —a LIVING LIE! God, indeed, most highly regards such ministers as leave their worldly all, and follow him, and do more in the church than men could desire of them. But it is shocking to find in countries privileged with gospel light, affecters of fellowship with devils, in charms, fortune-telling, witchcraft, and the like! and what a mercy it is if God has preserved us

INSCRIPTION ON BRIDGE, GRAND MOSQUE, DAMASCUS—WHERE ST. PAUL WAS CONVERTED. [DEUT., xviii: 15-19.]—"The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken." The prophet referred to in this verse is the Lord Jesus Christ. He was the one who was to come in the fullness of time, who, according to Isaiah, was to be called the Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, and who was to sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice from henceforth even forever. How strange that upon the Grand Mosque in Damascus we should find written in Greek on the bridge: "Thy kingdom, O Christ, is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations." The Grand Mosque, an illustration of which we give above, is the most famous place of Mahommedan worship in Damascus.

9 ¶ When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations.

10 There [a]shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch,

11 Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer.

12 For[k] all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee.

13 Thou shalt be [b]perfect with the LORD thy God.

14 For these nations, which thou shalt possess,[2] hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners: but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath [m]not suffered thee so to do.

15 ¶ The[n] LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, [c]like unto me; unto [p]him ye shall hearken;

16 According to all that thou desiredst of the LORD thy God in Horeb, in the day of the assembly, saying, [q]Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not.

17 And the LORD said unto me, [r]They have well spoken that which they have spoken.

18 I[s] will raise them up a Prophet[3] from among their brethren, like unto thee, and [t]will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.[4]

19 And it shall come to pass, that [u]whosoever will not hearken unto my words, which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.

20 ¶ But the prophet [x]which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or [y]that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall[z] die.

21 ¶ And [a]if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken?

22 When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, [b]if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 The cities of refuge. 4 The privilege thereof for the man-slayer. 14 The landmark is not to be removed. 15 Two witnesses at the least to prove a fact. 16 The punishment of a false witness.

WHEN the LORD thy God [a]hath cut off the nations, whose land the LORD thy God giveth thee, and thou succeedest[1] them, and dwellest in their cities, and in their houses;

2 Thou[b] shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land,[2] which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way,[3] and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that [c]every slayer may flee thither.

4 ¶ And this is the case of the slayer which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not in time past;[4]

5 As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the axe to cut down the tree, and the head[5] slippeth from the [6]helve, and lighteth[7] upon his neighbour, that he die; [d]he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live:

6 Lest the [e]avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and slay him;[8] whereas he was [f]not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not in time past.[9]

7 Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

8 And if the LORD thy God [g]enlarge thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers:

9 If[h] thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the LORD thy God, and to walk ever in his ways; then shalt thou add[1] three cities more for thee, besides these three:[2]

10 That[i] innocent blood be not shed in thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

11 ¶ But [k]if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him[3] mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities;

12 Then the elders of his city shall send [l]and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die.

13 Thine[m] eye shall not pity him; but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee.

14 ¶ Thou[n] shalt not remove thy neighbour's land-mark,[4] which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

15 ¶ One[o] witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any

3 In place of all those imaginary and vain attempts to dive into futurity, or ascertain present duty, Moses promises a Prophet like to himself. This passage the ancient Jews always expounded of Messiah; and so it is applied, Ac. 3. 22; 7. 37. See also Jn 1.45; 6.14. The points of resemblance are many—especially, early persecution—rejection by brethren—divine commission—familiarity with God—miracles—faithfulness—above all, the office of Mediator, as Prophet, Priest, and King—&c.

4 It will scarcely be denied by any thoughtful critic, who closely examines the connection of this remarkable passage with the context, that the prophecy was intended to refer to prophets in general. The Israelites were commanded not to attend to the unrighteous to enchanters, wizards, &c.; and to show that such a course was unnecessary as well as impious, the promise is given them, 'The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet,' &c. If we restrict the reference exclusively to the Messiah, then the connection with the context is broken, and the force of the passage in a great measure destroyed. But while this is the case, it must be remembered that all the prophets were types of Christ; the prophecy was fulfilled in them, not in their personal, but in their typical character. It received, however, its final and complete fulfilment only in Christ, the great Antitype.—P

1 Whether these last three were ever added is uncertain.

2 The Israelites did not keep all God's commandments. They did not love God; on the contrary, they were guilty of repeated and gross acts of rebellion. Consequently 'all the land promised' to Abraham (Ge. 15. 18) was not given to them. The portion allotted to the tribes—from Dan to Beersheba—was only a fragment of the 'Land of Promise,' which extended from the Nile to the Euphrates. It does not appear, therefore, that the three additional cities of refuge were ever required.—P.

4 In a country where walls, hedges, and other such fences were, and still are, entirely unknown, except around gardens and orchards, and sometimes vineyards, the preservation of landmarks was a matter of no slight importance. A law forbidding their removal, and admission of their antiquity, intimate that they must have been generally stones, and of no great size. Covetousness is one of the first general forms of sin: for it was a constituent of the original transgression—and, covetousness of land more than covetousness of money, or any other specific form of this sin, has been the enemy of private peace, and the scourge of kingdoms. God, accordingly, prohibits this sin, by sanctioning the prescriptive usages of antiquity, and asserting his own original gift of the land to Abraham and his descendants.—C.

from these abominations! But, O! infinite grace! in order to destroy the work, and deliver us from the delusions of the devil, God raises up his Son, a prophet, who knows the whole mind of God, and who reveals a complete system of worship! Blessed are those who hear his voice; and infinite is the hazard and ruin of such as refuse to regard him! But since seducers arise in the church of God, it is necessary to try all, and to censure and punish such as are found notorious impostors.

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—While in

SIDE ALTAR, LATIN CHURCH, NAZARETH—SUPPOSED TO STAND OVER THE SITE OF JOSEPH'S HOME, IN WHICH JESUS GREW UP. [DEUT., xix.]—The 19th chapter of Deuteronomy speaks of the laws concerning the cities of refuge. We give as an illustration of this portion of Deuteronomy the side altar of the Latin church at Nazareth. This church stands in the city of our Savior's boyhood, and is said to be built on the site of the house in which with His parents He lived. The cities of refuge in a very important sense were all types of Christ. Christ is the great city of refu and all are safe who flee from their sins to Him, and none are s who are away from Him. The penitent one who has fled to Christ refuge may sing:

"Should storms of seven-fold thunder roll,
And shake the globe from pole to pole,
No flaming bolt shall daunt my face,
For Jesus is my hiding place."

sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.

16 ¶ If a false witness rise up against any man, to testify against him that which is wrong;[5]

17 Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand [p]before the LORD,[6] before the priests and the judges which shall be in those days:

18 And the judges shall [q]make diligent inquisition: and, behold, if the witness be a false witness,[7] and hath testified falsely against his brother;

19 Then[r] shall ye do unto him as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so shalt thou put the evil away from among you.

20 And those which remain shall [s]hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you.

21 And thine eye shall not pity; but [t]life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

CHAPTER XX.

1 The priest's exhortation to encourage the people to battle. 5 The officers' proclamation who are to be dismissed from the war. 10 How to use the cities that accept or refuse the proclamation of peace. 16 What cities must be devoted. 19 Trees for man's meat must not be destroyed in the siege.

WHEN thou [a]goest out to battle against thine enemies, and seest horses and chariots, and a people more than thou, [b]be not afraid of them; for the LORD thy God is with thee, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

2 And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the [c]priest shall approach and speak unto the people,

3 And shall say unto them, Hear, O Israel; Ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts faint;[1] fear not, and do not [2]tremble, [3]neither be ye terrified because of them:

4 For the LORD your God is he that goeth with you, to fight for you against your enemies, to save you.

5 ¶ And the [d]officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not [e]dedicated it? let him go and return to his house, lest he [g]die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

6 And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet [h]eaten of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it.

7 And[i] what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her.

8 And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, [k]What man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart faint[4] as well as his heart.

9 And it shall be, when the officers have made an end of speaking unto the people, that they shall make[5] captains of the armies [l]to lead the people.

10 ¶ When thou comest nigh unto [m]a city to fight against it, then [n]proclaim peace unto it.

11 And it shall be, if it make thee answer of peace, and open unto thee, then it shall be, that all the people that is found therein shall be [o]tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee.

12 And if it will [p]make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee,[6] then thou shalt besiege it:

13 And when the [q]LORD thy God hath delivered it into thine hands, thou shalt smite every male thereof with the edge of the sword:

14 But the women, and the little ones, and [r]the cattle, and all that is in the city, even all the spoil thereof, shalt thou take[7] unto thyself; and thou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

15 Thus shalt thou do unto all the [s]cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the cities of these nations.

16 ¶ But [t]of the cities of these people, which the LORD thy God doth give thee for an inheritance, thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth:[9]

17 But thou shalt utterly destroy them: namely, the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee:

18 That they [u]teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods; so should ye sin against the LORD your God.[1]

19 ¶ When thou shalt besiege a city a [z]long time, in making war against it to take it, thou

[6] Suits at law frequently originate from dishonesty, from covetousness or from a contentious and revengeful spirit. But such is the obscurity of rights, and the uncertainty of evidence, that they may originate where both parties are honest, disinterested, and peaceable. The only case in which a Christian may go to law in defence of his rights is when he can 'stand before the Lord,' and refer to his examination and decision both the justice of his cause and the purity of his motives.—C.

[7] On few points is modern jurisprudence more defective, and by consequence more injurious to the cause of truth and justice, than in the case of false witness or perjury.—In fact so difficult, so problematical, if not impossible, is conviction, that a false witness is seldom prosecuted in a European Christian court of law. The Mosaic jurisprudence proceeded on a different principle, and pointed its judgment, not against constructive malice, but against simple intentional falsehood, and required no second prosecution, but proceeded at once to convict upon the review of the evidence on record. Were Christian legislators have yet much to learn from Moses in whose inspired laws, eternal moral principle, and not temporary expediency, constitutes the rule of procedure and decision.—C.

[6] The Mosaic institutes were decidedly opposed to wars of aggression and the spirit of foreign conquest and acquisition. A single example will establish this fact:—'Three times a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord God,' Ex. 23.17. A people so organized could never become aggressively warlike. The text, however, admits that there might be wars beyond the borders of Canaan, but provides only for cases where enemies will not make peace, and where, consequently, safety is best and soonest secured by seeking the enemy in his own country. these cities of refuge I again view a crucified Redeemer, as my near and all-sufficient protection, and his ministers as assisting and directing me in my flight to it, plain and open is my way to it, and my warrant to enter. Yet so great is our ignorance, our unconcern, our unbelief, that we need many and repeated descriptions of him, and encouragements to flee to him; and God graciously affords them in his word. Happy are they who embrace the promise! But desperate is their case who sin presumptuously, and refuse this great salvation! Nay, how criminal, in God's sight, must wilful murder be, when nothing less than the blood of the offender can be admitted as the punishment of it! Everything that marks out and ascertains men's property should be exactly preserved, that so disputes and unjust evasions may be prevented: and witnesses should be examined in the courts of judicature with accuracy and care, that none may suffer unjustly through false witnessing, and none that dare to bear false witness may escape condign punishment.

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—While we remark how carefully piety towards God, tenderness towards others, and prudence towards ourselves, should be carried into war itself, let us ponder how necessary it is that armies and churches should be furnished with faithful ministers to encourage them in the Lord their God! Hopeful is the most difficult work when we are assured of God's presence in it, and encouraged with the former experience of what he hath done for us! Then we can triumph, in hopes of being more than conquerors through him that loved us. But there is little hope of men's prospering in their duty when their affections are engaged elsewhere: and therefore carnal worldlings, who are intoxicated with pleasure in temporal enjoyments, or the fearful and unbelieving, are unfit to fight with principalities and powers. God must be served heartily and willingly, or not at all. And though every saint ought to be courageous, yet ministers, who go before the host in fighting the Lord's battles, need distinguished boldness. Amazing is the mercy and long-suffering of God; he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance! And surely then we ought to be forward in accepting, or even offering, terms of peace to such as have offended us! But dreadful is the case if men will not hear the calls of God's mercy, or if the preservation of his people make it necessary to ruin them: for infallibly certain is the success of those enterprises in which God is the director! It is necessary to remove all occasions and temptations to idolatry, or other wickedness, and to preserve every means of comfort, as God pleases to direct us.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 18. A stubborn and rebellious son. This provides for an extreme case of filial rebellion; for nothing but an extreme case could ever induce both a father and mother deliberately to accuse and witness against their own child. The sentence of death against drunkenness and gluttony, ver. 20, 21, may, to the modern inventors of fine and imprisonment, appear unreasonably, or even inhumanly, severe. But, let it be remembered, the sentence could not be inflicted, unless in the scarcely supposable case in which a father and mother were the hapless accusers; and then let it be remembered, that this was the sentence of him 'who knew what was in man,' and who never applied the judgment of severity till the remedies of mercy had been found unavailing; and whose judgments of severity were, in the end, the most merciful to the individual whom they sought to intimidate and deter from sin; and to society, whom they relieved from a nuisance, an infection, and a curse. O! that drunkards and gluttons would read first this sentence, and then sentences ten thousand times more awful, 1 Co. 6. 10 and Phi. 3. 19. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Murder ought by all means to be rendered as horrible and detested as possible: and every mean should be used to discover and bring murderers to condign punishment, and to avoid being partakers with other men in their sins; but, at the same time, no selfish affection ought to be regarded either in the giving or executing justice. However secretly sin be committed, God will discover and punish it at last: and if we cannot put away sin from our land, let us labour to pray it away.—Converts from idolatry ought not too rashly to be admitted into close connection with us: and before we take a partner for life, it is of infinite moment that we agree in religion.—Sudden passions ought to be restrained, till grace be given, and time taken for reflection: and we should labour to wean our affections from that which we inordinately love.—Kindness ought to be shown to such as God has mercifully reduced to misery and trouble; and indulgence be allowed to sorrows which flow from natural affection.—Our engagements ought never to be rashly formed, lest our honour or conscience be afterwards wounded by them; and such as have been anyways wronged by us are entitled to all possible satisfaction. But surely still greater regard ought to be shown to human souls, and care taken to prevent men's everlasting infamy and woe. But in these figures let me behold Jesus, the seed of the woman, brought down to our world, and slain by the rulers of Israel as a sacrifice for our awful crimes!—Jesus reserving

PLOWING ON SCOPUS—IN SIGHT OF THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS CRUCIFIED. [DEUT., xxi: 22.]—"And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree." We give this view of plowing on Scopus because it is in sight of the Mount Calvary, outside of the walls of Jerusalem, where the leading authorities now believe Christ was crucified. Scopus is a hill to the north of Jerusalem, and in reaching it from the Damascus gate we go directly by the Place of a Skull, where in all probability Christ was crucified. To be put to death on a tree was the most ignominious manner of death known among the Jews. None but the vilest criminals were subjected to such disgrace. So Peter knew how the Jews would regard his words when he said: "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus whom ye slew and hanged on a tree."

19 Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out [x]unto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place;

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice; [z]he is a glutton and a drunkard.

21 And [a]all the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die: so [b]shalt thou put evil away from among you; and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

22 ¶ And if a man have committed a sin worthy[a] of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou [c]hang him on a tree,

23 His body shall not [d]remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day; (for [e]he that is hanged is accursed[2] of God;) that [f]thy land be not defiled, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Of humanity toward brethren. 5 The sex is to be distinguished by apparel. 6 The dam is not to be taken with her young ones. 8 Every house must have battlements. 9 Confusion is to be avoided. 12 Fringes upon the vesture. 13 The punishment of him that slandereth his wife. 22 Of adultery, 25 of rape, 28 and of fornication. 30 Incest.

THOU [g]shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray,[1] and hide thyself from them; thou shalt in any case bring them again unto thy brother.

2 And if thy brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not,[2] then thou shalt bring it unto thine own house, and it shall be with thee until thy brother seek after it, and thou shalt restore it to him again.

3 In like manner shalt thou do with his ass, and so shalt thou do with his raiment; and with all lost thing of thy brother's, which he hath lost, and thou hast found, shalt thou do likewise: thou mayest not hide thyself.

4 Thou [h]shalt not see thy brother's ass or his ox fall down by the way, and hide thyself from them; thou shalt surely help him to lift them up again.

5 ¶ The [i]woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment:[3] for all that do so are abomination unto the LORD thy God.

6 ¶ If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, thou[4] shalt not take the dam with the young:

7 But thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee; that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days.[4]

1 This law, so benevolent in every state of society, was peculiarly important in a country unenclosed, and where the straying of animals would be proportionately frequent and dangerous. The laws of man's devising, in case of straying animals, bind to restitution or justice: human laws, in some other instances, reward humanity with honour or emolument; the divine laws alone bind to humanity and benevolence on the ground of principle, and that without fee or reward beyond the approbation of conscience and the will of our God.—C.

2 That is, if you find the animal straying, and if you not know to whom it belongs, it is your duty to keep it safe until the owner comes to seek it.—P.

3 Minute legislation, when confined to detail, is always, in the end, perplexing and insufficient, and is the chief both of the marks and miseries of human laws—ever generating doubtful definitions, opening new doors for evasion, and ministering to the spirit of litigiousness. When, as in the text, the laws of Moses descend to minuteness, it is the minuteness of principle, and not of detail; and in this they manifest a legislative wisdom which should prove to every pious casuist that their origin was from God. This law provided for propriety and modesty, in a climate where male and female dresses approached near to each other in character, and guarded against the licentiousness of idolatry to which the interchange of male and female attire greatly contributed.—C.

4 Maternal affection renders most birds easily caught during incubation, or while the brood is very young. This law may therefore be considered [1] As a sacrifice of respect to maternal affection wherever found. [2] As an inculcation of humanity to the inferior creatures. [3] As a guard against the extirpation of birds, which are providentially appointed as checks upon the overgrowth of various insects.—C.

5 Eastern roofs are generally flat, and, in common houses, merely clay smoothed with a roller—a battlement was therefore a necessary defence against falling, the more requisite because the climate frequently invited to sit, eat, and even sleep, on the roof, and in the open air.—C.

6 During my residence in the East I knew several cases of serious and fatal accidents by falling from the roofs of houses. Not less than one half of the inhabitants of Palestine sleep on the flat roofs during the warm summer nights. To have them without battlements or railings would expose the children especially to constant danger.—P.

4 This law (ver. 13-21), like many others, was intended to prevent wickedness by the fear of detection and punishment. The dread of a future discovery, productive of such tremendous consequences, could not fail to increase the natural barriers of chastity, and counteract the effects of sinful passions and strong temptations among the young women of Israel. And it would also prevent a hard-hearted husband from robbing his injured wife of her reputation, when his affections were transferred to another object.—Scott.

10 ¶ Thou shalt not plow with [m]an ox and an ass together.

11 ¶ Thou[k] shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts, as of woollen and linen together.[9]

12 ¶ Thou shalt make thee [l]fringes[1] upon the four quarters[2] of thy vesture, wherewith thou coverest thyself.

13 ¶ If any man [k]take a wife, and go in unto[3] her, and hate her,

14 And give occasions of speech against her, and bring up an evil name upon her, and say, I took this woman, and when I came to her, I found her not a maid:

15 Then shall the father of the damsel, and her mother, take and bring forth the tokens of the damsel's virginity unto the elders of the city in the gate:

16 And the damsel's father shall say unto the elders, I gave my daughter unto this man to wife, and he hateth her;

17 And, lo, he hath given occasions of speech against her, saying, I found not thy daughter a maid; and yet these are the tokens of my daughter's virginity. And they shall spread the cloth before the elders of the city.

18 And the elders of that city shall take that man and chastise him;

19 And they shall amerce him in an hundred shekels of silver,[3] and give them unto the father of the damsel, because he hath brought up an evil name upon a virgin of Israel, and she shall be his wife: he [k]may not put her away all his days.

24 Then[r] ye shall bring them both out unto the gate of that city, and ye shall stone them with stones that they die; the damsel, because she cried not, being in the city; and the man, because he hath humbled his neighbour's wife: so[s] thou shalt put away evil from among you.

25 ¶ But if a man find a betrothed damsel in the field, and the man [t]force her, and lie with her; then the man only that lay with her shall die:

26 But unto the damsel thou shalt do nothing; there is in the damsel no sin worthy of death: for as when a man riseth against his neighbour, and slayeth him, even so is this matter:

27 For he found her in the field, and the betrothed damsel [u]cried, and there was none to save her.

28 ¶ If[x] a man find a damsel that is a virgin, which is not betrothed, and lay hold on her, and lie with her, and they be found;

The importance of this law to health and decency is apparent. to remember and observe them. In what detestation God holds slanderers, whoremongers, adulterers, and unclean persons! Let them then be detestable among all Christians, especially in my heart. Let me be ever ready for friendly offices towards my neighbour. Let me never retain anything of his that came secretly into my hands. Let it be my care to please God in my apparel: for indecency in dress is not the less sinful because it is fashionable. And while I regard the life of my neighbour, let me shun every unhallowed mixture of works with grace, of nature with the Spirit of God, of my own righteousness with that of Jesus Christ: but never be ashamed to wear the distinguished badge of a true Christian. Let me reckon chastity a very precious jewel; and yet a tender plant that can easily be blasted; and the loss of which is very infamous and sinful. Always let me use every mean of resisting temptation, and particularly crying to Jesus for relief. 3 And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and giveth it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife;

4 Her[c] former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before the LORD: and thou shalt not [d]cause the land to sin, [e]which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

5 ¶ When[f] a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business,[4] but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

6 ¶ No[g] man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge: for he taketh a man's [h]life to pledge.

7 ¶ If[i] a man be found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel, and maketh merchandise of him, or selleth him; then that thief shall die: and thou shalt put evil away from among you.[5]

8 ¶ Take[k] heed in the plague of leprosy, that thou observe diligently, and do according to all that the priests the Levites shall teach you; as I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do.

9 ¶ Remember[l] what the LORD thy God did unto Miriam by the way, after that ye were come forth out of Egypt.

10 ¶ When thou dost lend[6] thy brother any thing, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge.

11 Thou shalt stand abroad, and the man to whom thou dost lend shall bring out the pledge abroad unto thee.

12 And if the man be poor, thou shalt not sleep with his pledge:

13 In[m] any case thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down, that he may sleep in his own raiment, and bless thee; and it [n]shall be righteousness[7] unto thee before the LORD thy God.

14 ¶ Thou[o] shalt not oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy, whether he be of thy brethren, or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates.

15 At[p] his day thou shalt give him his hire, neither shall the sun go down upon it; for he is poor, and [q]setteth his heart upon it: lest he cry against thee unto the LORD, and it be sin unto thee.

16 ¶ The[r] fathers shall not be put to death

3 Divorce is not here commanded, but permitted, and the manner of it prescribed; and, to prevent rashness, it was to be transacted very solemnly.—This is to be understood as part of the judicial law, and to be executed into effect under the eye of the civil magistrate. The moral law of the seventh commandment, and all that is implied in it, as illustrated and enforced by our Lord, still remained the same. And the permission of separation on the terms here specified was not a relaxation of the moral law, but an accommodation of the judicials to the existing habits and circumstances of the people of Israel, with the benevolent intention of preventing cruelty to those wives who might be discovered to have some bodily defect, disease, or ceremonial defilement. But to prevent rash and capricious divorces, the husband in such a case must have a regularly prepared and authenticated legal instrument; and the parties can never come together again. Our Lord tells us the reason of this permission of the judicial law: "because of the hardness of their hearts.—But from the beginning it was not so." In the moral law, as interpreted by him, it is expressly prohibited.—C.] glory has been the excitement of the brave; plunder of the mercenary; licentiousness of the profligate: but of the Jewish soldier it is required that 'when the host goeth forth against enemies, he keep himself from every wicked thing.' Translate this ancient ordinance into modern words, and it will form 'an order of the day' unparalleled in the annals of nations. C.]

Ver. 18. [Abomination unto the Lord thy God. Impurity constituted a part of heathen worship, and a dedicated prostitution was employed to support some of their temples. The Egyptians worshipped Anubis under the form of a dog; and hence such unhallowed gains are specifically rejected from the house of the Lord. Note, God abominates the principle that makes the price of sin the purchase of pardon. C.]

Ver. 19. [Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother. The former laws of loan, Ex. 22, 25; Le. 25. 36, forbade the exaction of usury from the poor only. Here there is a total prohibition of usury for money lent by one Jew to another, whether rich or poor. Why this addition? why this prohibition? and why especially when the Jew is freely permitted to lend on usury to a stranger? (1) This addition, like several others, is now made to the law, with a view to the state of society in Canaan, into which the people were about to enter, De. 12. 1. While they were in the wilderness, without any fixed residence, there could be little if any occasion for the rich to borrow, and as little apparent security for any to lend. The poor only required protection. (2) The prohibition of usury between Jew and Jew rests first, upon the implied principle of brotherhood in the whole nation; secondly, upon the fact, that God did not intend them for a commercial but for an agricultural people, as all their institutions testify. (3) The permission, and implied encouragement, of lending on usury to a stranger, founded upon the general principle that a fair profit on the loan of money is in itself as just as profit upon any other property, was a wise speciality; as, by bringing commercial men, the great political peace-bonds of the world, into contact with the Jews, some knowledge of the true religion would be diffused in the nations; and, when prospectively considered, it was mercifully calculated to accustom the Jews to such foreign management of money, as would prepare them either for the disasters of threatened exile, or for the period of their promised return to their own land. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is unseemly for saints to connect themselves in intimacy or marriage with profane persons: but whoremongers unnaturally mark their innocent posterity with shame and disgrace. God severely resents the injury done to his people in the day of their distress. But we ought quickly to forget the evil done to us by our relations or others; and carefully to remember the favours which we have received. Purity and cleanliness should be studied together with godliness, as they are both healthful and honourable, especially that of the heart and life, before God. How becoming is a tender compassion towards the afflicted, especially young converts to Christ! For great is the mercy of God to such—he will never deliver up a poor fugitive, that flees to him from the servitude of sin or of the broken law. Let me admire his grace, and imitate his goodness. Let me carefully abstain from fleshly lusts, which provoke God and war against my soul. In all my dealings, let brotherly love continue. And if I have vowed unto the Lord, let me in no wise go back. Let me be kind to strangers, ready to distribute, and never insist upon trifling rights and claims.

CHAPTER XXIV. REFLECTIONS.—Harmony in sin often issues in mutual hatred and angry separation. And it is mournful to observe, that, for the cruelty and hatred of husbands to wives, or other injurious effects of sin, God should see it necessary to permit the divorcement of them. But such a separation ought to be taken with great deliberation, as there is such hardship connected with it, and no recalling of ST. MARY'S WELL, OR THE FOUNTAIN OF THE VIRGIN, NAZARETH—A PLACE OFTEN VISITED BY MARY, THE MOTHER OF OUR LORD. [DEUT., xxiv: 19-22.] —"When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it; it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow; that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hands." We place to illustrate the conclusion of the 24th chapter of Deuteronomy a picture of St. Mary's Well, or the Fountain of the Virgin, in Nazareth. Through all the precepts of this 24th chapter there are to be seen intimations and suggestions of the charity and humanity and good will that Christ came into the world to teach and to express through his own life. So this picture of the Virgin's Fountain in Nazareth, where Christ grew up, is a good illustration of that spirit of humanity and good will and blessing we see emphasized in Christ.

for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

17 ¶ Thou[s] shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger, nor of the fatherless, nor take the widow's raiment to pledge:

18 But [t]thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee thence: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

19 ¶ When[u] thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow; that the LORD thy God [x]may bless thee in all the work of thine hands.[8]

20 When thou beatest thine olive-tree,[9] thou shalt not go over the boughs again:[1] it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

21 When thou [y]gatherest the grapes of thy vineyard, thou shalt not glean it afterward:[2] it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

22 And[z] thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Stripes must not exceed forty. 4 The ox is not to be muzzled. 5 Of raising up seed unto a deceased brother. 11 Of the immodest woman. 13 Of unjust weights and measures. 17 The memory of Amalek is to be blotted out.

IF there[a] be a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them; then they shall justify the righteous, and condemn the wicked.

2 And it shall be, if the wicked man be worthy [b]to be beaten, that the judge shall cause him to lie down, and to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number.[1]

3 Forty[c] stripes he may give him, and not exceed: lest, if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many stripes,[2] then thy brother should seem vile unto thee.[3]

4 ¶ Thou[d] shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth[e] out the corn.

5 ¶ If[f] brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger: her [g]husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her.

6 And it shall be, that the first-born which she beareth shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not [h]put out of Israel.

7 And if the man like not to take his brother's wife,[4] then let his brother's wife go [i]up to the gate unto the elders, and say, My husband's brother refuseth to raise up unto his brother a name in Israel, he will not perform the duty of my husband's brother.

8 Then the elders of his city shall call him, and speak unto him: and if he stand to it, and say, I like not to take her;

9 Then shall his brother's wife come unto him in the presence of the elders, and [k]loose his shoe from off his foot, and spit in his [5]face, and shall answer and say, So shall it be done unto that man that will not build up his brother's house.

10 And his name shall [l]be called in Israel, The house of him that hath his shoe loosed.

11 ¶ When men strive together one with another, and [m]the wife of the one draweth near for to deliver her husband out of the hand of him that smiteth him, and putteth forth her hand, and taketh him by the secrets;

12 Then thou shalt cut off her hand, thine eye shall not pity her.

13 ¶ Thou[n] shalt not have in thy bag divers weights,[6] a great and a small.

14 Thou shalt not have in thine house divers measures,[7] a great and a small.

15 But thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have; that thy days [o]may be lengthened in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

16 For all that do such things, and [p]all that do unrighteously, are an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

17 ¶ Remember[q] what Amalek did unto thee by the way, when ye were come forth out of Egypt;

18 How he met thee by the way, and smote the hindmost of thee, even all that were feeble behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary; and [r]he feared not God.

19 Therefore it shall be, when the LORD thy God hath given thee rest from all thine enemies round about, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it, that thou [s]shalt blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven; thou shalt not forget it.[8]

The phrase "a stone weight" indicates the same to have been, and indeed it was so, used among ourselves. It is obvious that as stones vary greatly in their weight in proportion to their size, deception was easy in this way. The dealer having a stone of different weights, one light to sell with, and another heavier to buy with, even when the apparent size was the same, could not be so easily detected. They were forbidden therefore to have such weights in their houses, and it is called, like the greatest crimes, an abomination to the Lord. . . .—J.)

8 This order has been stigmatized by unbelievers as implacable resentment and unnatural perpetuation of an old injury. It is, however, neither the one nor the other. It is a righteous command to punish a wicked nation according to their wickedness. Time may appease resentment, but can never change crime. Murderers who had escaped punishment long have been condemned to death by the most civilized modern nations after a lapse of half a century. Why should the infidel censure Moses for what all just laws enforce?—C.

it. Happy is it when the mutual affection of married persons is fixed at first, and remains with prudent tenderness. How necessary is it to observe God's ordinances, however shameful they may be to us! It is better now to confess our sin and be pardoned, than to conceal it and be lost. Superiors, and especially judges, who are the substitutes of God, ought to conduct themselves in every case with equity and truth. And with great compassion ought we to treat our neighbours, especially the poor, as their circumstances may require: though they cannot recompense us with their wealth or labour, they may do it with their prayers. And let us consider the great compassion God has towards them. But how great his kindness in leaving to us, sinners of the Gentiles, in his word, such plentiful gleanings of divine truth!

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS.—Inhuman cruelty, even towards evil-doers, nay, towards brute beasts, especially when serviceable to us, is very unbecoming the professors of Christianity. It is impossible to force affection, or to render a marriage happy without it. But the Christian in every situation must attend to the path of duty: and they deserve reproach themselves who give occasion to cast reproach on others. What fearful shame and dishonour must then await those ministers and Christians who reproach, and attempt to GARDEN IN SECOND STORY OF MUSEUM—PALACE OF A MODERN PHARAOH OF EGYPT. [DEUT., xxvi: 6.]—"And the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage." The disposition of the reigning classes in Egypt to oppress the toiling masses and to afflict them with hard bondage continues unto this day to be a characteristic of the rulers here. This great palace of Gizeh, built by Ismail-Pasha at a cost of about $25,000,000, literally represents so much wealth extracted from the poor laboring people of Egypt. Ismail-Pasha put upon the Egyptian government the enormous debt of $500,000,000. The people so groaned under the burden of debt that the powers at Constantinople were forced to depose him, and to confiscate his landed properties and residences. The view above given represents a scene in the garden of the second story of this palace known as the Harem Garden.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 The confession of him that offereth the basket of first-fruits. 12 The prayer of him that giveth his third year's tithes. 16 The covenant between God and the people.

AND it shall be, when [a]thou art come in unto [b]the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and possessest it, and dwellest therein,[1]

2 That thou [c]shalt take of the first of all the fruit of the earth, which thou shalt bring of thy land that the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt put it in a basket, and shalt [d]go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name there.

3 And thou shalt go [e]unto the priest that shall be in those days, and say unto him, [f]I profess this day unto the LORD thy God, that I am come unto the country which the LORD sware unto our fathers for to give us.

4 And the priest shall take the basket out of thine hand, and set it down [g]before the altar of the LORD thy God.

5 And thou shalt speak and say before the LORD thy God, A [h]Syrian[2] ready to perish[3] was my father; and he went down into Egypt, and sojourned there with a [i]few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous:

6 And the Egyptians [k]evil-entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage:

7 And when we cried unto the LORD God of our fathers, the LORD heard our voice, and looked on our affliction, and our labour, and our oppression:

8 And the LORD [l]brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders:

9 And [m]he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 And now, behold, [n]I have brought the first-fruits of the land which thou, O LORD, hast given me. And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God.

11 And thou [o]shalt rejoice in every good thing which the LORD thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that is among you.

12 ¶ When thou hast made an end of tithing all the tithes of thine increase the [p]third year, which is the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled;[4]

13 Then thou shalt say before the LORD thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, to the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them:

14 I have [q]not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead:[5] but I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me:

15 Look[r] down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.[6]

16 ¶ This[s] day the LORD thy God hath commanded thee to do these statutes and judgments: [t]thou shalt therefore keep and do them with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

17 Thou hast [u]avouched[7] the LORD this day to be thy God, and to walk in his ways, and to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice:

18 And [v]the LORD hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar people, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldest keep all his commandments;

19 And to make thee [w]high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honour; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the LORD thy God, as he hath spoken.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The people are commanded to write the law upon stones, 5 and to build an altar of whole stones. 11 The tribes divided on Gerizim and Ebal. 14 The curses to be pronounced on mount Ebal.

'Two years together they paid the Levites tithe and the festival tithe; but in the third year, they paid the Levites tithe, and the poor man's tithe; that is, what was wont in other years to be spent in feasting, was wholly spent every third year upon the poor.'—Wolfe, quoted by Patrick. Once in three years this solemn protestation was required from every proprietor of land in Canaan personally in the presence of the priests at the tabernacle. They all declared that the whole of this second tithe had been employed to those purposes for which it was appropriated, and that no part had been used by them in mourning, or at funerals, which rendered them unclean; or in any superstitious ceremony in imitation of the idolaters around them. As the matter lay very much between God and their conscience, this protestation was the more suitable, and would tend both to remind them of their duty, and render them afraid of neglecting it.—C. ch.12.5,7, 12,6,8.—Scott.

ruin Christ and his church, by refusing to exert themselves in winning souls to them! Nothing is more shocking in a woman than immodesty, whether it be in the outrage of passion or in wanton lewdness. When once the hedge of modesty is broken through, the grossest unchastity may soon follow. Detestable to God, and hurtful to the user at last, is every act of fraud and dishonesty: and terrible and lasting, though often slow in the execution, is God's justice against the unprovoked injurers of his people.

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS.—God faithfully and exactly fulfils his promises, even to the most unworthy. And a grateful acknowledgment thereof, and of our own meanness and guilt, is but a just tribute to him for his goodness. Past deliverances, granted to ourselves or others, ought never to be forgotten: and all our gifts of providence, as well as of redemption, must be acknowledged as coming from God's hand. The first and best thereof of all that we have ought to be offered up to his service: and our earthly blessings will then be doubly sweet to us when we receive them as coming to us from God's mercy and love. Let our distributions to the Lord's ministers and poor be such as we can answer for at the judgment-seat of God. Faithfulness in these will draw his blessing on our enjoyments; but if we rob him in them, we may expect his curse on our basket and on our store. Let us then be hearty friends and well-wishers to the welfare of his church and people. Let our covenant relation to God, our solemn obligation in it, and the honours which he has given or promised to us, excite us to the most exact and universal obedience to his laws.

CHAPTER XXVII. [Ver. 14. This was one of the grandest and most solemn public assemblies ever held. On the spot, between Ebal and Gerizim, I have read the narrative, and studied its graphic details with the deepest interest. The selection of this place for the reading of the law was not without a reason. When Abraham first entered Canaan this was the a-

ARCHES, HAREM ESH-SHERIF—ON THE GROUND ONCE OCCUPIED BY SOLOMON'S TEMPLE. [DEUT., xxvi: 19.]—"And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honor; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken." We give a view above of the arches found on the area once occupied by Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem. The temple as it stood upon this same spot was the center of the Jewish race, and to-day the Mosque of Omar that stands in its place is the pride and ornament of the city of Jerusalem. As God promised he did make of the Hebrews the highest of the nations of ancient times, and the city of Jerusalem the capital of the religion of humanity. And though the Holy City has been subjected to reverses one after another for thousands of years, it continues to be the most interesting city as far as its historic associations go to be found on the face of the globe.

EXTERIOR OF AMPHITHEATRE, PUTEOLI—THE PLACE OF NERO'S GREAT CRIMES.

[DEUT., xxvii. 1.] "Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day." The commandments which the Israelites were to keep were not arbitrary enactments imposed by the God of Moses and their God upon them alone. They were really the laws ordained for the government of the human race. The God of the Jew is the God of all mankind, and the God of the human conscience. And as cog corresponds with cog in the mechanical wheel, so the Mosaic law corresponds to the conscience of mankind. The Jews suffered national weakness and lost the high place intended for them in the mind of God because they violated these plain laws, revealed through Moses and affirmed by the very structure of human nature. We give a picture of the exterior of the Amphitheatre at Puteoli which serves to illustrate the fact that not only among the Jews, but among the Gentiles also, degradation and ruin come to the people who dare to transgress the simple laws of God.

thy God giveth thee, that thou shalt set thee up [c]great stones, and plaster them with plaster.[1]

3 And thou [d]shalt write upon them all the words of this law,[2] when thou art passed over; that thou mayest go in unto [e]the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey; as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee.

4 Therefore it shall be, [f]when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster.

5 And there [g]shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them.

6 Thou shalt build the altar of the LORD thy God of whole stones; and thou shalt offer burnt-offerings[h] thereon unto the LORD thy God:

7 And thou shalt offer [i]peace-offerings, and shall eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy God.

8 And thou [k]shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law very plainly.[3]

9 ¶ And Moses, and the priests the Levites, spake unto all Israel, saying, [l]Take heed, and hearken, O Israel; this day thou art become the people of the LORD thy God.[4]

10 Thou[l] shalt therefore obey the voice of the LORD thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day.

11 ¶ And Moses charged the people the same day, saying,

12 These shall stand upon [m]mount Gerizim to bless the people, when ye are come over Jordan; Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin.[5]

13 And these shall stand upon [n]mount Ebal to[o] curse; Reuben, Gad, and Asher, and Zebulun, Dan, and Naphtali.

[1] That the Hebrews were versant in castings in brass and other metals, and acquainted with cutting on stone, even precious stones, there can be no doubt. Why then are these stones merely plastered? An emblem, most probably, of the superficial impression the law was to make upon Israel: easily impressed, but easily effaced—a fact which their facility in promising obedience, and readiness to forget and repeatedly testifies.—C. d Jos. 8. 32, 34. Ps. 40. 8. Zec. 3. 9. Je. 31. 33. 2 Co. 3. 2, 3. Either the ten commandments, or this book of Deuteronomy, or the blessings and curses were to be written on these stones, which might represent men's hard and earthly hearts.

[2] The whole scope of the narrative shows that 'this law' embraces only the blessings and the curses recorded in this and the following chapters. This view is confirmed by the historic note of the fulfilment of the command in Jos viii.—P.

[3] Whether the ten commandments, or some lesser portions of the law is not apparent, nor is it of any consequence could it be ascertained. The plainness of the inscription, intended for common and public use, is, however, very important. It shows that the Scriptures were never intended for a caste, but for the whole nations. [6] There are those who profess approbation of the law of God, as a system beautiful, pure, and perfect in its morality, and who conclude that such approval is all that the law requires. But no approval short of fulfilment can satisfy the law, or constitute legal righteousness. Neither can any partial observance of a few precepts suffice to satisfy the law, and atone for the breach of the remaining requirements. In truth, a partial observance is impossible; for 'he that offends in one point is guilty of all.' The sinner has no refuge but Christ 'made a curse for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.'—C.

of his camp. When Jacob returned from Haran this was his first resting-place; and here he bought a field, erected an altar, and called it El-Elohe-Israel. It is not strange, therefore, that the same site should have been selected for the first great national assembly of Israel, and the renewal of their covenant with Jehovah, on taking formal possession of the land. The exact scene was doubtless near the mouth of the vale of Shechem, immediately below the highest peaks of Ebal and Gerizim. The vale is here about 200 yards wide; and the sides of the mountains, though steep, are not precipitous. A natural amphitheatre is formed by a recess in each mountain. The ark, with the attendant priests and Levites, was placed in the centre of the vale. Six tribes were ranged along the lower slopes of Ebal on the one side, and six along the corresponding slopes of Gerizim upon the other. Every member of that vast assembly could thus both hear and see all that passed. Each command was read with a loud voice by the Levites, with its annexed blessing and curse; to the blessing the tribes ranged on Gerizim responded 'Amen;' and to the curse those ranged on Ebal responded 'Amen.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Such as are in authority ought to exert all their influence in promoting the service of God. And when ministers and magistrates show themselves zealous in their station for God, people are ready to follow their example. Every privilege that we enjoy ought to be an incitement to universal holiness: and God's law is so plain, that every one may attain a moderate knowledge of it; but, to become effectual, it must be written on our hard hearts by the Spirit of God; and all obedience to it must be founded on the atoning and peace-procuring blood of Jesus Christ. In this order, what solid peace and joy are found in believing, and in cordial dedication of ourselves to God's service! In keeping his commandments a blessed reward of grace is to be expected: but most terrible curses await those who, after professed subjection to God, and solemn acquiescence in his law and sanctions of it, do voluntarily apostatize from his ways, and indulge themselves in secret or open wickedness.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—This chapter is nearly allied to Le. 26. 3-39: only it more largely insists upon the mercies, and especially the judgments, that were to befall the Israelites after their entrance into Canaan till the end of the world. It is not to be considered as a mere sanction of the laws formerly declared, but also as a real prediction of future events. The first fourteen verses had their accomplishment in the various mercies which the Jews met with before their last dispersion by the Romans: particularly in the days of Joshua, ch. iii.-xxiv.; in the rests under the Judges, Ju. 3. 11, 30, 31; 8. 28; and under Samuel, 1 Sa. 5. 2; David, 2 Sa. v. x.; 1 Ch. xii.-xxix.; Solomon, 1 Ki. i. x.; 2 Ch. i.-ix.; Asa, 1 Ki. 15. 9-15; 2 Ch. xiii.-xvi.; Jehoshaphat, 2 Ch. xvii.-xx.; Joash, 2 Ki. xi. xii.; 2 Ch. xxiii. xxiv.; Uzziah and Jotham, 2 Ch. xxvi. xxvii.; Hezekiah, 2 Ki. xviii. xix.; Is. xxxvi. xxxvii.; 2 Ch. xxix.-xxxii.; Josiah, 2 Ki. xxii. xxiii.; 2 Ch. xxxiv. xxxv.; and in the days of Ezra, i.-x.; and of Esther, i.-x.; and of Nehemiah, i.-x.; and under the Maccabees, Judas, Jonathan, Simon, Hircanus, and Alexander Janneus, from about 160 to about 80 years before Christ's birth.—From ver. 15 to the end are delineated the various and manifold miseries which their sin should bring upon them, from their entrance into Canaan till their future restoration; i.e. for the space of 3300 years; particularly in the days of Joshua, Jos. vii.; the Judges, Ju. i.-iii. iv. vi. ix. x. xii.-xxi.; Samuel, 1 Sa. iv. xi. xiii. xiv. xvii. xxxi.; David, 2 Sa. ii. iii. xv.-xxi. xxiv.; Solomon, 1 Ki. xi.; Rehoboam, Abijah, Jehoshaphat, 1 Ki. xii.-xxi.; 2 Ki. i.-vi.; Jehoram, Ahaziah, Joash, Amaziah, Uzziah, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, 2 Ki. viii.-xxi.; 2 Ch. xxi. xxii. xxv. xxviii. xxxii. xxxiii.; and Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, Zedekiah, and in Babylon, 2 Ki. xxiv. xxv.; 2 Ch. xxxv. xxxvi.; Je. xiv.-xxix. xxxiv.-xliv. The body of the ten tribes of Israel were generally miserable after the death of Solomon. They were carried captive, and dispersed among the heathens, about 720 years before Christ, whence few of them ever returned to Canaan. Such of them, or of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who returned to their

LORD thy God, to observe, and to do all his commandments which I command thee this day, that the LORD thy God will set thee [b]on high above all nations of the earth.[1]

2 And all these blessings shall [c]come on thee, and overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God.

3 Blessed[d] shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be in the field.

4 Blessed shall be the [e]fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

5 Blessed[f] shall be thy basket and thy store.[2]

6 Blessed shalt thou be when [g]thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

7 The LORD shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be [h]smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways.

8 The LORD [i]shall command the blessing upon thee in thy storehouses,[3] and in all that thou settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.[4]

9 The LORD shall [k]establish thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, [l]if thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways.

10 And all people of the earth shall [m]see that thou art called by the name of the LORD; and they shall be afraid of thee.

11 And [n]the LORD shall make thee plenteous in goods,[5] in the fruit of thy body,[6] and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in[o] the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

12 The LORD [p]shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give the rain unto thy land in his season, and to bless all the work of thine hand: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.

13 And the LORD [q]shall make thee the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; [r]if that thou hearken unto the commandments of the LORD thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them:

14 And thou shalt [s]not go aside from any of the words which I command thee this day, to the right hand, or to the left, to go after other gods to serve them.[7]

15 [t] But it shall come to pass, [u]if thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day, that [v]all these curses shall come upon thee, and overtake thee.

16 [w]Cursed[8] shalt thou be in the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field.

17 Cursed[x] shall be thy basket and thy store.

18 Cursed[y] shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

19 Cursed[z] shalt thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

20 The[a] LORD shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto for to do,[9] until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me.

21 The LORD [b]shall make the pestilence cleave unto thee, until he have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it.

22 The[c] LORD shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning,[1] and with the sword,[2] and with blasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish.

23 And thy [d]heaven that is over thy head shall be brass,[3] and the earth that is under thee shall be iron.

24 The LORD shall [e]make the rain of thy land powder and dust:[4] from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

1 Whether this promise include political, commercial, literary, and military superiority is of little consequence before God, however highly estimated with men. Real superiority lies not in these things, but in the knowledge of God, in the possession of his oracles, ordinances, grace, and promises—in all these, and notwithstanding their sins, the Jews are 'high above all nations.' But their pre eminence lies chiefly in this, that of them, 'according to the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.'—C.—It should be noted that this promise is conditional. It begins with 'if.' History extending over more than three thousand years shows that so long as the Jews were obedient they were blessed and honoured as never nation had been; and since they have rebelled and rejected God, they have been cursed as never nation has been.—P.

own land by order from Cyrus, Ezr. i., were not only harassed by the neighbouring nations of Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Arabians, Philistines, and others, but also by the Persian and Grecian emperors; but most terribly by Ochus the Persian, about 350; and Antiochus Epiphanes, Da. 8. 23–25; 11. 28–35, about 160 years before Christ. But their most fearful calamities began to come upon them from the Romans, about sixty-five years after Christ. They invaded their country; and after manifold calamities, about A.D. 70, rendered it a desolate wilderness, burning their cities, slaying the inhabitants, it is probable to the number of some millions, and selling such as remained to the Egyptians and others for slaves. About A.D. 136 the Romans repeated their terrible slaughter of such Jews as they found in Canaan, and even in other places of their empire; and annual fairs were held for the sale of the captives. Since which, hated of all nations in Europe, Asia, or Africa, among which they have been dispersed, and often deluded by pretenders to Messiahship, they have, for these seventeen hundred years, been distressed with the most fearful calamities, persecutions, and massacres, from the Persians, Saracens, Turks, and Christians; but chiefly the Greeks, Spaniards, French, English, and Germans. Thus every promise or threatening respecting the Jewish nation is but a repetition or enlargement of what we have in this chapter and the first part of ch. 30. 1–9; and every event of Providence respecting that nation, from their entrance into Canaan till the end of time, is the accomplishment thereof.—See Introduction.

Ver. 9. [The Lord shall establish thee. The general character of these blessings has led some Christian divines to conclude and admit that Moses employed none but temporal promises and threatenings as incentives to obedience, omitting altogether the mention of immortality. That he employed temporal promises is certain; for 'godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.' But that he likewise employed spiritual promises, even immortality and glory, this verse testifies; for he promises to establish them, not their posterity, 'a holy people:' 'unto himself,' implies and promises life coeval with his own. C.]

Ver. 24. [My experience of a simoom in southern Palestine will best illustrate these verses. 'As the day advanced the sirocco came upon us, blowing across the great "Wilderness of Wandering." At first it was but a faint breath, hot and parching as if coming from a furnace. It increased slowly and steadily. Then a thick haze, of a dull yellow or brass colour, spread along the southern horizon, and advanced, rising and expanding, until it covered the whole face of the sky, leaving the sun, a red globe of fire, in the midst. We now knew and felt that it was the fierce simoom. In a few moments fine impalpable sand began to drift in our faces, entering every pore. Nothing could exclude it. It blew into our eyes, mouths, and nostrils, and penetrated our very clothes, causing the skin to contract, the lips to crack, and the eyes to burn. Respiration became difficult. We sometimes gasped for breath; and then the hot wind and hotter sand rushed into our mouths like a stream of liquid fire. We tried to urge on our horses; but though chafing against curb and rein only an hour before, they were now almost insensible to whip and spur. We looked and longed for shelter from that pitiless storm, and for water to slake our burning thirst; but there was none. No friendly house was there; no rock or bank, no murmur-

GENERAL VIEW OF THE FORUM- WHERE ST. PAUL WAS IMPRISONED. [DEUT., xxviii. 20.]—"The Lord shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke in all that thou settest thy hand unto to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me." Perhaps a general view of the Forum in Rome could not more fitly represent any portion of Scripture than that part contained in the verse above quoted. The cursing, vexation, and rebuke referred to above were to come upon the Jews, but wickedness brings cursing and destruction no less upon the other nations. There is no better place on the face of the earth to study the relation of penalty to violated law than the Roman Forum. It is the very heart and center of that mighty empire that came to a terrible ending because of its sins against the laws of God and of itself.

25 The LORD [p]shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them; and shalt be [h]removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.[5]

26 And thy [i]carcass shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away.

27 The LORD will [k]smite thee with the botch of Egypt, and with the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed.[6]

28 The LORD shall [l]smite thee with madness, and blindness, and astonishment of heart:

29 And thou shalt [m]grope at noon-day, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways; and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save thee.[7]

30 Thou shalt [n]betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather[8] the grapes thereof.

31 Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, and shall not be restored to thee:[9] thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, and thou shalt have none to rescue them.

32 Thy [o]sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and fail with longing for them all the day long: and there shall be no might[1] in thine hand.

33 The [p]fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed alway:

34 So that thou shalt [q]be mad for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

35 The LORD shall [r]smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head.

36 The LORD shall [s]bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone.

37 And thou shalt become [t]an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee.[2]

[5] The Jews are the standing and prophetical miracle of the Scriptures. Other nations have no doubt been dispersed; but they have been absorbed into or amalgamated with the people amongst whom they have been scattered. But the Jews, preserved into all kingdoms, retain their national identity—witnesses against themselves that they have forsaken the Lord; witnesses against infidels with despair these prophecies which they see fulfilled before their eyes; and witnesses to the Christian churches to beware of falling by seeking to establish their own righteousness, and refusing to submit to the righteousness of God.—C.

After the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, some of the worst of the Jews took refuge in the castle of Massada, where, being closely besieged by the Romans, they, at the persuasion of Eleazar their leader, first murdered their wives and children; then ten men were chosen by lot to slay the rest: this being done, one of the ten was chosen in like manner to kill the other nine: which, having done, he set fire to the place and then stabbed himself. ing stream or solitary well. It seemed to us as if the prophetic curse pronounced by the Almighty on a sinful and apostate nation was now being literally fulfilled. We could see, at least in the whole face of nature, in earth, and sky, and storm, how terrible and how graphic that curse was:—"Thy heaven that is over thee shall be brass," &c. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold, with affecting wonder, what numerous blessings a God in Christ, reconciling the world to himself, can heap on sinful men!—What blessings on soul and body!—what blessings, in time and in eternity, his love can bestow! Let us therefore be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. In keeping his commandments there is a great and gracious reward. But who can stand before this holy, this jealous, this great and dreadful Lord God, if once he be angry? Deep and large is the cup of indignation that is in his right hand; the dregs of which the wicked must wring out and drink. Let the sinners in Zion be afraid. Let fearfulness surprise the hypocrites. Who among us shall dwell with devouring fire? who shall dwell with everlasting burnings? In this dreadful cluster of threatenings, let us observe that sin is the only deserving cause of trouble; and that God, in innumerable forms, can execute his justice on the bodies, the minds, the families, the nations, the property, of his opposers.

gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land; and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, throughout all thy land, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

53 And [n]thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body,[1] the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters,[2] which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee:

54 So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, [o]his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave:

55 So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children, whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in [p]the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates.

56 The[q] tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter,[3]

57 And toward her young one[4] that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates.

58 If [r]thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD;

59 Then the LORD [s]will make thy plagues wonderful, and the plagues of thy seed, even great plagues, and of long continuance, and sore sicknesses, and of long continuance.

60 Moreover, he will bring upon thee [t]all the diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of; and they shall cleave unto thee.

61 Also every sickness, and every plague, which is not written in the book of this law, them will the LORD bring[5] upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

62 And ye shall be left [u]few in number,[6] whereas ye were as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldest not obey the voice of the LORD thy God.

63 And it shall come to pass, that, as the LORD [x]rejoiced over you to do you good, and to multiply you; so the LORD will [y]rejoice over you to destroy you, and to bring you to nought: and ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it.

64 And the LORD shall [z]scatter[7] thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; and there thou shalt serve other gods,[8] which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone.

65 And [a]among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest:[9] but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind:

66 And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life.

67 In the morning thou shalt say, [b]Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

68 And the LORD shall [c]bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee, Thou shalt see it no more again: and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bond-men and bond-women, and no man shall buy you.[1]

2 Moses exhorteth the people to obedience, by the memory of the works they had seen. 10 All are presented before the Lord to enter into his covenant. 18 The great wrath on him that flattereth himself in his wickedness. 29 Secret things belong unto God.

THESE [a]are the words of the covenant which the LORD commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, besides the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.[1]

2 ¶ And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, [b]Ye have seen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land;

1 The full meaning of the several clauses of this verse is difficult to determine. The idea embodied in the whole is that the Israelites would be taken back to Egypt in ships, that there taken about, never supposing that they would be reduced to slavery, but even when offered for sale in the slave-market none were found to buy them. This was fulfilled after the capture of Jerusalem under Titus. Multitudes of young Jews were then shipped off from Joppa to Alexandria. The slave-market became glutted, so that no purchasers could be found.—A.

Let the tremendous condition of the Jewish nation, when oppressed by Mesopotamians, Moabites, Canaanites, Midianites, Ammonites, Philistines, Syrians, Persians, Greeks, and others; and when harassed, murdered, and carried into captivity by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans; and all the miseries which they have suffered in their present dispersion, of more than 1700 years' continuance, establish my faith in God's word:—and let it warn the British nation, and those connected with her, to take heed to themselves, lest their contempt of Christ, their breach of promise with God, and other abounding wickedness, entail upon them similar judgments.

CHAPTER XXIX. [Ver. 23. Nor any grass groweth therein. Canaan has continued since the Christian era to be a land of much attraction to travellers, and all, as with one common consent, have expressed their astonishment at the general aspect of barrenness and desolation in a country once so fertile and populous. So evident is this judgment, and so palpable the fulfilment of this prophecy, that infidels have affected to question the scriptural account of its population and fertility. But, independent of the Scripture testimony, which is always sufficient to establish the truth of its own narratives, it is well known that at least large portions of the Chinese empire are as populous, and by extreme industry rendered as productive, as Palestine, even in its best days. And if God permit his blessings to a land of heathenism, why should he not bestow his blessings upon a land of his true worshippers? C.]

Ver. 29. [The secret things. There are two classes of secret things: (1) The times and seasons of determined prophetical blessings, such as Is. 19. 18-25; 52. 1; 60. 1. And though there be a few examples of precise chronological prophecy of this kind, such as the seventy weeks, Da. 9. 25-27, yet, even as this revealed time depended upon another unknown, the time foretold was secret. (2) The times and seasons when God will inflict determined prophetical judgments, and these depending on the filling up of national iniquity, must ever abide secret until the 'signs of the times' begin to reveal their approach. Things revealed are likewise of two kinds: (1) The nature of the blessings and judg-heart to perceive,[2] and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day.

5 And I have led [t]you forty years in the [u]wilderness: your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot.[3]

6 Ye have not [v]eaten bread, neither have ye drunk wine or strong drink; that ye might know that I am the LORD your God.

7 And when ye came unto this place, [w]Sihon the king of Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, came out against us unto battle, and we smote them:

8 And we took their land, and gave it for an inheritance unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh.

9 Keep[h] therefore the words of this covenant, and do them, that ye may prosper in all that ye do.

10 ¶ Ye[i] stand this day all of you before the LORD your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel,

11 Your little ones, your wives, and thy stranger[k] that is in thy camp, from [l]the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water;

12 That thou shouldest [m]enter[4] into covenant with the LORD thy God, and into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day;

13 That he may [n]establish thee to-day for a people unto himself, and that he may be unto thee a God, as he hath said unto thee, and as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.[5]

14 Neither with you only do I make this covenant and this oath;

15 But with him that standeth here with us this day before the LORD our God, and also with him that is [o]not here with us this day:[6]

16 (For ye know [p]how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt, and how we came through the nations which ye passed by;

17 And ye have seen their abominations, and their idols,[7] wood and stone, silver and gold, which were among them:)

18 Lest[q] there should be among you man, or woman, or family, or tribe, whose heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations; lest there should be among you a root that beareth [s]gall and wormwood;

19 And it come to pass, when he [t]heareth the words of this curse, that he [u]bless himself in his heart, saying, I shall have peace, though I walk [v]in the imagination[1] of mine heart, to [w]add drunkenness[2] to thirst:[3]

20 The LORD will [x]not spare him; but then the anger of the LORD and his jealousy shall smoke against that man, and all the [y]curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him, and the LORD [z]shall blot out his name from under heaven.

21 And the LORD shall [a]separate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel, according to all the curses of the covenant that are[4] written in this book of the law:

22 So that the generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and the stranger that shall come from a far land, shall say, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses which the LORD hath laid upon it;[5]

23 And that the whole land thereof is [b]brimstone, and salt, and burning, that it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, like the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah and Zeboiim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath;

24 Even all nations shall say, [c]Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this land? what meaneth the heat of this great anger?[6]

25 Then men shall say, [d]Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt:

26 For[e] they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and whom he had not given[7] unto them.[8]

27 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against this land, to bring upon it all the [f]curses that are written in this book:

28 And the LORD [g]rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day.

29 The [h]secret things belong unto the LORD our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.[9]

2 That is, the Lord hath given you indigestible raiment, bread from heaven, water from the rocks, and all to make you to know that he is the Lord your God: yet all has neither opened the eyes you have closed, the ears you have stopped, nor softened the hearts that, like Pharaoh, you have hardened.—C.

Had this been the case, why should the matter be mentioned as anything remarkable? The reference of Moses seems to be to that miraculously preserved; for it is conjoined (ver. 6) to food miraculously given. How strange, some may say, that forty years of such miraculous evidence had not led the people to know, to love, and obey the Lord! Alas! why do men wonder at this stupidity? Do not three score years and ten still pass away amidst greater evidence, and with less regard or improvement?—C.

9 This appears to me to be a philosophical reflection of Moses springing from the remarkable prophetic judgments to which he had just given utterance. Looking back at God's mysterious dealings with the Israelites—his miracles of mercy, of judgment, of deliverance—his promises, and his awful threatenings—what more natural than for the thoughtful lawgiver to exclaim: 'Secret things—the great mysteries of Providence—are known only to God, but the things which are revealed by him are revealed for our sakes and for the sake of our children that we may obey him.'—P.

ments foretold; so that men may desire the one, and flee from the other. (2) The duties of God's people while in possession of his blessings, or when lying under his wrath.—Note, The secret and the revealed departments of the divine government are not to be practically dissevered; for they are not separate things, but merely distinct parts of the same government. It were vain to apply ourselves to discover the secret things, but it were impious to neglect the revealed duties connected with them. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Unbelief and unconcern are so deep-rooted within us, that, till God himself enlighten and renew our heart, we can never know, love, or serve him. Many of the most affecting providences pass unheeded by ignorant and unbelieving men: and yet a right observation of providence would powerfully induce us to a solemn surrendering of ourselves to God, and a careful fulfilment of our vows. Holy obedience is so contrary to the heart of man, that, notwithstanding we are already bound by the infinite authority of God's law, we need to be also bound by solemn vows and covenants, and these again and again repeated. But everything in public covenanting with God ought to be made with great plainness and solemnity; that every one concerned, whether present or absent, may understand, and be duly affected with it: and especially must all our covenanting with him be founded on his grant of himself to us as our God, and his claim of us for his people. How ready are men to copy after bad examples, and to defile themselves with idols! And who knows what indwelling lusts may lead us to in our practice: for followers of iniquity often become presumptuous at last, and bless themselves, while the curse of God hangs over their heads, and his wrath abideth on them! and to what terrible and shameful judgments are such presumptuous sinners exposed! The greater the mercies we sin against, the greater judgments we may expect. The obstinate abuse of God's mercies will at length deprive men of them. And heathen beholders are sometimes sooner awakened by God's judgments than the hardened professors who endure them. Men's inquiries into religious concerns

ON THE QUAY, SMYRNA—A CITY WHERE GOD'S ANCIENT PEOPLE HAVE GREAT INFLUENCE AND WHERE THEY LIVE IN GREAT NUMBERS. [Deut., xxix:28.]—"And the Lord rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day." We give a picture of the quay at Smyrna because it serves to illustrate the declaration in this verse of Deuteronomy. Perhaps there is no city in the world of the same number of inhabitants where the Jews, rooted out of their own land and cast into another, have come to greater positions of influence, at least in a mercantile way, than in Smyrna. The great carpet houses here, which supply the world's market with Turkish rugs and other fine carpet fabrics, are owned by Jews. Smyrna is a city of over 200,000 inhabitants, and the quay of Smyrna is the street that extends for a mile or more along the harbor, and is the most important in the city.

GREEK CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, NAZARETH—IN THE CITY OF MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS. [DEUT., XXX: 1-10.]—"And it shall come to pass, when all things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the Lord thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto the Lord thy God * * * that then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee." We give above a picture of the Greek Church of Annunciation because the Scripture quoted above was not fulfilled until the coming of Christ. The angel said to Mary, as recorded in the first chapter of St. Luke, speaking of Jesus, He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Great mercies promised unto the penitent. 11 The commandment is of obvious interpretation. 15 Death and life are set before the people.

AND it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the [a]blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and [b] thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee,

2 And [c] shalt return unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice, according to all that I command thee this day, thou, and thy children, [d]with all thine heart, and with all thy soul;

3 That [e]then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return, and gather thee from all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee.

4 If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee.

5 And the LORD thy God [f]will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it;[1] and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers.[2]

6 And the LORD thy God [g]will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

7 And the LORD thy God will put all these curses [h]upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

8 And thou shalt [i]return, and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments, which I command thee this day.

9 And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again [k]rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers;

10 If [l] thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes, which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.[3]

1 The curses of exile and distress have been inflicted literally and fully; the promises of restoration and prosperity must therefore be as literal and complete.—C.

2 If the blessings and the curses of the preceding chapters be interpreted literally, so must the remarkable promise contained in this chapter. The time referred to is yet to come. The curses are not yet exhausted. Palestine is still desolate; the Jews are still scattered among the nations; they are still a by-word in the earth. Just as surely as the curse was fulfilled which pronounced their dispersion, so surely will the promise be fulfilled which predicts their ingathering. A spiritual ingathering to the kingdom of Christ would not be such a fulfilment as the sound laws of exegesis demand; it must be a literal and national return to the country of their fathers.—P.

3 We must return to our allegiance to God as our Lord and Ruler, our dependence upon him as our Father and Benefactor, our devotedness to him as our highest end, and our communion with him as our God in covenant. We must return to God from all that which stands in opposition to him, or competition with him. In this return to God, we must be upright — with the heart and soul, and universal — with all the heart and all the soul. It is evidenced by a constant obedience to the holy will of God. If 'thou shalt 'obey his voice,' ver. 2, 'thou and thy children;' for it is not enough that we do our duty ourselves, but we must train up and engage our children to do it.—Henry.

5 The allegation so often made by infidels—that Moses in the law did not draw his arguments from immortality, but solely from temporal good and evil—an allegation sometimes so thoughtlessly admitted and so feebly palliated by Christians, receives here a total overthrow; for, if 'the Lord God' was his people's 'life and the length of their days,' then, either God is mortal—which it were blasphemy and absurdity to suppose or assert—or his people are immortal, since he himself is their life. Jn. 1. 4; 10. 28. Col. 3. 4.—C.

11 ¶ For this commandment, which I command thee this day, [m]it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off:

12 It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart,[4] that thou mayest do it.

15 ¶ See, [n]I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

16 In that I [o]command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

17 But [p]if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

18 I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it.

19 I[q] call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore [r]choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live;

20 That thou mayest [s]love the LORD thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him; (for he is thy [t]life, and the length of thy days;) that thou mayest [u]dwell in the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.[5] are frequently rather curious than practical; and many sinfully pry into futurities, and things which he hath concealed, rather than search and practise what he hath revealed in his word, and manifested in his providence. But may I and my children always search and practise the Scriptures, as the only effectual means of averting the plagues appointed for the ungodly.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—In returning to the Lord, and resting in him, men must be saved. Our gracious God is always ready, not only to receive repenting prodigals, but to graciously forgive their sins. And great is the happiness and honour that is to be found in fellowship with a reconciled God. The future return of the Jewish nation to the Lord shall be a delightful and glorious season to them; and even to us Gentiles it will be as life from the dead; we shall share and rejoice in their mercies. God's manifestation of his special love, and his renovation of our heart, shall qualify and induce us to all holy obedience. We shall run in the way of his commandments when he shall enlarge our heart. But now let us consider how great a mercy it is that the laws and the gospel of Christ are set before us in so plain, affecting, and applicable a manner. And since eternal life is so exhibited, so offered to, so urged upon us, God forbid that we should entail redoubled loss on ourselves by a contemptuous rejection of it. Not Moses, but Jesus, sets before us life and good.—Let us see that we refuse not him that speaketh from heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 26. The book of the law. The Pentateuch, as far as then completed, was put into the safest and holiest spot, beside the ark, in the holy of holies. There it was sacred. It was not merely under the guardianship of the priests, but of God himself, who dwelt in the sanctuary, and who would not permit a stranger's hand to touch it. That very book—the autograph of Moses—may have been preserved down to the close of the Jewish polity and the destruction of the temple. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It highly becomes ministers, or others, to exert themselves to their utmost, that their church and nation may be happy after their death: and, when they become more active in the Lord's work as their end approaches, and wish others the happy enjoyment of that comfort and honour which God hath denied to themselves, it is both honourable to the cause of God and strengthening to his people. Great pains ought to be taken to make those of the present or rising generation to understand, believe and obey dred and twenty years old this day;[1] I can no more go out and come in: also the LORD hath said unto me, [b]Thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

3 The LORD thy God, he [c]will go over before thee, and he will destroy these nations from before thee, and thou shalt possess them: and Joshua, he shall go over before thee, as the LORD hath said.

4 And the LORD [d]shall do unto them as he did to Sihon and to Og, kings of the Amorites, and unto the land of them, whom he destroyed.

5 And the LORD shall give them up before your face, that ye [e]may do unto them according unto all the commandments which I have commanded you.

6 Be[f] strong, and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, [g]he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

7 ¶ And Moses [h]called unto Joshua, and said unto him in the sight of all Israel, Be strong, and of a good courage: for thou must go with this people unto the land which the LORD hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it.[2]

8 And the LORD, he it is that doth go before thee; he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: [i]fear not, neither be dismayed.

9 ¶ And Moses wrote [k]this law,[3] and delivered it [l]unto the priests the sons of Levi, which [m]bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and unto all the elders of Israel.

10 And Moses commanded them, saying, At[n] the end of every seven years, in the solemnity of the year of release, in the feast of tabernacles,

11 When all Israel is come to appear before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose, [o]thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing.[4]

12 Gather the people together, [p]men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the words of this law;

13 And that their children, which have not known any thing, may hear, and learn to fear the LORD your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourselves in the tabernacle of the congregation, that [q]I may give him a charge. And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation.

15 And the [r]LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud: and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt [s]sleep[5] with thy fathers; and this people will rise up, and [t]go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land whither they go to be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them.

17 Then [u]my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will [v]forsake them, and I will [w]hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall[6] them; so that they will say in that day, [x]Are not these evils come upon us because our God is not among us?[7]

18 And [z]I will surely hide my face in that day, for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye [a]this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: [b]put it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.[8]

20 For when I shall have brought them into the land which I sware unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey, and they shall [c]have eaten, and filled themselves, and waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

21 And it shall come to pass, when [d]many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify against[9] them as a witness; for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed: for [e]I know their imagination which they go about,[1] even now, before I have brought them into the land which I sware.

22 Moses therefore [f]wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel.[2]

23 ¶ And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, [g]Be strong, and of a good courage: for [h]thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I sware unto them; and I will be with thee.[3]

24 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished,

25 That Moses commanded the Levites, [i]which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying,

26 Take this book of the law, and put it [k]in the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee.

1 During an equal period of one hundred and twenty years did Noah preach righteousness to the antediluvian world. The life of Moses divides itself into three remarkable periods: (1) Forty years of education in the literature and sciences of Egypt, Ac. 7. 20, 22. (2) Forty years in the retirement of Midian, in the management of a flock and the cares of a family. (3) Forty years in instructing and governing an ignorant and unmanageable generation; a chequered, an eventful, a troublous, but a glorious life, exhibiting especially the triumphs of grace in the temper, and shadowing out in the church in the wilderness the patience and meekness of Jesus.—C.

3 The scope of the whole passage shows that by the 'law' is here meant the Pentateuch. Its composition had been gradual. The compilation of Genesis was the first task, and it formed the basis. It was followed by the diary of the journeys recorded in Exodus. Leviticus, and Numbers. With the diary was mixed the laws, moral and ceremonial, revealed at Sinai and elsewhere. Then came Moses' great address to the Israelites on the Arboth Moab, contained in Deuteronomy. It was now finished, and added to the sacred roll. At its close this record was made —'Moses wrote this law, and delivered it unto the priests.' They were its natural guardians.—f.

2 Let Moses be tried by the 'popular literature' he furnished and employed to influence the masses of society; and here, as in all other respects, he stands immeasurably above all other popular leaders: and presents a practical evidence of a divine commission by the continuity of his efforts to lead the people's hearts to God. An imposter may invent and inculcate a religion; but it cannot, like that of Moses, be a holy and a godly religion. Whether Moses write a history, a law, or a song, all is full of God, because he was sent and inspired by God.—C.

God's word: and certain is our success when God is our assistant, and we do nothing but what he has commanded. And the more experience we have of gospel liberty, the more shall we delight to hear and obey him. God graciously warns men of their sin and danger before it come upon them: yet so desperate is the wickedness of men, that they ruin themselves by their apostasy from God, after their own vows, and the most solemn and often-repeated warnings of God and his faithful ministers. These exactly correspond together in discovering the sure consequences of sin, and leave the blame of their ruin entirely upon themselves.

27 For I know thy rebellion, and thy [1]stiff neck: behold, while I am [m]yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD;[4] and how much more after my death?

28 Gather unto me [n]all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, and [o]call heaven and earth to record against them.

29 For I know that [p]after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and evil[q] will befall you in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands.

30 And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Moses' song, which setteth forth God's mercy and vengeance. 44 He exhorteth the people to set their hearts unto all the words of the law. 48 God sendeth him up to Mount Nebo, to see the land, and die.

GIVE ear,[a] O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth.

2 My doctrine shall [b]drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew; as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass:

3 Because[c] I will publish the name of the LORD: [d]ascribe ye greatness unto our God.

4 He is [e]the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth, and without iniquity; just and right is he.

5 They have corrupted[1] themselves; [f]their spot is not the spot of his children: they are a perverse and crooked generation.

6 Do[g] ye thus requite the LORD, O foolish people and unwise? is not he thy father that hath [h]bought thee? hath he not made thee, and established thee?

7 ¶ Remember[i] the days of old, consider the years of many generations:[2] ask thy father, and he will show thee; thy elders, and they will tell thee.

8 When the Most High [k]divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set [l]the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel:[3]

9 For the [m]LORD'S portion is his people; Jacob is the lot[4] of his inheritance.

10 He [n]found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led[5] him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the [o]apple of his eye.

11 As[p] an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings;

12 So [q]the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him.

13 He made him [r]ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to [s]suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock;[6]

14 Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the [t]fat of kidneys of [7]wheat; and thou didst drink the [u]pure blood of the grape.

15 ¶ But [x]Jeshurun[8] waxed[9] fat, [y]and kicked: thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art [z]covered with fatness; then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation.

16 They [a]provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger.

17 They sacrificed unto [b]devils,[9] not to [1]God; to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not.

18 Of [c]the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee.

19 ¶ And [d]when the LORD saw it, he abhorred[2] them, because of the provoking of his sons and of his daughters.

20 And he said, [e]I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a [f]very froward generation, children in whom is no faith.

21 They have [g]moved me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger with their vanities: and I [h]will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

22 For a [i]fire is kindled in mine anger, and shall burn[3] unto the lowest hell, and shall consume[4] the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains.

23 I will [k]heap mischiefs upon them; I will spend mine arrows upon them.

24 They shall be [l]burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat,[5] and with bitter destruction: I will [m]also send the teeth of beasts

[4] All leaders of great movements, who traffic in popularity, either benevolently, as Solon and Lycurgus in Greece, or Numa at Rome; or selfishly and vexatiously, as Abraham at Jerusalem; or fanatically and ambitiously, as Mahomet at Mecca—all must flatter the people. Moses and the prophets in the Old, and Christ and the apostles in the New Testament, furnish the only examples of legislative effort uniting popular influence with moral honesty. A special evidence of genuine commission not to be overlooked by any who profess to admire moral bravery as an ornament of mind is, Return of the image of God.—C.

[3] Calvin's paraphrase brings out very clearly the true meaning of this verse: 'In the whole arrangement of the world God had kept this before him as the end to consult the interests of faithful people.' The words, 'When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance,' &c., embrace the whole literal and details of the dispersion of the human family, and their settlement in the various nations. Moses here epitomizes the history embodied in Genesis.—P.

It is necessary therefore that God's truths be laid up in men's heart and conscience, that they may hear, and fear, and do no more wickedly.

CHAPTER XXXII. [Ver. 10. Howling wilderness. It was literally so, because of the wild beasts howling by night through its dreary wastes. Sad emblem of an evil world filled with enemies who love to prowl in darkness, and watch for whom they may devour.—Apple of his eye. Those who would fathom the depths of God's providence in the selection of Abram, and the leading of the patriarchs, must recollect that two things were required for God's purposes: (1) The separation of a people from idolatry and idolatrous friends, with all their prejudices, influence, and interests. (2) Instruction in the knowledge of the nature, character, and worship of the true God. Now all this absolutely required the separation of Abram, Isaac, and Jacob from their idolatrous friends, and their frequent removals, lest their families should form idolatrous connections. C.]

Ver. 13. [This is a poetical description of conquest. He made Israel subdue all nations that ventured to oppose their progress in the wilderness, or on the borders of Canaan in Moab, Gilead, and Bashan. P.]

Ver. 21. [Every idolatrous nation is foolish. The only true wisdom is the wisdom of God. Everything is folly which does not lead to God. The heathen nations therefore which were raised up to vex, harass, and conquer Israel are here called 'foolish nations.' P.]

Ver. 29. [Latter end. Not their death, which is commonly called the latter end, but their latter end in dispersion and restoration, in judgment and in mercy.

WALLS OF AKRO-CORINTH—WHERE ST. PAUL LIVED AND PREACHED. [Deut., xxxii:24-25.]—"They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction; I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of the dust. The sword without, and terror within, shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs." Corinth is another striking illustration of the ruin that comes to cities and peoples who violate the laws of God first given to the Jews, but really as applicable to other nations as to the people whom God raised up to teach these laws. Corinth was once a splendid and wealthy city, the center of art and luxury. But upon the top of this very mountain, enclosed by the wall as shown above, there was a temple of Venus dedicated to licentiousness. So nothing is left of this city to-day except moldering ruins. In reading the Old Testament Scriptures it will be well to remember that God's laws operate universally.

upon them, with the poison of serpents of the dust.[6]

25 The [o]sword without, and terror within,[7] shall destroy[8] both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also, with the man of gray hairs.

26 I said, [p]I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men;

27 Were it not [q]that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should say, Our hand is high, and the LORD hath not done all this.[9]

28 For they are [r]a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them.

29 Oh[s] that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!

30 How should [t]one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight, except their Rock [u]had sold them, and the LORD had shut them up?

31 For [v]their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges.

32 For their vine [w]is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter:[1]

33 Their wine is the poison of dragons,[2] and the cruel venom of asps.

34 Is [x]not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?

35 To[a] me belongeth vengeance and recompense; their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them [b]make haste.

36 For [c]the LORD shall judge his people, and repent himself for his servants, when he seeth that [d]their power[3] is gone, and there is none shut up, or left.

37 And he shall say, [e]Where are their gods, their rock in whom they trusted;

38 Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices, and drank the wine of their drink-offerings? let them rise up and help you, and be your protection.[4]

39 See now that I, even I, am [f]he, and there is no god with me: [g]I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.

40 For [h]I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever.

41 If I [i]whet my glittering sword,[5] and mine hand take hold on judgment, [k]I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me.

42 I will make mine arrows [l]drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh; and that with the blood of the slain, and of the captives, from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy.[6]

43 Rejoice,[m] O ye nations, with his [7]people; for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

44 ¶ And Moses came, and [n]spake all the words of this song in the ears of the people, he and [o]Hoshea the son of Nun.[8]

45 And Moses made an end of speaking all these words to all Israel:

46 And he said unto them, [p]Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law.

47 For it is [q]not a vain thing for you; because it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

48 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses that self-same day, saying,

49 Get[r] thee up into this mountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over against Jericho, and behold the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel for a possession;

both of which are essential elements in a wise consideration of man's state, duty, and prospects. C.—'Their latter end'—not death merely, but the destruction, national as well as individual, which they were bringing upon themselves by their obstinate and infatuated perseverance in sin. P.]

Ver. 31. [That is, the 'rock,' or gods of the heathen, is not like JEHOVAH. The heathen themselves know this. They have seen the proofs in the miracles he wrought for Israel, and in the destruction he brought upon Egypt, Amalek, and Moab. P.]

Ver. 40. [I lift up my hand to heaven. The lifting up of the hand to heaven was a form of oath. The expression is no figure, but a reality; for, to the church, the Lord appeared in bodily form, 'in fashion as a man.' And this is he who saith, Re. 1. 18, 'I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen.' C.]

Ver. 42. [I will make mine arrows. This also is no rhetorical figure, but a reality; for while the arrows of men are reeds, wood, or iron; the arrows of God are his judgments, executed by the elements of nature, Ps. 18. 13–15, or those divine denunciations, and terrors of conscience, which fly as lightning, and pierce and subdue the hearts of his enemies, Job 6. 4; Ps. 45. 5. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In the most serious and solemn manner ought ministers to deliver the truths of God to their people; and terrible will be the judgment of despisers of them, when both heaven and earth shall witness against them. How great, how unalterable, how faithful, holy, and just is God! and how perfect, wise, and righteous are all his works! But how ungrateful, disobedient, and apostatizing are many of his professed children! It is necessary, therefore, to ponder both the character of God and our own, to prevent our sinning, to draw instructions from ancient records, and that children should receive information from their fathers, who are more acquainted with them. But while I behold God preparing a country for the Israelites, as his peculiar people, marvellously conducting them to it through the Arabian deserts, subduing the land before them, and enriching them with the product of it, let me think of the great wonder of redemption, of God's preparing it for men, and bringing them now to the begun, and hereafter to the full enjoyment of it. But surely most vile is the ingratitude of men, who render him hatred for his love, cursing for his blessing! Yet much more aggravated is the wickedness of professors, and especially saints, than that of mere heathens. The Lord highly abominates all sin; and righteous are all his judgments of desertion, sword, famine, or pestilence, nay, of utter and everlasting destruction. But his mercy waits long: he is unwilling to inflict judgments on his people, and to give his enemies any cause of triumph over them, even when they have provoked him to the most shocking degree; and earnestly he wills that their serious consideration should prevent their ruin. Seasonable, gracious, and wonderful have, and shall be, God's deliverances of his ancient people from the nations which harassed, murdered, or carried them captive; and terrible his judgments on their destroyers, particularly the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Greeks, Romans, Antichristians, and others. But how much more remarkable the spiritual deliverances of the saints, and terrible the destruction of their implacable enemies! How remarkable the joy of their souls, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, when they behold it! Happy is it when ministers, young and old, fully harmonize in the work of the Lord; and when they are so intent upon commending Jesus and his ways, that they must be, as it were, half forced from it, even into the joy of their Lord! But God finds it frequently necessary to remind his people of their sins, and likewise to warn them of their death, while he assures them of his reconcilement to their souls.

50 And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be [g]gathered unto thy people; as Aaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people:[g]

51 Because [h]ye trespassed against me[1] among the children of Israel at the waters of Meribah-kadesh,[2] in the wilderness of Zin; because ye sanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel.

52 Yet thou shalt [i]see the land before thee; but thou shalt not go thither unto the land which I give the children of Israel.

AND this is the [a]blessing wherewith Moses the [b]man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death.

2 And he said, [c]The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran,[1] and he came [d]with ten thousands of saints: from his right hand went [e]a fiery law[2] for them.

3 Yea, he [f]loved the people; all his saints are[g] in thy hand: and they sat down [h]at thy feet; every one shall receive of thy words.

6 ¶ Let[m] Reuben live, and not die; and let not his men be few.

7 ¶ And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said, [n]Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: let his hands be sufficient for him; and be thou an help to him from his enemies.

8 ¶ And of Levi he said, [o]Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy [p]holy one, whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

1 The honesty of the Bible in revealing and condemning the faults of its most distinguished characters is a peculiarity in which it stands apart from all mere human compositions—a proof of its divine origin to which the infidel can produce no refutation. If we admit with the poet, and the words being rightly understood, we do and must admit, that 'an honest man's the noblest work of God,' then would we demand of the infidel what is an honest book? It cannot be less noble.—C.

CHAPTER XXXIII. [Ver. 2. A fiery law. As in the margin, 'a fire of law,' to burn up all hopes of self-righteousness. It is then the sinner cries, 'What must I do to be saved?' Ro. 7. 9–11, 13, 24. C.]

Ver. 5. [King in Jeshurun. Not Moses, but the Lord was king, comp. ver. 2, 3. C.]

Ver. 6–25. In Le. xxvi.; 4. 25–31; xxviii.; 29. 18–28; xxx.; 31. 16–21, 29; xxxii. the general fate of the Israelites has been predicted; here that of the particular tribes is foretold in a manner answerable to the blessings of the patriarch Jacob, Ge. xlix. viz. that notwithstanding internal weakness, and much harassment from enemies, the Reubenites should be preserved; that the descendants of Judah should have their prayers heard, their warfare successful, their labours prosperous, and should enjoy peace and safety; that the Levites, who had acted so disinterestedly in punishing the principal worshippers of the golden calf, should be the honoured ministers of God, and useful instructors and judges of the people; that the Benjamites should enjoy much divine protection, and live near to the temple of God; that the descendants of Joseph should enjoy great favour from God, noted plenty from their fields, and great power and authority among their brethren; that the men of Zebulun in their seafaring trade, and those of Issachar in their husbandry, should enjoy much comfort to themselves, and be remarkable promoters of a religious attendance on God's solemn feasts; that the Gadites should enlarge their territory, punish their enemies, and faithfully assist their brethren in conquering Canaan; that the Danites should unexpectedly seize on Laish, near the springs of Jordan, and, under Samson, molest the Philistines; that the Naphtalites, when stationed on the west of the Sea of Tiberias, should have most fertile fields, and their country be peculiarly blessed with the ministrations of Christ; and that the Asherites should mightily increase, live in noted friendship with their brethren, and have valuable mines of iron and brass in their territory.——[Ver. 6. Let not his men be few. Two copies of the Septuagint, and some valuable MSS. adopted by Houbigant and other learned authorities insert here, 'and Simeon, let his men be few;' and as this is the only tribe omitted in the authorized version, this variation being so supported, is worthy of attention.——Ver. 7. Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah. Judah signifies praise the Lord, therefore this prayer. It includes a petition likewise for Messiah, who was to come of Judah, Ge. 49. 10, and whom God the Father 'heareth always.'——Ver. 10. They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law. There is a remarkable difference between the blessings of the tribes as delivered by Jacob, Ge. xlix., and Moses in this chapter. But the blessings of Jacob were principally temporal, those of Moses chiefly spiritual. Those of Jacob to members of the nation, those of Moses to members of the church. The one chiefly to Israel 'according to the flesh,' the other to Israel 'according to the spirit.' The two lines of prophecy sometimes diverging, sometimes coincident; yet always equally true.——Ver. 12. Dwell in safety by him. Near the place where God shall choose for his temple; and in point of fact, Jerusalem was a joint property of Judah and Benjamin, and the two tribes dwelt together. Between his shoulders, some translate 'on his sides or borders,' but it seems rather to refer to a parent tenderly covering a child and carrying it upon his shoulders.——Ver. 14. Precious things put forth by the moon. That, even in latitudes distant from the equator, the moon has a ripening power, can scarcely be doubted. In the central lands of the earth, where the moon is described as astonishingly bright, the ripening power must be proportionably increased. It describes a land of great fertility, in which every month produced a new succession of fruits. See Re. 22. 2. C.——Ver. 17. There is here delineated briefly, but with wondrous graphic power, both the character of Ephraim's allotted territory and the future greatness of the tribe. He was to inherit a mountain stronghold;

PLAIN OF SODOM AND GOMORRAH, THE PROMISED LAND GOD PERMITTED MOSES TO SEE FROM MT. NEBO. [DEUTERONOMY, xxxiv: 1.]—"And Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho: and the Lord showed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan." . . . "And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, the city of palm trees unto Zoar." We give a view of the plains of Sodom and Gomorrah taken from the site of ancient Jericho, with a perspective of 25 miles looking towards the east. We have here a view of the city of palm trees, plain of the Jordan, and one of the highest peaks of the Moab mountains, Nebo, where Moses stood and looked over the promised land. There is not a view in the world so capable of awakening tender and great memories as this. In the world's civilization Moses, without a doubt, has been the most conspicuous leader. And here is the plain over which he looked before he went to his reward.

19 They shall [p]call the people unto the mountain; there they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness:[1] for they shall suck of the abundance of the seas,[2] and of treasures hid in the sand.[3]

20 ¶ And of Gad he said, [h]Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad: he dwelleth [i]as a lion, and teareth the arm with the crown of the head.

21 And he [k]provided the first part for himself, because there, in a portion of the lawgiver, was he [l]seated; and he came[4] with the heads of the people, he executed the justice of the LORD, and his judgments with Israel.

22 ¶ And of Dan he said, Dan [m]is a lion's whelp: he shall leap from Bashan.

23 ¶ And of Naphtali he said, O Naphtali, satisfied[n] with favour,[5] and full with the blessing of the LORD; possess thou the west and the south.

24 ¶ And of Asher he said, Let Asher be blessed[o] with children; let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him dip his foot in oil.

25 Thy shoes[6] shall be iron and brass; and as thy days, so shall thy strength be.[7]

26 ¶ There [p]is none like unto the God of Jeshurun,[q] who rideth upon the heaven in thy help, and in his excellency on the sky.

27 The [r]eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms: and he [s]shall thrust out the enemy from before thee, and shall say, Destroy them.

28 Israel[t] then shall dwell in safety alone: the[u] fountain of Jacob shall be upon a land of corn and wine; also his heavens shall drop down dew.

29 Happy[x] art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the LORD, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and [y]thine enemies shall be found liars[8] unto thee, and thou shalt tread upon their high places.

2 The names Abarim, Nebo, and Pisgah are connected in such a way as to create much difficulty to the sacred geographer. From a comparison of various passages we may infer: 1. That Abarim was the name of a mountain range. 2. That Nebo was one of its peaks. 3. That the name Pisgah was either equivalent to Abarim, or that it is a common noun, signifying an isolated hill or peak. Taking this latter view, the passage may be rendered: 'And Moses went up from Arboth-Moab to Mount Nebo, to the top of the mount, The peak of Nebo, the position of which remained for long unknown, is now identified. On the very brow of the table-land of Moab, a few miles south west of Heshbon, is a prominent mountain top still bearing the name Neba. It commands the Dead Sea, the Jordan valley, the whole mountain range of Palestine, and the blue summits of Lebanon and Hermon, far away on the northern horizon. its valleys were to be of surpassing fertility; the tribe was to increase enormously; and its power was to be felt over the whole nation.——Ver. 23. This verse should be rendered as follows:—'Naphtali, replete with favours, and full of the blessings of Jehovah; possess thou the sea and Darom.' The Hebrew word rendered 'west' means literally 'sea,' and here means the Sea of Galilee, which adjoined the territory of Naphtali. The word Darom seems to be another name for Galil, or Galilee, the nucleus of which was in Naphtali; see Jos. 20. 7; 21. 32. P.]

Ver. 28. [The fountain of Jacob. This seems first an allusion to Jacob's well, mentioned, Jn. 4. 5, 6, 12; and then to the fountain of human life, of which he was the prolific source. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The people of God are a peculiar and great generation; safe in the hand of their God, from everything but unbelief; taught of God, and sweetly constrained to receive and obey his instructions; and privileged with the law of God, sounded in their ears, and written on their hearts. Unbounded blessings are with God for them; blessings suited to every tribe, every station in life, whether warriors, ministers, sailors, husbandmen, miners; blessings suited to every relation, and to every change of circumstance. And who can express their blessedness who have God's law for their rule, God's land for their residence, and God himself for their helper, refuge, saviour, shield, portion, and infinite ALL! It is happy to be separated from the world, in order to enjoy him. But it is ravishing to leave this world, quite transported with the glorious excellences of God in Christ, and of our spiritual interest in him, to behold his face, and to enter upon the unveiled, uninterrupted enjoyment of him in glory.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 1. And Moses went up, &c. Most commentators consider this whole chapter an addition by Joshua, Phinehas, Ezra, or some other prophet; others consider it as the ancient commencement of the book of Joshua, which, by the act of some transcriber, was subjoined as a conclusion to Deuteronomy; whilst others would terminate Deuteronomy with ver. 4, and commence Joshua at ver. 5. But all this is mere conjecture, and, unless aided by an additional conjecture, part must be self-evidently wrong. For unless it be conjectured that Joshua went with Moses, who could tell what Moses saw; or know, or say anything of his death, and the manner or place of burial? But why all this profusion, this waste of unsupported conjecture? especially why such conjecture, seeing a simpler solution lies at the very threshold? Could not the Spirit of the Lord which enabled Moses to summon up and record the past events of the world from the morning of creation, and to foretell the future fates and character of a whole nation, up till this day, enable him also to describe the circumstances that preceded his own death but a few hours, and to foretell the manner of his burial, and to describe his own character, and typical superiority to all other prophets? C.]

Ver. 6. [Buried him in a valley in the land of Moab. This is evidently a special delivery of the Spirit in four particulars. The burial, the valley, Moab, and the neighbourhood of Peor, which serves to strengthen the opinion advanced in the preceding note. —His sepulchre. The conjecture that the tomb of Moses was concealed lest his bones should become objects of idolatry, seems unfounded, inasmuch as hero-worship, or relic or bone worship, never was a sin that beset Israel. They were imitators, not originals, in idolatry. Is it not rather the last Mosaic type of him who was dead, yet hath no tomb? who, being sought, was not found in the grave, but 'risen as he said;' as Moses also certainly was when he appeared on the mount talking with Christ, Mat. 17. 3. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Happy and honoured is the last end of such as have been active and faithful for God in their generation; and their death would be an irremediable loss to churches and nations, if the all-sufficient Jesus did not supply their room. But precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints; and he makes it pleasant and joyful to them, when ushered in with views of the King in his beauty, and of the land that is afar off. But let me not dismiss this wonderful man of God—this deliverer and leader of his people—this mediator between God and Israel—this extraordinary prophet, occasional priest—this lawgiver and king in Jeshurun—till I consider him as a noted figure of my infinitely more glorious and useful Redeemer. He was a proper, a divine child, early and often exposed to danger. O the exile, the reproach, the contradiction of sinners, the persecution even unto death, which he endured! and how divine his support under his unnumbered trials! How amiable his qualities!—his contempt of the world, in its pleasures, honours, or riches—his compassion and tender regard to his injurious brethren—his amazing meekness—his distinguished fidelity—his prudence, boldness, and holy zeal! Solemn and express was his call to his work; and, by a multitude of miracles in favour of his people, and with the most tremendous destruction of his Jewish, heathen, Antichristian, and other enemies, has that call been confirmed. Extensive is the office to which God has appointed him. He is the Almighty Deliverer, who rescues us from the worse than Egyptian slavery of sin, Satan, and the world; and of heathenism and error. He is the all-sufficient Provider, who bestows upon us spiritual entertainment, hidden manna, living water, and unchanging robes of righteousness. He is the Leader given to the people, who opens a safe passage through every Red Sea of difficulty; and by power and prayer subdues every opposer, and brings us not merely to the borders, but to the full enjoyment of our promised, evangelical, spiritual, and eternal rest. Nor can their murmuring unbelief or rebellion ever provoke him to forsake those who have been given to him by his Father. He is the Mediator between God and men, with whom the promise of grace is made; and who confirms it with all by the shedding and sprinkling of his blood. He had his Father's law in his heart, fulfilled it for us, and gives it to us as our rule. He not only fasted and prayed, but died for a stiff-necked and rebellious people. He infallibly prevents our utter rejection. He is the incomparable Prophet, who knows the full mind of God, and can teach us by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and make us wise unto salvation. He speaks as never man did. He is the brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person, which we can behold, and be familiar with, only as veiled with our nature. He is our glorious Priest, who shed his blood, and sprinkled it on the altar, to fulfill JEHOVAH'S justice; and on the book of the law as a command, fulfilling it in our stead: and he sprinkles it on the people's conscience, to purge them from dead works to serve the living God. He authorizes all the true ministers of the church, and consecrates the saints as spiritual priests, and all the ordinances thereof, unto the service of God. He is King and Lawgiver to his Israel indeed, appointing the whole form and ordinances of his church; and to him is the whole government thereof committed by God. His whole life was remarkable for fidelity in the service of God, and his death was marvellous and voluntary. His grave was appointed of God; but in it he saw no corruption; and with him were buried all the ancient ceremonies, the law as a covenant, and the sins of all who believe.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

This book represents God's fulfilment of his promises to the patriarchs and their descendants, in giving them the land of Canaan; and the fulfilment of Noah's curse upon Canaan, in the destruction and slavery of his descendants. It relates what was transacted by Joshua as governor of Israel; particularly how God confirmed his call and encouraged him to his work; his sending spies to view Jericho; the miraculous passage through Jordan, and erecting memorials of it; his sanctification of the people by their circumcision and eating the passover, i.–v.; his miraculous conquest of Jericho, and severe punishment of Achan's theft of the spoil, vi. vii.; his conquest of Bethel and Ai, and league with the Gibeonites, viii. ix.; his conquest of the south part of Canaan, and causing the sun to stand still, x.; his conquest of the northern parts of that country, xi.; an account of Canaan, xii.–xiv.; his division of it to the nine tribes and a half; his appointment of cities of refuge and of cities to the Levites, xv.–xxi.; his kind dismission of the Reubenites and Gadites, xxii.; his solemn admonitions to the people, and renewal of their covenant with God; and, in fine, his death and burial, xxiii. xxiv.

[In addition to its sacred interest, the book of Joshua is one of the most ancient and important geographical and ethnological treatises extant. In giving an account of Joshua's conquests the historian sketches briefly, but with a master's hand, the leading physical features of the country, its topography, and the characteristics of the principal tribes by which it was then held. The licentious inhabitants of Jericho, the hardy mountaineers of Ai, the wily Gibeonites, the warlike Jebusites, the trained hosts of Jabin and his allies who swept the northern plains in chariots of iron, are all passed in rapid review before the eye of the reader. Then with a geographical accuracy and minuteness of detail altogether unparalleled in ancient literature, the boundaries of the allotted territories of the twelve tribes are defined, and their principal towns enumerated. Most of the boundary lines can still be traced, and many of the old cities identified. The book of Joshua thus forms an invaluable hand-book to the ancient topography of Palestine. The list of kings or chiefs, whose cities and territories were conquered by Moses and Joshua, is also of very great importance; and there are several episodes in the book which throw light upon certain remarkable localities and peoples: such as the story of the conquest of Hebron and its giant inhabitants of the race of Anak by Caleb; the capture of Kirjath-sepher, 'the town of books,' by Othniel; and the petition of Ahsah, Caleb's daughter, 'Give me also springs of water.' These, with others of a similar character, tend to give a primeval history something of the vivid colouring of a life-picture. P.]

A.M. 2553. B.C. 1451.

1 In the days of Abram, the children of Heth, that is, the Hittites, were evidently a great and civilized people, Ge. 23. 3. The other Canaanitish tribes, though retaining these local distinctions, seem, in the days of Joshua, to have been nationally absorbed into that of Heth. Every nation of Europe could furnish similar examples of absorption or amalgamation within as brief a period.—C.

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 7. Be thou strong and very courageous. The greatest instance of courage, is moral courage in reproving what is wrong and teaching and enforcing what is right. Therefore the Lord admonishes Joshua to be very courageous, not against enemies, but to observe all the law which Moses had commanded. Many who would dare to hazard death, would not dare to encounter the coldness or alienation of friends, the laugh of ridicule, the brow of scorn, the voice of reproach, the turmoil of argument, the jealousy of opposition, or the obloquy of detraction. Sensitive minds shrink from these petty annoyances as unworthy of their energies, and consequently suffer the imputation and the evils of the worst species of cowardice. In this moral courage Moses, Joshua, Jeremiah, and Paul are pre-eminent—Christ perfect. C.——Joshua's strength and courage would be tested in attempting, in the face of the opposition and rebellion of the Israelites to keep

HILL OF SARIS—IN SIGHT OF THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA. [JOSHUA, i: 4.]—"From the wilderness and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast." The Hill of Saris is at the upper head of the pass or glen which is called Wady 'Ali. From its top we have a fine view of the Great or Mediterranean Sea that the Lord promised Joshua, as we learn from the fourth verse of the first chapter, should be the western boundary of the country promised to the children of Israel. The land which the children of Israel actually occupied was very small, but the boundaries which are given in this fourth verse as the promised land include an immense territory. Nations are like individuals: they rarely occupy all that belongs to them.

sea, toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast.[1]

5 ¶ There[f] shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. [g]As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

6 Be[h] strong, and of a good courage; for unto this people shalt thou 'divide for an inheritance[2] the land which I sware unto their fathers to give them.

7 Only be thou strong,[3] and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: [k]turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest [l]prosper whithersoever thou goest.

8 This[m] book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.[4]

9 Have[n] not I commanded thee? Be strong, and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for [o]the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

10 ¶ Then Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying,

11 Pass through the host, and command the people, saying, Prepare you victuals;[5] for [p]within three days ye shall pass over this Jordan, to go in to possess the land, which [q]the LORD your God giveth you to possess it.

12 ¶ And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manasseh, spake Joshua, saying,

13 Remember [r]the word which Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded you, saying, The LORD your God hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

14 Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan;[6] but ye shall pass before your brethren [s]armed, all [t]the mighty men of valour, and help them,

15 Until[u] the LORD have given your brethren rest, as he hath given you, and they also have possessed [v]the land which the LORD your God giveth them; then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and enjoy it, which Moses, the LORD's servant, gave you on this side Jordan, toward the sun-rising.

16 ¶ And they answered Joshua, saying, [w]All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us we will go.

17 According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee: [x]only the LORD thy God be with thee, as he was with Moses.[7]

18 Whosoever[a] he be that doth rebel against thy commandment, and will not hearken unto thy words, in all that thou commandest him, he shall be put to death: only [b]be strong, and of a good courage.

CHAPTER II.

1 Rahab receiveth and concealeth the two spies sent from Shittim. 8 The covenant between her and them. 23 Their return and report.

AND Joshua the son of Nun sent out of [a]Shittim two men to [b]spy secretly, saying, Go view the land, even Jericho. And they went, and [c]came into a harlot's[1] house, named Rahab, and lodged there.

2 And it was [d]told the king of Jericho, saying, Behold there came men in hither to-night of the children of Israel to search out the country.

3 And the king of Jericho sent unto Rahab, saying, Bring forth the men that are come to thee, which are entered into thine house: for they be come to search out all the country.

4 And the [e]woman took the two men, and hid them, and said thus, There came men unto me, but [f]I wist not whence they were:

5 And it came to pass, about the time of shutting of the gate, when it was dark, that the men went out: whither the men went, I wot not: pursue after them quickly; for ye shall overtake them.

6 But she had brought them up to [g]the roof of the house, and hid them with the stalks of flax, which she had laid in order upon the roof.

7 And the men pursued after them the way to Jordan, unto the fords:[2] and as soon as they which pursued after them were gone out, they [h]shut the gate.

8 ¶ And, before they were laid down,[3] she came up unto them upon the roof;

1 As this woman is honourably mentioned in Scripture, He. 11 31. Ja. 2 25, and as it appears from Mat. 1.5 that she was married to Salmon, and so was ingrafted into the genealogical tree of our Lord, every effort has been made to rescue her character from the reproach of the word harlot. Accordingly the Hebrew word has been derived not from a root implying sin, but signifying to nourish, and has been translated hostess, and female taverner-keeper. But the word in the Hebrew does not elsewhere occur in a context that will allow it to be translated hostess. See Le 21 7, 14. De. 23. 18. And besides, there were not of old, nor are there now, any tavern hostesses in the East; the caravanseras furnishing nothing but high walls, where the traveller must provide for himself. Rahab was therefore what she is represented, and equally what is implied, a believer, a reformed penitent—such an example of the triumph of grace as Paul records, saying, 'And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God,' 1 Co 6.11.—C all the requirements of the law. The keeping of the law also was the condition on which God was to enable the Israelites to conquer and retain Canaan. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—God keeps up an honourable remembrance of his faithful servants. And it is a comfort to the church that, although her ministers die, Jesus her Redeemer lives to provide others in their room. But those who have behaved well in an inferior station, will, in general, and ought to be advanced to a higher. Certainly and seasonably, however slowly, the promises of God are fulfilled at last, with respect to everything temporal or eternal: nor need we fear to proceed in the most difficult work if God promise to us his presence and assistance. When he is pleased to work, none can let it. But as we must live by the word of God, so we must work and war by it; and, being once called and encouraged of God, we ought with the utmost readiness to set about our work. God can quickly bow the hearts of all such as are necessary to assist us therein. And it is delightful when magistrates, ministers, and people concur in their regard to and dependence on God, and when subjects are no less cheerful in their obedience, and doing their duty as good citizens, to themselves and one another, than rulers are exact in commanding what is lawful.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. Jericho was the most important city in the Jordan valley at the time of the exodus. It appears, however, that its site was changed, though at what time, or for what reason, is unknown. The city destroyed by Joshua and rebuilt by Hiel stood beside Elisha's fountain, about a mile and a half north-west of the village of Riha. But the Jericho which our Lord visited stood two miles farther south, at the base of the mountains where the road from Jerusalem descends into the plain. The ruins of both cities I have surveyed with care. They are most distinctly marked. The plain around them is rich and beautiful, and though the palm-trees that once gave the city a distinguishing name are now nearly gone, there is still abundance of foliage. P.]

Ver. 5. [Whither the men went I wot not. The first part of the statement, ver. 4, may have been true, the second was certainly false. How can this untruth be justified? How had this woman faith? We answer to the first question—it cannot be justified at all, it is utterly condemned. To the second—does the infidel objector mean to affirm, what his question implies, that he who commits any single immoral act can have no moral principle? What havoc amongst infidels would this decision effect! Rahab did possess faith as a 10 For we have heard [l]how the LORD dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt; and what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly destroyed.

11 And as soon as we had heard these things, our[m] hearts did melt, neither did there remain[5] any more courage in any man because of you; for the LORD your God, [n]he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath.[6]

12 Now therefore, I pray you, swear unto me by the LORD, since [o]I have showed you kindness, that ye will also show kindness [p]unto my father's house, and give me a true token:

13 And that ye will save alive my father, and my mother, and my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death.

14 And the men answered her, Our life for yours,[7] if ye utter not this our business. And it shall be, [q]when the LORD hath given us the land, that we will deal kindly and truly with thee.

15 Then she [r]let them down by a cord through the window: for her house was upon the town-wall, and she dwelt upon the wall.[8]

16 And she said unto them, [s]Get you to the mountain,[9] lest the pursuers meet you; and hide yourselves there three days, until the pursuers be returned: and afterward may ye go your way.

17 And the men said unto her, We will be blameless[t] of this thine oath which thou hast made us swear:

18 Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread[1] in the window which thou didst[2] let us down by: and thou shalt [u]bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee.

19 And it shall be, that whosoever [x]shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street, [v]his blood shall be upon his head, and we will be guiltless; and whosoever shall be with thee in the house, [w]his blood shall be on our head, if any hand be upon him.

20 And if thou utter this our business, then we will be quit of thine oath which thou hast made us to swear.[3]

21 And she said, According[4] unto your words, so be it. And she sent them away, and they departed: and she bound the scarlet line in the window.

22 And they went, and came unto the mountain, and abode there three days, until the pursuers were returned. And the pursuers sought them throughout all the way, [y]but found them not.

23 ¶ So the two men returned, and descended from the mountain, and passed over, and came to Joshua the son of Nun, and told him all things that befell them:

24 And they said unto Joshua, [z]Truly the LORD hath delivered into our hands all the land: for even all the inhabitants of the country do [5]faint because of us.

CHAPTER III.

1 Joshua cometh to Jordan. 2 The officers instruct the people concerning their passage. 7 The Lord encourageth Joshua. 9 Joshua encourageth the people. 14 The waters of Jordan are divided.

AND Joshua [a]rose early in the [1]morning; and they removed from Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

2 ¶ And it came to pass after [b]three days, that the officers went through the host;

3 And they commanded the people, saying, When ye see [c]the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, and the priests the Levites bearing it, [d]then ye shall remove from your place, and go after it.

4 Yet there [e]shall be a space between you and it, about [f]two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it; that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way heretofore.[2]

5 ¶ And Joshua said unto the people, [g]Sanctify yourselves: for to-morrow the LORD will do [h]wonders among you.

3 The scrupulosity of the spies in defining the condition of their oath, under all the tortures of a vigilant police, and if discovered, impending execution, indicates a high tone of moral feeling and principle, produced under the Mosaic government. Amidst the wilderness of Jewish sin it is pleasing to discover this moral oasis. To their national honour be it recorded that, amidst all their sins, they have still retained a high sense of honour in remembering promises, observing treaties, and requiting kindness.—C.

4 The case of this woman is very remarkable. Some of her expressions, especially those in ver. 11, indicate a distinct acknowledgment of Jehovah. Whatever may have been the means by which her knowledge had been acquired, surely she had been made the subject of the influence of God's own Spirit. Her meagre opportunities must have been well improved, and she had been blessed of him who declares that 'to him that hath shall be given.' When we contrast her faith with that exhibited, on many occasions, even by the chosen people who had witnessed the wonders of Jehovah's outstretched arm, we are reminded of our Saviour's expressions with reference to the centurion, 'Verily, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.'—J.

principle, for she believed the threatened judgments of God against her wicked countrymen, ver. 9, 10; but as fear overcame Peter, and betrayed him to deny his Lord, so fear overcame Rahab, and betrayed her to utter an untruth. REFLECTIONS.—Proper means and prudent caution must never be neglected when we trust God with the success of our enterprises. Even the best and greatest rulers must see with other people's eyes: and it is a great mercy to a nation when those to whom interesting affairs are committed are persons of fidelity and diligence. The grace of God can easily change the most vile sinner into a choice saint: and true believers will risk their all for God. Nor must we reject them as reprobates who are guilty of some very condemnable actions; there may be true and justifying faith where much sinfulness still works. But it is hard to get rid of a bad character when once fixed, even by repentance and amendment: and that remaining badge of our shame ought to excite us to frequent and bitter sorrow for the sin which occasioned it. God can easily send his terrors to the hearts of his enemies, so that the boldest shall tremble: and often sinners' frights are presages of their fall. But the faith of God's promises will powerfully influence a person to a regard for the people of God, even at the expense of natural affections. And when we cannot prevent the ruin of our city or nation, we ought cautiously to provide for the safety of ourselves and kindred. And all agreements, especially such as concern life and death, ought to be made with the greatest exactness. We must never mingle with the world which lieth in wickedness, if we would not be condemned with it. Faith, which foresees the ruin of the ungodly, will urge us to save ourselves from among them: and the lives that are jeopardied for Christ's service shall be secured by his mercy. But the most prudent means ought to be used for our safety, even while we trust our all to God and his redeeming grace. And God can easily make such as are weak encouragers of his strongest saints.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 1. Came to Jordan. The snows that cover Hermon are the real sources of the river Jordan. It has two historical sources:—one at the base of a rounded hill in the midst of a marshy plain. On the hill once stood the border city of Dan. The other is four miles eastward, on a terrace on the southern declivity of Hermon, beside the ruins of Banias or Cæsarea-Philippi. The highest perennial source of the Jordan is not named in history; it is in the bottom of a valley at the western base of Hermon, near the town of Hasbeiya, and 12 miles north of Dan.

6 And Joshua spake unto the priests, saying, Take[i] up the ark of the covenant, and pass over before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, [k]as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.

8 And thou shalt command the priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye shall [l]stand still in Jordan.[3]

9 ¶ And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, Come hither, and [m]hear the words of the LORD your God.

10 And Joshua said, [n]Hereby ye shall know that [o]the living God is [p]among you, and that he will without fail [q]drive out from before you the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Jebusites.

11 Behold, the ark of the covenant of [r]the LORD of all the earth [s]passeth over before you into Jordan.

12 Now therefore take you [t]twelve men out of the tribes of Israel, out of every tribe a man.

13 And it shall come to pass, as soon as the soles of the feet of the priests that bear the ark of the LORD, the Lord of all the earth, shall rest in the waters of Jordan, that [u]the waters of Jordan shall be cut off from the waters that come down from above; and they [x]shall stand upon an heap.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the people removed from their tents, to pass over Jordan,[4] and the priests [y]bearing the ark of the covenant before the people;

15 And as they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and [z]the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water, (for [a]Jordan overfloweth all his banks all the time of harvest,)

16 That the waters which [b]came down from above stood and [b]rose up upon an heap, very far from the city Adam, that is beside [c]Zaretan:[5] and those that came down toward [d]the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, failed, and [e]were cut off; and the people passed over right against Jericho.

17 And the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD [f]stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan, and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground, until all the people were passed clean over Jordan.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Twelve men are appointed to take twelve stones for a memorial out of Jordan. 9 Twelve other stones are set up in the midst of Jordan. 10, 19 The people pass over. 14 God magnifieth Joshua. 20 The twelve stones are pitched in Gilgal.

AND it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed [a]over Jordan, that the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Take[b] you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man;

3 And command ye them, saying, Take you hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where the priests' feet stood firm, [c]twelve stones; and ye shall carry them over with you, and leave them [d]in the lodging-place where ye shall lodge this night.

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had [e]prepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man;

5 And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the LORD your God [f]into the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel;

As to the evidence, besides the veracity of the historian, we have the consent of a whole nation, and that consent so interwoven with institutions, and records, and rights of property, that he who calls it in question must call in question every possible record of ancient and modern history.—C.

About 5 miles south of Dan the three unite, and after a course of 6 miles more the Jordan expands into the Lake Merom, and in about 28 miles farther it enters the Lake or Sea of Gennesareth or Tiberias. From this lake it pursues its course, still southerly, through a dreary valley till it empties itself into the Dead Sea. The whole course, computing the windings of the stream, is about 160 miles. Travellers differ greatly as to its width; but from the average it may be estimated at about 90 feet. That it formerly overflowed its banks the Scriptures assert, ver. 15; 1 Ch. 12. 15; this some travellers deny. No rational man can doubt the Scripture statement, and recent researches prove it to be strictly accurate. That it rises an average of about 9 feet, by the melting of the snow upon Lebanon and Hermon, is agreed upon all hands. This passage took place in April, when the river is broadest and deepest; a fact so far important as it stultifies the infidel conjecture of some German neologists, who pretend that a rock having fallen stopped the stream, and that Joshua, taking advantage of the circumstance, affirmed that it was a miracle, and so encouraged the people to follow. Surely these are the men who, 'counting themselves wise, become fools!' C. and P.]

Ver. 15. [Hebrew: 'For the Jordan was full up to all its banks all the days of harvest.' This clause is explanatory of the statement that the priests dipped their feet in the brim of the river. Under ordinary circumstances this would be impossible, for the real channel of the river has perpendicular banks from 6 to 8 feet deep, always swept by the torrent. In early spring, however—the time of harvest in the valley of Jericho—the river rises over these banks and floods the flat bottom of the narrow ravine through which the channel flows. The priests bearing the ark could, without any danger, dip their feet in the water which overflowed the banks. The opening of a passage through the river at such a season was the greater miracle. Had it been late in the summer it might have been thought that natural causes operated; but in harvest—the time of the overflow—the finger of God must have been manifest to all. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Let us always press forward in the way of our duty, notwithstanding foreseen difficulties attending it. And when we have done our utmost, the Lord can step in and clear our passage. Let us follow his word as our guide, and our way will be right. But let us always set Jesus, the Ark of the covenant, before us, by faith depend on him, and with due reverence follow his example; and if we cannot get rid of faults, let us detest them. Let ministers go before others, as he-goats before the flock; and though they should be more exposed than others, that Christ, whose name they bear in their ministrations, shall be their protection; for God highly honours those that honour him; and those who are comforted and encouraged of God should encourage and strengthen their brethren. In the moment of difficulty the Lord will be seen. The greatness of the difficulty shall but the more magnify the power of God in overcoming it. And Christ will be the protection of his people in trouble or death, till they be all clean passed over into Canaan above. If then I expect a noted appearance of God for my relief, let me make solemn preparation for it, separating myself from every sinful lust and carnal care. Always seeking the honour which cometh from above, let me improve God's present manifestations of power and love as pledges of more, nay, of eternal and immediate enjoyment of him. Let no occasional advantage, gained by the opposition made to my happiness, or to the church of God, dismay me; for the Lord sits King upon the floods, and is mightier than the noise of many waters.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 4. Twelve men whom he had prepared. By instructing them to come without any other burden, and informing them of their specific duty; and, as is not improbable, by exercising them to lift and carry such stones as would give to future times a remarkable specimen of their strength, as well as a memorial of the miracle the Lord had wrought for the passage of his people—a lively emblem of every one who would, in any office, minister to God and his church. He must be prepared, he must bear upon his shoulder his appointed burden; and when laid down, it is to form a memorial of the grace and power of God. C.]

ANCIENT JERICHO—WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL FIRST CAMPED. [Joshua, iv:19.]—"And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the first month and encamped in Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho." Jericho is a city of great antiquity. It is situated in what is called the plain of the Jordan, and is consequently over against the ford of the river where, under the leadership of Joshua, the Israelites crossed. It is about 6 miles west of the Jordan and about 8 miles northwest of the Dead Sea. It once had a king, and its walls were so wide that houses were built upon them. Here the sons of the prophet sought retirement from the world. The city rose to great influence during the reign of Herod, who had his residence here. He fortified it and built many palaces, which he named after his friends. Here he died, and it was in the amphitheater of Jericho that the news of his death was announced to the assembled soldiers and people by Salome.

6 That this may be [s]a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come,[1] saying, What mean ye by these stones?

7 Then ye shall answer them, That the waters of Jordan were [h]cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and [t]these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel for ever.

8 And the children of Israel did so as Joshua commanded, and took up twelve stones[2] out of the midst of Jordan, as the LORD spake unto Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there.

9 ¶ And Joshua set up twelve stones in [k]the midst of Jordan,[3] in the place where the feet of the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood: and they are there unto this day.[4]

10 ¶ For the priests which bare the ark stood in the midst of Jordan, [l]until everything was finished that the LORD commanded Joshua to speak unto the people, according to all that Moses [m]commanded Joshua: and the people [n]hasted[5] and passed over.

11 And it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over, that the ark of the LORD passed over, and the priests, in the presence of the people.

12 And [o]the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh, passed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses spake unto them.[6]

13 About forty thousand prepared for war[p] passed over before the LORD unto battle, to the plains of Jericho.

14 ¶ On that day the LORD [q]magnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel; and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life.

15 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

16 Command the priests that bear [r]the ark of the testimony, that they come up out of Jordan.

17 Joshua therefore commanded the priests, saying, [s]Come ye up out of Jordan.

18 And it came to pass, when the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD were come up out of the midst of Jordan, and the [t]soles of the priests' feet were lifted [7]up unto the dry land, that the waters of Jordan returned unto their place, and flowed[8] over all his banks, as they did before.

19 ¶ And the people came up out of Jordan on the [u]tenth day of the first month, and encamped in [v]Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho.

20 ¶ And those [x]twelve stones, which they took out of Jordan, did Joshua pitch in [9]Gilgal.

21 And he spake unto the children of Israel, saying, When your children shall [y]ask their fathers in time to come,[1] saying, What mean these stones?

22 Then [z]ye shall let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land.

23 For the LORD your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as the LORD your God did to the Red Sea, [a]which he dried up from before us, until we were gone over;

24 That all the people of the earth [b]might know the hand of the LORD, that it is mighty; that ye might [c]fear the LORD your God for ever.[2]

AND it came to pass, when [a]all the kings of the Amorites, which were on the side of Jordan westward, and all the kings of the Canaanites, which were by the sea, [b]heard that the LORD had dried up the waters of Jordan from before the children of Israel, until we were passed over, that their heart melted; neither was there spirit in them any more, because of the children of Israel.

2 ¶ At that time the LORD said unto Joshua, Make thee [c]sharp knives, and [d]circumcise again the children of Israel the second time.[1]

3 And Joshua made him sharp knives, and circumcised the children of Israel at the hill of the foreskins.[2]

4 And this is the cause why Joshua did circumcise: All the people that came out of Egypt,

But this new reading is unsupported by Hebrew MSS.; and therefore to be rejected. Besides these twelve stones would not, as supposed, remain always visible, but would, when the swollen river had returned to its usual bed, form a second witness to the wondrous works of the Lord.—C.

gious instruction founded upon the original document, and perpetuating the history. A system which embodies, vitalizes, and perpetuates tradition, but a system as different from mere tradition as a house builded upon a rock differs from a house builded upon sand. As an example of tradition without scriptural authority take Mat. 15. 3, 6; Col. 2. 8. For the authority of traditions, that is, records delivered on scriptural warrant, see 2 Th. 3. 6; 1 Co. 11. 2, in which last-cited passage the ordinances, or traditions, evidently comprehend the Lord's supper. To traditions so embodied the infidel can produce no rational objection. Read ver. 20–23. See Leslie's Short Way with the Deists, and Dwight on the Lord's Supper. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—No care or labour of our own should ever hinder us from that which tends to the immediate honour of God, and the commemoration of his wonderful works. And if not one Israelite, however feeble, perish in trouble or in death, surely it becomes all to keep his mighty works in everlasting remembrance. Never let us hunt after pomp or finery in our memorials; for God has chosen the weak and foolish things of this world to confound all earthly glory. Let every accommodation, even in outward things, render us forward and exemplary in duty. If we be called forth to God's work, we may cheerfully leave all our worldly concerns behind us: and if we have God's presence with us, we need not be weary, nor doubt but we shall safely land at last: for though the years of our pilgrimage should be many and sorrowful, they have an appointed end: let us therefore never hurry out of danger till our work in it be finished. But whatever perilous work God allots to us, let us go through it with proper despatch, never with unbelieving haste: and let us always honour those whom God honours by his providence. The religious inquiries of young people should be encouraged and gratified to the uttermost. If we wish them wise when they are old, they ought to be inquisitive when they are young. But if we wish our present mercies to be doubly sweetened, let us compare them with our former ones.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 2. Sharp knives. Knives of flint, as in the marginal translation. The use of flint for knives, arrows, spear-heads, chisels, and hatchets has been common in many nations. Specimens of some, or all of them, are occasionally found in almost every country of Europe, as well as of Asia. The Egyptians, according to Herodotus (b. ii.), used them in opening bodies for embalming, and some of the judaizing Abyssinian Christians use them still in

THE CHURCH AT GILGAL—WHERE THE ISRAELITES KEPT THE FIRST PASSOVER IN THE PROMISED LAND. [Joshua, v:10.]—"And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even in the plains of Jericho." This was the site of the first camp of the Israelites after they crossed over the river Jordan, the place at which they passed the first night in the Promised Land, and where the 12 stones were set up which had been taken from the bed of the stream. In the above view we have a picture of a church built by the Greek Christians. This is perhaps the most interesting building between the Judean mountains and the River Jordan. This is about 20 miles from Jerusalem, and to reach it one makes a descent of 3800 feet over the rockiest and roughest road perhaps in Christendom. There are many ruins found in this plain, but the Judean hills overlooking it are the same that they were when Joshua encamped here with the children of Israel.

that were males, even [a]all the men of war, died in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt.

5 Now all the people that came out were circumcised; but [b]all the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they [c]had not circumcised.

6 For the children of Israel walked [d]forty years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: unto whom the LORD sware that [e]he would not show them the land which the LORD [f]sware unto their fathers that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

7 And their children, whom [g]he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised: for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way.

8 And it came to pass, when they had done circumcising all the people,[3] that they abode in their places in the camp till they were whole.

9 And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away the [m]reproach of Egypt from off you: wherefore the name of the place is called [n]Gilgal unto this day.[4]

10 ¶ And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and [o]kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even, in the plains of Jericho.

11 And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the passover, [p]unleavened cakes and parched corn in the selfsame day.

12 ¶ And the manna [q]ceased on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land; neither had the children of Israel manna any more; [r]but they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year.[5]

13 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he [s]lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there stood [t]a man over against him, with his sword drawn in his hand: and Joshua went unto him, and said unto him, Art thou for us, or for our adversaries?

14 And he said, Nay; but as [u]captain of the host of the LORD am I now come. And Joshua [v]fell on his face to the earth, and did worship, and said unto him, [w]What saith my LORD unto his servant?

15 And the captain of the LORD's host said unto Joshua, [x]Loose thy shoe from off thy [6]foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy. And Joshua did so.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Jericho is shut up. 2 God instructeth Joshua how to besiege it. 12 The city is compassed. 17 It is accursed. 20 The walls fall down. 22 Rahab is saved. 26 The man that buildeth Jericho again is laid under a curse.

NOW Jericho[1] was straitly[2] shut up [a]because of the children of Israel: none went out, and none came in.

2 ¶ And the [b]LORD said unto Joshua, See, I [c]have given into thine hand Jericho, and the king thereof, and the mighty men of valour.

3 And ye shall [d]compass the city, all ye men of war, and go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days.

4 And seven priests shall bear before the ark [e]seven trumpets of rams' horns;[3] and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and the priests shall blow with the trumpets.

5 And it shall come to pass, that [f]when they make a long blast with the ram's horn, and when ye hear the sound of the trumpet, [g]all the people shall shout with a great shout; and the wall of the city shall fall down[4] flat,[5] and the people shall ascend up, every man straight before him.

6 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun called the priests, and said unto them, [h]Take up the ark of the covenant, and let seven[6] priests bear seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD.

7 And he said unto [i]the people, Pass on, and compass the city, and let him that is armed pass on before the ark of the LORD.

4 It would appear that Gilgal was the name of the place before the exodus, for Moses describes the Canaanites as dwelling over against Gilgal. De. 11. 30. The meaning in this passage does not appear to be that a new name was given to the place, but rather that a new meaning and significancy were attached to the old name. The word Gilgal means 'a circle,' and also 'a rolling away.' A similar play upon the meaning of a word occurs in the case of Ephrath and Bethel is an example of an old name having attached to it a new significancy. This explanation—simple, natural, and in full accordance with the genius of oriental languages—removes at once the objections which have been brought against the passage. A.

the rite of circumcision (Ludolph, Hist. of Ethiopia, b. iii. c. 1).—Circumcise again. Not in allusion to any general act of circumcision at, or soon after, the exodus; but as the first time, at eight days old, Ge. 17. 12, had been neglected, God now allows and commands a second opportunity of sealing and ratifying the national covenant; just as the people were allowed to celebrate the passover in the days of Hezekiah, contrary to the letter of the law, in the second instead of the first month, 2 Ch. 30. 2; 3. 15. C.]

Ver. 9. [Reproach of Egypt. The reproach of Egypt seems to mean the reproach of having been slaves and without a country. Now, by the sign of the covenant they become God's freedmen, and have taken possession of the land which he sware to give their fathers.—Note, There is no real reproach but the slavery of sin; but 'if the Son make us free,' by circumcising our hearts, and admitting us into his covenant of promise, Jn. 5. 36; Ep. 2. 12, 19, then is our reproach rolled away, and then 'are we free indeed.' C.]

And so the Lord equally satisfies his people with the old doctrines, and new discoveries of truth, with old faith and new experience. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Sad is the case of those against whom the Lord is come up as an enemy. How can their hearts be courageous or their hands be strong? Even his secret terrors can bring them into the agonies of death. The sins of parents often, in a fearful manner, bereave their children of the seals of God's covenant, or their happy virtue: but his mercy can remove the reproach and plague in his time. And by circumcision of their hearts, by feasting them on the flesh and blood of his Son, by giving them foretastes of the heavenly joys, and manifestations of himself as their leader and protector, he must prepare his people for their spiritual warfare. Such then as would courageously fight his battles should first solemnly devote themselves to him, and act faith upon him in the use of his sacraments. But let us use the gospel manna while we have it; the time is at hand when it shall be no more offered: and let us never expect extraordinary supplies when ordinary can be had. But if Jesus appear for our direction or encouragement in doubtful or perilous circumstances, let us entertain his visits with the utmost reverence, purity, and the readiest obedience.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 26. Cursed be the man before the Lord that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho. A new city called Jericho appears to have been built at no great distance from the site of the old. Ju. 1. 16. 3. 13. But this curse of Joshua prevented the rebuilding of the original Jericho till the time of Ahab, about 530 years after the anathema was pronounced. Hiel of Bethel, at that time, dared to rebuild it; but, according to the threatening, his eldest son was taken away when the foundations were laid, and when he set up the gates he was left childless, 1 Ki. 16. 34. C.—The reason of this remarkable curse is not stated. We can scarcely suppose that it is a mere arbitrary anathema. The licentiousness of Sodom probably clung to the whole valley, owing perhaps in some degree to the 8 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua had spoken unto the people, that the seven priests, bearing the seven trumpets of rams' horns, passed on [k]before the LORD,[7] and blew with the trumpets; and the ark of the covenant of the LORD followed them.

9 And the armed men went before the priests that blew with the trumpets, and the rereward[8] came after the ark, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

10 And Joshua had commanded the people, saying, Ye shall not shout, nor make any[9] noise with your voice, neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth, [l]until the day I bid you shout; then shall ye shout.

11 So the ark of the LORD compassed[1] the city, going about it once: and they came into the camp, and lodged in the camp.

12 And Joshua rose [m]early[2] in the morning, and the priests took up the ark of the LORD.

13 And seven priests, bearing seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD, went[n] on continually, and blew with the trumpets: and the armed men went before them; but the rereward came after the ark of the LORD, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

14 And the second day they compassed the city once, and returned into the camp: so they did six days.

15 And[o] it came to pass on the seventh day,[3] that they rose early, about the dawning of the day,[4] and compassed the city after the same manner seven times: only on that day they compassed the city seven times.

16 And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, [p]Shout; for the LORD hath given you the city.

17 ¶ And the city shall be [q]accursed,[5] even it, and all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because [r]she hid the messengers that we sent.

[l] The ark of the covenant, so called because it contained the two tables on which the covenant was inscribed, was the symbol of the divine presence. It is particularly stated, that it compassed the city; because it was by whose presence it declared, whose mighty power it was at the utterance of a sound to cast down the walls; he who said to Joshua, "I have given into thine hand Jericho."—P.

[2] The mention of the early morning is not without its instructive meaning. All human work is chiefly effected by rising early. The mechanic goes to work early, the husbandman early, the student early, the statesman early, and the clergyman early; and the Christian, where health permits, to the work of faith, and labour of love, "rises right early."—C.

[3] One of these days of marching round Jericho was on Sabbath. But the people acted under no "this or that authority"—no authority that has really no existence—to hinder anything in operation of the law which exempts from its operation all works of necessity and mercy, nor did it hinder it any longer than work or procession, such as this marching, really was.—C.

[4] The special note of the dawning of the day, on the seventh time of compassing the city, indicates, as it were, a sacred anxiety to finish God's work. Spiritually it tells us, "He that seeks me early shall find me." "He is not weary in well-doing." The night is far spent, the day is at hand.—C.

[2] The site of Ai has been recently identified. It stood on a rocky ridge on the eastern brow of the mountain chain, commanding a noble view of the Jordan valley. It is about six miles south-east of Bethel, and between them lies the broad plateau on the top of which Abraham pitched his tent. Ai has an evil name in the days of Isaiah, so that it is said, "the men went up."—P.

20 ¶ So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that [x]the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.

21 And they [y]utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword.[6]

22 ¶ But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, [z]as ye sware unto her.

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her [7]kindred, and left them [a]without the camp of Israel.[8]

24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: only [b]the silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the LORD.

25 And Joshua [c]saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had; and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this [9]day; because she hid the messengers which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho.

26 ¶ And Joshua [d]adjured them at that time, saying, [e]Cursed be the man before the LORD that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his firstborn, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it.

27 So the LORD [f]was with Joshua; and his [g]fame was noised throughout all the country.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Achan's trespass. 2 The Israelites are smitten at Ai. 6 Joshua's complaint. 10 God instructeth him what to do. 16 Achan is taken by the lot. 19 His confession. 24 He and all he had are destroyed in the valley of Achor.

BUT the [a]children of Israel committed a trespass in the accursed thing:[1] for [2]Achan the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the [b]accursed thing: and [c]the anger of the LORD was kindled against the children of Israel.

2 ¶ And Joshua sent men from Jericho to [d]Ai, which is beside [e]Beth-aven, on the east side of Beth-el, and spake unto them, saying, Go up and [f]view the country. And the men went up and viewed Ai.[3]

3 And they returned to Joshua, and said relaxing nature of the climate. Rhia, the only modern representative of Jericho, is a poor filthy hamlet. The houses are built of rough stones, and covered with straw and brushwood. It is a remarkable fact that the people are noted as being the most indolent and licentious in Palestine. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—God takes a peculiar pleasure in honouring his ministers and ordinances; in trying the faith and patience of his people at their setting forth in their spiritual warfare; and in showing them that their success is not by human might or power, but by his Spirit. There is need, therefore, of patient perseverance in using the means of grace, though we see not their immediate good effect: for if we follow God's ark, we shall speed at last, and see his salvation, and he can accomplish the most remarkable events by the weakest of instruments. By the bearing of Jesus' name, and proclaiming his gospel before sinful men, particularly on his Sabbaths, what destruction is made of strongholds of inward corruptions and high imaginations, deep-rooted customs and laws of iniquity; of heathen and Popish errors, idolatries, and superstitions, supported by all the principalities and powers of hell and earth! What in us is natural he purifies for his service; and what is sinful he devotes to irreparable ruin. Nor must we murmur at the severity wherewith God executes his judgments: he is just and righteous unto him, [f]Let not all the people go up; but let about two or three thousand men[4] go up and smite Ai, and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few.[5]

4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men; and they [h]fled before the men of Ai.

5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men: for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them in the going down:[6] wherefore [i]the hearts of the people melted,[7] and became as water.

6 ¶ And Joshua [k]rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the LORD until the even-tide, he and the elders of Israel, and [l]put dust upon their heads.

7 And Joshua said, Alas, O Lord GOD, wherefore[m] hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? [n]Would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!

8 O LORD, [o]what shall I say, when Israel turneth their backs[8] before their enemies!

9 For the Canaanites, and all the inhabitants of the land, shall hear of it, and [p]shall environ us round, and cut off our name from the earth: and [q]what wilt thou do unto thy great name?

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, Get thee up; [r]wherefore liest[9] thou thus upon thy face?

11 Israel [s]hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them: for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

12 Therefore[t] the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they were accursed; neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you.

13 Up, [u]sanctify the people, and say, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow; for thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [v]There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.

14 In [w]the morning therefore ye shall be brought according to your tribes: and it shall be, that the tribe which the LORD [x]taketh[1] shall come according to the families thereof: and the family which the LORD shall take shall come by households; and the household which the LORD shall take shall come man by man.

15 And it shall be, that he that is taken with the accursed thing [y]shall be burnt with fire, he and all[2] that he hath; because he hath transgressed the covenant of the LORD, and because he hath [z]wrought folly[3] in Israel.

16 ¶ So Joshua [a]rose up early in the morning, and brought Israel by their tribes; and the tribe of [b]Judah was taken:

17 And he brought the family of Judah; and he took the family of the Zarhites:[4] and he brought the family of the Zarhites man by man; and Zabdi was taken:

18 And he brought his household man by man; and [c]Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, was taken.

19 ¶ And Joshua said unto Achan, [d]My son, give, I pray thee, glory to the LORD God of Israel,[5] and make confession unto him; and tell me now what thou hast done; hide it not from me.

20 And Achan answered Joshua, and said, [e]Indeed I have sinned[6] against the LORD God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done:

21 When [f]I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment,[7] and two hundred shekels of silver,[8] and a wedge[9] of gold of fifty [1]shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.

22 ¶ So Joshua sent messengers, and they ran unto the tent;[2] and, behold, it was hid in his tent, and the silver under it.

23 And they took them out of the midst of the tent, and brought them unto Joshua, and unto all the children of Israel, and laid[3] them out before the LORD.

24 ¶ And Joshua, and all Israel with him, took Achan the son of Zerah, and the silver, and the garment, and the wedge of gold, and his [2]sons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that he had; and they brought them unto the valley of Achor.

25 And Joshua said, Why hast thou [k]troubled us? the LORD shall trouble thee this day. And all Israel [l]stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire, after they had stoned them with stones.[4]

26 And they [m]raised over him a great heap

in all his works. They that will harden their heart against him must, when too late, find their ruin inevitable. But certain and extensive is that salvation which is marked with the blood of the Son of God! In virtue hereof, such as were once infamous in wickedness become as noted in gifts and grace. Such as in this time of his grace submit to his terms of peace he will in no wise cast out; and their relations shall share of manifold mercies on their account. But dreadful and inevitable is the ruin of such as attempt to rear up what God in anger hath cast down.

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—How terrible a sin is sacrilege, especially when it is presumptuously committed! It brings the most tremendous plagues upon persons and nations. One sinner often destroys much good; and becomes a plague to himself and to the societies with which he is connected. But terrors of conscience will at last most surely attend indulged wickedness: and the attempts begun in sloth or self-confidence, often issue in shame and despair. It is becoming, therefore, for the most courageous and intrepid to humble themselves under the mighty hand of God, and to tremble for fear of his displeasure. The choicest saints are too ready to be overmuch discouraged by the alarming frowns of God's providence, and in their anguish to utter words unadvised! and yet, of stones unto this day. So the LORD [m]turned from the fierceness of his anger: wherefore the name of that place was called The valley of Achor,[o] unto this day.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 God encourageth Joshua. 3 The stratagem whereby Ai was taken. 29 The king thereof is hanged. 30 Joshua buildeth an altar, 32 writeth the law on stones, 33 propoundeth blessings and cursings.

AND the LORD said unto Joshua, [a]Fear not, neither be thou dismayed; take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai: see, [b]I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land.

2 And thou [c]shalt do to Ai and her king as thou didst unto Jericho and her king: only the[d] spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves. Lay thee an[e] ambush for the city behind it.

3 ¶ So Joshua arose, and [f]all the people of war, to go up against Ai: and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty[1] men of valour, and sent them away [g]by night.

4 And he commanded them, saying, Behold, ye shall lie [h]in wait against the city, even behind the city; go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready:

5 And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city; and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, [i]that we will flee before them,

6 (For they will come out after us,) till we have drawn[2] them from the city; for [k]they will say, They flee before us, as at the first: therefore we will flee before them.

7 Then [l]ye shall rise up from the ambush, and seize upon the city: for the LORD your God will deliver it into your hand.

8 And it shall be, when ye have taken the city, that ye shall [m]set the city on fire:[3] according to the commandment of the LORD shall ye do. [n]See, I have commanded you.

9 ¶ Joshua therefore sent them forth: and they went to lie in ambush, and abode between Beth-el[o] and Ai, on the west side of Ai: but Joshua lodged that night among the people.[4]

10 And Joshua [p]rose up early in the morning, and numbered the people, and went up, he and the elders of Israel, before the people to Ai.

11 And all the people, even the people of war that were with him, went up, and drew

3 It seems probable that this command was only to kindle a fire within the city, the smoke of which should be to the rest an indication that they had succeeded. The city was afterwards burned, ver. 28, but it seems unlikely that they should forthwith have set the city on fire before taking the spoil, which was on this occasion to be divided among the people.—I.

7 From the conduct of the king of Ai, and from other circumstances, we may infer that the Canaanites were but imperfectly versant in the art of war. Moreover they were, for their wickedness, visited with the spirit of infatuation. It was not Joshua's skill and courage, but Jehovah's guidance and aid, which gave to the Israelites their conquests. From many circumstances we have reason to conclude that till the time of David the Hebrews, notwithstanding their many victories, had little real military knowledge.—I.

9 It is probable that this was the preconcerted signal, at the sight of which the men in ambush knew they were to arise. The Lord himself intimated to Joshua the proper time to make the movement. A flag ought be attached to the top of the spear, (as the rabbins, with great probability, suppose) which would make it conspicuous at a considerable distance. Some have supposed, especially from the statement in ver. 26, that this action of Joshua was figurative, and that, like the lifting up of Moses' hand in the battle with Amalek, it was a token of the divine presence and pledge of God's assistance, and they would, in the one case, as in the other, connect the victory with the action: but we should be cautious of searching for figurative meanings, when not led to them by the word of God itself. The indulging of this spirit has, in many instances, opened the floodgates of error.—I.

1 The spear most probably bore a flag, to render the sign more readily visible at a distance.—C.

nigh, and came before the city, and pitched on the north side of Ai: now there was a valley between them and Ai.

12 And he took about [q]five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of the city.[5]

13 And when they had set the people, even all the host that was on the north of the city, and [r]their liers in wait on the west of the city, Joshua went that night into the midst of the valley.[6]

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw it, that they hasted, and rose up early; and [s]the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain: but he [t]wist not[7] that there were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

15 And Joshua and all Israel made as if they were beaten before them, and fled [u]by the way of the wilderness.

16 And all the people that were in Ai were called together to pursue after them; and they pursued after Joshua, and were [x]drawn away from the city.

17 And there was not a [y]man left in Ai or Beth-el that went not out after Israel: and they left the city open,[8] and pursued after Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto Joshua, [z]Stretch out the spear that[1] is in thy hand toward Ai; for I will give it into thine hand. And Joshua [a]stretched out the spear that he had in his hand toward the city.

19 And the ambush arose quickly out of their place, and they ran as soon as he had stretched out his hand: and they entered into the city, and took it, and hasted and set the city on fire.

20 And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they saw, and, behold, the [b]smoke of the city ascended up to heaven; and they had no [c]power to flee this way or that way: and the [d]people that fled to the wilderness turned back upon the pursuers.

21 And when Joshua and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city ascended, then they turned again, and slew the men of Ai.

22 And the other issued out of the city against them; so they were in the midst of Israel, some on this side, and some on that when the honour of God and the safety of his people lie nearest their heart, a proper sorrow, in such a state, is highly becoming. With impartial care, and proper expedition, should ruinous scandals and crimes be inquired into, and animadverted upon, for the preservation of churches and nations. If we do not destroy sin it will destroy us. And it is mad to indulge ourselves in secret wickedness, when God can so easily bring it to light in the most public and shameful manner. It is desirable, yea, even hopeful, when criminals are brought to a candid and kindly confession of their sin: and yet it is necessary to have their punishment as certain and striking as possible, that others may see, and hear, and fear to do such things; yea, in some cases, to keep up the standing memorials of it.

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—Learn, my soul, that whenever I put away the accursed thing I may expect comfort from God: and that such as honour God with the first-fruits of their substance are gainers at last; while those who greedily grasp the Lord's share become inconceivable losers: that all the people of God ought to strive together in their spiritual warfare: that prudence and caution are as necessary as strength to insure success: that well-timed yielding procures victory as well as pacifies great offences: and that divine assurances of success inspire men with courage and boldness, notwithstanding former disappointments. Let me here behold how God qualifies his armies and infatuates his enemies. Short is the rejoicing of the wicked! and the prosperity of fools will destroy them. But they who fight the Lord's battles receive their glorious reward, when the end of ringleaders in presumptuous rebellion against the Lord is in shame and confusion. Whatever then God requires me to do, let me do it with all my might. Never

MOUNT EBAL—WHERE JOSHUA BUILT AN ALTAR. [Joshua, viii: 30.]—"Then Joshua built an altar unto the Lord God of Israel in Mount Ebal." The traveler in passing from Jerusalem northward to Nazareth comes to the entrance of the valley between Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal at Jacob's well. These mountains so come together as to form a natural amphitheater. Mount Ebal forms the northern side of the fertile valley in which ancient Shechem was situated. It rises to a height of 2986 feet. Upon this mountain the curse for disobedience to the law was pronounced, while the blessing for obedience was given from Mount Gerizim. Its modern Arabic name is Jebel Eslamiyah. This is from a female saint whose tomb is standing on the eastern part of the ridge a little before the highest point is reached. The acoustic properties of the valley between the two mountains have been tested, and it is said that a man's voice uttered in the valley can be distinctly heard across the amphitheater formed here by the two mountains side: and they smote them, so that they [d]let none of them remain or escape.

23 ¶ And[e] the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field, in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, until they were consumed, that all the Israelites [f]returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of [g]Ai.

26 For Joshua [h]drew not his hand back, wherewith he stretched out the spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

27 Only[i] the cattle, and the spoil of that city, Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the word of the LORD which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap [k]for ever, even a desolation unto this day.

29 And the king of Ai he [l]hanged[2] on a tree until even-tide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcass down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raise[m] thereon a great heap of stones,[3] that remaineth unto this day.

30 ¶ Then Joshua [n]built an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in mount Ebal;[4]

31 As Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, An altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron; and they [o]offered thereon burnt-offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace-offerings.

32 And he [p]wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he[5] wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

33 And [q]all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark, and on that side, before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well [r]the stranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount[6] Ebal; as Moses, the servant of the LORD, had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

34 And afterward [s]he read all the words

There is nothing, however, either impossible or incredible in the supposition that Joshua marched direct from Ai. The way was open. ## CHAPTER IX.

1 The kings combine against Israel. 3 The Gibeonites by craft obtain a league. 16 For which they are condemned to perpetual bondage.

AND it came to pass, when all the kings which were [a]on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coasts of the great sea[1] over against [2]Lebanon, [b]the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof,

2 That they [c]gathered themselves together, to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one accord.[3]

3 ¶ And when the inhabitants of [d]Gibeon heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai,

4 They did work [e]wilily, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors,[4] and took old sacks[5] upon their asses, and wine bottles, old, and rent, and bound up;[6]

5 And old shoes and clouted[7] upon their feet, and old garments upon them; and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy.

6 And they went to Joshua unto the camp, at Gilgal, and said unto him, and to the men of Israel, We be come [f]from a far country; now therefore make ye a league with us.

7 And the men of Israel said unto the [g]Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us; and [h]how shall we make a league with you?

8 And they said unto Joshua, [i]We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye? and from whence come ye?

9 And they said unto him, From [k]a very far country thy servants are come because of the name of the LORD thy God: [l]for we have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt,

10 And all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbon, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashtaroth.

let my covenanting with God be deferred till I am settled in the world: and let no carnal concern hinder my regard to the one thing needful. If I am in the way of my duty God will grant me special protection. While I serve God with his own, and depend on the atonement of his Son as the foundation of all my reconcilement and relation to him, and fellowship with him —while I heartily believe and consent to his will—let me do everything in his worship exactly according to his prescriptions; and be careful that my wife, children, and servants be acquainted with his word, and attending on his worship, as well as myself.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—While the people of God are busied in their sacred devotions, the wicked of the world are often occupied in plotting or attempting their destruction. And while infatuated with malice and revenge, they are generally unanimous against God, his cause, and people. But God, in great wisdom and kindness, commonly restrains the more formidable attacks of his enemies till he has prepared his people to receive them. When alarmed by God's mighty works in favour of his people, men are sometimes ready to solicit their friendship, even by hypocrisy and deceit; while those who pretend to do us most honour are inwardly the readiest to impose upon us. Pretences of religion and antiquity are snares extremely meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants: therefore now make ye a league with us.

12 This our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy:

13 And these bottles of wine which we filled were new; and, behold, they be rent: and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey.

14 And the men took of their victuals,[9] and asked[m] not counsel at the mouth of the LORD.[1]

15 And Joshua [n]made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live: and the princes[2] of the congregation sware unto them.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, [o]at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbours, and that they dwelt among them.

17 And the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were [p]Gibeon, and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and [q]Kirjath-jearim.[3]

18 And the children of Israel [r]smote them not, because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel: and all the congregation [s]murmured against the princes.

19 But all the princes said unto all the congregation, We [t]have sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel: now therefore we may not touch them.[4]

20 This we will do to them; we will even let them live, lest [u]wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we sware unto them.

21 And the princes said unto them, Let them live; but [x]let them be hewers of wood, and drawers of water, unto all the congregation;[5] as the princes had [y]promised them.

22 ¶ And Joshua called for them, and he spake unto them, saying, Wherefore have ye beguiled us, saying, We are very far from you; when ye dwell among us?

23 Now therefore ye are [z]cursed;[6] and there shall none of you be freed[7] from being bondmen, and hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the house of my God.

24 And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how that the LORD thy God [a]commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing.

25 And now, behold, we are in thine hand: as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do.

26 And so did he unto them, and [b]delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not.

27 And Joshua [c]made them that day hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the congregation, and for the altar of the LORD, even unto this day, in [d]the place which he should choose.

CHAPTER X.

1 Five kings war against Gibeon. 6 Joshua rescueth it. 10 God fighteth against them with hailstones. 12 The sun and moon stand still at the word of Joshua. 16 The five kings are discovered in a cave. 22 They are brought forth, 24 scornfully used, 26 and hanged. 28 Seven kings more are conquered. 43 Joshua returneth to Gilgal.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedek king of [a]Jerusalem had heard [b]how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it; as he had done to Jericho and her king, so he had done to Ai and her king; and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them;

2 That they [c]feared greatly, because Gibeon was a great city, as one of the royal[1] cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

3 Wherefore [d]Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of [e]Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Japhia king of [f]Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon: [g]for it hath made peace with Joshua, and with the children of Israel.[2] deceiving; and when persons have once begun to lie, it is hard to say where they may stop. Good men may often be deceived by such pretences; for the wisdom of the serpent, even in them, is not always joined with the harmlessness of the dove. And those who are honest themselves, and forward in their actions, are more apt to be imposed on by solemn pretences to religion, and appearances of simple honesty, especially when they do not acknowledge the Lord that he may direct their paths. Covenants once made should be fulfilled with tenderness; and great care ought to be taken that peace and fidelity may go hand in hand. But how amazing are the dispensations of Providence in the superabounding of grace where sin did much abound! By fraud Jacob obtained the blessing which consecrated him and his seed to be the peculiar people of God: and by fraud these accursed Gentiles of Gibeon obtained a covenant, which issued in their attendance on the courts of God, as figures of the gathering of the nations to Christ and his gospel church. Him that cometh to Christ he will in no wise cast out; and if he receive us, we need never complain of the cross which he lays on us. If we serve him, we may bless the day in which carnal liberty is exchanged for spiritual subjection.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 1. Inhabitants of Gibeon. We never heard of a king of Gibeon: hence there is a high probability that the four cities, ch. 9. 17, were small federative states, somewhat like the Hanse towns of Germany, and were not moved to make peace by cowardice or weakness, see ver. 2, but by faith in the divine commission of Moses, and the promise of God to bestow Canaan upon Israel. C.]

Ver. 3. 'It is worthy of note that the termination of the name Adoni-zedek is identical with that of Melchi-zedek, who was king of Jerusalem in Abraham's time. The former signifies 'Lord of righteousness,' the latter 'King of righteousness.' The town of Jarmuth, now called Yarmuk, stands on the top of a hill at the western base of the mountain chain of Judah, about equidistant from Jerusalem and Hebron. Lachish and Eglon were situated on the plain of Philistia, on the leading road to Gaza. P.]

Ver. 11. [I read and examined with much care the details of this remarkable narrative on the battle-field. I was then for the first time fully able to understand it. On hearing the tidings of the alliance against Gibeon, Joshua made a forced night march up from the deep valley of the Jordan, to the summit of the ridge on which Gibeon stands; and ere the sun rose the Israelites defiled into the open plateau round the city. Their sudden appearance, and fierce attack, overwhelmed the Amorites, who were driven back in confusion across the plateau. Joshua pursued them 'along the way that goeth up to Bethhoron,' i.e. up the gentle ascent from the plain of Gibeon to the rocky ridge east of Bethhoron. Here they had outstripped their pursuers; but when they were in 'the going down of Bethhoron' when they were rushing down the stony declivities from the ridge to the town, and from the town to the deep valley of Ajalon westward- 'the Lord cast down great stones from heaven upon them.'

MOSQUE OF WADY 'ALI—NEAR THE PLACE OF JOSHUA'S GREAT VICTORY OVER THE FIVE KINGS. [JOSHUA, x: 10.]—"And the Lord discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah, and unto Makkedah." In the neighborhood of this mosque of Wady 'Ali we are upon a part of the scene where the great battle occurred when Joshua routed the host of the five kings. They are supposed to have fled from Gibeon down by the upper Beth-horon to the lower, and then southward. The places referred to in the tenth chapter of Joshua, which records his great victory, are still to be found in this neighborhood. The mosque of Wady 'Ali was dedicated to Imam Ali. It is a sacred Moslem shrine, overshadowed by a magnificent terebinth tree. The glen in which this mosque stands is beautiful.

5 Therefore[b] the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon and made war against it.

6 ¶ And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua[3] to the camp to [c]Gilgal, saying, [d]Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites, that dwell in [e]the mountains are gathered together against us.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, and all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, [m]Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all [n]night.[4]

10 And the LORD [o]discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to [p]Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah,[q] and unto [r]Makkedah.

11 And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the LORD [s]cast down great stones[5] from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died: they were more which died with hailstones,[6] than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

12 ¶ Then spake Joshua to the LORD, in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he [t]said in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand[7] thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. Is not this written in the book of [u]Jasher?[8] So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day.[9]

14 And there [z]was no day like that before it, or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for the LORD fought for Israel.

It lies in the personal character of Joshua as a man of God and in the personal character of all the sacred historians who have adopted it, confirmed by the miracles they wrought and prophecies they uttered, and especially in the co-existent histories from the period of this event, the concurrence of the whole Jewish nation, and the permanent institutions in which it was embodied. No event in profane history, whether ordinary or extraordinary, comes supported by a fraction of the evidence with which this miracle is presented to our judgment.—C.

3 The neck being the place of the yoke in the horse, ox, &c., which are, in the most literal sense, conquered captives, subdued by man's ingenuity or power, and held and sold at his will; 'to put the feet upon the neck of' is the emblem of their total subjugation to the will of their conquerors. So David expresses his victories over his inveterate enemies, Ps. 18. 40. The custom seems to have been universal. Soter, king of Persia, is said to have put his foot daily upon the neck of the Roman emperor Valerius, whom he had taken captive in battle. Quintus Curtius records an example of the same kind, when Dioxippus, an Athenian, conquered in a single combat with Horratas, a Macedonian, in presence of Alexander, and concluded with putting his foot upon the neck of his prostrate antagonist. To those who have formed their ideas upon European models, the custom may appear unnecessarily degrading; but to men of Asiatic ideas it conveys no such impression. It merely indicates the completeness of subjugation.—C.

15 And [g]Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

16 ¶ But these five kings [a]fled, and hid themselves in a cave at [c]Makkedah.[1]

17 And it was told Joshua, saying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah.

18 And Joshua said, [b]Roll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them;

19 And [c]stay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and smite the hindmost[2] of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: [d]none moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

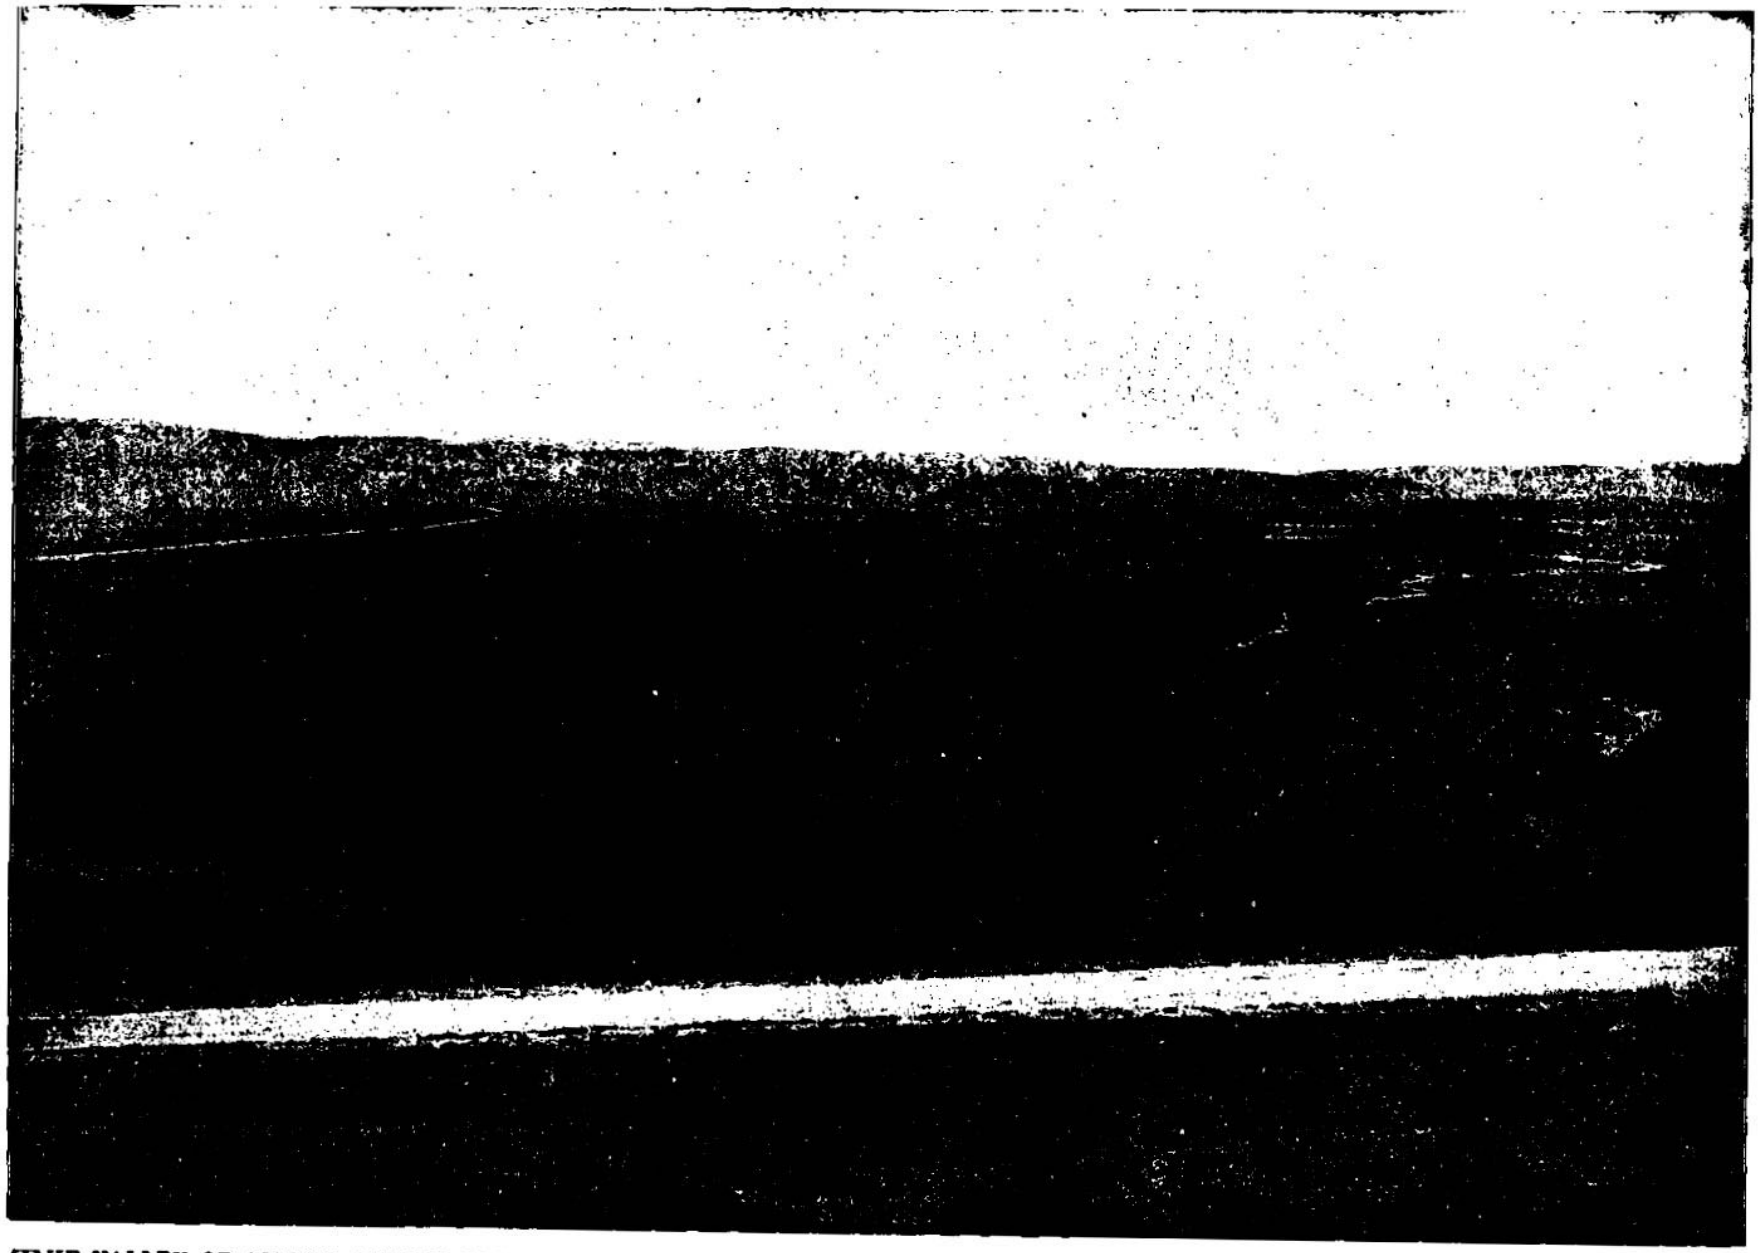
22 ¶ Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

23 And they did so, and brought forth those five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Eglon.

24 And it came to pass, when they brought out those kings unto Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war which went with him, Come near, [e]put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them.[3]

25 And Joshua said unto them, [f]Fear not, nor be dismayed; be strong, and of good courage: for thus shall the LORD do to all your enemies against whom ye fight.

26 And afterward Joshua smote them, and slew them, and [g]hanged them on five trees: and they were hanging upon the trees until the evening.



27 And it came to pass at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and cast

Joshua crossed the ridge in pursuit, and on gaining some prominent peak from which he saw the fleeing Amorites below, pursued by the wearied Israelites, he feared that night would come ere the victory was complete. Behind him, eastward, were the heights which covered Gibeon; before him, westward, was the deep valley of Ajalon. Here he uttered the remarkable prayer, 'Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.' P.)

Ver. 12. [Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon. Were even philosophers better acquainted with the causes of the annual and diurnal movements of the heavenly bodies, they would be better able to judge of this miracle. Though all miracles are alike easy to Omnipotence, it may still be fact, that some order of exceeding simplicity effected what appears so stupendous to our eyes. Something perhaps more simple than the stopping of the pulsation of the heart, and consequent suspension of the circulation of the blood. Had syncope, or fainting, never been witnessed but once some thousands of years ago, it would appear as incredible to modern physiologists as the standing still of the sun to infidel philosophers. The objection derived from the words—stood still, or went not down—is unworthy of a schoolboy, and indicates as little knowledge of language as of Scripture evidence. The words state a fact in relation to sight, and so are literally true; and if we may admit the translation of Dr. A. Clarke, which there seems no ground to question, then do they likewise accord with the Newtonian astronomy, and most probably develop a still deeper insight in the mysteries of nature. According to Clarke, the address, ver. 12, should be translated:—'Sun! upon Gibeon be dumb; and the moon in the vale of Ajalon.' The effect of which is related in the following words:—'And the sun was dumb; and the moon stood still.' In which words Joshua does not say to the sun, stand still, as if he had conceived him to be running his race round the earth; but be dumb, silent, or inactive, so as to stop the rotation of the earth. And the book of Jasher, in recording the event, speaks with equal philosophical correctness. In the first case he says, the sun was dumb, withheld his influences, but the moon stood still. It must be seen from the address to the sun, that it was near the setting when the words which seem a command to the sun, but are a prayer to God, were uttered. C.] them into the cave wherein they had been hid, and laid [h]great stones in the cave's mouth, which remain until this very day.

THE VALLEY OF AJALON—WHERE JOSHUA COMMANDED THE SUN AND MOON TO STAND STILL. [Joshua, x:12.]—"Then spake Joshua to the Lord in the day when the Lord delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon." The meaning of this name is "place of gazelles." It is a broad and beautiful valley near the city of Ajalon. It is about 14 miles from Jerusalem. Ajalon was a Levitical city of Dan. It was also one of the cities of refuge, and the city doubtless stood in this noted valley. The modern name of Ajalon is Galo, which is situated on a long hill on the south side of the valley whose name it bears. On the ridge above this valley the Mediterranean and the plain of Sharon are in full view. Going up above it we find dwarf oaks, arbutus and other shrubs, with plantations of olive and carob trees. Flocks of goats may be seen browsing in the valley.

28 ¶ And that day Joshua took Makkedah,[4] and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof he utterly destroyed, [i]them, and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain: and he did to the king of Makkedah as he did unto the king of Jericho.

29 ¶ Then Joshua passed from Makkedah, and all Israel with him, unto [k]Libnah,[5] and fought against Libnah:

30 And the LORD delivered it also, and the king thereof, into the hand of Israel; and he smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein: he let none remain in it; but did unto the king thereof as he did unto the king of Jericho.

31 ¶ And Joshua passed from Libnah, and all Israel with him, unto [l]Lachish,[6] and encamped against it, and fought against it:

32 And the LORD delivered Lachish into the hand of Israel, which took it on the second day,[7] and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein, according to all that he had done to Libnah.

33 ¶ Then Horam king of [m]Gezer[8] came up to help Lachish; and Joshua smote him and his people, until he had left him none remaining.

34 ¶ And from Lachish Joshua passed unto Eglon,[n] and all Israel with him; and they encamped against it, and fought against it:

35 And they took it on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword; and all the souls that were therein he utterly [o]destroyed that day, according to all that he had done to Lachish.

36 ¶ And Joshua went up from Eglon,[9] and all Israel with him, unto [p]Hebron; and they fought against it:

37 And they took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king[1] thereof, and all the cities thereof, and all the souls that were therein: he left none remaining, according to all that he had done to Eglon, but destroyed it utterly, and all the souls that were therein.

38 ¶ And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, to [q]Debir,[2] and fought against it.

39 And he took it, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and they smote them with

It was at this time, and remained long afterwards, the most powerful city of northern Canaan. Madon is unknown. Shimron may perhaps be the same as Simonieh, about two miles south-east of Bethlehem. Achshaph may be identical with Accho, now Acre. 'The plains' Arabah, 'spurs of Chinneroth' are the Jordan valley. 'The valley' is the Shephelah, or plain of Philistia. converts to him; and, like their great leader, the wicked likewise are unanimous and hearty in their wickedness, and in persecuting the people of God. But when spiritual or temporal enemies thrust sore at us, then we feel the necessity of looking up to Jesus, the Captain of the Lord's host, for salvation. If we have given up ourselves to him, we may be cast down, but cannot be destroyed: Jesus and his angels will flee to our relief: his power, his prayers, shall concur for our protection and deliverance! But how terrible is the danger of his enemies! Both heaven and earth conspire to effectuate their ruin! Every assistant, every retreat, shall prove but a refuge of lies; the meanest saint shall see them fall! And when the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, Jesus shall come to sit in righteous judgment upon all them who know not God and obey not the gospel; —who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power! Oh! unparalleled day! then all the haters of the Lord shall go into everlasting despair; and the righteous, after finishing their fight of faith, and enriched with peace, shall, with Jesus at their head, return, and enter into life eternal in the camp of God above!

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 1. We have here another confederacy against Joshua, formed by the kings to the north of Jerusalem.—Note, This succession of confederacies is no more than what occurs to all who follow the true Joshua to the true promised land. One trouble is no sooner forgot than another succeeds; and one temptation is no sooner resisted and subdued, than another tempter, like Satan with our Lord, Mat. iv., tries some new scheme to pervert our principles and overcome our resolutions. C.]

Ver. 4. [Horses and chariots very many. This is the first time that horses are mentioned since the exodus. Camels, asses, and sheep, during the intermediate period, are frequently enumerated, but the horse never. The Arabian tribes, therefore, had at this time no horses—a fact which Strabo, who lived about the beginning of CASTLE AT CÆSAREA PHILIPPI—NEAR HAZOR, KING JABIN'S CAPITAL. [JOSHUA, xi : 1-20.]—Only a little distance from this castle, Thomson learned of a very old ruin, which is thought to be the relic of the ancient capital of Jabin, king of Hazor, which was the chief city before the time of Joshua, of all the northern basin of the Jordan. In the eleventh chapter of Joshua we have an account of the battle of Israel with this king. We learn also from this chapter that 1,451 B. C., this Jabin, king of Hazor, had chariots and horses in his army. The great Subeibeh castle is a mile in circumference. It is about three miles from Cæsarea Philippi and fifteen hundred feet above it. From the top of its towers there is an extensive and charming prospect. The castle is guarded on all sides by inaccessible gorges and only on the northeast is the hill upon which it stands connected with the main body of the earth.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them [c]unto great Zidon,[3] and unto [d]Mizrephoth-maim,[5] and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

9 And Joshua did unto them as the LORD bade him: he [e]houghed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took [f]Hazor,[6] and smote the king thereof with the sword: for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms.

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them: there was not [g]any left to breathe: and he burnt Hazor with fire.

12 And[8] all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword; and he utterly destroyed them, [h]as Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded.

13 But as for the cities that stood still[7] in their strength, Israel burned none of them, save Hazor[8] only; that did Joshua burn.[8]

14 And all [i]the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves; but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.[9]

15 As[9] the LORD commanded Moses his servant, so did Moses command Joshua, and so did Joshua: [k]he left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moses.

16 So[1] Joshua took [a]all that land, the hills, and all the south country, and all the land of [b]Goshen,[2] and the valley, and the plain, and the [c]mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same;[3]

18 Joshua made war [e]a long time with all those kings.[5]

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel save [f]the Hivites, the inhabitants of Gibeon; all other they took in battle:

20 For it was of the LORD [g]to harden their hearts,[6] that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour,[7] but that he might destroy them, [h]as the LORD commanded Moses.

21 ¶ And at that time came Joshua, and cut [i]off the Anakims from the mountains; from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: [k]Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities.

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel; only [l]in Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod, there remained.

23 ¶ So Joshua took the whole land, [m]according to all that the LORD said unto Moses; and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel, [n]according to their divisions by their tribes. And the land [o]rested from war.

the Christian era, records concerning Arabia in his time. C.]

Ver. 5. [Merom is identical with Samochonitis of Josephus, and the modern Bahret el-Hûleh. It is a lake, triangular in form, 4½ miles long by 3¼ broad. It occupies the southern end of a large plain or basin lying between the ridges of Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon. It is fed by numerous streams and fountains, the largest being the Jordan, which flows into it at the north-eastern angle, and leaves it again at its apex on the south, 10 miles above the Sea of Galilee. P.]

Ver. 13. [Cities that stood still in their strength. 'The cities that stood on the hills' is a more accurate translation. The meaning seems to be this:—Joshua burned the cities on the plains, where the northern Canaanites' cavalry, like the East Indian Mahrattas, could maintain strongholds, for they could make sudden incursions. But the cities on the hills, as inaccessible to cavalry, he preserved, with the exception of Hazor, as garrison towns for his own infantry, and the protection of the people. C.]

Ver. 18. [Mount Halak is used by Joshua to denote the southern border of Palestine, as Beersheba is used by later writers. It was probably the line of bare white cliffs or hills which runs across the Arabah some 20 miles south of the Dead Sea. Baal-gad must have been at or very near the site of Paneas, subsequently called Cæsarea-Philippi. P.]

Ver. 22. [In Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod. These were not of the seven devoted nations, and were therefore permitted to abide. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How madly do sinners rush headlong into ruin, notwithstanding repeated warnings by the destruction of others! The strength and multitude of their confederacy do but make their ruin the more notorious. But the greater the dangers which surround his people, the greater supports should they ask and expect from God: and the more entirely their heart is fixed on him as their strength, the more certainly shall their spiritual enemies be subdued before them. That to which sinners flee for help is often but a trap to ensnare them: and their destruction is certain, though sometimes slow; and always just and wise, however severe: the most powerful not excepted. But sure is the victory of his people over all their enemies; and happy is it when God's exact fulfilment of his promises, and our upright performance of our duty, unite together. And blessed indeed must that warfare be which issues in eternal triumph and rest to Christ and his people!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 1. River Arnon. The Arnon rises in the mountains of Gilead, on the east of Jordan, and flows along the north border of Moab, separating it from the Ammonites, and empties itself into the Dead Sea. Burckhardt gives its modern name Modjeh, and assigns it a course of about 56 miles. In summer it is nearly dry, but in winter is an impetuous torrent. C.——The land from the Arnon to Hermon embraces the great plateau and mountain chains east of the Jordan. All the plain on the east' is in Hebrew 'all the Arabah;' i.e. the deep valley of the Jordan, east of the river. P.]

Ver. 2. [Jabbok. In summer a brook, in winter a torrent, arising in the mountains of Gilead, near Rabbath Ammon, and running in a westerly direction, joins the Jordan about 35 miles south of the Sea of Chinneroth. C.]

Ver. 3. [Salt Sea. Dead Sea, the site of Sodom and Gomorrah, more salt than any other sea. This special geographical description was given in order to prevent any disputes about the boundaries of the two and a half settled tribes. See ver. 6. C.——The first part of ver. 3 should be rendered as follows:—'And the Arabah to the Sea of Chinneroth eastward, and to the Sea of the Arabah—the salt sea, eastward.' The meaning is, that while Sihon's kingdom extended on the highlands only as far north as the Jabbok, it embraced the whole eastern section of the valley of the Jordan from the Sea of Galilee to the Dead Sea.' P.]

Ver. 8. ['In the hill-country, and in the Shephelah, and in the Arabah, and in Ashdoth, and in the Midbar (i.e. the pastoral plateau east of Jordan), and in the Negeb.' These are proper names, and mark the various sections of the country. See note on ch. 9. 1. P.]

Ver. 21. [Taanach and Megiddo stood on the southern border of the plain of Esdraelon. They became famous in after-times in connection with the victory of Barak, and other battles. P.]

2 Sihon[c] king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon, and ruled from Aroer, which is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and from the middle of the river,[2] and from half Gilead,[3] even unto the river [d]Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon:

7 Modern readers of the Bible are often surprised at the number of kings reigning in so narrow a compass. A little reflection would remove this surprise, for were the early history of the European tribes as well preserved, there is little doubt that as many petty sovereignties would frequently be found in the same extent. Within the range of authentic history, a part of England furnished seven kingdoms.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Former mercies from God, or services from men, must never be forgotten for the glare of present ones. How happy the saints who have possession of manifold blessings on this side the Jordan of death, even while their principal inheritance lies beyond it! How fruitful then was the promised land, which could support such multitudes of men! How fearful the guilt, and tremendous the curse, which for many ages have rendered it one of the most barren and useless spots on the earth! How confined was the ancient ambition of kings! and how good was God to Israel, who gave so many nations for their ransom, and people for their life!

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 3. Philistines. Descended from Mizraim, second son of Ham, Ge. 10. 14, by whom Egypt was peopled. They must have emigrated from that country at an early period. Though occupying a narrow tract of land bordering on the Mediterranean, and not above 60 miles in length, yet, through industry and arms, they soon became, and long continued, a famous people. They were the most powerful and the most inveterate of the enemies of Israel, whom they occasionally greatly oppressed. After the return from the captivity, the national animosities were revived; and they seem to have been finally conquered by the famous Maccabees. After this period, they either emigrated from the country, or became incorporated with the Jews, as they are never once mentioned in the New Testament, nor by any writer of ordinary history. C.]

Ver. 5. [Lebanon. Lebanon forms the basis of all the mountains of Palestine. Two parallel ranges of mountains descend from the north in Syria, inclosing a valley called Cœle-Syria, or Hollow Syria. These form the Lebanon of the Bible, and the Libanus and Anti-Libanus of the Greeks. The Libanus, from its origin in Syria, inclines to the west, and terminates a few miles north of old Tyre. The Anti-Libanus, which is the eastern range, likewise inclines to the sea, and terminates in the noble cone of Hermon. Lebanon signifies whiteness; a name most probably derived from the snows which constantly lie upon the highest summit of the range. This would, in the climate of Palestine, give a probable height of 11,000 feet. C.—'Lebanon toward the sun-rising' is manifestly Anti-Lebanon; and the whole chain is here accurately described from Baal-gad (Banias) under Hermon on the south, to the entrance of Hamath—here signifying the opening from the valley of Cœle-Syria to the plain of Hamath—on the north. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The most successful conquerors must quickly bow and pay their tribute to death, the king of terrors; and the best have need to be reminded of their latter end. God graciously and wisely considers the frame of his people, and will not burden them with work beyond their strength. But pleasant are extensive views of what God has promised, though we should never see it accomplished. And it is prudent and necessary that such as rule in church or state should exert themselves to the utmost for leaving all things in good order at their death. With what pleasure God repeatedly mentions the honourable deeds of his people, as an example and inducement to others

RACE OF FREIGHT BOATS, JAFFA · THE SEAPORT TOWN OF JERUSALEM IN TIME OF SOLOMON, AND FROM HIS DAY TO THE PRESENT. [JOSHUA, xiii: 2.]—"This is the land that yet remaineth: all the borders of the Philistines, and all Geshuri." We give this illustration here because Jaffa was a city of Philistia. Palestine is said to have originally meant the district inhabited by the Philistines. Philistia embraced the coast plain on the southwest of Palestine, extending from Jaffa on the north to the valley of Gera on the south, and from the Mediterranean on the west to the foot of the Judean hills on the east. The picture we give above is of a scene which will be very familiar to all tourists who have ever landed at Jaffa. As soon as ever the great steamers anchor out in the sea the little boats from the shore begin a race to see which can reach the steamer first. Happy is the traveler if his arrangements for landing have been made previously

3 As Moses was himself of the tribe of Levi, he gave a special proof that he acted by divine authority, in thus overlooking his own family and his own tribe; for, though the Levites were well provided for, yet the security of that religion was so interwoven with Israel's adherence to the worship of God, that, had they universally apostatized, the Levites would have been left destitute, whilst all the other tribes would have had possession of their estates: that is, without some immediate divine interposition . . . This, however, implied, that they had as good a title to their tribes and perquisites as their brethren had to their estates. Scott.

4 The second time in this chapter, see ver. 15, is the divine testimonial of Levi recorded. The Lord was their portion—Note, so is it with every believer, who is evidently a priest of God. 1 Pe 2 5, 9. Ps 119 57.—C.

21 And all the cities of the plain,[7] and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, [c]whom Moses smote with the princes of Midian, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, which were dukes of Sihon dwelling in the country.

22 ¶ Balaam[d] also the son of Beor, the soothsayer, did the children of Israel slay with the sword among them that were slain by them.[8]

23 And the border of the children of Reuben was Jordan, and the border thereof. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben after their families, the cities and the villages thereof.

24 ¶ And[e] Moses gave inheritance unto the tribe of Gad, even unto the children of Gad, according to their families:

25 And their coast was Jazer, [f]and all the cities of Gilead, and [g]half the land of the children of Ammon, unto Aroer that is before [h]Rabbah;[9]

26 And from Heshbon[1] unto [i]Ramath-mizpeh, and Betonim; and from [k]Mahanaim unto the border of [l]Debir;

27 And in the valley, [m]Beth-aram, and Beth-nimrah, and Succoth, and Zaphon, the rest of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heshbon, Jordan and his border, even unto the edge of the sea of [n]Chinnereth, on the other side Jordan eastward.

28 This is the inheritance of the children of Gad after their families, the cities and their villages.[2]

29 ¶ And Moses gave inheritance unto the half-tribe of Manasseh: and this was the possession of the half-tribe of the children of Manasseh, by their families.

30 And[o] their coast was from Mahanaim, all Bashan, all the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, and all the towns of Jair, which are in Bashan, threescore cities;

31 And[p] half Gilead, and Ashtaroth, and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan, were pertaining unto the children of Machir the son of Manasseh, even to the one-half of the children of Machir by their families.

32 These are the countries which Moses did distribute for inheritance in the plains of Moab, on the other side Jordan, by Jericho, eastward.

33 But[q] unto the tribe of Levi Moses gave not any inheritance:[3] the LORD God of Israel was their inheritance, as he said unto them.[4]

CHAPTER XIV.

1 The nine tribes and a half are to have their inheritance by lot.
6 Caleb by privilege obtaineth Hebron.

AND these are the countries which the children of Israel inherited in the land of to copy after them! But unhappy is the end of false prophets and seducers of mankind, like Balaam; and often when and where they least expected it. While those who have God to be their portion have little reason to envy others even their wealthiest lots in this changing world.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 2. By lot. The lot was a divine institution, appealing to the direct judgment of God, Pr. 16. 33. It was likewise the surest mode Canaan, [a]which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance to them.

2 By[b] lot was their inheritance, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes, and for the half-tribe.

3 For [c]Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and a half-tribe on the other side Jordan;[d] but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.[1]

4 For [e]the children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, [f]save cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

5 As[g] the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

6 ¶ Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in [h]Gilgal: and [i]Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite said unto him, Thou knowest the thing that the LORD said unto Moses [k]the man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea.

7 Forty years old was I when Moses, the servant of the LORD, [l]sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart.

8 Nevertheless[m] my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt; but[n] I wholly followed the LORD my God.[2]

9 And Moses sware on that day, saying, Surely[o] the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the LORD my God.

10 And now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, as he said, these [p]forty and five years, even since the LORD spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel wandered[3] in the wilderness; and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old.[4]

11 As[q] yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both to go out, and to come in.

12 Now therefore give me this [r]mountain, whereof the LORD spake in that day; (for thou heardest in that day [s]how the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced;) if so be the LORD will be with me, then I shall be able to drive them out, as the LORD said.[5]

13 And Joshua [t]blessed him, and [u]gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance.

14 Hebron[x] therefore became the inheritance of Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite unto this day, because that he wholly followed the LORD God of Israel.

15 And [y]the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba; which Arba was a great man among the Anakims. And the land had rest from [z]war.[6]

CHAPTER XV.

1 The borders of the lot of Judah. 13 Caleb's portion and conquest. 16 Othniel, for his valour, hath Achsah, Caleb's daughter, to wife. 18 She obtaineth a blessing of her father. 21 The cities of Judah. 63 The Jebusites not conquered.

THIS then was the [a]lot of the tribe of the children of Judah by their families; [b]even to the border of Edom the wilderness of Zin, southward, was the uttermost part of the south coast.

2 And their south border was from the shore of [c]the salt sea, from the bay[1] that looketh southward:

3 And it went out to the south side to [d]Maaleh-acrabbim, and passed along to Zin, and ascended up on the south side unto [e]Kadesh-barnea, and passed along to Hezron, and went up to Adar, and fetched a compass to Karkaa:

4 From thence it passed toward Azmon, and went out unto the [f]river of Egypt; and the goings out of that coast were at [g]the sea. This shall be your south coast.[2]

5 And [h]the east border was the salt sea, even unto the end of Jordan: and their border in the north quarter was from the bay of the sea, at the uttermost part of Jordan.

6 And the border went up to [i]Beth-hogla, and passed along by the north of [k]Beth-arabah; and the border went up to the stone of [l]Bohan the son of Reuben.[3]

Ver. 6. [Caleb. The object of Caleb is to claim a right previous to the conquest, founded on God's promise, ver. 6, and Moses' oath, ver. 9, and so an exemption from the lot.—Note, Though the lot was a divine institution, it was not to be employed where the will of God is already declared. The sin of Balaam lay in knowing the declared will of God, and seeking by sacrifice to change it. God's will once declared, we must seek no other confirmation—God's will once known, we must allow neither delay nor evasion. C.]

Ver. 12. [This was a noble proposition upon the part of old Caleb. He had affirmed, on his return from spying out the land, that though the cities were strong, and the Anakim powerful and warlike, yet, by the help of the Lord, the Israelites could drive them out. Now he offers himself to put the truth of that affirmation to the test. Old as he was, he would lead the attack on the Anakim and drive them out. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Such as refer themselves to God to choose for them will never find cause to repent of their lot. Yea, it is not only useful but necessary to acknowledge God in all our ways, that he may direct our paths, and prosper the work of our hands; and to view everything that we obtain lawfully as coming from him.—How edifying is it to observe aged professors strong in the faith, giving glory to God! It is not pride, but due acknowledgment, to declare what a gracious God has done for us and by us. The more singular our fidelity has been towards God, it is the more commendable. And if we have served God in godly simplicity in our youth, we shall find the comfort and blessing of it when we grow old. The issues of our life are in God's hand. Neither age, nor sickness, nor sword can cut those who are faithful to Christ. Every year, therefore, through which we are spared is a new call for thankfulness to him who preserves our soul in life; and the death of others around should make us the more sensible of the mercy which preserves us. But indeed wonders of mercy and judgment will God work for performing his promise, in the most honourable manner, to such as by faith remarkably glorify him in an hour of temptation. Such as trust in him will never find themselves disappointed of their hopes. And with the utmost boldness we may insist upon having what he has promised, and dare to engage the most powerful opposer in order to obtain it.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 1. The lot of the tribe of the children of Judah. This lot to Judah seems disproportionately large, but is a fulfilment of Jacob's prophecy. Two things in it are very remarkable. (1) Two parts of it were subsequently given to Simeon and Yet the valley of Achor is pronounced as "a door of hope" to Israel, Ho. 2. 15, and so it is, when trouble has shown to experience the folly and sin of loving the world, the soul is just prepared for cherishing the hope of better things. —C.

Dan—a lesson of princely generosity to unprovided brethren. (2) The part next Egypt never was conquered—emblem of the Christian's state. He has an enemy yet to be 'destroyed,' a part of his inheritance yet to be redeemed, 1 Co. 15. 26; Ro. 8. 19, 21, 23. C.]

Ver. 11. [This is one of the most minute and accurate examples of topography in any ancient writing extant. Almost every foot of the boundary line can still be traced. Commencing at the mouth of the Jordan it ran north-west to the site of Jericho; then up the steep pass of Adummim, on the south bank of Wady el-Kelt ('the river,' or rather torrent-bed); then along the highway to Jerusalem past the fountain of Haud (Enshemesh); then over Olivet to En-rogel, along Wady Hinnom, and across the mountain tops to Kirjath-jearim; then down to Bethshemesh, and across the plain to Mount Baalah, which lies between Ekron and Jabniel; and then to the Mediterranean. P.]

Ver. 19. [He gave her the upper springs and the nether springs. This peculiar record seems introduced, (1) To demonstrate the difference between the power that Caleb exercised over his possession, derived from his peculiar right, and how far it surpassed that of other Israelites. They, when there were sons in a family—as there were in Caleb's—had no right to alienate land to a daughter's husband, Nu. 27. 1-11. (2) The narrative seems intended to establish the right of rewarding extraordinary bravery in an extraordinary manner. (3) To instance the duty of parents to provide, according to their best ability, for the children God has given them. C.]

Ver. 21. [Uttermost cities. This list of cities and villages may appear to many very uninteresting, and perhaps useless. It is, however, highly interesting and useful: (1) As an internal evidence of the truth of the narrative; since nothing but truth could have drawn up such a narrative, and then given it interest to be preserved and read. (2) As a legal document to prevent litigation, by definition of property. C.]

Ver. 25. ['Hazor-hadattah, and Kerioth-hezron—it is Hazor.' There are but two cities in this verse. It seems probable also that 'Amam' in ver. 26 ought to be joined to Hazor, making one name. P.]

1 The general borders of the sons of Joseph. 5 The border of the inheritance of Ephraim. 10 The Canaanites not conquered, but become tributaries.

AND the lot of the children of Joseph [a]fell from Jordan by [b]Jericho, unto the water of Jericho on the east, to the [c]wilderness that goeth up from Jericho, throughout mount Beth-el,

2 And goeth out from [d]Beth-el to Luz,[1] and passeth along unto the borders of [e]Archi to [f]Ataroth,

3 And goeth down westward to the coast of Japhleti, unto the coast of [g]Beth-horon the nether,[2] and to Gezer: and the goings out thereof are at the [h]sea.[3]

4 So [i]the children of Joseph, Manasseh and Ephraim, took their inheritance.

5 ¶ And the border of the children of Ephraim, according to their families, was thus: even the border of their inheritance on the east side was [k]Ataroth-adar, unto Beth-horon the upper;

6 And the border went out toward [l]the sea to Michmethah on the north side; [m]and the border went about eastward unto [n]Taanath-shiloh, and passed by it on the east to Janohah;

7 And it went down from Janohah to [o]Ataroth, and to [p]Naarath, and came to [q]Jericho, and went out at Jordan.

8 The border went out from [r]Tappuah westward unto the [s]river Kanah; and the goings out thereof were at the [t]sea. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Ephraim by their families.

9 And the [u]separate cities for the children of Ephraim were among the inheritance of the children of Manasseh, all the cities with their villages.

10 ¶ And [x]they drove not out the Canaanites that dwelt in [y]Gezer; but the Canaanites dwell among the Ephraimites unto this day, and serve under tribute.

1 The lot of Manasseh. 7 His coast. 12 The Canaanites not wholly driven out. 14 The children of Joseph obtain another lot.

THERE was also a lot for the tribe of Manasseh, (for he was the [a]first-born of Joseph,) which the district is still superior to all the rest of Judea. Had it been also remarkable for palms, such a noble ornament of the landscape is not likely to have been omitted. If it be true, as many travellers affirm, that fish do not live in the Dead Sea, then, according to Eze. 37. 10, En-gedi must have been situate on or near the banks of the Jordan. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is very necessary to have everything relating to property exactly fixed and distinguished, in order to prevent after-contentions. The Lord greatly delights to honour such as have honoured him in a day of general apostasy; to reward such as have followed him fully; and to assist such as have firmly trusted in him. Happy is that marriage where the union of hearts, the consent of parents, and the blessing of God, remarkably meet. And if children may ask the necessaries or conveniences of life from natural parents in hopes to succeed, with what boldness may we come to God's throne of grace, to ask grace and mercy to help us in a time of need—to ask all the spiritual blessings of heaven and earth! Yes, large and delightful is the portion of such as are connected with Christ: and his spiritual brethren are blessed for his sake with the most extensive and everlasting blessings. But let us remember that the larger our mercies are, the more abundant is our work and warfare to improve and defend the same. And have we not reason to lament that our sinful sloth and cowardice should deprive us of part of that which the Lord our God giveth us to possess?

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 5. The border of the children of Ephraim. This is confessedly one of the greatest geographical difficulties in the whole Bible: and our attempt at solution is offered with much diffidence. The commencing point is Ataroth-adar, which, as we learn from ch. 18. 13, was near to Nether Beth-horon, which was not far west of Jerusalem. Following the translation of Boothroyd—'The boundary of their inheritance went on the east side of Ataroth-adar, to Upper Beth-horon;' from which point the boundary, passing on the north side of Michmethah—which town we conceive to be situate in the southern and not in the northern border, according to the maps—extends westward to the Mediterranean. From the same point at Ataroth-adar, the boundary line eastward passes by Taanath-shiloh, turning a little way south, so as to leave it on the east, and reaching Janohah, resumes its easterly course by Ataroth, Naarath, Jericho, to Jordan. Then, omitting the eastern boundary, the Jordan, the line commences at Tappuah in the north, and passing on westward to Kanah, thence makes its way to the sea. C.]

CHAPTER XVII. REFLECTIONS.—What a fruitful bough is Joseph now become, and planted in a goodly soil! The promise of God is a firm foundation of claim; and if in this wilderness we secure such a title to glory, we shall, when the warfare is over, enjoy the portion for ever. It is good for brethren to dwell

BEDOUIN CAMP, JEZREEL—WHERE GIDEON TRIUMPHED AND SAUL AND JONATHAN WERE OVERTHROWN. [Joshua, xvii:16.]—This is the great plain of Esdraelon. It extends across Central Palestine from the Mediterranean to the Jordan. It separates the mountain ranges of Carmel and Samaria from those of Galilee. The main body of the plain is a triangle. On the east it extends from Jenin to the foot of the hills below Nazareth. It is about 15 miles long; and the north side, formed by the hills of Galilee, are about 12 miles long. From any point of observation in this valley one may see the mountains Gilboa and Little Hermon. It is perhaps the richest valley in the world, and has also been called the great battlefield of the world. It is here that Gideon triumphed, and Saul and Jonathan were overthrown. It is the home of the wild Bedouin, and not more than one-sixth of its soil is cultivated.

to wit, for [b]Machir, the first-born of Manasseh, the father of Gilead:[1] because he was a man of war, therefore he had Gilead and Bashan.

2 There was also a lot for [c]the rest of the children of Manasseh by their families; for the children of Abiezer, and for the children of Helek, and for the children of Asriel, and for the children of Shechem, and for the children of Hepher, and for the children of Shemida: these were the male children of Manasseh the son of Joseph by their families.

3 ¶ But [d]Zelophehad,[2] the son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters; and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

4 And they came near [e]before Eleazar the priest, and before Joshua the son of Nun, and before the princes, saying, [f]The LORD commanded Moses to give us an inheritance among our brethren: therefore, according to the commandment[3] of the LORD, he gave them an inheritance among the brethren of their father.

5 And there fell [g]ten portions to Manasseh, besides[h] the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were on the other side Jordan;

6 Because the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his sons: and [i]the rest of Manasseh's sons had the land of Gilead.

7 ¶ And the coast of Manasseh was from Asher to Michmethah,[4] that lieth before [k]Shechem, and the border went along on the right hand unto the inhabitants of En-tappuah.

8 Now Manasseh had the land of [l]Tappuah: but Tappuah, on the border of Manasseh, belonged to the children of Ephraim;

9 And the coast descended unto the [m]river Kanah, southward of the river: these cities of Ephraim are among the cities of Manasseh: the coast of Manasseh also was on the north side of the river, and the outgoings of it were at the sea.

10 Southward it was Ephraim's, and northward it was Manasseh's, and the sea is his border; and they met together in Asher on the north, and in Issachar on the east.[5]

11 And Manasseh had in Issachar, and in Asher, [n]Beth-shean[6] and her towns, and [o]Ibleam and her towns, and the inhabitants of [p]Dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of [q]En-dor[7] and her towns, and the inhabitants of [r]Taanach and her towns, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns, even three countries.

5 If we interpret this passage of the extension of the joint property of the tribes to Asher and Issachar, they may as well be said to meet in Dan in the south, and Benjamin in the east, or in the other adjacent tribes of Reuben and Gad. Do not the words rather mean—that after a council or meeting together in Asher and Issachar, Manasseh obtained the cities enumerated in the succeeding verses? It is the improper division of the verses that causes the obscurity.—C.

12 ¶ Yet [s]the children of Manasseh could not [t]drive out the inhabitants of those cities; but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.

13 Yet it came to pass, when the children of Israel were [u]waxen strong, that they put the Canaanites to tribute; but did not utterly drive them out.[9]

14 ¶ And the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying, Why hast thou given me but one lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am a [w]great people,[1] forasmuch as the LORD hath blessed me hitherto?

15 And Joshua answered them, [x]If thou be a great people, then get thee up to the wood-country, and cut down for thyself there, in the land of the Perizzites, and of the [y]giants, if mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee.

16 And the children of Joseph said, The hill is not enough for us: and all the Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley [z]have chariots of iron, both they who are of Beth-shean and her towns, and they who are of the valley of [a]Jezreel.

18 But the [c]mountain[2] shall be thine; for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down; and the outgoings of it shall be thine: for thou [d]shalt drive out the Canaanites, though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong.

AND the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together at [a]Shiloh,[1] and set up the [b]tabernacle of the congregation there: and the land was subdued before them.

2 ¶ And there remained among the children of Israel seven tribes, which had not yet received their inheritance.

3 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, [c]How long are ye slack to go to possess the land, which the LORD God of your fathers hath given you?

4 Give out from among you three men for each tribe; and I will send them, and they shall rise and go through the land, and [d]describe it according to the inheritance of them; and they shall come again to me.

5 And they shall divide it into seven parts:

together in unity; yet unhappy is the union when they encourage one another in neglecting the Lord's work, and seem more anxious to enlarge their property than to improve what they have. But unbelief strangely heightens every difficulty, and often discourages from the good fight of faith, which necessarily lies in the way to the crown.

CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS.—It is highly becoming when a serious regard to the worship of Christ and the church of God is intermingled with our most engaging earthly concerns; and it is dangerous to form families or kingdoms without the true worship of God. But what a blessing is it for a church or nation, when the Lord is a wall of fire round about them, and the glory in the midst of them! What mercies then are ours! We have his ordinances, not merely in the midst of our land, but near at hand, in every corner of it: and safely may we, in the midst of enemies, go about the Lord's work. Let us beware then how we are unconcerned about promised enjoyments or commanded duties; lest the sweets of present comforts, or the difficulties in our way to the Canaan above, should weaken our desire, or hinder our attempts, to obtain it. Blessed be God that, though the enjoyment of it be not equally soon obtained, yet it is equally sure to all believers; and that there, as well as here, Judah[e] shall abide in their coast on the south, and the house of Joseph shall abide in their coasts on the north.

6 Ye[f] shall therefore describe the land into seven parts, and bring the description hither to me, that I may cast lots for you here before the LORD our God.

7 But the [g]Levites have no part among you; for the priesthood of the LORD is their inheritance:[2] and [h]Gad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the east, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave them.

8 ¶ And the men arose, and went away: and Joshua charged them that went to describe the land, saying, Go and walk through the land, and describe it,[3] and come again to me, that I may he[a]e cast lots for you before the LORD in Shiloh.

9 And the men went and passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book, and came again to Joshua to the host at Shiloh.

10 ¶ And Joshua [k]cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel, according to their divisions.

11 ¶ And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin came up[4] according to their families: and the coast of their lot came forth [l]between the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

12 And their border on the north side was from Jordan; and the border went up to the side of [m]Jericho on the north side, and went up through the mountains westward; and the goings out thereof were at the [n]wilderness of Beth-aven.[o]

13 And the border went over from thence toward [p]Luz, to the side of Luz, (which is Beth-el,[q]) southward; and the border descended to [r]Ataroth-adar, near the hill that lieth on the south side of the nether Beth-horon.

14 And the border was drawn thence, and compassed the corner of [s]the sea southward,[5] from the hill that lieth before Beth-horon southward;[6] and the goings out thereof were at [t]Kirjath-baal, (which is Kirjath-jearim,) a city of the children of Judah. This was the west quarter.

15 And the south quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the west, and went out to the well of waters of Nephtoah:[u]

16 And the border came down to the end of the [v]mountain that lieth before the valley of the son of Hinnom, and which is in the [w]valley of the giants on the north, and descended to the [x]valley of Hinnom, to the side of [a]Jebusi on the south, and descended to En-rogel,

17 And was drawn from the north, and went forth to En-shemesh, and went forth toward [b]Geliloth, which is over against the going up of Adummim, and descended to [c]the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben,

18 And passed along toward the side over against Arabah[7] northward, and went down unto Arabah;

19 And the border passed along to the side of [d]Beth-hoglah northward: and the outgoings of the border were at the north bay[8] of [e]the salt sea, at the south end of [f]Jordan. This was the south coast.

20 And Jordan was the border of it on the east side. This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, by the coasts thereof round about, according to their families.

21 ¶ Now the cities of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, according to their families, were [g]Jericho,[9] and [h]Beth-hoglah, and the valley of Keziz,

22 And[i] Beth-arabah, and Zemaraim, and [k]Beth-el,

23 And Avim, and Parah, and [l]Ophrah,

24 And Chephar-haammonai, and Ophni, and [m]Gaba: twelve cities with their villages.

25 Gibeon,[n] and [o]Ramah, and [p]Beeroth,

26 And [q]Mizpeh, and Chephirah, and Mozah,

27 And Rekem, and Irpeel, and Taralah,

28 And [r]Zelah, Eleph, and [s]Jebusi, (which is Jerusalem,[1]) Gibeath, and Kirjath: fourteen cities with their villages. This is the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, [t]according to their families.

AND the [a]second lot came forth to Simeon, even for the tribe of the children of Simeon, according to their families: and their inheritance was [b]within the inheritance of the children of Judah.

2 And they had in their inheritance [c]Beersheba, and Sheba, and Moladah,

3 And [d]Hazar-shual, and Balah, and Azem,

Some learned authors, however, instead of 'sea,' render it 'from the west;' but they seem to have been driven to this translation, from the difficulty of any reference to the sea in an inland province. CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 1–48. From this, and the seven preceding chapters, it appears that the land of Canaan, into the possession of which Moses and Joshua put the Israelites, was pleasantly diversified with mountains and valleys, and well watered with a multitude of small rivers and brooks, which emptied themselves into the Mediterranean Sea on the west; or into Jordan, which, taking its rise in Mount Lebanon, at the north of the promised land, ran southward; and, after forming the two lakes of Merom and Chinnereth or Tiberias in its course, at last emptied itself into the Dead Sea, into which the country about Sodom was transformed, and which had no visible outlet. The length of Canaan, from Beersheba on the south to Dan on the north, was about one hundred and eighty miles.

7 Ain,[h] Remmon, and Ether, and Ashan: four cities and their villages.

8 And all the villages that were round about these cities to [i]Baalath-beer, Ramath of the south. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Simeon, according to their families.

9 Out of the portion of the children of Judah was the inheritance of the children of Simeon: for the part of the children of Judah was [k]too much for them; therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.[3]

10 ¶ And the [l]third lot came up for the children of Zebulun, according to their families; and the border of their inheritance was unto Sarid.

11 And their border went up toward [m]the sea,[4] and Maralah, and reached to Dabbasheth, and reached to the river that is before [n]Jokneam;

12 And turned from Sarid eastward toward the sun-rising, unto the border of Chisloth-tabor, and then goeth out to [o]Daberath, and goeth up to Japhia,

13 And from thence passeth on along on the east to Gittah-hepher, to Ittah-kazin, and goeth[5] out to Remmon-methoar, to Neah;

14 And the border compasseth it on the north side to Hannathon: and the outgoings thereof are in [p]the valley of Jiphthah-el:

[h] Simeon's allotted territory lay along the southern border of Palestine, chiefly, if not wholly, in the province of Negeb. It consists of wide rolling plains, mostly bare, burned up in summer, but covered in winter and spring with rich grass affording the best pasturage in Southern Palestine. It was the favourite abode of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who pitched their tents in the valley of Gerar, or round the wells of Beer-sheba. P.

Its greatest breadth, from the Mediterranean Sea to the river Jordan, was about fifty miles; and about thirty more to the eastern boundary of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites. On the east of Jordan, over against the territory of Benjamin and Ephraim, the Reubenites had their inheritance in a tract, including the mountains of Peor, Nebo, and Pisgah. On their north side lay the inheritance of the Gadites, in a soil more plain and fertile. Northward of Gad was seated the half-tribe of Manasseh, in that which was afterwards called Upper Galilee, or Galilee of the Gentiles, which was almost as large as both the two former portions. On the west side of Jordan, or rather the Dead Sea, lay the extensive inheritance of Judah. On the south-west hereof was the lot of Simeon; and on the north-west the lot of Dan. Eastward of the Danites, and northward of Judah, was the inheritance of Benjamin. The lot of the Ephraimites lay all along on the north of these of Dan and Benjamin. Next was the lot of the other half-tribe of Manasseh; and northward of them the inheritance of Issachar; and next to them was that of Zebulun. Each of these four last portions extended from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean Sea on the west. Northward of Zebulun the tribe of Asher had their inheritance in the north-west of Canaan. The Naphtalites had their portion between the lot of Asher and the north end of the river Jordan. The Tyrians and Zidonians kept possession of a part of Canaan on the north-west of the Asherites. The Philistines kept possession of a narrow strip of territory on the west of the Simeonites and Danites. Egypt lay to the south-west of Canaan; Idumea on the south border of the lot of Judah; and still more southward was the country of the Amalekites and Arabians. On the east of the Dead Sea, and southward of the Reubenites, was the territory of the Midianites and Moabites. North-east of the Moabites, and eastward of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites, dwelt the Ammonites and Hagarenes; and still eastward of these, beyond a large desert, and by the river Euphrates, the Chaldeans on the south, and Mesopotamia on the north. Persia was on the east and south-east of Chaldea, and Assyria on the east of Mesopotamia. North-east of Persia lay Media; and north of Assyria were Armenia, Cappadocia, Pontus, &c. On the north-east of Canaan lay Syria; on the north of which was Lesser Asia, which contained Mysia, Lydia, Ionia, and Caria, on the east shore of the Mediterranean Sea; on the east of which were Bithynia, Phrygia, Pisidia, Pamphylia, Lycia; and, still further east, Paphlagonia, Galatia, and Lycaonia, which bordered on the east with Pontus, Cappadocia, and Armenia. To the north-west of Lesser Asia, but on the north side of the Mediterranean Sea, lay the countries of Greece and Rome; the former of which is about 850, and the latter 1200 miles north-west of Jerusalem. A careful attention to this note will be of use to assist the reader in understanding the parts of Scripture history.

Ver. 16. [The territory of Zebulun stretched across the country from the Sea of Galilee on the east to the maritime plain of Phœnicia on the west, embracing a large strip of Esdraelon, a portion of the plain of Akka, the whole of the rich upland plain of Battauf, with the fertile table-land between it and the basin of the Sea of Galilee. The beautiful wooded hills extending from Tabor by Nazareth westward were also in Zebulun. It touched Carmel on the south-west; and though it did not actually reach to the shore of the Mediterranean, its side joined the narrow maritime plain of Phœnicia, TIBERIAS—THE ANCIENT RAKKATH, ONCE THE CAPITAL OF THE PROVINCE OF GALILEE. [JOSHUA, xix: 35.]—"And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth." According to the Talmud, the city of Rakkath once stood upon the site now occupied by Tiberias. In the fourth century the Jews dropped the name of Tiberias and called the city by its ancient name of Rakkath. Herod Antipas built the Roman city and called it after the name of the emperor, Tiberias. It became the capital of the province of Galilee in which our Savior grew up, and was fortified by Josephus during the wars of the Jews. After the fall of Jerusalem, Tiberias was selected by the Sanhedrin as their headquarters. After that it became a principal seat of Jewish learning. Many of the most eminent Jewish rabbis connected with the history of the race lived and died here.

side, and reacheth to Asher on the west side, and to Judah[4] upon Jordan toward the sunrising.

35 And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and [a]Hammath, Rakkath, and [b]Chinnereth,

36 And Adamah, and [c]Ramah, and [d]Hazor,

37 And [e]Kedesh, and [f]Edrei, and Enhazor,

38 And Iron, and Migdal-el, Horem, and Beth-anath, and [g]Beth-shemesh: nineteen cities with their villages.

39 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, according to their families, the cities and their villages.

40 ¶ And[h] the seventh lot came out for the tribe of the children of Dan, according to their families.

41 And the coast of their inheritance was Zorah,[i] and Eshtaol, and Ir-shemesh,

42 And [k]Shaalabbin, and Ajalon, and Jethlah,

43 And Elon, and [l]Thimnathah, and [m]Ekron,

44 And Eltekeh, and [n]Gibbethon, and Baalath,

45 And Jehud, and Bene-berak, and [o]Gath-rimmon,

46 And[p] Me-jarkon, and Rakkon, with the border [5]before [q]Japho.

47 And [r]the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them; therefore the children of Dan [s]went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it,[6] and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, [t]Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan, [u]according to their families, these cities with their villages.[7]

49 ¶ When they had made an end of dividing the land for inheritance by their coasts, the children of Israel [v]gave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them:[8]

50 According to the word of the LORD, they gave him the city which he asked, even [w]Timnath-serah in mount Ephraim: and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

51 These[x] are the inheritances which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, divided for an inheritance by lot in Shiloh before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. So they made an end of dividing the country.

CHAPTER XX.

1 God commandeth, 7 and the children of Israel appoint the six cities of refuge.

THE LORD[a] also spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Speak to the children of Israel, saying, [b]Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses;

3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares, and unwittingly,[1] may flee thither: and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities shall stand [c]at the entering of the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall [d]take him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

5 And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand; because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not before-time.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, [e]until he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high priest that shall be in those days: then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

4 A city, not a tribe.—[The Sept. omits the name 'of Judah,' most probably from supposing that as Asher, in the next, was a tribe, that Judah must likewise be a tribe. But that one having no possessions on the Jordan, the translators seem to have omitted Judah, supposing it to be the error of a transcriber. There is, however, no need of such unwarranted violence to the text. Judah upon the Jordan may well have been the name of a city or territory.—C.]

1 These words are not synonymous, but convey two very distinct meanings, appropriate to the occasion. 'Unaware' signifies unexpected, or, without previous plan to kill, while yet the act may be intentional—as if one in the dark, intending to give a salutary lesson, gives unforeseen a deleterious drug. 'Unwittingly' signifies that the action is done without consciousness that the injured person was in the way—as if one in the dark, necessitated to run speedily, before the way clear, should inflict a deadly injury upon such one whose presence he was perfectly unconscious. The meanings, however, though distinct, may both meet in the same disaster, as in case of an injury inflicted by a person in the delirium of fever. —C.

to which Jacob gave the name of its chief city Zidon—'And his side will be to Zidon.' Its opposite extremity resting on the Sea of Galilee, the words of the patriarch were fulfilled—'Zebulun shall dwell on the coast of seas.' P.]

Ver. 21. [En-gannim, 'the fountain of the gardens,' lay at the northern base of the mountains of Ephraim, at the opening of a picturesque valley into the great plain of Esdraelon. It is still a large village, and is called Jenin. P.]

Ver. 22. [Tabor. This city was situate on a famous mountain of the same name. It is a solitary 'cone with the top struck off,' about a mile in height and half a league in diameter. It is richly covered with trees and odoriferous plants, and is ascended by a winding path cut in its sides. The top is covered with ruins of fortresses and palaces, and vast subterraneous cisterns for holding water. It is generally supposed to be the 'high mountain' upon which our Lord was transfigured; but there is no certainty, and the probabilities are rather in favour of some other mountain, of which the country affords many. C.]

Ver. 30. [Twenty and two cities with their villages. The names are twenty-six. But Carmel was a mountain, and Jiphtah-el a valley; and it is probable, according to the interpretation of Michaelis, that Tyre and Sidon were only the boundary landmarks, and not included as cities to be conquered. This opinion seems to be fully sustained by ver. 29, where, after passing Sidon, Tyre, and Hosah, 'the outgoings' of the line are for the first time stated to be 'at the sea from the coast to Achzib.' The chief objection to this view lies in Ju. 1. 31, where the Sidonians are mentioned as a people the Asherites did not expel. But this is not conclusive against the number of cities ceded to Asher, ver. 30; and may be well explained by the very natural supposition, that the Sidonians had colonized within the territory of Asher, from which they should have been expelled. C.]

Ver. 39. [The boundaries of Naphtali on the east were the Jordan and the lakes Merom and Galilee; on the south, Zebulun; on the west, Asher; and on the north, the river Leontes. The tribe possessed a greater variety of soil, scenery, and climate than any of the others. Its northern portions are the highlands of Palestine. The scenery is here rich and beautiful, presenting a marked contrast to the naked rocky hills of Judah and the south. P.]

Ver. 48. [Inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan. The territory allotted to Dan lay on the Mediterranean coast, south of Ephraim, including those strongholds of the Philistines Ashdod, Ekron, Gath, &c. Laish was situate in the extreme north of Canaan, near Mount Lebanon and the springs of the Jordan, and about 140 miles from the Danite settlement in the south. Alas! the moment Providence gave them a goodly land, they forgot the God of their fathers and established idolatry. —Note. While the advantages of emigration and colonization are many to an over-populated and commercial country, it is both the bounden duty and the highest interest of the mother-country to provide religious instruction to her colonies. Not a single Levite seems to have accompanied the emigrants. They accordingly fell from the Mosaic institutions, and commenced that idolatry which was perpetuated by Jeroboam, and extended from one tribe to ten, and finally brought on captivity and the other judgments of an offended God. Let Britain, the fruitful mother of so many colonies, take warning, and learn, that though colonization without religion may enrich a country, it may, and will, in the end ruin a country. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is useful and becoming when men look upon, and care for, the things of others, as well as their own, and give to such as lack a share of their superfluity, or even sufficiency. And it is a mercy to be connected with those who are in favour with God, and closely devoted to his service, though our outward accommodations should be smaller. For rare is that lot on earth in which there is not somewhat remarkable by an accurate observer of Providence. But it is honourable when rulers who do most for their people, covet least from them, and prefer the happy settlement of their subjects to their own.

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—In these cities let me behold Jesus, God's holy One, made of God unto us sanctification. Jesus, on whose shoulder

7 ¶ And they [2]appointed [f]Kedesh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, and Shechem in mount Ephraim, and Kirjath-arba (which is Hebron) in the mountain of Judah.

8 And on the other side Jordan, by Jericho eastward, [g]they assigned Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain out of the tribe of Reuben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

9 These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither,[3] and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, until he stood before the congregation.[4]

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Eight and forty cities given by lot, out of the other tribes, unto the Levites. 43 God gave the land, and rest unto the Israelites, according to his promise.

THEN came near the heads[1] of the fathers of the Levites unto [a]Eleazar the priest, and unto Joshua the son of Nun, and unto the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel;

2 And they spake unto them at [b]Shiloh in the land of Canaan, saying, [c]The LORD commanded, by the hand of Moses, to give us cities to dwell in, with the suburbs thereof for our cattle.

3 And the children of Israel gave unto the Levites [d]out of their inheritance, at the commandment of the LORD, these cities and their suburbs.

4 And the [e]lot came out for the families of the Kohathites: and the children of Aaron the priest, which were of the Levites, had by lot out of the tribe of Judah, and out of the tribe of Simeon, and out of the tribe of Benjamin, thirteen cities.[2]

5 And [f]the rest of the children of Kohath had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Ephraim, and out of the tribe of Dan, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh, ten cities.

6 And [g]the children of Gershon had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

7 The[h] children of Merari, by their families, had out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

It is useless to describe their positions, as they cannot be comprehended without a map, and those who are furnished with that important companion to the study of the Bible do not need descriptions. It is, however, important to observe, that they were so dispersed throughout the land, that the manslayer in any part of the land might reach one of them in twelve hours or less.—C.

[2] These three tribes furnish a greater number of cities for the Levites than any equal number of the other tribes; and that, both because their territory, especially that of Judah, was larger than that of the others, and because being near to Jerusalem, where God purposed finally to organize his church, his providence allotted to the servants of his sanctuary habitations near to the scene of their duties. Of these thirteen cities, Judah and Benjamin furnished twelve, and in them the whole sacerdotal family resided, even though at this time the tabernacle was in Shiloh, which was in the tribe of Ephraim. By this prospective arrangement, God provided for the future preservation of Judah and Benjamin from the apostasy of the other tribes, and for the consequent preservation of his word and ordinances.—C.

[7] Anathoth, being so emphatically mentioned by the prophet Isaiah, Is 10. 30. Je. 11. 23; 29. 27; 32. 7, is entitled to some more special notice than those other cities of which we know little but the name. According to Eusebius it was situate about three miles north of Jerusalem, and twenty furlongs according to Josephus; a discrepancy easy to be accounted for by the difference of the points from which each calculated the measurement: say one from the temple, another from the north city wall.—Note, Though great cities often attain an infamous celebrity for their luxury and wickedness, villages have no patent of exemption from a proportionate share of the same character. Anathoth stands a sad example of religious privileges abused, poverty enlured, wickedness practised, and judgment inflicted.—C.

8 And the children of Israel [i]gave by lot unto the Levites these cities with their suburbs, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

9 ¶ And they gave out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, [k]these cities which are here mentioned[3] by name,

10 Which the children of Aaron, being of the families of the Kohathites, who were of the children of Levi, had: for theirs was the first lot.

11 And they gave them [l]the city of Arba, the father of Anak, (which city is Hebron,) in the hill-country of Judah, with the suburbs thereof round about it.[4]

12 But [m]the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, gave they to Caleb the son of Jephunneh for his possession.

13 ¶ Thus they gave to the children of Aaron the priest [n]Hebron with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer, and [o]Libnah with her suburbs,

14 And Jattir[5] with her suburbs, and Eshtemoa with her suburbs,

15 And [p]Holon with her suburbs, and Debir with her suburbs,

16 And [q]Ain with her suburbs, and Juttah with her suburbs, and Beth-shemesh[6] with her suburbs: nine cities out of those two tribes.

17 And out of the tribe of Benjamin, [r]Gibeon with her suburbs, Geba with her suburbs, 18 [s]Anathoth[7] with her suburbs, and [t]Almon with her suburbs: four cities.

19 All the cities of the children of Aaron, the priests, were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

20 ¶ And the families of the children of Kohath, the Levites which remained of the children of Kohath, even they had the cities of their lot out of the tribe of Ephraim.

21 For they gave them [u]Shechem with her suburbs in mount Ephraim, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Gezer with her suburbs, 22 And [x]Kibzaim with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs: four cities.

the government is laid, and who bears and carries his people on his everlasting arms; Jesus, through whom we have access to and fellowship with God, even the Father; Jesus, our stronghold, to such as trust in him; Jesus, our elevated Propitiation and exalted Prince and Saviour; Jesus, who was made manifest in the flesh, that he might be our joy and consolation. Let me behold him as a divinely appointed, a near, an accessible, ever-open, large, well furnished, and eternally safe refuge from the power and deep guilt of sin, the destructive and awful remorse of sin, the fury of a raging devil, and the ruinous challenges of a guilty conscience—a refuge to sinners of mankind, who have ignorantly, and in unbelief, spiritually murdered themselves, their neighbours, and even the great God their Saviour! And, oh, what profitable instruction and complete peace we have in him! Haste then, my soul; escape to him for thy life; tarry not in all the plain, lest the avenger of blood overtake thee. And never, never, while Jesus our great High-priest lives, dare to be found without.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 41. Forty and eight cities with their suburbs. This would seem a large number of cities and a great extent of ground for so small a tribe, which, when the census was taken on the plains of Moab, had only 23,000 males, including 26 All the cities were ten, with their suburbs, for the families of the children of Kohath that remained.

27 ¶ And unto the children of Gershon, of the families of the Levites, out of the other half-tribe of Manasseh, they gave [a]Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Beeshterah[9] with her suburbs: two cities.

28 And out of the tribe of Issachar, [b]Kishon with her suburbs, Dabareh with her suburbs:

29 Jarmuth[c] with her suburbs, En-gannim with her suburbs: four cities.

30 And out of the tribe of Asher, [d]Mishal with her suburbs, Abdon with her suburbs, 31 Helkath with her suburbs, and Rehob with her suburbs: four cities.

32 And out of the tribe of Naphtali, [e]Kedesh in Galilee[1] with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Hamoth-dor with her suburbs, and Kartan with her suburbs: three cities.

33 All the cities of the Gershonites, according to their families, were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

34 ¶ And unto the families of the children of Merari, the rest of the Levites, out of the tribe of Zebulun, [f]Jokneam with her suburbs, and Kartah with her suburbs, 35 Dimnah[2] with her suburbs, Nahalal with her suburbs: four cities.

36 And out of the tribe of Reuben, [g]Bezer with her suburbs, and Jahazah with her suburbs, 37 Kedemoth with her suburbs, and Mephaath with her suburbs: four cities.

38 And out of the tribe of Gad, [h]Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Mahanaim with her suburbs, 39 Heshbon with her suburbs, Jazer with her suburbs: four cities in all.

40 So all the cities for the children of Merari, by their families, which were remaining of the families of the Levites, were, by their lot, twelve cities.

41 All the cities of the Levites, [i]within the possession of the children of Israel, were forty and eight cities with their suburbs.[3]

42 These cities were every one with their suburbs round about them: thus were all these cities.

43 ¶ And the LORD [k]gave unto Israel all the land which he sware to give unto their fathers;[4] and they possessed it, and dwelt therein.

44 And the LORD [l]gave them rest round about, according to all that he sware unto their fathers: and there stood not a man of all their enemies before them; the LORD delivered all their enemies into their hand.

45 There[m] failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass.

[9] Or, Ashtaroth.—[It is by no means uncommon for a town to be called by two names. Every country in Europe could furnish examples; as an instance, Brighton, Heanstone, Brighton, in England. So in this verse, it is evident, from 1 Ch. 6.71, that Beeshterah is but a second name for Ashteroth, being probably a contraction of two Hebrew words, signifying 'the house of Ashtaroth.'—C.]

[1] This is the first mention of Galilee, a district which became so celebrated in the days of our Lord on earth. The word signifies a wheel or a heap, probably from its many mountains, heaped up beside or as it were upon one another. More particular notice will be given, if the Lord will, in the notes of the New Testament.—C.—In the Old Testament the name Galilee is given to a small territory, or circuit, among the mountains of Naphtali; and in the New Testament to a large province embracing the whole of Northern Palestine. Its limited extent originally is indicated in 2 Ki. 15.29. It lay on the top of a broad mountain ridge. Afterwards the name was extended to the country south of Naphtali. Portions of it had a large heathen population, and it was therefore called 'Galilee of the Gentiles.'—P.

[2] Ver. 35, 36 are omitted in the Masora and several of the best Hebrew Bibles; the general enumeration of the cities cannot be made up without them. Their genuineness however is attested, not merely by their being necessary to the consistency of the narrative, but also by a triumphant array of MSS. collated by Kennicott and De Rossi.—C.

[1] Joshua here exemplifies a wise principle in the management of human affairs. children. And it would seem a contradiction to the statement so frequently made both by Moses and Joshua, that the Levite had 'no inheritance' in Israel. But let it be remembered, that though what in modern phrase may be called the lordship of those cities was granted to the Levites, yet whether it was exclusive, does not appear. David dwelt in Hebron with all his court, and it is not likely a king would be a mere tenant in his own monarchy; Saul not merely dwelt in Gibeah, but it is called 'Gibeah of Saul.' These considerations will lead to such deductions as will reduce the possessions of the Levites to very moderate bounds. But the best answer to any cavil upon the subject is, that the Israelites themselves—a people that seldom overlooked grievances—never made any complaint, but gave the cities cheerfully for the service of the tabernacle and the temple. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Those pleadings are ever successful at a throne of grace which are founded on God's promises. God largely provides for his ministers, that they may attend on his service disentangled from the cares of this life. And yet it becomes them to be modest and reserved in seeking for themselves. It is prudent, indeed, that ministers' incomes should be connected with the welfare of the church; but it is likewise proper that all such as are taught should communicate to their teachers in all good things. God can easily turn a well-deserved curse into a distinguished honour and blessing: and make the scattering of the Levites in Israel an honour to themselves and a certain mean of instruction to the other tribes. How commodiously the priests are settled for their future attendance at Jerusalem, where God did not place his name till about four hundred years after! But inviolable are the promises of God, who cannot lie; and it is pleasant, profitable, and dutiful to trace out in providence the exact fulfilment thereof.—But was not this Canaan, now disposed of to the Hebrew tribes, a figure of the gospel rest in the New Testament church; a figure of a spiritual state, and of our better country above? These are the lands which are chosen and provided by God for us: remarkably, under his inspection and care, watered with his heavenly rains and dews, and fertile of the choicest blessings, flowing with milk and honey. How holy! how pleasant! how inhabited by God and his children! And by what marvellous grace, wisdom, and power are we brought into them, through much tribulation! Not our bow, nor our sword, but JEHOVAH's arm, favour, and countenance, get us the land: and he that truly enters it shall in no wise, nor ever, be cast out.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 8. Divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren. Such texts form the perpetual targets of infidelity, and although no arrow can pierce them, yet still the bow is bent anew, and another shaft expended, not in the hope of gaining a victory, but with the mere expectation of raising a fool's laugh, or giving annoyance to pious minds. Such men delight to represent Joshua as a robber. Now the answer to such misrepresentations is plain. Joshua was God's avenger against nations sunk into hopeless wickedness. See, ye infidel objectors, the indictment of your proteges, Le. xviii. passim, and especially ver. 27: and when he had cast them out, or rather when 'the land had spued them out,' for their wickedness, such things as were left behind must, as matter of course and necessity, find possessors in the present occupiers of the country. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—However desirable our home may be, God's work must be preferred to it. Yea, we ought to stay contentedly out of heaven itself, till our work on earth be finished, and Jesus dismiss us from our warfare with his blessing. And O! what abundant honour and extensive happiness shall we then obtain, as the gracious reward of our exact fulfilment of our dangerous but dutiful engagements! Our right to fellowship with God and his people should be clearly but prudently attested and commemorated, that neither we nor our posterity may lose or neglect the means of grace. And with godly jealousy professors mandment, and the law, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, charged you, to love the LORD your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul.[4]

6 So Joshua [g]blessed them, and sent them away:[5] and they went unto their tents.

7 ¶ Now to [h]the one half of the tribe of Manasseh Moses had given possession in Bashan; but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them;

8 And he spake unto them, saying, [i]Return with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment: divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.[6]

9 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of [k]Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go [l]unto the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession, whereof they were possessed, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

10 ¶ And when they came unto the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, [m]built there an altar by Jordan,[7] a great altar to see to.

11 ¶ And the children of Israel [n]heard say, Behold, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at [o]the passage of the children of Israel.

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, the [p]whole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them.[8]

13 And the children of Israel [q]sent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, into the land of Gilead, [r]Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest,

14 And with him ten princes, of each chief house[9] a prince, throughout all the tribes of Israel; and each one was [s]an head of the house of their fathers among the thousands of Israel.

15 And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,[1]

16 Thus saith the [t]whole congregation of the LORD, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to [u]turn away this day from following the LORD, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might rebel this day against the LORD?

17 Is [x] the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD,

18 But that ye must turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, seeing ye rebel to-day against the LORD, that [y]to-morrow he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be [z]unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, wherein the [a]LORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us: but [b]rebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar, besides the altar of the LORD our God.

20 Did[c] not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perished not alone in his iniquity.

21 ¶ Then the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, [d]answered and said unto the [e]heads of the thousands of Israel,

22 The [f]LORD God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he knoweth, and [g]Israel he shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD,[2] (save us not this day,)

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt-offering or meat-offering, or if to offer peace-offerings thereon, [h]let the LORD himself require it:

24 And if we have not rather done it [i]for fear of this thing, saying, In time to come[3] your children might speak unto our children, saying, should watch over one another. But all, especially ministers and magistrates, ought to manifest a warm but charitable zeal against every appearance of evil, particularly false worship; for who knows how far and wide, if once admitted, it may spread its baleful influence. And such as have smarted for sin may justly dread the thoughts of renewing their provocation. In this state of imperfection, even in zeal for God, heavy charges are often brought against the innocent: and therefore with great meekness and candour, and, if need be, with solemnity, ought we to explain our conduct, for the satisfaction of our brethren who have mistaken it: and be concerned, not only that our intentions be innocent, but that our brethren may have no occasion to mistake us. And with readiness and pleasure should we receive men's candid exculpation of themselves, and thank God for it. Happy would it be for churches and nations if all their differences were conducted with so much prudent zeal for the glory of God, that it should be, as here, hard to find fault with either party.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 7. Neither make mention of the name of their gods. Christian legislators and judges do not hesitate to introduce superstitious and idolatrous modes of swearing, on the principle that every man is to swear in the mode that will most bind his conscience. This is a plausible but unsound argument, as it renders a judicial respect to superstition or idolatry that never should be rendered, and tends to elevate and perpetuate those evils which every true Christian must, by all means, labour to root out. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Happy is that nation, the rulers of which not only establish the true religion, but also mightily promote it with their example and advice.—Accurate observers of providence may in every age remark manifold grounds of thankfulness, and reasons for exactness in holy obedience: and God's kind favours, as well as his fearful judgments, whether past, present, or future, ought powerfully to influence us to holiness and circumspection of life. But while we are surrounded with temptations, we had need constantly to watch and pray; and to maintain a constant love to God as a mean of preservation from evil. Scarcely any snare is more fatal than affinity or intimacy with SECOND VIEW OF THE SOURCE OF THE JORDAN. [JOSHUA, xxii:25.]—"For the Lord hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad." It is about 200 miles from this particular source of the Jordan which flows from the roots of Anti-Lebanon to the Dead Sea, about 136 miles in a straight line. It is the river of the great plain of Palestine. The view we get here of the source of the Jordan is in the ancient city of Cæsarea Philippi. Frequent mention is made of the River Jordan in the Scripture, as a boundary. It was the limit of the Holy Land on the eastern side. The Jordan has several sources near Cæsarea Philippi. It passes through the lakes of Merom and Galilee. Two remarkable features about the Jordan are its descent and its windings. Between the Lake Galilee and the Dead Sea there are 2 rapids. At Lake Galilee the river is 653 feet beneath sea level, and at the Dead Sea it is 1316 feet beneath sea level.

What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben, and children of Gad; [k]ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt-offering, nor for sacrifice:

27 But that it may be a [l]witness between us and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt-offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace-offerings; that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us, or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern[3] of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt-offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

29 God[m] forbid[4] that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt-offerings, for meat-offerings, or for sacrifices, besides the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

30 ¶ And when Phinehas the priest, and the princes of the congregation, and heads of the thousands of Israel which were with him, heard the words that the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the children of Manasseh spake, [n]it pleased them.[5]

31 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the children of Manasseh, This day we perceive that the LORD is [o]among us, because ye have not committed this trespass against the LORD: [p]now[6] ye have delivered the children of Israel out of the hand of the LORD.

32 ¶ And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, and the princes, returned from the children of Reuben, and from the children of Gad, out of the land of Gilead, unto the land of Canaan, to the children of Israel, and [q]brought them word again.

33 And the thing pleased the children of Israel; and the children of Israel [r]blessed God, and did not intend to go up against them in battle, to destroy the land wherein the children of Reuben and Gad dwelt.

34 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, called the altar Ed:[7] for[s] it shall be a witness between us that the LORD is God.

[3] This circumstance was to be a sign that they worshipped the same Jehovah. Their anxiety respecting the privileges of their posterity is worthy of all praise. Nothing weighs more deeply on the truly pious heart than the transmission to the latest generations of those inestimable religious privileges which have been the comfort and blessing of their fathers.—J.

[5] A disposition to give explanation or make apology is a striking characteristic of a godly man. Paul explained both privately and publicly his whole manner of preaching the gospel, and Peter explained his conduct to the family of Cornelius, Ga. 2. 2, Ac. 11. 4. So the tribes here do not angrily take fire at the mistaken charge of their brethren, nor doggedly refuse an account, but calmly explain their conduct till they fully satisfy their brethren. No less characteristic of a pious mind is the disposition to be satisfied when reasonable explanation is given of mistaken conduct, or sincere apology offered for offence.—C.

Our free will engagements with God, when scriptural, as in the case of the tribes, come under the same descriptions, and require the same literal and faithful observance.—C.)

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Joshua's exhortation before his death, 3 by former benefits, 5 by promises, 12 and by threatenings in case of disobedience.

AND it came to pass, a long time[1] after that the LORD [a]had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies round about, that Joshua waxed old, and stricken in age.[2]

2 And [b]Joshua called for all Israel,[3] and for their elders, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and said unto them, I am old and stricken in age:

3 And ye have [c]seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto all these nations because of you; for the LORD your God is he that hath fought for you.[4]

4 Behold, [d]I have divided unto you by lot these nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the [e]great sea westward.[5]

5 ¶ And the LORD your God, he [f]shall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your sight; and ye shall possess their land, as the LORD your God hath promised unto you.

6 Be[g] ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses, that ye turn not aside therefrom to the right hand or to the left;

7 That [h]ye come not among these nations, these that remain among you, neither make mention of the name of their gods,[6] nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them:

8 But[i] cleave unto the LORD your God, as [k]ye have done unto this day.

9 For[l] the LORD hath driven out from before you great nations and strong: but as for you, no man hath been able to stand before you unto this day.

10 One[m] man of you shall chase a thousand: for the LORD your God, he it is that fighteth for you, as he hath promised you.

11 Take[n] good heed therefore unto yourselves,[7] that ye love the LORD your God.

12 ¶ Else, if [o]ye do in any wise go back, and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, even these that remain among you, and shall make marriages[8] with them, and go in unto them, and they to you:

13 Know for a certainty, [p]that the LORD your God will no more drive out any of these nations from before you; but they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye perish unbelievers; and it often happens that our tempters are arrested in sin, and our knowledge and remembrance of the mercies which we rejected a mean of tormenting us when we are deprived of them. It is therefore greatly unbecoming for professed Christians to regard so little the religion of those whom they marry or make their intimates: or to lard their speeches or writings with the names of idols, or even to deck their houses or gardens with their images for ornament.

from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

14 And, behold, this day I am [g]going the way of all the earth: and ye know in all your hearts, and in all your souls, that [r]not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

15 Therefore it shall come to pass, that as all good things are come upon you, which the LORD your God promised you; so [s]shall the LORD bring upon you all evil things, until he have destroyed you from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

16 When[t] ye have transgressed the covenant of the LORD your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and served other gods, and bowed yourselves to them; then shall the anger of the LORD[9] be kindled against you, and ye shall perish quickly from off the good land which he hath given unto you.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Joshua assembleth the tribes at Shechem. 2 A brief history of God's benefits from Terah. 14 He reneweth the covenant between God and them. 26 A stone is set up to witness the covenant. 29 Joshua's age, death, and burial. 32 Joseph's bones are buried. 33 Eleazar dieth.

AND Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel to [a]Shechem,[1] and called for the elders of Israel, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers; and they presented themselves before God.

2 ¶ And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [b]Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood[2] in old time, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nahor: and they served other gods.[3]

3 And [c]I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and multiplied his seed, and gave him Isaac.

4 And [d]I gave unto Isaac Jacob and Esau: and I gave unto Esau mount Seir, to possess it; but [e]Jacob and his children went down into Egypt.

5 [f]I sent Moses also and Aaron, and I plagued Egypt, according to that which I did among them; and afterward I brought you out.

6 And I [g]brought your fathers out of Egypt: and ye came unto the sea; and the Egyptians pursued after your fathers with chariots and horsemen unto the Red sea.

7 And when they cried unto the LORD, he put darkness between you and the Egyptians, and brought the sea upon them, and covered them; and your eyes have seen what I have done in Egypt: and [h]ye dwelt in the wilderness a long season.

8 And I [i]brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwelt on the other side Jordan; and they fought with you: and I gave them into your hand, that ye might possess their land; and I destroyed them from before you.

9 Then[k] Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, arose and warred against Israel, and sent and called Balaam the son of Beor to curse you:

10 But [l]I would not hearken unto Balaam; therefore he blessed you still: so I delivered you out of his hand.

11 And ye [m]went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and the men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I delivered them into your hand.

12 And [n]I sent the hornet[4] before you, which drave them out from before you, even the two kings of the Amorites; but not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

13 And [o]I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do ye eat.

14 ¶ Now therefore [p]fear the LORD, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt,[5] and serve ye the LORD.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, [q]choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served, that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but [r]as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD.

16 And the people answered and said, [s]God forbid that we should forsake the LORD, to serve other gods;

17 For [t]the LORD our God, he it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed:[6]

18 And[u] the LORD drave out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land; therefore [x]will we also serve the LORD, for he is our God.

[9] The mention of anger in God has often been subject of ridicule or (so-called) philosophical reprehension. For this, however, there is no ground. The Scriptures attribute not to God the unreasonable anger of men, but a holy displeasure at sin and sinners; of which, if there be a philosophy that would deprive God, there is then a philosophy that deprives him of glory. A God that does not abhor sin cannot love holiness; and the moral agent that loves not holiness is himself wicked, and cannot be God.—C.

1 It will be remembered that the first great national assembly of the Israelites in Canaan was held in the valley of Shechem, between Ebal and Gerizim. That locality was much better adapted for such an assembly than Shiloh. Shiloh stood on the rugged side of a hill, with a deep winding glen beneath it, and no spot capable of accommodating any large number of people met for a common object. The valley of Shechem, on the other hand, lying between Ebal and Gerizim, forms a great natural amphitheatre, and would afford ample space for a vast multitude met in council. There is no valid reason, therefore, for attempting to disturb the Masoretic text, or for supposing that Shiloh was meant, and not Shechem.—P.

6 Did those great signs in our sight? How long Joshua survived the passage of the Jordan is not particularly recorded. Josephus reckons it 25, the Jewish chronology 27, Dr. Hales 26 years. We learn from ver. 29 that he died in his 110th year, from which deducting 26 after the death of Moses, also 40 years in the wilderness, we find he left Egypt in his 44th year. Therefore every man now present, who was above 16 years of age had been in Egypt, and had seen the signs which God wrought there, the rest had witnessed with their own eyes all that he wrought in the wilderness. These miraculous events, witnessed from the first in the most public manner, and inseparably interwined with our dearest national institutions, family privileges, and personal rights, form a body of evidence for the divine commission of Moses and Joshua, which no history can furnish for the human commission of any of its distinguished characters.—C.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 1. Shechem. Several commentators of high repute are for displacing Shechem in this and every other part of the chapter except ver. 32, and supplying Shiloh, because the ark was at Shiloh and not at Shechem. Various reasons are assigned for this proposal, which we hold it unnecessary to repeat. There is no sufficient authority for the proposal, except the conjecture of the proposers, founded on an imaginary difficulty, which can have no weight against the almost uniform evidence of the Hebrew MSS. and early translations. If the ark was necessary to this great transaction, where was the difficulty in its 19 And Joshua said unto the people, [y]Ye cannot serve the LORD: for he is [z]an holy God; he is a jealous God;[7] he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins.

20 If ye [a]forsake the LORD, and serve strange gods, then he will turn and [b]do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good.

21 And the people said unto Joshua, [c]Nay; but we will serve the LORD.

22 And Joshua said unto the people, [d]Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen you the LORD, to serve him. And they said, We are witnesses.

23 Now therefore [e]put away (said he) the strange gods[8] which are among you, and incline your heart unto the LORD God of Israel.

24 And the people said unto Joshua, [f]The LORD our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

25 So Joshua [g]made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance in Shechem.

26 ¶ And Joshua [h]wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone, and set it up there under an oak that was by the sanctuary of the LORD.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, Behold,[h] this stone shall be a witness unto us; for it hath heard all the words of the LORD which he spake unto us: it shall be therefore a witness unto you, lest ye deny your God.

28 So [i]Joshua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

29 ¶ And it came to pass [k]after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

30 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in [l]Timnath-serah, which is in mount Ephraim, on the north side of the hill of Gaash.[9]

31 And Israel [m]served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that overlived Joshua,[1] and which had known all the works of the LORD, that he had done for Israel.[2]

32 ¶ And[n] the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Shechem, in a [o]parcel of ground which Jacob bought of [p]the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem, for an hundred pieces of silver:[3] and it became the inheritance of the children of Joseph.

33 ¶ And[q] Eleazar the son of Aaron[4] died; and they buried him in a hill that pertained to Phinehas his son, which was given him in mount Ephraim.

[7] So long as ye retain your secret hankering after idolatry, ye cannot serve the Lord, simply because no man can serve two masters.—C.

[8] A Jewish commentator remarks upon this passage that Joshua says this to them in order that if their hearts had been enticed by any of the idolatries of the people of the land, they should put away the pernicious thoughts that were in them: and Augustine seems to take the same view of the meaning of the passage. It must be admitted, however, that there does seem to be a reference to idols actually retained among them; and these in conformity with the resolution previously expressed by them, they are commanded to put away.—I.

[9] The effects produced upon the minds of the whole people by the stupendous miracles of Egypt, the wilderness journey, and the conquest of Canaan are here acknowledged. They left an impression which could never be effaced. The witnesses of them also were able to influence others by the stirring nature of their descriptions and warnings.—P.

temporary removal to Shechem, and its subsequent restoration to Shiloh?—Presented themselves before God. Upon the expression 'before God' the idea of the presence of the ark at Shechem is founded. The subsequent use of the phrase, and which in Scripture is generally the best resource of interpreters, does not warrant this conclusion. See Ac. 10. 33. C.]

Ver. 23. [Put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you. We cannot too often repeat our astonishment at the obstinate adherence of Israel to idolatry; nor too carefully draw the comparison between Jews and Christians in this point of view. Idolatry is a pliant sin, and can take many forms. The idolatry of the understanding—the idolatry of the imagination—the idolatry of the passions, are forms more common, and therefore less noticed, but not therefore less real nor less hateful in the sight of God, than the idolatry of the senses. He that places upon any object one particle of the love he owes to God, is as much an idolater as he who bows down to the sun, or worships a beast or an image of wood or stone. C.]

Ver. 26. [The word 'there' must necessarily refer to the place named immediately before; that is, Shechem, where the assembly was held and the covenant made. We may therefore conclude that the ark and tabernacle had been removed temporarily from Shiloh and set up at Shechem. There is, however, another probable explanation given by Masius:—'I think that that spot is called the Sanctuary of God which was the first in all Canaan to be consecrated by Abraham, when he erected an altar and offered worship by the tree which was standing there, and when he received from God his most welcome announcement.'—'The Book of the Law of God is undoubtedly the Pentateuch, and we gather from the statement here that the words written by Joshua were considered of equal authority, and therefore a continuation of the divine oracles. P.]

Ver. 31. [Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua. That is, Israel as a nation served God all the days of Joshua and the elders who outlived him. As individuals Joshua's own words testify that many were idolaters, of which fact they soon gave melancholy evidence. C.]

Ver. 32. [The bones of Joseph. The entire stream of history bears records of the tomb of Joseph. It is mentioned by Jerome, and continues to be pointed out to every modern traveller. It is now a Turkish oratory, with a whitened dome. It lies in the opening of the valley of Shechem, between the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, and only a few hundred yards north of Jacob's Well. C. and P.]

Ver. 33. [About 5 miles south-east of Nabulus, on the side of the ridge which bounds the upland plain of Mukhna on the east, stands the village of Awertah. In it is the traditional tomb of Phinehas, surrounded by a rude wall, and partially covered by the branches of a great vine. Some distance from the village, on a hill, stands the tomb of Eleazar, with a cave beside it, to which the name of Elijah is attached. It is overshadowed by large oaks, probably the remains of an ancient sacred grove. These tombs are held in great veneration by both Jews and Samaritans, a fact which goes far to prove their authenticity. Mohammedans also esteem them sacred. The district around them may thus be the place called by the historian in this verse the hill of Phinehas. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers and magistrates are loath to leave this world without spending their last breath in the service of God, and manifesting a deep concern to have religion flourish among their friends after their death. Marvellous and gracious are the transactions of God with respect to his people: and great cheerfulness and gratitude ought to take place in our service of him and in cleaving to him alone. And the most solemn engagements, with a deep sense of the purity, power, and profitableness of religion, should always be maintained, to render us duly diligent and constant in it. It is pleasing to see those who inculcate religion upon others, from choice become noted patterns of it themselves and in their families, and daring to be singular therein; and when people, the greatest not excepted, seem fond of attending solemn opportunities of fellowship with God, and edification to their souls. The glory indeed and influence of the great and good on earth is quickly stopped by death. But when our fathers fail, and since our prophets do not live for ever, what a mercy is it that our Redeemer liveth, and will be with us always, even unto the end of the world!

And was not Joshua a noted type of him, our Captain of salvation, who brings many sons and daughters to glory! God solemnly called him to, and fitted him for, his mediatorial office; and in his baptism at Jordan's banks began to magnify him before the people; nor did he ever fail him or forsake him. Made under and trained up in servitude to Moses' broken law, he became fit for his work; and even his name is pregnant with manifold and everlasting salvation. Through what Jordans of trouble and death does he bring his church into her gospel form, and her true members into their spiritual and celestial state! He circumcises their hearts, and feasts them on his flesh and blood, to prepare them for their spiritual warfare on earth. He powerfully intercedes for them, and makes up all breaches between God and them. Miraculously and wisely he conquers all their enemies, treads them under their feet, and enriches them with their spoil. He purchased and prepares for them the promised, the heavenly Canaan; and in due time puts them into the full and quiet possession thereof, according to his Father's purpose and promise. Having come into the bond of the covenant, he weans them from their idolatry, and makes them serve the Lord, and walk as he also walked.—Readily he receives returning harlots and prodigals—accursed sinners of the Gentiles—and consecrates them to the service of God. But no obstinate and hardened opposer is able to stand before him all the days of his life. Fire, hail, and furious storms he did and will rain upon his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other implacable enemies. Nor till his victories be finished shall the luminaries of heaven, or those of his church, withdraw their shining.

JUDGES—SONG OF SOLOMON

ELISHA'S FOUNTAIN, WHERE ELISHA CAST SALT INTO THE SPRING AND HEALED THE WATERS. [II. KINGS, ii: 19.]—"And the men of the city (that is of Jericho) said unto Elisha: Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my Lord seeth: but the water is naught and the ground barren. And he said: Bring me a new cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him. And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the Lord, I have healed these waters; there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land. So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake." In the view above we have a picture of Elisha's Fountain in the city of Old Jericho where his miracle was performed. The water from this fountain is still used to supply the natives of the modern village of Jericho and for irrigating the soil.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES

Relates the transactions of fourteen Hebrew judges, who, under God, the King of the nation, were occasional governors of Israel; and who, Abimelech excepted were typical of Jesus Christ, as called to, qualified for, and occupied in delivering his chosen people. It contains the history of about three hundred years; and particularly narrates the Israelites' behaviour towards the Canaanites whom Joshua had left in the country; the Lord's reproof of their conduct and their repentance for it; what nations were left to chastise them for it; their frequent relapses into idolatry; and their punishment on account of it by terrible oppressions from the Mesopotamians, Moabites, Canaanites, Midianites, Abimelech, Ammonites, and Philistines; and their deliverances by Othniel, Ehud, Deborah and Barak, Gideon, Jephthah, and Samson; and their protection by Shamgar, Tola, Jair, Ibzan, Elon, and Abdon, i.–xvi. The last five chapters are an appendix, informing us of events which happened not long after the death of Joshua; particularly the idolatry of Micah; the conquest and idolatry of the Danites; the horrible lust of the Gibeathites; and the almost utter destruction of the Benjamites for protecting them, xvii.–xxi. The scope of this and of the following histories of the Old Testament is to represents the sinful backslidings of Israel, and the holiness, equity, mercy, sovereignty, and power of God, in his dispensations of mercy and judgment towards them, in exact correspondence with his promises and threatenings, i.e. xxvi.; De. xxviii.–xxxii.

CHAPTER I.

1 The acts of Judah and Simeon. 4 Adoni-bezek justly requited. 8 Jerusalem taken. 10 Hebron taken. 11 Othniel hath Achsah to wife for taking of Debir. 16 The Kenites dwell in Judah. 17 Hormah, Gaza, Askelon, and Ekron taken. 21 The acts of Benjamin. 22 Of the house of Joseph, who take Beth-el. 30 Of Zebulun. 31 Of Asher, 33 Of Naphtali. 34 Of Dan.

A.M. 2570 or 2580. B.C. 1434 or 1424.

NOW, [a]after the death of Joshua, it came to pass, that the children of Israel [b]asked the LORD,[1] saying, Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first, to fight against them?

2 And the LORD said, [c]Judah shall go up: behold, I have delivered the land into his hand.

3 And Judah said unto [d]Simeon his brother,[2] Come up with me into my lot, that we may fight against the Canaanites; and I likewise will go with thee into thy lot. So Simeon went with him.

4 And Judah went up; and the [e]LORD delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hand: and they slew of them in [f]Bezek ten thousand men.

5 And they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek: and they fought against him, and they slew the Canaanites and the Perizzites.

6 But Adoni-bezek fled: and they pursued after him, and caught him, and [g]cut off his thumbs and his great toes.

7 And Adoni-bezek said, Threescore and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes[3] cut off, gathered[4] their meat under my table: [h]as I have done, so God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem, and there he died.

8 ¶ Now the children of Judah [i]had fought against [k]Jerusalem, and had taken it, and smitten it with the edge of the sword, and set the city on fire.

9 And[l] afterward the children of Judah went down to fight against the Canaanites that dwelt in the mountain, and in the south, and in the valley.[5]

10 ¶ And Judah went against the Canaanites that dwelt in [m]Hebron; (now the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba;) [n]and they slew Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai.

11 And from thence he went against the inhabitants of Debir: (and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher:)

12 And [o]Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.[6]

1 The influence of the elders who outlived Joshua still continues to preserve the people in the worship of the true God, and they will not undertake any war without his sanction. The reference of the case to God is to be accounted for only on the principle declared, Le. 18. 27, 28, and surely, if a human judge has a right and is bound, to punish a criminal, much more must "the Judge of the whole earth" have a right to order the punishment of individual or national sins.—C.

6 This passage is extracted from Jos. 15. 13–19. The object of the repetition seems to be, to distinguish, by a notable occurrence, the conquests gained during the life of Joshua, from those that were subsequent. Accordingly, ver. 8 is not a continuation of ver. 7, but a reference to what had been done at a former period, when, though numbers were fewer, faith was stronger. Another object of the repetition seems to be, to give a formal recognition of the title of Caleb; for in Jos. 15. 13 it is said "he," that is, Joshua, gave to Caleb the city of Arba. In Ju. 1. 20 it is said, "and they," that is, the people of Judah, gave the city; thereby confirming the promise formerly made by Moses, and the grant conferred by Joshua.—C.

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 2. Judah shall go up. Israel was formerly a camp, now it is a federation of settlements and colonies, in which each tribe is to assert its own territorial rights, but still under the national sanction and banner. Here is the true exemplar of the churches. In the movements and progress of reformation they constitute one army united by common doctrines and common dangers. When the storm of opposition or persecution gives place to the calm of success, the churches settle down in territorial divisions; each church having allotted to it, by Providence, its own peculiar work of faith and labour of love; while all the churches should remain the members of one great federation, of which Christ is the head, and whose separate or combined energies should all be directed to the spiritual subjugation of their common enemies, and the advancement of the glory of their common Lord. C.]

Ver. 6. [Cut off his thumbs and his great toes. This punishment, grievous as it appears, was more politic than cruel. The removal of the thumb was intended to unfit for holding the war-spear. The removal of the great toes to unfit for running; and so to obviate the necessity of imprisonment or death. There seems no room for supposing, with some, that the great toes were cut off merely to prevent Adoni-bezek from employing them as a kind of additional hands, as is common with artisans in the East, and as is sometimes seen in Europe in the case of persons born without hands. In a cruel tyrant, such as Adoni-bezek was, we scarcely expect either the diligence or dexterity of an artisan. C.]

Ver. 7. [As I have done, so God hath requited me. A heathen once wisely said of a criminal, 'He has blushed, and all is well;' and may not a Christian hope that where conscience is not dead, there still is hope of spiritual revival? Adoni-bezek acknowledges the justice of God; may we not judge in charity, that he likewise saw his mercy? C.]

Ver. 13. [Caleb's younger brother took it. Joshua had already taken Arba (Hebron), Jos. 10. 36, how then does it require to be taken again? Are not these accounts contradictory? By no means. The Canaanites had in the meantime retaken them, and they now required to be reconquered, an occurrence very common in all warfare. C.]

Ver. 18. [The Septuagint, which is followed by Augustine, reads, that 'Judah did not take Gaza,' &c.; and Josephus says they took neither Gaza nor Ekron. All these seem forced amendments of the text, and without authority. The subsequent Scripture history exhibiting these cities, not in the possession of Israel, but of their enemies—and no account of their recapture from Israel having been given—it seemed necessary to force an agreement between the two narratives. Such modes of reconciling scriptures are not only indefensible, but to be utterly condemned. The reconciliation lies at the surface. Judah took the cities and lands, as in the text, the Canaanites retook them, as the subsequent history implies, though it records neither the time nor the manner. C.]

Ver. 19. [Could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron. These words, as translated, seem to ascribe incapacity to Jehovah. The proper solution lies in translating the last clause of the sentence interrogatively, thus: 'Could he not therefore have caused the inhabitants of the valley to be driven out though they had chariots of iron?' This is a truth in war. For when mountaineers are driven from their natural fortresses—and the earth affords none stronger than those of Palestine—the force that drove them out must with far greater ease drive out the inhabitants of the plain, no matter how strong their walls or how great their means of defence. This solution confirms the declaration, Jos. 17. 18, and is perfectly consistent with the translation of similar sentences in other parts of the Hebrew Scriptures, while it removes the apparent admission of incapacity in God,

RUINS OF SERAPEUM, PUTEOLI – NEAR THE PLACE WHERE NERO HAD HIS OWN MOTHER PUT TO DEATH AND NEAR WHERE ST. PAUL LANDED IN ITALY. [JUDGES, i:7.]—"And Adoni-bezek said, Three-score and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table: as I have done, so God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem and there he died." There is an intimate correspondence between crime and requital, and there seems to be a correspondence between the particular type of crime and the order of punishment that follows. Neoptolemus murdered people at the alta, and at the altar he was murdered. Phalerus roasted men in a brazen bull. In a brazen bull he was roasted in turn. History abounds with illustrations. The picture we give of the ruins of the Serapeum at Puteoli will serve to illustrate the relation between crime and its penalty. These ruins are in the neighborhood of the Emperor Nero's greatest crime. Near here he had his mother murdered, while he in turn in after years destroyed himself by his own hand.

13 And [p]Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother, took it: and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

14 And it came to pass, when she came to him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field: and she lighted from off her ass; and Caleb said unto her, What wilt thou?

15 And she said unto him, Give me a [q]blessing: for thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And Caleb gave her the upper springs and the nether springs.[8]

16 ¶ And the [r]children of the Kenite, Moses' father-in-law, went up out of the [s]city of palm-trees with the children of Judah into the [t]wilderness of Judah, which lieth in the south of Arad; and they went and dwelt among the people.[9]

17 ¶ And Judah went with Simeon his brother, and they slew the Canaanites that inhabited Zephath, and utterly destroyed it: (and the name of the city was called [u]Hormah:)

18 Also Judah took [x]Gaza with the coast thereof, and Askelon with the coast thereof, and Ekron with the coast thereof.

19 And[y] the LORD was with Judah; and he drave out the inhabitants of the mountain;[1] but could[z] not drive out the inhabitants of the valley,[2] because they had chariots of iron.[3]

20 And[a] they gave Hebron unto Caleb, as Moses said: and he expelled thence the three sons of Anak.

21 ¶ And [b]the children of Benjamin did not drive out the Jebusites that inhabited Jerusalem; but the Jebusites dwell with the children of Benjamin in Jerusalem unto this day.

22 ¶ And the [c]house of Joseph, they also went up against [d]Bethel: and the LORD was with them.

23 And the house of Joseph sent to [e]descry Beth-el: (now the name of the city before was Luz.)[f]

24 And the spies saw a man come forth out of the city, and they said unto him, Show us, we pray thee, the entrance into the city, and we[g] will show thee mercy.

25 And when he showed them the entrance into the city, [h]they smote the city with the edge of the sword: but they let go the man and all his family.

26 And the man went into the [i]land of the Hittites, and built a city, and called the name thereof Luz: which is the name thereof unto this day.[4]

27 ¶ Neither[k] did Manasseh drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shean and her towns, nor Taanach[5] and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Ibleam and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns: but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.[6]

28 And it came to pass, when Israel was strong, that they [l]put the Canaanites to [m]tribute, and did not utterly drive them out.[8]

29 ¶ Neither[m] did Ephraim drive out the Canaanites that dwelt in Gezer; but the Canaanites dwelt in Gezer among them.[9]

30 ¶ Neither[n] did Zebulun drive out the inhabitants of Kitron, nor the inhabitants of Nahalol: but the Canaanites dwelt among them, and became tributaries.

31 ¶ Neither[o] did Asher drive out the inhabitants of Accho,[1] nor the inhabitants of Zidon, nor of Ahlab, nor of Achzib, nor of Helbah, nor of Aphek, nor of Rehob:[2]

32 But the Asherites [p]dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land; for they did not drive them out.

33 ¶ Neither [q]did Naphtali drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh, nor the inhabitants of Beth-anath; but he dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land: nevertheless the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh and of Beth-anath became tributaries unto them.

34 ¶ And the Amorites forced the children of Dan into the [r]mountain: for they would not suffer them to come down to the valley:

35 But the Amorites would dwell in [s]mount Heres in Aijalon, and in Shaalbim: yet the hand of the house of Joseph[3] prevailed,[4] so that they became tributaries.

36 And the coast of the Amorites was from [t]the going up to Akrabbim, from the rock and upward.[5]

CHAPTER II.

AND an [a]angel of the LORD came up from Gilgal to Bochim, and said, [b]I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I sware unto your fathers; and I said, I will never break my covenant with you.

2 And [c]ye shall make no league with the inhabitants of this land; ye shall throw down their altars: but ye have not obeyed my voice: why have ye done this?

It was probably when the tribe of Judah took possession of their allotted territory that 'the children of the Kenite went up out of the City of Palm-trees (Jericho)' with them, and settled near Arad, the ruins of which may still be seen on the summit of a conical hill about 15 miles south of Hebron.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Difficult and extensive is the work which the people of God, and the rulers of nations and churches, have to go through with, after one would think everything was rectified. There is need to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways, that, being animated by him to our proper work, we may prosecute it with courage and success. And the more honour or ability God gives to men, the more difficult work he assigns them. But God most fearfully humbles the proud, marks their sins in their judgments, and metes out to them the measure which they had meted out to others; while such as share with the people of God in their wilderness sufferings, share also in their eternal inheritance. Our own unbelief, sloth, and cowardice frequently hinder our performance of duty, and prevent or mar much of our happiness. Yea, many secret enemies still abiding in our hearts prevent as thorns in your sides, and their gods shall be a snare unto you.

4 And it came to pass, when the angel of the LORD spake these words unto all the children of Israel, that the [e]people lifted up their voice, and wept.

5 And they called the name of that place Bochim:[f] and they [g]sacrificed there unto the LORD.

6 ¶ And when [h]Joshua had let the people go,[2] the children of Israel went every man unto his inheritance to possess the land.

7 And the people served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that outlived Joshua,[3] who had seen all the great works of the LORD that he did for Israel.

8 And[i] Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

9 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-heres, in the mount of Ephraim, on the north side of the hill Gaash.

His altars and sanctuaries were on eminences—sometimes, as in the case of Hermon, on the summits of high mountains, whence the first view of the rising and the last view of the setting sun might be gained

THE TEMPLE OF PAN—NEAR WHERE THE TRANSFIGURATION ON MOUNT HERMON TOOK PLACE. [JUDGES, ii: 12]—"And they forsook the Lord God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed other gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and bowed themselves unto them, and provoked the Lord to anger." The temple of Pan, or what remains of it at Cæsarea Philippi, is hewn out of a part of Mount Hermon. There are arched niches chiseled into the sides of the foot of the mountain here about which there are Greek letters indicating that the temple was dedicated to the rustic god Pan. Cæsarea Philippi was but a little distance from Dan, which formed the extreme limit of the Holy Land, and so the god worshiped here was one of the gods of the people that were round about Israel. Here are streams, wild woods, goats, and mountains, and all things in nature which seem to be friendly to the genius of the heathen god, Pan.

Such ambidexterity is not common, but is easily acquired in youth, and by a vigorous resolution may at later periods be attained. Well instructed surgeons frequently possess it in great perfection, and some deprived by injury of the use of the right hand, have in a short time learned to write and to paint in the most beautiful manner with the left, so bountiful is Providence in the bodily capacities of men, as many the facilities for compensating every loss.—C.

15 But when the children of Israel [v]cried unto the LORD, the LORD raised them up a deliverer, Ehud the son of Gera, a [7]Benjamite, a man [u]left-handed:[8] and by him the children of Israel [w]sent a present unto Eglon the king of Moab.

16 But Ehud made him a dagger which had [a]two edges, of a cubit length; and he did gird it under his raiment upon his right thigh.

their course. What pains God uses to check his people's sinful rebellion against him or revolting from him! And deep are the impressions of his rebukes when effectually blessed. But even then not our tears, however sincere and penitential, but the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ, can make us pure from our iniquity. Faithful ministers and magistrates are a beneficial restraint upon nations and churches; yet we may commonly observe that the power and life of religion rarely flourish in a place for more than one generation at a time. And it is an awful sign to this effect when young ones grow up in ignorance and forgetfulness of God and his mighty works. But how infinite the extent of God's mercy and patience! he bears with, and even pardons and delivers, transgressors in the moment of their greatest extremity, and calls and blesses instruments for that end. But, Lord, what are men! they often become more hardened under such mercies and judgments—at the hazard of provoking thee to the uttermost, they return again and again to the very abomination for which they had formerly smarted! No wonder then that they are given up to uncommon rage of lusts or of lasting punishment.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 1. The nations which the Lord left to prove Israel. To prove, not to discover anything in them unknown to God, 'for he knows what is in man;' but to disclose to themselves their wickedness by the judgments that righteously followed it; and to display to other nations and churches, as well as to Israel, the nature of that moral government which God exercises over all. God also intended to prove—to demonstrate—the power of faith, that is, the believing reception of God's word, and a firm reliance upon his truth, mercy, and power; and thereby to bear witness to a faithless generation that 'God's arm was not shortened that it could not save,' seeing the arm of man, when nerved by faith, was instrumentally sufficient for their deliverance.—Note, The faith of these judges and their true followers was faith in Christ the promised deliverer, whose 'day they saw afar off and were glad.' C.]

Ver. 2. [Teach them war. Not to teach them war as an employment, but to let them feel it as a judgment; and only a duty when in self-defence or the commanded punishment of abandoned criminals. C.]

Ver. 3. [The 'five lords of the Philistines' resided in the five capital cities, Gaza, Ascalon, Ashdod, Gath, and Ekron. The Canaanites and Sidonians included the inhabitants of Lebanon and Phœnicia; the Hivites were the inhabitants of Anti-Lebanon, which extended from Hermon on the south to the entering in of Hamath on the north. Hermon had a noted sanctuary of Baal on its summit, and many others round its sides: hence it is called Baal-hermon. P.]

Ver. 7. [Served Baalim and the groves. How any one could worship Baal, and in the same sense worship a grove, is scarcely intelligible. The Hebrew word, however, translated 'groves,' signifies, according to the high authority of Castel, 'a wooden image dedicated to Astarte or Venus.' The word employed by the Septuagint to translate the Hebrew, Theodoret explains by Astarte, Venus, or Ashtaroth. A clear proof of this interpretation occurs 2 Ki. 23. 6, where it is recorded that 'Josiah brought out the groves from the house of the Lord.' Now a grove could not have grown in the house; the word must therefore signify an image for idolatrous worship. C.]

Ver. 8. [Mesopotamia is in Hebrew Aram-naharaim, i.e. 'Aram between the two rivers,' the Euphrates and Tigris. The king Chushan-rishathaim is not elsewhere mentioned; but it has been thought he is identical with the Assyrian monarch Asshur-ris-ilim, who conquered Southern Syria and Palestine, and who is called on Assyrian monuments 'the powerful king, the subduer of rebellious countries, he who has reduced all the accursed' (see Rawlinson's Ancient Monarchies, ii. 308). P.]

Ver. 9. [Caleb's younger brother. Family descent is neither proudly and foolishly to be overvalued, nor as proudly or foolishly despised. God gives many promises in family descent—he assigns his largest encouragements to family education—he delights to be called 'the God of our fathers;' and here the first deliverer illustrates the importance of family character, hereditary honour, courage, and piety. C.]

Ver. 13. [City of palm-trees. Whether this city was Jericho or Engedi, which lay near to each other, is matter of question. Brown Patterson, in his judicious notes, says it was Jericho, or a city erected by the Moabites on its site, but gives no authority, and in this opinion he is joined by the annotator in the Pictorial Bible. Syme in his Geography identifies Hazezontamar, the city of palm-trees, with Engedi. That it was not Jericho appears more than probable from consulting ch. 1. 16; for Jericho having been utterly de-that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly; and the dirt came out.[3]

23 Then [g]Ehud went forth through the porch, and shut the doors of the parlour upon him, and locked them.[4]

24 When he was gone out, his servants came; and when they saw that, behold, the doors of the parlour were locked, they said, Surely he covereth[h] his feet in his summer chamber.

25 And they tarried till they were ashamed: and, behold, he opened not the doors of the parlour; therefore they took a key, and opened them: and, behold, their lord was fallen down dead on the earth.

26 And Ehud escaped while they tarried, and passed beyond the quarries, and escaped unto Seirath.

27 And it came to pass, when he was come, that he [i]blew a trumpet in [k]the mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Israel went down with him from the mount, and he before them.

28 And he said unto them, [l]Follow after me; for the LORD hath delivered[5] your enemies the Moabites into your hand. And they went down after him, and took the [m]fords of Jordan toward Moab, and suffered not a man to pass over.

29 ¶ And they slew of Moab at that time about ten thousand men, all [n]lusty, and all men of valour; and there escaped not a man.

30 So Moab was subdued that day under the hand of Israel. [o]And the land had rest fourscore years.

31 ¶ And after him was [p]Shamgar the son of Anath, which slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox-goad: and he also delivered Israel.

4 The Scriptures have given principles and judgment and conduct, do not generally comment upon actions either with praise or blame, but leave men to judge and act by the principles already furnished. Their silence, therefore, is not to be interpreted into an approval of the mode by which Ehud delivered Israel. The death of Eglon may have been well deserved, but the manner, so far as we can judge from the narrative, is not to be defended. Indeed we are no more called upon to vindicate all the acts of Ehud than all the acts of Samson. God can work perfectly by imperfect instruments, else in a world like ours what could be effected?—C.

5 Those who really believe in an overruling, universal, and therefore particular providence, embracing all events, however great or however minute, which is the only providence or divine government recognized in Scripture, will have no difficulty in understanding literally that 'the Lord delivered their enemies.' But this 'delivering of Moab' into the hands of Israel implies no more approbation of the idolatrous propensities and evil practices of Israel than it implied approbation of the idolatry and wickedness of Moab when the Lord delivered Israel into their hands.—C.

1 The Scriptures nowhere condescend to assert or defend woman's moral dignity or equality with man. This great end they attain much more effectually than by a mere metaphysical inquiry or logical controversy. They give the history of woman; and in that history record her spiritual endowments and official dignities, as immediately conferred by the hand of God.—Note. Facts are always the simplest and most effectual arguments.—C.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Deborah and Barak deliver Israel from Jabin and Sisera. 18 Jael killeth Sisera.

AND the children of Israel [a]again did evil in the sight of the LORD, when Ehud was dead.

2 And the LORD [b]sold them into the hand of Jabin king of Canaan, that reigned in [c]Hazor; the captain of whose host was Sisera, which dwelt in [d]Harosheth of [e]the Gentiles.

3 And the children of Israel [f]cried unto the LORD; for he had nine hundred [g]chariots of iron; and twenty years he mightily oppressed the children of Israel.

4 ¶ And [h]Deborah, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, she judged Israel at that time.[1]

5 And she dwelt under [i]the palm-tree of Deborah, between Ramah and Beth-el in mount Ephraim;[2] and the children of Israel came up to her for judgment.[3]

6 And she sent and called [k]Barak the son of Abinoam out of [l]Kedesh-naphtali, and said unto him, Hath not the [m]LORD God of Israel commanded, saying, Go and draw toward [n]mount Tabor,[4] and take with thee [o]ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali, and of the children of Zebulun;

7 And I [p]will draw unto thee, to the [q]river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand.

8 And Barak said unto her, [r]If thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go.

9 And she said, I will surely go with thee: [s]notwithstanding the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour; for the LORD

stroyed, and its re-erection denounced, it can scarcely be imagined that the Kenites were inhabiting its ruins. C.]

Ver. 28. [It appears from the whole tenor of this singular narrative that the Moabites had crossed the Jordan and settled down on the plain of Jericho. The site of the ancient city may have been, and probably was, occupied by a village of huts; and the building of it subsequently by Hiel may refer to its regular fortification as a city. Be this as it may, Eglon had established himself at this place. Gilgal was only a mile or two distant; and the word translated 'quarries' doubtless signifies those stones or pillars which Joshua had set up. After accomplishing the bloody deed Ehud could easily escape. The wild ravines and rugged mountains of Benjamin and Ephraim were only a few miles distant. Taking advantage of the panic he suddenly collected the people of Israel and seized the passes of the Jordan. The Moabites were thus entrapped. Behind them were the mountains filled with an exasperated enemy; in front the Jordan with its difficult fords guarded by armed men. Conquest was thus easy, and the slaughter necessarily great. P.]

Ver. 29. [Ten thousand men. Moab had the country only by military occupation, not by agricultural or commercial settlements. There is therefore no account out of men—a sure note of the great moral corruption both of the occupying army and the conquered country. C.]

Ver. 31. [Slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox-goad. The Syrian ox-goad of modern times—and from the eastern tenacity of ancient forms, manners, and customs, we may infer of ancient times likewise—is a strong pole of wood, 7 or 8 feet long, with a pointed iron at one end and a broad chisel at the other—the one to goad the oxen, the other to clean the plough—a truly formidable weapon, and perhaps intended for defence in a country where still in many places, as travellers declare, the gun forms a regular appurtenance of the plough. The exploit of Shamgar is extraordinary; an infidel would say incredible. Not so, however, if Scripture language receive the same justice with other history; for we say, a general gained a battle, when we make no mention of the soldiers who alone fought for it, while he never struck a single blow. Shamgar may accordingly have led on a party of Israelites against Moabite marauders, he being armed merely with an ox-goad. Or if any say that the words describe the 600 as actually slain by his own hand, still it is not said that he slew them at once, but may have destroyed so many in successive encounters. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While men are on earth, inward corruptions and outward enemies will be still left, to prove their steadfastness or exercise their graces. One of the most dangerous snares is an irreligious partner in marriage, which is ruinous in its consequences, as it opens a wide inlet to every abomination, and generally leads to forgetfulness of God. But God can easily find instruments to punish us, far or near, even among our own relations. And yet how light, especially at first, are his strokes of justice in comparison of what our iniquities deserve! God also can easily find and qualify instruments for the deliverance of his people: and ordinarily he employs such as have been most courageous and faithful in his work, or such as seem naturally most unfit for it. But if we, after deliverances, return to our own sins, we may expect that God will return to judgment: and if lighter corrections have been ineffectual, God will make them longer and heavier. Nor is any instrument so despicable but he can make it the rod of his anger. Wicked men, kings not excepted, are often fattened up to their own shame and destruction, and find their message from God in a ruinous stroke of his wrath. But easy work is the ruin of the strongest enemies when we are called, directed, and assisted by God!

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 2. That reigned in Hazor. Reconquered and rebuilt by the Canaanites, after being burned by Joshua, Jos. 11. 13. Such revolutions are common in war, and indicate no contradiction in the history. Its restoration is not recorded, simply because the author writes not the general history of Jabin, but of Israel, and notices only so much of Jabin as is necessary to illustrate the religious defection and political troubles of Israel.—Harosheth of the Gentiles. A city of northern Galilee, long retained by the Canaanites, and has the distinctive appellation 'of the Gentiles,' as most probably there was another city of the same name within the possession of the tribes. C.]

Ver. 7. [Mount Tabor stands on the northern side of the great plain of Esdraelon. It is almost isolated, being connected only by a low wooded ridge with the mountains of Galilee on the west. In form, as seen from the south, it is a segment of a sphere, and is thinly covered with evergreen oaks. It is one of the most graceful hills in Palestine. It has an elevation of 1900 ft.; and its summit is covered with the ramparts and ruins of an ancient city. The highest sources of the Kishon are at the southern base of Tabor, but they are winter torrents. The river winds westward through the great plain. Its banks are composed of rich alluvial shall[t] sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah arose, and went with Barak to Kedesh.[u]

10 ¶ And Barak called [x]Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedesh; and he went up with ten thousand men at [y]his feet: and Deborah went up with him.

11 Now [z]Heber the Kenite, which was of the children of Hobab, the father-in-law[5] of Moses, had severed himself from the Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the [a]plain of Zaanaim, which is by Kedesh.[6]

12 And they showed Sisera that Barak the son of Abinoam was gone up to [b]mount Tabor.

13 And Sisera gathered[7] together all his chariots, even nine hundred chariots of iron,[8] and all the people that were with him, from Harosheth[9] of the Gentiles, unto the river of Kishon.[d]

14 And Deborah said unto Barak, Up; for this is the day in which the LORD hath delivered Sisera into thine hand: [c]is not the LORD gone out before thee? So Barak went down from mount Tabor, and ten thousand men after him.[9]

15 And [f]the LORD discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword, before Barak; so that Sisera lighted down off his chariot, and fled away on his feet.

16 But Barak [g]pursued after the chariots, and after the host, unto Harosheth of the Gentiles: and all the host of Sisera fell upon the edge of the sword; and there was not a man[1] left.

17 ¶ Howbeit Sisera [h]fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite: for there was peace between [i]Jabin the king of Hazor and the house of Heber the Kenite.

18 And Jael went out to meet Sisera, and said unto him, Turn in, my lord, turn in to me; fear not. And when he had turned in unto her into the tent,[2] she covered him with a mantle.[3]

19 And he said unto her, [k]Give me, I pray thee, a little water to drink;[4] for I am thirsty. And she opened a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him.

20 Again he said unto her, Stand in the door of the tent; and it shall be, when any man doth come and inquire of thee, and say, Is there any man here? that thou shalt say, No.

21 Then Jael, Heber's wife, took a [l]nail of the tent,[5] and took[6] an hammer in her [m]hand, and went softly unto him, and smote the nail into his temples, and fastened it into the ground: (for he was fast asleep and weary:) so he died.

22 And, behold, as Barak pursued Sisera, Jael came out to meet him, and said unto him, Come, and I will show thee the man whom thou seekest. And when he came into her tent, behold, Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples.

23 ¶ So [n]God subdued on that day Jabin the king of Canaan before the children of Israel.

24 And the hand of the children of Israel [o]prospered, and prevailed against Jabin the king of Canaan, until they had destroyed Jabin king of Canaan.

But they were nomads, and a section of them, attracted doubtless by the excellence of the pasture, wandered northward, and encamped on the rich upland plain beside Kedesh. The word translated 'plain' is properly 'oak;' and the 'oak of Zaanaim' was probably some noted tree, perhaps a patriarch or a sacred grove beneath or around which nomad shepherds of these days used to pitch their tents, as Abraham pitched his by the oak of Mamre. 5 To those who have never examined a tent, it may be useful to state that it consists of a pole fastened to the ground —or more than one, if the tent be large —that to the top of the pole several cords are fixed, and these are tied to pins of wood or iron driven into the ground, slanting outward, at proper distances on each side, and straitened tight, either simply by the hand, or by means of a block and pulley to each; and that over these cords a covering is stretched. With one of these pins, and a workman's hammer, the death of Sisera was effected.—C.

7 The tent-pin, or 'nail,' is a long spike of wood or iron—in this case iron: 'the hammer' is the large mallet with which Arab women are accustomed to drive the tent-pins into the ground when encamping. An Arab woman are well accustomed to their use. Jael therefore was able to strike with force and precision.—P.

4 As in the case of Jael, so in the case of Sisera, we are unable to ascertain the complete facts of the indictment. What his personal delinquencies may have been, we cannot tell; but there is here a note of his administration of the government, that marks him as a political and military delinquent of the deepest dye.—C.

soil, which the winter torrents and heavy rains of autumn and spring convert into impassable morasses. P.]

Ver. 15. [Sisera lighted down off his chariot. Why not rather keep in the chariot, and trust to the swiftness of the horses? Partly to avoid notice of himself, by drawing away the pursuers after the chariot, as actually took place; partly, perhaps, to get into broken ground or underwood, so as to escape detection; partly to make his way to the nearest friendly tribe, who had actually informed of Barak's levies on Tabor, ver. 12. C.]

Ver. 20. [Thou shalt say, No. That the modern Arab code of honour must have thus early been recognized, is evident from the fact, that Sisera goes confidently to sleep in the tent, with no defence but Jael's implied denial of his concealment. He was fully aware that no one dared to violate the privacy of the tent in search of Sisera. The crime would have been considered inexpiable. Nay, even if certain he was concealed within, it is questionable whether any one acquainted with Arabian law would have ventured to enter. C.]

Ver. 22. [Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples. Do the Scriptures sanction the breach of implied and conventional honour, or the practice of assassination, either for private or political crimes? We answer, They sanction neither; they denounce both. How then are we to defend the conduct of Jael? The answer is easy. We feel tied to no such defence. The candid student of the Bible is referred, for the general principle of Scripture in such cases, to the note on ch. 3. 23. And it may be proper to add, that when the Scriptures neither pause to condemn nor to justify, but merely to state the facts, we must now be utterly incompetent to pronounce anything but a conditional verdict, whether of guilt or acquittal, inasmuch as we are totally ignorant of many of the concurrent circumstances under which the event took place. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — Long-continued peace and prosperity are often made the occasion of great wickedness, which issues in heavier and sharper punishments than any formerly met with. But a merciful God readily hears the cries of his people under the distress which they have provoked him to lay upon them: and in his work of deliverance there is neither male nor female, but he himself is ALL and IN ALL! Such as through unbelief are too eagerly desirous of human help or encouragement, are often punished with the loss of part of that honour which they might otherwise have had. But fearful, irresistible, and unavoidable is the ruin which proud sinners shall meet with when and where they expected nothing but safety, victory, and triumph. When God attacks there is no standing: when he pursues there is no escaping: when he begins he will also make an end: but such as trust in him shall never be disappointed. They who go forth in faith shall return victorious. Even the weak things of the world shall confound the mighty. And happy is it for us even when dear-bought experience animates ceased in Israel, until that I Deborah arose, that I arose a [k]mother in Israel.

PLOWING IN THE PLAINS OF JEZREEL—WHERE GIDEON MET THE MIDIANITES [JUDGES, iv: 13-16.]—The valley of Jezreel is the great battlefield of Syria. Here Deborah and Barak routed the hosts of Jabin under Sisera. Here also on the southern edge of the plain near, Josiah, King of Judah, was defeated and slain by Pharaoh Necho, King of Egypt, while on his way to the Euphrates. Here Gideon fought with the Midianites. Here the Philistines encamped in their conflict with Saul. Here Saladin met the crusaders, and here in 1799 the famous battle of Mount Tabor was fought between Napoleon's army and the Turks. We are looking in the above picture toward the Mediterranean and Mount Carmel. When the people you see plowing were asked to stop long enough to let us take their picture, they promised to do so on condition of receiving backsheesh, and for this favor they thought a shilling the proper compensation.

8 They [l]chose new gods; then was war in the gates: was [m]there a shield or spear seen among forty thousand in Israel?

9 My heart is toward the governors of Israel, that offered themselves willingly among the people. Bless ye the LORD.

10 Speak,[6] ye[n] that ride on white asses, ye that sit in judgment, and walk by the way.[7]

11 They that are delivered from [o]the noise of archers in the places of drawing water,[8] there shall they rehearse the [p]righteous acts of the LORD, even the righteous acts toward the inhabitants of his villages in Israel: then shall the people of the LORD [q]go down to the gates.[9]

12 Awake,[r] awake, Deborah; awake, awake; utter a song: arise, Barak, and [s]lead thy captivity captive,[1] thou son of Abinoam.

13 Then [t]he made him that remaineth[2] have dominion over the nobles among the people: the LORD made me have dominion over the mighty.

14 Out[u] of Ephraim was there a root[3] of them against Amalek; [v]after thee, Benjamin, among thy people: out of [w]Machir came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the pen[4] of the writer.

15 And the [x]princes of Issachar were with Deborah; even Issachar, and also Barak: he was sent on foot[5] into the valley. [y]For the divisions of Reuben there were great [z]thoughts of heart.[6]

16 Why abodest thou [a]among the sheepfolds, to hear the bleatings of the flocks? For[7] the divisions of Reuben there were great searchings of heart.

17 Gilead abode beyond Jordan: and why did Dan remain in ships?[8] Asher continued on the sea-shore, and abode in his breaches.[9]

the kings of Canaan in [e]Taanach by the waters of Megiddo; they took no gain of money.[2]

20 They[f] fought from heaven; the stars in their courses[3] fought against Sisera.[4]

21 The[g] river of Kishon swept them [h]away, that ancient river, the river Kishon. [i]O my soul, thou hast trodden down strength.

22 Then[m] were the horse-hoofs broken by the means of the prancings,[6] the prancings of their mighty ones.

23 Curse ye Meroz,[7] (said the [n]angel of the LORD,) curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof; because they [o]came not to the help of the LORD, to the help of the LORD against the mighty.

24 [p]Blessed[8] above women shall Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite be; blessed shall she be above women in the tent.

25 He[q] asked water, and she gave him milk; she brought forth butter in a lordly dish.

26 She put her hand to the nail, and her right hand to the workmen's hammer; and with the hammer[9] she smote Sisera: she smote[1] off his head, when she had pierced and stricken through his temples.

27 At[2] her feet he bowed, he fell, he lay down; at her feet he bowed, he fell: where he bowed, there he fell down [r]dead.

28 The mother of Sisera looked out at a window, and cried through the lattice, Why is his chariot so long in coming? why tarry the wheels of his chariots?

29 Her wise ladies answered her, yea, she returned answer[3] to herself,

30 Have[s] they not sped? have they not divided the prey? to every man[4] a damsel or two; to Sisera a prey of divers colours, a prey of divers colours of needle-work, of divers colours of needle-work on both sides, meet for the necks of them that take the spoil?

31 So[t] let all thine enemies perish, O LORD: but let them [u]that love him be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might. And the land had rest [v]forty years.

us at last to mortify our corruptions, and purge out the Canaanites from the church of Christ.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 11. The degraded state of fear and servitude to which the whole nation had been reduced, and the desolation which war and tyranny had left behind them, are described with wonderful graphic power in this noble ode:—The highways waste; travellers stealing along by obscure paths; arms all gone; the towns and villages deserted; and the inhabitants seeking an asylum in caves and mountain fastnesses. P.]

Ver. 13. [Ver. 13 may be thus rendered:—'Then descended a remnant to (to follow them to battle) the nobles of the nation;—Jehovah descended to me with the heroes.' P.]

Ver. 14. ['From Ephraim (came warriors) whose root (whose settlement) is in (the mountain formerly possessed by) Amalek. Behind thee Benjamin among thy peoples.' P.——So zealous, they drop the merchant's pen for the soldier's spear. High authorities, for 'pen,' read 'sceptre,' 'rod,' or 'javelin.' The Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee translations read 'pen,' which, upon the whole, we are disposed to follow. C.]

Ver. 16. [Great searchings of heart. God searching the hearts, and showing what was in them, Ps. 139. 23—the thoughtful in Reuben searching why God was contending with them by confounding their counsels.—Note, What a lesson to the divided churches! Why divided in doctrine? why divided in love? why in forbearance? why in mutual help—the help of the Lord against the mighty? Shed abroad, O Lord, thy love in the hearts of thy churches; and teach them to 'keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.' C.]

Ver. 17. ['Gilead reposes beyond Jordan. And Dan; why tarries he by his ships? Asher remains by the sea-shore; he reposes in his harbours.' The territory of Dan reached to the Mediterranean, and contained the port of Joppa. Asher held the coast along the Bay of Akka. P.]

Ver. 21. [This part of the triumphal ode throws light on the battle. Both armies descended from the mountains of Naphtali, but they were drawn to opposite points in the plain. Barak occupied the top of Tabor; Sisera, with his 900 iron chariots, took up a position on the level plain between Megiddo and Taanach. Deborah gave the signal for attack. When Barak charged the enemy, a tremendous storm of hail burst over the plain from the east, and drove full in the face of Sisera. The hail, the tempest, and the lightning, together with the charge of Barak, threw the Canaanites into hopeless confusion. The Kishon rose suddenly in its miry bed; horses and chariots were engulfed; the torrent swept away the fleeing soldiers. Sisera, seeing the danger, leaped from his chariot, and escaped on foot to his native mountains, and met the fate he deserved in the tent of Jael. P.]

Ver. 22. [Prancings of their mighty ones. 'Mighty ones,' strong steeds, as translated by Kennicot. 'Horse hoofs broken,' because not shod with iron, a thing unknown in several ancient nations, and still unpractised in several districts of the East. The hoofs were broken in the rugged ways and rapid flight. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God must have all the glory of his work; whoever be the instruments, the success is entirely owing to him. His new favours should occasion an affecting remembrance of former ones, and of our relation to him as our God; and the heights of

FISHERMEN MAKING THEIR NETS—TIBERIAS. [JUDGES, v : 14.]—"Out of Ephraim was there a root of them against Amalek; after thee, Benjamin, among thy people; out of Machir came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the pen of the writer." Tiberias was in the territory of Zebulun, and this part of Palestine seems to have always been noted above the rest of the Holy Land for its secular learning and for its trade. The people of Galilee were never held in high esteem by the strict orthodox party at Jerusalem. They were related more to the great outside world. In the above view we have a characteristic scene in Tiberias; a man making nets as they have always been made in this city of fishermen; and it is true to-day as it was true in the days of our Savior, that the fishermen of Tiberias make up the best class of her citizens. They have the faces to-day of earnest, honest faithful men.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The Israelites for their sin are oppressed by Midian. 7 A prophet rebuketh them. 11 An angel sendeth Gideon for their deliverance. 17 Gideon's present is consumed with fire. 25 Gideon destroyeth Baal's altar, and offereth a sacrifice upon the altar Jehovah-shalom. 28 Joash defendeth his son, and calleth him Jerubbaal. 33 Gideon's army. 36 Gideon's signs.

AND the children of Israel [a] did evil in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD delivered them into the hand of [b] Midian seven years.

2 And [c] the hand of Midian prevailed[1] against Israel: and because of the Midianites the children of Israel made them [d] the dens which are in the mountains,[2] and caves, and strong holds.

3 And so it was, when Israel had sown, that the Midianites came up, and the Amalekites, and [e] the children of the east, even they came up against them;

4 And they [f] encamped against them, and destroyed the increase of the earth, till thou come unto [g] Gaza;[3] and left no sustenance for Israel, neither sheep,[4] nor ox, nor ass.

5 For they came up with their cattle and their [h] tents, and they came as 'grasshoppers[5] for multitude; for both they and their camels were without number: and they entered into the land to destroy it.

6 And Israel was greatly impoverished because of the Midianites; and [k] the children of Israel cried unto the LORD.[6]

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD because of the Midianites,

8 That the LORD sent a prophet[7] unto the children of Israel, which said unto them, [l] Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [m] I brought you up from Egypt, and brought you forth out of the house of bondage;

9 And I delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all that oppressed you, and drave them out from before you, and gave you their land:

10 And I said unto you, [n] I am the LORD your God; fear not the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: [o] but ye have not obeyed my voice.

11 ¶ And there came an [p] angel of the LORD,[8] and sat under an oak which was in [q] Ophrah, that pertained unto Joash the [r] Abiezrite: and his son Gideon thrashed wheat by the winepress, to hide[9] it from the Midianites.[1]

12 And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him, and said unto him, [s] The LORD is with thee, thou mighty man of valour.

13 And Gideon said unto him, Oh my Lord, if the LORD be with us, [t] why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of, saying, [u] Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? [x] but now the LORD hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites.

14 And the LORD looked upon him, and said, [y] Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites: have not I sent thee?

15 And he said unto him, Oh my Lord, [z] wherewith shall I save Israel? behold, [a] my family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house.[2]

16 And the LORD said unto him, [b] Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man.

17 ¶ And he said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, [c] then show me a sign that thou talkest with me.

18 Depart not hence, I pray thee, until I come unto thee, and bring forth [d] my [3]present, and set it before thee. And he said, I will tarry until thou come again.

19 And Gideon went in, and made ready a kid,[4] and unleavened cakes of an ephah of flour: the flesh he put in a basket, and he put the broth in a pot, and brought it out unto him under the oak, and presented it.

20 And the angel of God said unto him, Take the flesh and the unleavened cakes, and lay them upon this rock, and [e] pour out the broth. And he did so.

21 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD put forth the end of the staff that was in his hand, and touched the flesh and the unleavened cakes; and [f] there rose up fire out of the rock, and consumed the flesh and the unleavened cakes. [g] Then the angel of the LORD departed out of his sight.

22 And when Gideon perceived[5] that he was an angel of the LORD, Gideon said, Alas, O his mercy should be compared with the depths of distress into which our apostasy from him hath brought us.—Oh! what woes befall people in every place and station when God departs from them! They have no comfort, no safety, no protection left. And though the enemies of the Lord are unanimous and hearty against him and his interests, yet certain is their final destruction, since even the irrational creation stands ready armed to destroy them. Eminent and lasting honours await those who heartily espouse the cause of Christ when it is in great danger, and who are determined to conquer or to die; but shame and curses shall descend on those who, for their ease or carnal advantage, remain neutral and unconcerned. Such as would save their lives, by their cowardice or carnal fears, shall lose them; and such as are afraid or ashamed to join God's people in an evil day, shall be held as deserters from God's camp, and treated accordingly. Death makes easy work with the mightiest heroes; and bitter is the meeting with terrible disasters, when our vain hopes of success, glory, and wealth are wound up to the highest. But how bright and lasting the glory of such as fight the good fight of faith, and work by love to the Lord! Their path is like the rising sun, shining brighter and brighter to the perfect day.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 5. The accuracy and vividness of this description those only can fully realize who have witnessed both a flight of locusts and an inroad of a great nomad tribe. Locusts devour everything—so do Arabs. I have seen a great tribe of the Anezeh sweeping over a country in a desolating stream from 20 to 30 miles wide, eating, trampling down, and desolating everything before them. The Midianites appear to have crossed the Jordan at the fords of Succoth, marched up the valley of Jezreel, and then spread out over Esdraelon. They sent their marauding and plundering parties to all parts of the country. The Arabs do so still; and the only way the industrious peasants can secure their grain is by hiding it as soon as it is threshed in those ancient subterranean granaries which abound all through Palestine. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Neither judgments nor mercies, however often repeated, can restrain revolting and rebellious hearts from the most abominable crimes. But they who abuse God's common benefits in prodigality and luxury, live often to feel the want of them in hunger and nakedness. What arrant cowards men are often made by their own guilty and accusing consciences! And after all, in the day of distress, there is no hope but in God himself: and when his service

Lord GOD! [h]for because I have seen an angel of the LORD face to face.

23 And the LORD said unto him, [i]Peace be unto thee; fear not: thou shalt not die.[6]

24 Then[k] Gideon built an altar there unto the LORD, and called it [l]Jehovah-shalom: unto this day it is yet in [m]Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

25 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the LORD said unto him, [n]Take thy father's young bullock, even[7] the second bullock of seven years old,[8] and throw down the altar of Baal that thy father hath, and cut down the grove[9] that is by it;

26 And [p]build an altar unto the LORD thy God upon the top of this rock,[9] in the ordered[1] place, and take the second bullock, and offer a burnt-sacrifice[q] with the wood of the grove which thou shalt cut down.

27 Then Gideon took ten men of his servants, and [r]did as the LORD had said unto him: and so it was, because he [s]feared his father's household, and the men of the city, that he could not do it by day, that he did it by night.

28 ¶ And when the men of the city arose early in the morning, behold, the altar of Baal was cast down, and the grove was cut down that was by it, and the second bullock was offered upon the altar that was built.

29 And they said one to another, Who hath done this thing? And when they inquired and asked, they said, Gideon the son of Joash hath done this thing.

30 Then the men of the city said unto Joash, [t]Bring out thy son, that he may die; because he hath cast down the altar of Baal, and because he hath cut down the grove that was by it.

31 And Joash said unto all that stood against him, [u]Will ye plead for Baal? will ye save him? he that will [x]plead for him, let him be put to death whilst it is yet morning: if he be a god, let him plead for himself, because one hath cast down his altar.[2]

1 Another trait in the character of Gideon is developed here, (1) his early hours, by which the most eminent men have ever been distinguished (see Ge. 22. 3); (2) his prudent regard, as a general, to the accommodation of his army in pitching his camp beside a sufficient well of water.—C.

32 Therefore on that day he called [3]him [y]Jerubbaal, saying, Let Baal plead against him, because he hath thrown down his altar.

33 ¶ Then[z] all the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and the children of the east, were gathered together, and [a]went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel.

38 And it was so: for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl-full of water.

is so reasonable, ingratitude to him, the God of mercy and grace, cannot fail highly to aggravate our transgressions. It is the indispensable duty of ministers to deal plainly and closely with their hearers' consciences, as conviction of sin is a hopeful token of approaching deliverance; and God often chooses that time for delivering us when our case appears most desperate. But how hard is it to reconcile our afflictive experiences with the promises of God to us—to believe either what God has done, or what he will do, when present providences appear just the reverse! Yet God delights to honour such as are humble. Let not his saints therefore consider their weakness, when felt, as any reason for evading the great work which God puts into their hands. With infinite condescension God gives not only unalterable promises, but even miraculous signs, for the encouragement of his faint-hearted servants. And such as enjoy noted communion with him eagerly desire to prolong the visit, and to testify their grateful regard to him and to his messengers. If God calls us to extraordinary work, we must, without delay, and regardless of the will of wicked men, begin reformation at home. Nor, however zealous we have been in the cause of wickedness, must we be ashamed to change our conduct, or to protect the innocent. When God calls men to hard work, he can easily furnish them with assistants, even where they could least have been expected. And yet, after all, their unbelieving jealousies render necessary new tokens of God's presence and assistance in it.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 16. He put a trumpet in every man's hand. How can we account for the ease with which Gideon obtains 300 trumpets in such a wretched and oppressed country, and especially 300 men qualified by practice, and it requires no little, to blow on them? By recollecting that the Levites used the trumpets in the worship of the Lord; and that being now laid aside, the use of the trumpet had probably been transferred to the worship of their idols, and extended from the Levites to all the people. The circumstance of so many trumpets and qualified blowers favours the idea suggested in the note on preceding chapter, ver. 34, that the oppressed Israelites had established something equivalent to telegraphic communication, by means of the different trumpet-calls. C.]

Ver. 22. [The Lord set every man's sword against his fellow. The host of the enemy was not exclusively Midianitish, but included the Amalekites and the various Arab tribes called 'children of the East,' ch. 6. 33, it is therefore easy to comprehend how such a mixed multitude, numerous as grasshoppers, might mistake each other for enemies, and commit the kind of self-slaughter recorded. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—When God affords remarkable encouragement, his service should be undertaken with the greatest earnestness: and let us remember that God is apt to try his people's faith thoroughly in the progress of their work, who insisted too much in trying him in their entrance on it. When multitudes flock to God's standard, many of them are ordinarily unfit for his service: many never weigh the consequences, and therefore quickly start aside. And such as are enslaved by the fear of men are better out of God's camp than in it; for God will take every means to convince his people that they ought to have no dependence on an arm of flesh. And happy are they who can believe his promise, when he lays aside almost every apparent means of accomplishing it. But seasonable and sympa-

MAT WEAVERS AT THEIR LOOMS- NEAR THE PLACE WHERE JOSHUA CRUSHED THE CONFEDERACY OF THE NORTHERN TRIBES OF CANAAN UNDER JABIN, KING OF HAZOR. [JUDGES, vii: 12.]—"And the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and all the children of the East, lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude; and their camels were without number, as the sand by the seaside for multitude." We give here a picture of mat weavers at their looms simply to illustrate the character of the people that represent in modern times the ancient inhabitants of this land. This primitive loom we found near the waters of Merom just above where the Marsh of Huleh begins. It is in a Bedouin village, and the occupation of the natives is mat weaving. The rushes from which they make these mats grow on the banks of the Jordan. This is doubtless a characteristic picture applicable to this region in all its history. In this view we are looking toward the East, and the hour is about twelve o'clock noon.

north side of them, by the hill of Moreh, in the [4]valley.[2]

2 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people that are with thee are [a]too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me.

3 Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, saying, [b]Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from mount Gilead.[3] And there returned of the people twenty and two thousand, and there remained ten thousand.

4 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people are yet too many; bring them down unto the water, and I will [c]try them for thee there: and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, This shall go with thee, the same shall go with thee; and of whomsoever I say unto thee, This shall not go with thee, the same shall not go.

5 So he brought down the people unto the water: and the LORD said unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue, as a dog lappeth,[4] him shalt thou set by himself; likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink.

6 And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men: but all the rest of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water.

7 And the LORD said unto Gideon, [h]By the three hundred men that lapped[5] will I save you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand: and let all the other people go every man unto his place.

8 So the people took victuals in their hand, and [i]their trumpets: and he sent all the rest of Israel, every man unto his tent, and retained those three hundred men. And the host of Midian was [k]beneath him in the valley.

9 ¶ And it came to pass the same [l]night, that the LORD said unto him, [m]Arise, get thee down unto the host; for I have delivered it into thine hand.[6]

10 But if [n]thou fear to go down,[7] go thou with Phurah thy servant down to the host:

11 And[o] thou shalt hear what they say; and afterward shall thine hands be strengthened to go down unto the host. Then went he down with Phurah his servant unto the outside of the armed[p] men that were in the host.

12 And [q]the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and all the children of the east, lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude; and their camels were without number, as the sand by the sea-side for multitude.

13 And when Gideon was come, behold, there was a man that told a dream unto his fellow, and said, Behold, I dreamed a dream, and, lo, [r]a cake of barley-bread tumbled into the host of Midian, and came unto a tent, and smote it that it fell, and overturned it, that the tent lay along.

14 And his [s]fellow answered and said, This is nothing else save the sword of Gideon the son of Joash, a man of Israel: for into his hand hath God delivered Midian, and all the host.

15 And it was so, when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and the [8]interpretation thereof, that he [t]worshipped,[9] and returned into the host of Israel, and said, [u]Arise; for the LORD hath delivered into your hand the host of Midian.

16 ¶ And he divided the three hundred men into three companies, and he put a trumpet[1] in every man's hand, with [v]empty pitchers, and lamps[2] within the pitchers.

17 And he said unto them, [w]Look on me, and do likewise: and, behold, when I come to the outside of the camp, it shall be, that as I do, so shall ye do.

18 When I blow with a trumpet, I and all that are with me, then [x]blow ye the trumpets also on every side of all the camp, and say, The sword[3] of the LORD, and of Gideon.[4]

19 ¶ So Gideon, and the hundred men that were with him, came unto the outside of the camp [y]in the beginning of the middle [5]watch; and they had but newly set the watch: and they blew the trumpets, and [z]brake the pitchers that were in their hands.

20 And the three companies [a]blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers, and held the lamps in their left hands, and the trumpets in their right hands to blow withal: and they cried, The sword of the LORD, and of Gideon.

21 And they [b]stood every man in his place round about the camp: and [c]all the host ran, and cried, and fled.

22 And the three hundred blew the trumpets, and the [d]LORD set every man's sword against his fellow, even throughout all the host; and the host fled to Beth-shittah in[6] Zererath, and to the border[7] of [e]Abel-meholah, unto Tabbath.

23 And the [f]men of Israel gathered themselves together out of Naphtali, and out of Asher, and out of all Manasseh, and pursued after the Midianites.

24 ¶ And Gideon [g]sent messengers throughout all mount Ephraim, saying, Come down against the Midianites, and [h]take before them the waters unto Beth-barah[8] and Jordan. Then

3 Gilead certainly lay on the east, while Gideon was now on the west of Jordan. How the army came to depart from a place where they were not? Some have supposed that though Gilead Proper was on the east of Jordan, the continuation on the west might also have been called Gilead. Others suppose Gilead an error, and that it should be Galilæa, but this change is unsupported by authority. Hales reads it thus—"Whosoever from mount Gilead is afraid," &c., a feeling most likely in the Manassites from that district, as they were nearest to their Midianitish oppressors.—C.

3 The word sword is properly supplied here from ver. 20. It is found in some of the earliest translations and in several MSS. Still it is most likely to have been omitted by Gideon, as in our Hebrew Bibles; and that the action of drawing the sword fully and most emphatically supplied its place, and explained his meaning. Or the words may be translated—"For the Lord and for Gideon."—C.

4 The battle-cry which Gideon gave his men was a noble and inspiriting one—"For the Lord and for Gideon." There is no necessity to add the word "sword." When the Midianites were surprised at dead of night, and when roused from sleep by the crash of the pitchers, the roar of the trumpets, and the sudden blaze of torches round the camp, then the Israelites cried as they rushed upon the panic-stricken Midianites, "The sword of the Lord, and of Gideon."—P.

1 Gideon pacifieth the Ephraimites. 4 Succoth and Penuel refuse to relieve Gideon's army. 10 Zebah and Zalmunna are taken. 13 Succoth and Penuel are chastised. 18 Gideon revengeth his brethren's death on Zebah and Zalmunna. 22 He refuseth the government which the people offer him. 24 His ephod the cause of idolatry. 28 Midian subdued. 29 Gideon's children, and death. 33 The Israelites' idolatry and ingratitude.

AND the men of Ephraim said unto him, [a]Why hast thou served us thus, that thou calledst us not when thou wentest to fight with the Midianites? And they did chide with him sharply.

2 And he said unto them, [b]What have I done now in comparison of you? Is not the gleaning of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abi-ezer?[1]

3 God[c] hath delivered into your hands the princes of Midian, Oreb and Zeeb: and what was I able to do in comparison of you? Then their anger[2] was abated toward him when he had said that.

Persons accustomed to European armies can scarcely think that so great a multitude of soldiers could have been congregated, or so many slain. Let such recollect, however, that amongst the inmates of Midian, &c., every full grown man was a soldier, and that Xerxes led a million of men against the petty states of Greece, who, under that Providence that was preparing for the downfall of the Persian, and elevation of the Grecian empire, were likewise routed by a handful of Greeks as Midian by 300 Israelites.—C.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 3. The Midianites were under four chiefs. When the camp was surprised by Gideon the vast multitude rushed down the valley of Jezreel to the Jordan, and made for the fords of the river. Gideon, with his handful of men, could not prevent their passage. But he sent swift messengers to the Ephraimites, who were probably collected in their mountains, just above the fords of the Jordan, to watch the results of the struggle. The moment they heard the tidings they rushed down into the valley. By the time they gained the fords the two principal chiefs had already crossed; but two lesser chiefs, Oreb and Zeeb, were still on the west bank. They were captured and slain. Gideon had passed over, probably at a ford higher up, in pursuit of the other chiefs of Midian. The Ephraimites overtook him and presented to him the heads of Oreb and Zeeb. It was then the remonstrance was addressed to Gideon, and his able reply given. P.]

Ver. 4. [Faint, yet pursuing them. Duty, when justly appreciated, is always a pleasure; but in many cases the pain and toil of duty are grievous to flesh and blood. The conduct of Gideon's army is the true measure for performance of a difficult duty, in which the believer is faint, yet pursuing, Ga. 6. 9. C.]

Ver. 8. [The origin of this name, and the position of the place, are given in the remarkable narrative in Ge. 32. 24, sq. Penuel was on the north bank of the Jabbok. The route taken by the fleeing host after crossing the fords at Succoth was up the glen of the Jabbok, which falls into the Jordan a few miles below Succoth. P.]

Ver. 12. [The Ephraimites joined Gideon immediately after crossing the Jordan. His army, too, was doubtless greatly increased from the tribes of Reuben and Gad. The Midianites were retreating through an enemy's country. Every town and village would endeavour to harass and slay those who had so long tyrannized over the land. This will account for the tremendous slaughter mentioned in ver. 10. It was not till Zebah and Zalmunna, with the shattered remnant of their vast army, had passed the defiles of Gilead and gained the eastern desert that they thought themselves secure. Even thither, however, the fiery Gideon followed them. The site of Karkor, where the final victory was gained, is unknown; but it must have been on the borders of Arabia, east of Bashan. The Midianites were there entirely overthrown, and their two great chiefs captured. Only the leading facts of the story are here given. Isaiah, ch. 9. 4; 10. 26, and the Psalmist, Ps. 73. 9–11, repeatedly allude to details not mentioned in this passage; and show that the victory of Gideon was regarded as one of the most signal triumphs of Israel. P.]

Ver. 16. [Taught the men of Succoth. It is a fact in human nature that few, perhaps none, can be taught anything without privation or suffering. The Succoth-

SEACOAST, BEYROUT. [JUDGES viii: 33.]—"And it came to pass, as soon as Gideon was dead, that the children of Israel turned again, and went a whoring after Baalim, and made Baal-berith their God." Bochart supposed that Baal-berith (Judges viii: 33) was the god Baal in the city of Berith, or Beyrout. Dr. Thomson does not think this supposition too far-fetched to merit consideration, for he says, "We know from many ancient authors that the chief seat of Baal worship was in the regions around Byblus and Beyrout." This city was early occupied by the Phœnicians. This is the most beautiful and healthy region in this part of Syria. There is the best bay for shipping here at the head of the Mediterranean. This place is referred to by Strabo, Ptolemy, Pliny, Josephus, and other heathen as well as Christian authors.

20 And he said unto Jether his first-born, Up,[a] and slay them: but the youth drew not his sword; for he feared, because he was yet a youth.

21 Then Zebah and Zalmunna said, [b]Rise thou, and fall upon us: for as the man is, so is his strength. [c]And Gideon arose, and slew Zebah and Zalmunna, and took away the ornaments that were on their camels' necks.[8]

22 ¶ Then the men of Israel said unto Gideon, [d]Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son also;[9] for thou hast delivered us from the hand of Midian.

23 And Gideon said unto them, [e]I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you: the LORD shall rule over you.

24 And Gideon said unto them, I would desire a request of you, that ye would [f]give me every man the ear-rings[1] of his prey: (for they had golden ear-rings, because they were Ishmaelites.)

25 And they answered, We will willingly give them. And they spread a garment, and did cast therein every man the ear-rings of his prey.

26 And the weight of the golden ear-rings that he requested was a thousand and seven hundred shekels of gold,[2] besides ornaments, and collars,[3] and purple raiment, that was on the kings of Midian, and besides the chains that were about their camels' necks.

27 And Gideon [g]made an ephod thereof, and put it in his city, even in Ophrah:[4] and all Israel went thither a whoring after it: which thing became a snare unto Gideon, and to his house.

28 ¶ Thus [h]was Midian subdued before the children of Israel, so that they lifted up their heads no more: and the country was in quietness [i]forty years in the days of Gideon.

31 And his [l]concubine that was in Shechem, she also bare him a son, whose name he [6]called Abimelech.

32 ¶ And Gideon the son of Joash [7]died in a good old age, and was buried in the sepulchre of Joash his father, in [m]Ophrah of the Abi-ezrites.

33 And it came to pass, [n]as soon as Gideon was dead, that the children of Israel turned again, and went [o]a whoring after Baalim, and made Baal-berith their god.[8]

34 And the children of Israel [p]remembered not the LORD their God, who had delivered them out of the hands of all their enemies on every side:

35 Neither[q] showed they kindness to the house of Jerubbaal, namely, Gideon, according to all the goodness which he had showed unto Israel.

ites needed a severe lesson to rebuke their inhumanity. Still Europeans who have not attended to eastern ideas and customs, will be ready to imagine this infliction much greater than in reality it was. In most European countries corporal punishment implies some kind of degradation, and is chiefly or entirely confined to the most abandoned offenders. In the East, especially in Persia, it carries no idea of degradation, and is inflicted on the highest officer of state as readily as on the lowest menial. C.]

Ver. 19. [The sons of my mother. In a country where polygamy was tolerated, brother did not convey the same endearment as 'son of my mother.' C.]

Ver. 20. [Up and slay them. It may seem strange to European eyes that Gideon should order his son to slay the two princes. But the Hebrews had no public executioner. The witnesses and the people inflicted the sentence of death. Till this day, in the East, where there is a public executioner, it is one of the highest offices of honour; so was the occasional appointment amongst the Hebrews. See 1 Ki. 2. 25, 29, 31, 35. C.]

Ver. 21. [The Hebrew word translated 'ornaments' signifies 'little moons,' i.e. ornaments of gold and silver of crescent form. Such ornaments are to this day universally worn by the nomad tribes of Arabia. The origin of the peculiar shape was doubtless the worship of Astarte, or the moon. The ornaments were dedicated to the goddess, and those who wore them were supposed to be under her protection. P.]

Ver. 28. [The country was in quietness forty years. This is now the third time it has been said, 'The land had rest forty years,' ch. 3. 11; 5. 31, a coincidence so strange that its probability has been questioned. But besides the historic authority, which no mere hypothesis or doubt has a right to call in question, this was the period of 'tentation in the wilderness,' and which God thus repeats to bring, by the association of similarity, his judgments to remembrance. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Only by pride cometh contention. Evil persons are extremely jealous of their carnal honours, and apt to reckon the just exaltation of everybody else an injury done to themselves. It is common for cowards to pretend valour when the danger is over or distant; but humility disposes a man to think meanly of his own works, and to put honour from himself to his neighbour; and meanwhile adds a double lustre to all its gifts, graces, or attainments. Soft words most effectually turn away wrath; nor must we count it strange to be abused by the tongues of those whose lives we have saved at the hazard of our own. Having begun a good work we must go on with it: notwithstanding the most heavy and unnatural discouragements, perseverance will be infallibly crowned with success. The security of sinners most certainly proves their ruin; and it meets them when and where they thought it was quite over; for men's pride brings them low; and the insolence of their tongues renders them miserable.—It is just and proper for magistrates sharply to correct those who are barbarous or abusive: and men's distress often occasions new discoveries of their guilt. Though hand should join in hand sinners shall not pass unpunished. If one agent fear, another will dare to execute the judgment of God upon them

FALLS OF NABLOUS—IN THE ANCIENT CAPITAL OF ISRAEL. [JUDGES, ix:7.]—"And when they told it to Jotham, he went and stood in the top of mount Gerizim, and lifted up his voice, and cried, and said unto them, Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you." It was here in Shechem that Jotham gave the striking parable of the trees. Jotham was the youngest son of Gideon. His parable of the reign of the bramble is the earliest example of the kind. No place in Palestine could have been more appropriate for the expression of this parable than Shechem. Because of the many springs that rise within its environs, there is always a tropical luxuriance about the vegetation here, and it was standing in the midst of these trees, doubtless, that Jotham said: "The trees went forth on a time to annoint a king over them; and they said unto the olive tree, Reign thou over us," etc.

wherewith Abimelech hired [e]vain and light persons, which followed him.

5 And he went unto his father's house at Ophrah, and [f]slew his brethren, the sons of Jerubbaal, being threescore and ten persons, upon one stone: notwithstanding yet Jotham, the youngest son of Jerubbaal, was left; for he hid himself.

6 And all the men of Shechem gathered together, and all the [g]house of Millo, and went and [h]made Abimelech king, [i]by the plain of the pillar that was in Shechem.

7 ¶ And when they told it to Jotham, he went and stood in the top of [k]mount Gerizim,[4] and lifted up his voice and cried, and said unto them, Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you.

8 The [l]trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them;[5] and they said unto the olive-tree, [m]Reign thou over us.

9 But the olive-tree said unto them, Should I leave my fatness, wherewith by me they [n]honour God and man, and go to be promoted[6] over the trees?[7]

10 And the trees said to the fig-tree, Come thou, and reign over us.

11 But the fig-tree said unto them, [o]Should I forsake my sweetness, and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees?

12 Then said the trees unto the vine, Come thou, and reign over us.

13 And the vine said unto them, Should I leave my wine, which [p]cheereth God and man,[8] and go to be promoted over the trees?

14 Then said all the trees unto the [q]bramble, Come thou, and reign over us.

15 And the bramble said unto the trees, If in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and put your trust in [r]my shadow; and if not, [s]let fire come out of the bramble,[9] and devour the cedars of Lebanon.

16 Now therefore, if ye have done truly and sincerely, in that ye have made [t]Abimelech king, and if ye have dealt well with [u]Jerubbaal and his house, and have done unto him according to the deserving of his hands;

17 (For my father fought for you, and [x]adventured his life far, and delivered you out of the hand of Midian;

18 And ye [y]are risen up against my father's house this day, and have slain his sons, threescore and ten persons, upon one stone, and have made [z]Abimelech, the son of his maid-servant, king over the men of Shechem, because he is your brother;)

19 If ye then have dealt truly and sincerely with Jerubbaal and with his house this day, then [a]rejoice ye in Abimelech, and let him also rejoice in you:

20 But if not, [b]let fire come out from Abimelech, and devour the men of Shechem, and the house of Millo; and let fire come out from the men of Shechem, and from the house of Millo, and devour Abimelech.

21 And Jotham ran away, and fled, and went to [c]Beer, and dwelt there, for fear of Abimelech his brother.

22 ¶ When Abimelech had reigned three years[1] over Israel,

23 Then [d]God sent an evil spirit[2] between Abimelech and the men of Shechem; and the men of Shechem dealt treacherously with Abimelech:

24 That the [e]cruelty done to the threescore and ten sons of Jerubbaal might come, and their blood be laid upon Abimelech their brother,

[m] Of the invisible world of spirits we know nothing beyond the few facts recorded in Scripture. Amongst these, however, is the Satanic possession of wicked men, both as individuals and communities. As to the mode of this possession we may neither speculate nor dogmatize. It may be actual, as in the days of our Lord; or merely influential, by blinding the eyes or deceiving the heart: Still, in either or in any other manner, the evil spirit is commissioned, and sent to execute deserved judgment on worldly and ungodly men.—C.

It is much better to be of a humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud. Ambition to exalt one's family is ordinarily a ruinous snare. But it is very dangerous for rulers, in church or state, to humour people in matters of religion, or to indulge their carnal ease or honour in that point. What appears innocent at first may soon become a dangerous snare. Small beginnings of superstition or idolatry lead to still greater abominations: and when God removes the restraints, men will quickly relapse to their wonted or worse idolatries. It is hard to make base minds grateful, either to God or to their human benefactors: but it is easy to decoy them into one form of wickedness after another.

But in this Hebrew judge let Jesus, the great deliverer, be discerned. His condition on earth was mean and debased; his call to his work express, solemn, seasonable, and necessary; and miraculous the repeated confirmations of it. Being the mighty God, and endowed with the Spirit above measure, he, with burning zeal, offered his sacrifice of himself, overthrew idolatry, and restored the true worship of God, beginning in his own country of Judea. By a few weak and unarmed preachers sounding the gospel trumpet and displaying its light and fire from their earthen vessels he did, and shall, foil Satan, the world, and death, with their innumerable agents. And at the last day, being revealed in flaming fire, and attended with the trump of God, he shall spread terror and ruin among all his opposers. Kindly he invites his brethren of mankind to share in his victories, and to follow him that they may divide the spoil. Meekly he convinces and pacifies his unreasonable friends: but the most righteous judgment he did and will execute upon his despisers, of Judah and of Rome, and upon all such as refuse his people or ministers their necessary supplies.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 4. They gave him threescore and ten pieces of silver. The value of the piece of silver cannot be positively ascertained, but there can be scarcely a doubt that it was the shekel, value little above two shillings. That so small an amount should hire a sufficient number of followers to render his success probable, will not astonish any one who is historically acquainted with the great value of money in certain periods and states of society, and also with the short period of service for which mercenaries have often been engaged.—Vain and light persons. Empty, unsettled, poor, and vagabond—having nothing to lose, and everything to covet, to hope for, or to plunder—the ordinary tools of all such unprincipled revolutions—the disgraces of the society that has reared them without education or employment; and finally, the scourge of Providence to a negligent and godless people. C.]

Ver. 6. [Millo signifies a rampart composed of two walls with the space between them filled up with earth or stones; then generally a fortress or citadel. 'All the house of Millo,' means all the inhabitants of the castle of Shechem; the same who are described in ver. 46 as 'all the men of the tower of Shechem.' 'The plain of the pillar,' or rather 'the oak of the pillar,' was apparently the oak that marked the spot of Jacob's sanctuary at Shechem, where he erected an altar and called it El-elohe-Israel, Ge. 33. 20; 35. 4. P.]

Ver. 54. [That men say not of me, A woman slew him. Pride is one of the most natural and inveterate propensities of the unrenewed human heart. Zebah and Zalmunna felt pride gratified in dying by the hand of a valiant man instead of a timid boy, and here Abimelech desires to die by the hand of one of his martial followers, that he may escape the imaginary disgrace of dying by the hand of a weak woman.—Note, How hard must it be to humble pride, seeing that it is stronger than death! What need to learn of him that is meek and lowly in heart, and to mortify pride that we may live and die like him! C.]

REFLECTIONS.—For the transgression of a land many and base are the princes thereof. Such as have wicked purposes stick at nothing to gain their end; and being conscious of their own bad designs, are apt to suspect, or at least accuse, others who are innocent of the same ill intentions: and instruments are never wanting to assist in the most bloody and ruinous conduct. Proud and evil men push after that elevation which wise and humble persons shun: nor is any one more overbearing and insolent than a low mind raised above his station. Such as enter into rule as foxes in craft, often rule like lions in cruelty, and die like dogs in disgrace. Accomplices in wickedness readily become plagues and murderers to one another; and none are nearer to ruin than those upon whom fair warnings are lost. When kingdoms are once disjointed one base villain readily sets up against another, and traitors mutually distrust and betray each other. When men are intoxicated with wine they are fit for murder, treason, and every other evil work: but insolent boast-which slew them; and upon the men of Shechem, which aided him in the killing[3] of his brethren.

25 And the men of Shechem set liers in wait for him in the top of the mountains, and they robbed all that came along that way by them: and it was told Abimelech.[4]

26 And Gaal the son of Ebed came with his brethren,[g] and went over to Shechem: and the men of Shechem put their confidence in him.

27 And they went out unto the fields, and gathered their vineyards, and trod the grapes, and [h]made merry, and went into the [i]house of their god, and did eat and drink, and [k]cursed[5] Abimelech.

28 And Gaal the son of Ebed said, [l]Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we should serve him? Is not he the son of Jerubbaal? and Zebul his officer? Serve [m]the men of Hamor the father of Shechem: for why should we serve him?[6]

29 And [n]would to God this people were under my hand! then would I remove Abimelech. And he said to Abimelech, [o]Increase thine army, and come out.[7]

30 ¶ And when Zebul, the ruler of the city, heard the words of Gaal the son of Ebed, his anger was kindled.[8]

31 And he sent messengers unto Abimelech privily,[p] saying, Behold, Gaal the son of Ebed, and his brethren, be come to Shechem; and, behold, they fortify the city against thee.

32 Now therefore [q]up by night,[9] thou and the people that is with thee, and lie in wait in the field:

33 And it shall be, that in the morning, as soon as the sun is up, thou shalt rise early, and set upon the city: and, behold, when he and the people that is with him come out against thee, then mayest thou do to [1]them [r]as thou shalt find occasion.

34 ¶ And Abimelech rose up, and all the people that were with him, by night, and they laid wait against Shechem in four companies.

35 And Gaal the son of Ebed went out, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city: and Abimelech rose up, and [s]the people that were with him, from lying in wait.

36 And when Gaal saw the people, he said to Zebul, Behold, there come people down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul said unto him, Thou [t]seest the shadow of the mountains as if they were men.[2]

37 And Gaal spake again, and said, See, there come people down by the middle[3] of the 6 Gaal was a Canaanite, the descendant of the ancient chiefs of Shechem. He was the instrument employed in stirring up strife between Abimelech and the Shechemites, some of whom appear to have been Canaanites. Gaal's words may be thus interpreted:—Who is Abimelech? and who is Shechem? i.e. the section of the Shechemites attached to Abimelech. He speaks contemptuously of them. Replying to his own questions, he says: 'Is he (Abimelech) not son of Jerubbaal?' who overthrew the altar of our god. 'And is not Zebul, his officer, set over that section of the Shechemites who obey Abimelech?' Having thus shown that both Abimelech and his general should be treated with contempt, Gaal sets forward his own claims as descendant of the ancient princes of Shechem.—P.

ings of valour in the fumes of wine ordinarily issue in cowardice and shame. Nor can they who are rebels themselves justly expect fidelity from their associates; for rebellions, even against evil princes, usually issue in the ruin of the traitors. Civil wars are usually the most inhuman, in which the innocent and guilty perish without distinction. But what miseries wicked rulers entail upon their poor subjects! ## CHAPTER X.

1 Tola judgeth Israel in Shamir; and after him Jair, whose thirty sons had thirty cities. 6 The Philistines and Ammonites oppress Israel. 10 In their misery God sendeth them to their false gods. 15 Upon their repentance he pitieth them.

AND after Abimelech there [a]arose, to [1]defend[2] Israel, Tola the son of Puah, the son of Dodo, a man of Issachar; and he dwelt in Shamir in mount Ephraim.

2 And he judged Israel twenty and three years, and died, and was buried in Shamir.

3 ¶ And after him arose Jair,[3] a Gileadite, and judged Israel twenty and two years.

4 And [b]he had thirty sons that rode on thirty ass-colts,[4] and they had thirty cities, which are called [c]Havoth-jair unto this day, which are in the land of Gilead.[5]

5 And Jair died, and was buried in Camon.

6 ¶ And [d]the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the LORD, and served Baalim, and Ashtaroth, and the gods of Syria, and the gods of Zidon, and the gods of Moab, and the gods of the children of Ammon, and the gods of the Philistines, and forsook the LORD, and served not him.

4 This simple statement is specially valuable, as an indication of the manners and state of the people, or as a note that the history must have been written at or very near the date; for as it assumes not, after the manner of secular history, any dignity for its heroes beyond their own recorded actions. Josephus seems to have been so sensible of this, that he changes the asses into mares, to give importance in the eyes of the Romans, for whom he wrote.—C.

took to secure their fame do but serve to perpetuate their disgrace. But let us remember that there is no refuge for us amidst all our spiritual enemies, and from the hand of an angry God, but in Christ the Saviour of sinners, and the stronghold of faithful people.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 1. Shamir in Mount Ephraim. There was another Shamir in the hill country of Judah, Jos. 19. 22, therefore this city is specially described as belonging to Ephraim. Of Tola, nothing particular is related but his defence or deliverance of Israel, and the character of distinguished valour generally bestowed upon the whole family of Issachar, 1 Ch. 7. 1. C.]

Ver. 6. [Forsook the Lord and served not him. A religion addressed to the senses has wonderful attractions either for a very refined or a very sensual people, two states that may be either separate or combined. When refinement and sensuality are combined, religion chiefly consists in a taste for painting, statuary, music, processions, and ceremonies, with great moral laxity, compensated by pilgrimages, penances, or fines. Where sensuality reigns alone, the evils are the same, but the hope of remedy greater; for the refinement is wanting by which idolatry is recommended and its grosser deformities covered from the eyes. C.]

Ver. 10. [The children of Israel cried unto the Lord. Under whose government this occurred we are not expressly told. From the following chapter it would seem to have been in a kind of interregnum, between the death of Jair and the elevation of Jephthah. The time, however, is of no importance. The convictions of sin, and religious revival indicated, are the points of real importance. C.]

Ver. 11. [The Lord said unto the children of Israel. By whom the Lord spoke, whether by a prophet or the high-priest, or by his angel, we are not informed. By reference to ch. 13. 3 it would appear most probable that in this case it was the Lord himself that spoke. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God can easily heap wealth on families, or render them happy with a moderate share; and it is a great mercy to a country when God raises up one impartial administrator of justice after another. Those whose hearts were never changed soon relapse into the very sins for which they had often severely smarted, and even become more and more wicked: and when single rods of wrath are quickly contemned God will, in justice or in love, apply his double strokes, strokes on every hand! But if at last they bring us to a kindly sense of sin and cordial crying to God, we must esteem them amongst his greatest mercies; and though sharp the trial, and God refuse to hear our distresses, yet let not the soul that is even frowned out of doors despair. If he makes us plead guilty at his

1 The covenant between Jephthah and the Gileadites, that he should be their head. 12 His embassy to the king of Ammon, which proveth fruitless. 29 Jephthah's vow. 32 His conquest of the Ammonites. 34 He performeth his vow on his daughter.

NOW Jephthah[a] the Gileadite was a mighty man of valour, and he was the son of an harlot:[1] and Gilead begat Jephthah.

2 And Gilead's wife bare him sons: and his wife's sons grew up, and they [b]thrust out Jephthah, and said unto him, Thou shalt not inherit in our father's house; for thou art the son of a [c]strange woman.

3 Then Jephthah fled from[2] his brethren, and dwelt in the [d]land of Tob:[3] and there were gathered [e]vain men[4] [f]to Jephthah, and went out with him.

4 ¶ And it came to pass [f]in process of time, that the children of Ammon made war against Israel.[5]

5 And it was so, [g]that, when the children of Ammon made war against Israel, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah out of the land of Tob:

6 And they said unto Jephthah, Come and be our captain, that we may fight with the children of Ammon.

7 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, [h]Did not ye hate me, and expel me out of my father's house? and why are ye come unto me now when ye are in distress?

8 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, Therefore we [i]turn again to thee now, that thou mayest go with us, and fight against the children of Ammon, and be our head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

9 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, [k]If ye bring me home again to fight against the children of Ammon, and the LORD deliver them before me, shall I be your head?

10 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, The LORD [l]be witness between us, if we do not so according to thy words.

11 Then Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him head and captain over them: and Jephthah uttered all his[m] words before the LORD in Mizpeh.[6]

12 ¶ And Jephthah [n]sent messengers unto the king of the children of Ammon, saying, What hast thou to do with me, that thou art come against me to fight in my land?

6 This Mizpeh was situated to the east of Jordan, in Gilead, Ge.31.49. There was another to the west, in Judah, Jos. 15. 38. The uttering all his words 'before the Lord,' indicates that Jephthah had retained his religion, though in exile and amongst an idolatrous people—a pious decision of character, that, amongst all his difficulties, pointed out the man who had faithfully served his God, as best fitted now to serve his country.—C.—Mizpeh of Gilead was the great gathering-place and sanctuary of the transjordanic tribes. What Mizpeh of Benjamin was on the west, the other was on the east. It is called Ramoth-Mizpeh in Jos.13.26, but it is distinct from the Mizpah where Jacob and Laban met.

13 And the king of the children of Ammon answered unto the messengers of Jephthah, [o]Because Israel took away my land,[7] when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon even unto Jabbok, and unto Jordan: now therefore restore those lands again peaceably.

14 And Jephthah [p]sent messengers[8] again unto the king of the children of Ammon,

15 And said unto him, Thus saith Jephthah, [q]Israel took not away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon:

16 But when Israel [r]came up from Egypt, and walked[9] through the wilderness unto the Red sea, and came to Kadesh;

17 Then [s]Israel sent messengers unto the king of Edom, saying, Let me, I pray thee, pass through thy land: but the king of Edom would not hearken thereto. And in like manner they sent unto the king of Moab; but he would not consent: and [t]Israel abode in Kadesh.

18 Then [u]they went along through the wilderness, and compassed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, and came by the east side of the land of Moab, and pitched on the other side[1] of Arnon, [x]but came not within the border of Moab; for Arnon was the border of Moab.

19 And [y]Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, the king of Heshbon; and Israel said unto him, Let us pass, we pray thee, through thy land unto my place.

20 But Sihon trusted not Israel to pass through his coast: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and pitched in Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

21 And the LORD God of Israel delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Israel, and they smote them: so Israel possessed all the land of the Amorites, the inhabitants of that country.

22 And they possessed [z]all the coasts of the Amorites, from Arnon even unto Jabbok,[2] and from the wilderness even unto Jordan.

23 So now the LORD God of Israel hath dispossessed the Amorites from before his people Israel, and shouldest thou possess it?

24 Wilt not thou possess that which [a]Chemosh thy god giveth thee to possess?[3] so [b]whomsoever the LORD our God shall drive out from before us, them will we possess.

bar, renounce our idols, and submit to his mercy, there is hope in our end. His fatherly heart is touched with our wretchedness, and ready to receive the returning prodigals. He is loath to give up his people to utter destruction: and when he restores his favourable smiles, they powerfully animate our hearts against every foe. But it is of great importance in our spiritual warfare to have proper leaders and directors; and especially that we cleave close to Christ, the great Captain of his people.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 1. Son of an harlot. Some high authorities propose to translate the word 'hostess,' 'a tavern-keeper; such persons however in the eastern countries around Canaan are, in modern times, totally unknown; nor do we see any indications in the Scriptures that would lead to the belief of their existence in ancient times. Taking the word as it stands in our version—and we believe it must be so taken—it indicates an important fact, that an unworthy parent may have a worthy child. See Eze. 18. 2, &c. C.]

Ver. 5. [The elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah. It is of no little importance for the encouragement of the young, to see that in all cases a distinguished man finds distinguishing employment. Talents, industry, and acquirements may for a time remain in obscurity, but some event will still occur to call them into exercise, and assign them due reward.—Note. Let not this fact encourage either pride or vain expectations; humility of expectation is one of the most essential handmaidens of success. C.]

Ver. 35. [I have opened my mouth unto the Lord. However imperfect the character of Jephthah may be, piety to the Lord was his predominant feeling, and his acquaintance with Scripture familiar, as is obvious from ver. 9, 11, 15–17, as well as from this verse. Therefore, nothing can, a priori, appear more unlikely, than that a man, familiar with Scripture, and piously disposed, should vow a sacrifice most solemnly denounced in Scripture, Le. 20. 2; nor can it be readily supposed, that a believer who would not dare to profane the altar by 'the price of a dog,' Ex. 23. 18, would

Balak the son of Zippor king of Moab? did he ever strive against Israel, or did he ever fight against them,[4]

26 While Israel dwelt in Heshbon and her towns, and in Aroer and her towns, and in all the cities that be along by the coasts of Arnon, three[d] hundred years? why therefore did ye not recover them within that time?

27 Wherefore I have not sinned against thee, but thou doest me wrong to war against me: the[e] LORD the Judge be judge this day between the children of Israel and the children of Ammon.

28 Howbeit[f] the king of the children of Ammon hearkened not unto the words of Jephthah which he sent him.

29 ¶ Then [g]the Spirit of the LORD came upon Jephthah,[5] and he passed over Gilead and Manasseh, and passed over [h]Mizpeh of Gilead, and from Mizpeh of Gilead he passed over unto the children of Ammon.

30 And Jephthah [i]vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands,

31 Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth[6] of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the LORD's, [k]and I will offer it up for a burnt-offering.[7]

32 ¶ So Jephthah passed over unto the children of Ammon to fight against them; and the LORD delivered them into his hands.

33 And he smote them from [l]Aroer, even till thou come to Minnith, even twenty cities, and unto the plain[8] of the vineyards, with a very great slaughter. Thus the children of Ammon were subdued before the children of Israel.

34 ¶ And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, [m]his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances; and she was his only child:[9] besides her he had neither son nor daughter.

35 And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent [n]his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: [o]for I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and I cannot go back.

36 And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the LORD, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth; forasmuch as the LORD hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon.

37 And she said unto her father, Let this thing be done for me: let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and [p]bewail my virginity,[1] I and my fellows.

38 And he said, Go. And he sent her away for two months: and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains.

39 And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who [q]did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man. And it was a custom[2] in Israel,

40 That the daughters of Israel went [3]yearly to lament[4] the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.

5 All valiant endowments are, in Scripture, attributed to the Spirit of the Lord; from those of the accomplished artist, Ex.31.2, to those of the sanctified Christian, 1 Co. 6.11; and accordingly the understanding of Jephthah is attributed to the Spirit coming upon him. But this coming of the Spirit is not to be considered as any mere enthusiastic impulse upon mind or body; but as light in the understanding to discover duty, faith to trust in God, zeal for his glory, love for his church, then grievously persecuted,—all which united produce that devotedness and courage that fit men for great and dangerous undertakings, and to which, under Providence, success is ordinarily to be traced.—C.

7 The whole difficulty of this perplexing narrative originates in this verse, and depends upon the translation of a single Hebrew letter, and which is sometimes rendered and, and sometimes or, according to the current of the passage. Thus, the words of the tenth commandment might be literally rendered, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, and his man-servant, and his maid-servant,' &c.; but the sense obviously requires that it be rendered or, and not and. Now, if for and we substitute or, as is done in the tenth commandment, Jephthah will stand relieved from any vow to sacrifice his daughter, and merely to devote her to the Lord, as the law provided in the case of Nazarites or vows.—C.

1 Those interpreters, and with whom we concur, who believe that Jephthah's daughter was devoted to celibacy, not to sacrifice, rest somewhat upon this verse; and though the Scriptures make no mention of any such institution of celibacy in Israel, yet as there was nothing in the law that absolutely forbade it, and as it is reiterated at the end of ver. 39, it seems to cast considerable weight into the scale of the most mild and merciful interpreters. It is but justice, however, to add, that the weight of authority, both Jewish and Christian, lies on the side of the actual sacrifice.—C.

1 The passage should be thus translated: 'And the men of Ephraim gathered themselves together, and passed over to Zaphon.' The Hebrew word Zaphon also means 'northward;' but here it is manifestly a proper name. It was a city of Gad, which stood on the east bank of the Jordan, near Succoth.—P.

profane it still more by a sacrifice, not only illegal, but most cruel and unnatural. C.]

Ver. 40. [Went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah. The word translated 'to lament,' signifies also 'to praise, celebrate, or talk with.' An attention very natural in her young companions, and consolatory to the unhappy recluse, debarred from the hope of every Israelitess, that of being 'a mother in Israel,' and probably the mother of Messiah. In conclusion, Jephthah is celebrated by Paul as an example of faith, He. 11. 32, which we judge impossible had he been guilty of an act, whatever might be the motive, still worse than that of Cain, and which would have identified his religion with the worst feature of the idolatry of Canaan. C.——The record of Jephthah's vow in ver. 31 may be thus translated, 'That which (or, he who) cometh to meet me out of the doors of my house, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall belong to the Lord, or (or, and) I will offer it for a burnt-offering (or, a whole-offering).' The Hebrew word translated 'and' may mean 'or,' and the context alone can decide. If rendered 'or' the difficulty is at once removed. But even admitting that it means 'and,' the passage may be satisfactorily explained. The word rendered 'burnt-offering' does not necessarily involve the idea of burning, but simply of going up upon the altar, or of complete surrender and dedication to the Lord. When a virgin is said to be so offered, she was set apart as a spiritual whole-offering, belonging henceforth entirely to the Lord.—The terms in which the sacred writer records the fulfilment of the vow, leads to the conclusion that Jephthah's daughter was not sacrificed. Her entreaty that he would give her two months to lament her virginity, is surely out of all keeping with the supposition that she was to be put to death. To mourn her virginity does not mean to mourn because she was to die on the altar, but because she was to live a virgin. Then observe the statement made by the historian after he relates that Jephthah 'did with her according to the vow which he had vowed:' 'And she knew no man.' Is this in harmony with the supposition of a sacrificial death? P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The indulgers of lawless lust ordinarily entail both misery and shame upon the unhappy fruit of their guilty amours. But it is unreasonable for us to reproach a man with the unhappiness of his birth, when his practice deserves a more honourable relation. God often first debases those whom he intends to exalt, and marks men's sins, not only in their distress, but also in the means of their deliverance. Whorish Israel must now be delivered and governed by the bastard son of a harlot, lately an exile: but no man ought to be trampled on or despised; we may need his help ere we die. And if we have injured any, it is proper to entreat their pardon as quickly as possible. No injuries should render us implacable. Agreements ought to be very explicit and distinct; and, if important, ought to be ratified with solemn prayer. Before entrance on war the most solemn acknowledgments should be made to God, and repeated endeavours peaceably to compose every difference; that so, if war cannot be avoided, we may prosecute it with a good conscience, and depend on God for success in it. For it is reasonable that such as delight in war should be ruined by it. Unjust men are ready to insist upon the most antiquated claims; and however many practise injustice, few choose to be reckoned unjust. But when the Lord hath given us anything by special grant, we may insist upon the possession of it. To receive it from him, use it to his glory, keep it for his sake, and return it to him when he calls for it, is part of the duty which we owe to him. What care ought to be taken in contracting a solemn vow, that it may never prove a snare to our soul! And having engaged to anything lawful we must in no wise go back. But it is mournful when parents, by their rashness, involve their obedient children in sin, in misery, or in death; and kind and comforting to make the joys and griefs of our neighbours our own. In this world how is our wine mixed with water; our triumphs with distress; our joys with grief! Let these things make me long for the better country above.

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 4. The meaning of this difficult passage appears to be the following: 'Refugees of Ephraim are ye Gileadites in the midst of Ephraim and Manasseh.' This contemptuous remark was not intended to apply to the whole tribes of Reuben and Gad, but only to those warriors whom Jephthah had gathered round him out of Gilead, and by whom he had conquered the Ammonites. P.]

Ver. 6. [The Ephraimites had crossed the Jordan said unto Jephthah, Wherefore passedst thou over to fight against the children of Ammon, and didst not call us to go with thee? we will burn thine house upon thee with fire.[2]

2 And Jephthah said unto them, [b]I and my people were at great strife with the children of Ammon; and when I called you, ye delivered me not out of their hands.

3 And when I saw that ye delivered me not, I[c] put my life in my hands, and passed over against the children of Ammon, and the LORD delivered them into my hand: wherefore then are ye come up unto me this day, to fight against me?

4 Then Jephthah gathered together all [d]the men of Gilead, and fought with Ephraim: and the men of Gilead smote Ephraim, because they said, Ye Gileadites are 'fugitives[3] of Ephraim among the Ephraimites, and among the Manassites.

5 And the Gileadites [f]took the passages of Jordan before the Ephraimites: and it was so, that when those Ephraimites which were escaped said, Let me go over; that the men of Gilead said unto him, Art thou an Ephraimite? If he said, Nay;

6 Then said they unto him, [g]Say now Shibboleth; and he said, Sibboleth:[4] for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him, and slew him at the passages of Jordan: and [h]there fell at that time of the Ephraimites forty and two thousand.[5]

7 And Jephthah judged Israel six years.[6] Then died Jephthah the Gileadite, and was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

8 ¶ And after him Ibzan of 'Beth-lehem judged Israel.

2 Man often judge by success, and not by principle, and become jealous of the successful leader whom they would not aid in one of his struggles. The Ephraimites were also most probably stimulated by envy and covetousness when considering the spoils that must have been gleaned in the conquest of twenty cities.—C.—In their address to Gideon in circumstances somewhat similar, ch. 8. 1, we have already had a proof of the domineering, ambitious spirit of this tribe. They began early to indicate a disposition to lord it over their brethren. In this instance their haughtiness met with its reward.—J.

4 The vow of the Nazarite required this abstinence. To attract attention to the prophecy concerning the deliverer, the rules of Nazaritism are extended to the mother. The Scriptures often and evidently intimate, what human observation has daily confirmed, that more of the character and future progress of children depend upon mothers than upon fathers. Without searching, or perhaps being able to search, farther into the causes of this fact, enough appears to account for it in the greater intercourse of mothers with their children in childhood, when the future character is generally formed, and that before many suppose that any bias has been given.—C.

AND the children of Israel [a]did evil [1]again in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD delivered them into the hand of the Philistines forty years.[2]

2 ¶ And there was a certain man of [b]Zorah,[3] of the family of the Danites, whose name was Manoah; and his wife was [c]barren, and bare not.

3 And the [d]angel of the LORD appeared unto the woman, and said unto her, [e]Behold now, thou art barren, and bearest not: but thou shalt conceive, and bear a son.

4 Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and [f]drink not wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean[4] thing:

6 ¶ Then the woman came and told her husband, saying, A 'man of God[5] came unto me, and his countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible: but I asked him not whence he was, neither told he me his name.

7 But he said unto me, Behold, thou shalt conceive, and bear a son; and now drink no wine nor strong drink, neither eat any unclean thing: for the child shall be a Nazarite to God from the womb to the day of his death.

8 ¶ Then Manoah entreated the LORD, and said, O my Lord, [k]let the man of God which thou didst send come again unto us, and teach us what we shall do unto the child that shall be born.

to Gilead for the purpose of chastising Jephthah for his presumption. They themselves already presumed to rule Israel. Their bitter taunt brought upon them a bitter revenge at the hand of the rude eastern warrior. Having overthrown them on the battle-field, he intercepted them at the fords of the Jordan as they were attempting to cross to their native mountains. A difference in the pronunciation of a word enabled the Gileadites to identify the refugees. It is a remarkable fact that to this day the inhabitants of the country east of the Jordan pronounce certain letters in a manner entirely different from those on the west. P.]

Ver. 14. [That rode on threescore and ten ass-colts. This circumstance is mentioned as the most intelligible historical evidence of the fulfilment of the promises of God, and mark of the peace and prosperity of the land, so long as the people continued faithful to his covenant. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Quarrels between brethren are often the most bitter and violent; for the most causeless wrath is the most outrageous and cruel. The most spotless characters are the fairest marks for envy; and the most signal services often expose men to the most virulent abuse of those whom they have saved from misery. But disregard of a calm self-vindication frequently forces the injured to harder measures. How mischievous is an insolent abusive tongue! It sets on fire the whole course of nature, and is set on fire of hell, and often issues in the ruin of the proprietor. They who are most in fault would often save themselves by being clamorous against the innocent: but the greatest boasters are usually the greatest cowards. Both God and men take pleasure in abasing the proud. These Ephraimites had gloried in their tribe; now they deny it. Lately they went over Jordan to burn Jephthah's house upon him; now they sneak homeward and are cut off from their own. Lately they reviled the Gileadites as fugitives; now, from an infirmity peculiar to their own country, they are discerned and slain in their flight. God sometimes calls men to an office without putting any remarkable work in their hand: and the days of the saints' honour or life are often but few and evil. Death's shafts fly thick—let us therefore so number our days as to apply our hearts unto wisdom.

---

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 23. Have told us such things as these. To argue from the past to the future is one of the soundest principles of piety. The believer 'calls to remembrance his song in the night;' 'he remembers the days of old;' especially he argues that, 'if God spared not his own Son, but freely gave him up to the death for us all, how much more will he also with him freely give us all things?' So argued 9 And God [l]hearkened to the voice of Manoah; and the angel of God came again unto the woman as she sat in the field: but Manoah her husband was not with her.

10 And [m]the woman made haste, and ran, and showed her husband, and said unto him, Behold, the man hath appeared unto me, that came unto me the other day.[6]

11 And Manoah arose, and went after his wife, and came to the man, and said unto him, Art thou the man that spakest unto the woman? And he said, I am.

12 And Manoah said, Now let thy words come to pass: [n]how shall we order[8] the child? and how shall we do[9] unto him?[1]

13 And the angel of the LORD said unto Manoah, Of all that I said unto the woman let her beware.

14 She [o]may not eat of any thing that cometh of the vine, neither let her drink wine or strong drink, nor eat any unclean thing: all that I commanded her let her observe.

15 ¶ And Manoah said unto the angel of the LORD, I pray thee, let us detain thee until we [p]shall have made ready a kid for thee.[2]

16 And the angel of the LORD said unto Manoah, Though thou detain me, I will not eat of thy bread; and if thou wilt offer a burnt-offering, [q]thou must offer it unto the LORD: for Manoah knew not that he was an angel of the LORD.

17 And Manoah said unto the angel of the LORD, What is thy name, that when thy sayings come to pass we may [r]do thee honour?

18 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, [s]Why askest thou thus after my name, seeing it is [3]secret?[4]

19 So Manoah [t]took a kid with a meat-offering, and offered it upon a rock unto the LORD: and the angel [u]did wondrously;[5] and Manoah and his wife looked on.

20 For it came to pass, when the flame went up toward heaven from off the altar, that the angel of the LORD [v]ascended in the flame of the altar: and Manoah and his wife looked on it, [w]and fell on their faces to the ground.

21 (But the angel of the LORD [x]did no more appear to Manoah and to his wife.) Then Manoah knew that he was an angel of the LORD.

22 And Manoah said unto his wife, [a]We shall surely die, because we have seen God.

23 But his wife [b]said unto him, If the LORD were pleased to kill us, he would not have received a burnt-offering and a meat-offering at our hands; neither would he have [b]showed us all these things; nor would, as at this time, have told us such things as these.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Samson desireth a wife of the Philistines. 5 In his journey to Timnath he killeth a lion. 8 In a second journey he findeth honey in the carcass. 10 Samson's marriage-feast. 12 His riddle by his wife is made known. 19 He spoileth thirty Philistines. 20 His wife is married to another.

AND Samson went down to [a]Timnath,[1] and [b]saw a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines.

2 And he came up, and told his father and his mother, and said, I have seen a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines; now therefore [c]get her for me to wife.

3 Then his father and his mother said unto him, Is there never a woman among the daughters of [d]thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the [e]uncircumcised Philistines? And Samson said unto his father, Get her for me; for she pleaseth[2] me well.[3]

4 But his father and his mother knew not that it was [f]of the LORD, that he sought an occasion against the Philistines; for at that time the Philistines [g]had dominion over Israel.

5 ¶ Then went Samson down, and his father and his mother, to Timnath, and came to the vineyards of Timnath: and, behold, a young lion roared against him.[4]

Ver. 25. [The Spirit of the Lord began to move him at times. Many changes take place between childhood and youth; still the child is generally the miniature of the future man, in character as much as in body. Parental partiality is not indeed either the most impartial or most accurate judge; but if a community notice any extraordinary endowments of a child, they seldom fail to be developed in the man. These extraordinary qualifications may, or may not, be indicated by bodily form; but their origin the Scriptures ascribe not to matter, organization, and form, but to the Spirit of the living God. See note on ch. 11. 29. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — Where there is the greatest danger and the least prospect of relief, it often comes. Mercies long waited for are rendered remarkably valuable for the encouragement of others to wait on the Lord. And to support the sinking spirits of his people, God often issues promises of salvation long before they are fulfilled. Those whom God honours to be deliverers of churches and nations, ought to be remarkably holy themselves, and devoted to the service of God. Parents ought to beware of infecting their children with anything of fleshly lusts; and married persons ought to communicate their spiritual experiences one to another. Divine instructions animate our desire after further fellowship with God: and how ready is God to satisfy such longing desires! Such as enjoy real communion with him wish all their relations to share of it. And such as know the real importance of children, will be earnestly desirous of God's direction and assistance in their education, for his honour. Mercies are mercies indeed only when they are rightly managed. But so treacherous are our memories and hearts, that we need line upon line, and precept upon precept; and to have always at hand a loving and careful remembrancer. Gratitude to God and to his ministers for his sake is highly agreeable; but let us never tempt the one nor the other with our curious inquiries. What God conceals we may be holy without the knowledge of; and if we ask in prayer what is not for our real advantage, it is a great mercy to have our suit denied. But how animating is it to behold an ascending Redeemer carrying our hearts and services, all inflamed with his love, along with him! Let not his saints, through unbelief, be afraid of their signal mercies, or afraid to die in the Lord; but ever put a just and favourable construction on the providences of God, and ever look to Jesus' sacrifice as the great foundation of their hopes and comforts. God's promises shall most certainly be fulfilled. And how pleasant to observe the early impressions of God's Spirit upon our children!

TOWER OF THE FORTY MARTYRS—SITUATED IN THE COUNTRY ALLOTTED TO THE TRIBE OF DAN TO WHICH SAMSON BELONGED. [JUDGES xiii: 25.]—"And the Spirit of the Lord began to move him at times in the camp of Dan between Zorah and Esbtaol." We give a picture here of the tower of the forty martyrs in Ramleh because it illustrates a scene in the country originally belonging to the tribe of Dan. And Samson to whom reference is made in this verse as being moved by the Spirit of the Lord was one of the children of this tribe. This tower is known as the White Mosque, White Tower or Tower of the Forty Martyrs, and the Moslems call it the Tomb of the Forty Champions. It is situated about a quarter of a mile from the town of Ramleh. The tower is Saracenic, square, and beautifully built. It is about 120 feet high. It is thought to have been finished in the year 1318. There is a Mahommedan tradition that forty companions of the Prophet are buried in the vaults of this mosque.

rent a kid, and he had nothing in his hand: but[s] he told not his father or his mother what he had done.[5]

7 And he went down and talked with the woman; and she pleased Samson well.

8 ¶ And after a time he returned to [t]take her, and he turned aside to see the carcass of the lion; and, behold, there was a swarm of bees and[6] honey in the carcass of the lion.[7]

9 And he took thereof in his hands, and went on eating, and came to his father and mother, and he gave them, and they did eat: but he told not them that he had taken the honey out of the carcass of the lion.

10 ¶ So his father went down unto the woman: and Samson [u]made there a feast; for so used the young men to do.

11 And it came to pass, when they [v]saw him, that they brought [e]thirty companions to be with him.

12 ¶ And Samson said unto them, I [w]will now put forth a riddle unto you: if ye can certainly declare it me within the [x]seven days of the feast,[8] and find it out, then I will give you thirty sheets,[9] and thirty change of garments:

13 But if ye cannot declare it me, then shall ye give me thirty sheets, and thirty [y]change of garments. And they said unto him, Put forth thy riddle, that we may hear it.

14 And he said unto them, [z]Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. And [a]they could not in three days expound the riddle.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they said unto Samson's wife, [b]Entice thy husband, that he may declare unto us the riddle, lest[c] we burn thee and thy father's house with fire:[1] have ye called us to take that we have?[2] is it not so?

16 And Samson's wife [d]wept before him, and said, Thou dost but hate me, and lovest me not: thou hast put forth a riddle unto the children of my people, and hast not told it me. And he said unto her, Behold, I have not told it my father nor my mother, and shall I tell it thee?

17 And she wept before him the seven days,[3] while their feast lasted: and it came to pass on the seventh day, that he told her,[4] because she lay sore upon him: and [e]she told the riddle to the children of her people.

18 And the men of the city said unto him on the seventh day, before the sun went down, What is sweeter than honey? And what is stronger than a lion? And he said unto them, If ye had not ploughed with my [f]heifer, ye had not found out my riddle.

19 ¶ And[h] the Spirit of the LORD came upon him,[5] and he went down to Ashkelon, and slew thirty men of them, and took their spoil,[6] and gave change of garments unto them which expounded the riddle: and his [g]anger was kindled, and he went up to his father's house.

20 But Samson's wife was given to his companion, whom he had used as his [h]friend.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Samson is denied his wife. 3 He burneth the Philistines' corn with foxes and firebrands. 6 His wife and her father are burned by the Philistines. 7 Samson smiteth them hip and thigh. 9 He is bound by the men of Judah, and delivered to the Philistines. 14 He killeth a thousand of them with a jawbone. 18 God openeth a fountain in Lehi to relieve his thirst.

BUT it came to pass within a while after, in the time of wheat harvest, that Samson visited his wife with [a]a kid; and he said, I will [b]go in to my wife into the chamber: but her father would not suffer him to go in.

2 And her father said, [c]I verily thought that thou hadst utterly hated her; therefore [d]I gave her to thy companion: is not her younger sister fairer than she? take her,[1] I pray thee, instead of her.

3 ¶ And Samson said concerning them, [e]Now shall I be more blameless than the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure.

4 And Samson went and caught [f]three hundred foxes,[2] and took fire-brands,[3] and turned tail to tail, and put a fire-brand in the midst between two tails.

5 And when he had set the brands on fire, he let them go into the standing corn of the Philistines, and burnt up both the shocks, and also the standing corn, with the vineyards and olives.[4]

6 Then the Philistines said, Who hath done this? And they answered, Samson, the son-in-law of the Timnite, because he had taken his wife, and given her to his companion. And the Philistines came up and [g]burnt her and her father with fire.[5]

5 Three traits already distinguish Samson's character (1) Deference to his indulgent parents; (2) Mingled with no little self-will—apparent contradictions that often meet—fond parents giving way to their children's wishes. 4 It is easy to do right for a little time, just so long as it is agreeable to our constitution and habits, as modesty and secrecy evidently were to Samson. The difficulty lies in persevering to do right, and to carry our first resolutions into effect. Samson refused to discover his secret till near the end of the seventh day; importunity and tenderness made him his own betrayer. Peter was bold for a little in the garden—temptation overcame him in the judgment-hall.—C.

4 The destruction of grain, olive-trees, and vines will be easily understood by those who have seen the plain of Philistia, and know the mode of cultivation. There are no fences; the corn-fields extend for miles in one uninterrupted expanse. Grain is sown, and grows luxuriantly around the vines and beneath the branches of the olives. In a dry and sunny country like Palestine, the fire, when once kindled, would spread rapidly, and burn fiercely. Samson must have watched the success of his clever scheme of destruction from the heights of Zorah with rare delight.—P.

5 Such extemporaneous ebullitions of popular fury indicate both a rude state of society and a weak government; yet is it instructive to see how treachery (ch. 14. 15), in seeking to avoid threatened evil (ch.14. 15), brings down upon its head the very punishment from which there can be no doubt the bravery of Samson would have defended his relatives. —C.

preserve the life of his father and brethren. So now, by the imprudent though not unlawful marriage of Samson, 'he seeks occasion against the Philistines,' to punish them by their unnatural quarrels with their adopted relatives. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is dangerous to be guided by the eye in the choice of our marriage companions: but it is needful and proper to submit ourselves to the authority of parents, who are over us in the Lord, as their property, and parts of themselves. And nothing ought they to object to so urgently as to children's marrying with such as seem irreligious. God often indeed carries on his great purposes by means which cannot be justified in us; for when people are wandering out of God's way, they have reason to expect dangers, and even devils, to meet with and oppose them. It is glorious when great exploits are attended with great humility; and highly becoming when persons keep up an affecting remembrance of what God has done for them, and cheerfully allow their parents a share of what they acquire by their labour. And it is prudent to amuse ourselves and others at cheerful entertainments with something instructive and useful. God often brings the sweetest mercies out of the severest trials; but the treacherous pretences of affection speedily issue in dislike and mischief. Secrets, once trusted out of our own breast, seldom continue long such. Rash marriages often issue in sudden separations; and if women's affections once stray from their husbands, their persons will soon follow. Nor are any more apt to defile the bed than false pretenders to friendship.

There could therefore be little difficulty, by aid of a few friends and nets, in taking the three hundred which Samson employed. C.]

BOAT AND OARSMEN, JAFFA—IN THE TERRITORY OF THE PHILISTINES. [Judges, xv.8.]—"And Samson said concerning them, Now shall I be more blameless than the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure." This picture of a boat and oarsmen in Jaffa is given here because illustrating a scene in one of the oldest cities of the world, and a city belonging for awhile to the Philistines. This picture gives us an idea of how such travelers are carried to the shore in Jaffa as have previously arranged for a tour of the Holy Land through some dragoman or guide. Such travelers are met out at sea, and with their baggage are taken in charge as soon as the anchor is cast. The pilgrim has no trouble whatever. Everything has been arranged for his coming. The party who made the trip to secure the pictures that illustrate this work made all the arrangements for a tour of the Holy Land in London.

7 ¶ And Samson said unto them, [h]Though ye have done this, yet will I be avenged of you, and after that I will cease.

8 And he smote them [i]hip and thigh[5] with a great slaughter: and he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam.

9 ¶ Then the Philistines went up, and pitched in Judah, and spread themselves in [k]Lehi.

10 And the men of Judah said, Why are ye come up against us? And they answered, [l]To bind Samson are we come up, to do to him as he hath done to us.

11 Then three thousand men of Judah went[6] to the top of the rock Etam, and said to Samson, Knowest[7] thou not that the Philistines are rulers[m] over us? what is this that thou hast done unto us? And he said unto them, As they did unto me,[8] so have I done unto them.

12 And they said unto him, We are come down to bind thee, that we may [n]deliver thee into the hand of the Philistines. And Samson said unto them, Swear unto me, that ye will not [o]fall upon me yourselves.

13 And they spake unto him, saying, No; but we will [p]bind thee fast, and deliver thee into their hand: but surely we will not kill thee. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him up from the rock.

14 ¶ And when he came unto Lehi, the [q]Philistines shouted against him: and the [r]Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him; and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands loosed[9] from off his hands.

15 And he found a new[1] jaw-bone of an ass, and put forth his hand and took it, and [s]slew a thousand men therewith.

16 And Samson said, With the jaw-bone of an ass, heaps upon heaps, with the jaw of an ass have I slain a thousand men.

17 And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking, that he cast away the jaw-bone out of his hand, and called that place [2]Ramath-lehi.[3]

18 ¶ And he was [t]sore athirst, and called on the LORD, and said, [u]Thou hast given this great deliverance into the hand of thy servant: and now [v]shall I die for thirst, and fall into the hand of the uncircumcised?

19 But God clave an hollow place that was in [w]the jaw,[4] and there came water thereout; and when he had drunk, his spirit came again, and he revived: wherefore he called the name thereof [x]En-hakkore, which is in Lehi unto this day.

20 And he [a]judged Israel in the days of the Philistines twenty years.

THEN went[a] Samson to [b]Gaza, and saw there an harlot,[1] and went in unto her.

2 And it was told the Gazites, saying, Samson is come hither. And they [c]compassed him in, and laid wait for him all night in the gate of the city, and were quiet[2] all the night, saying, In the morning, when it is day, we shall [d]kill him.

3 And Samson lay till midnight, and arose at midnight, and [e]took the doors of the gate of the city, and the two posts,[3] and went away with them, bar[4] and all, and put them upon his shoulders, and carried them up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron.[5]

4 ¶ And it came to pass afterward,[6] that he [f]loved a woman in the valley[7] of Sorek, whose name was [g]Delilah.

5 And the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and said unto her, Entice him, and see wherein his great strength lieth, [h]and by what means we may prevail against him, that we may bind him to afflict[8] him; and we [i]will give thee, every one of us, [k]eleven hundred pieces of silver.[9]

6 And Delilah said to Samson, [l]Tell me, I pray thee, wherein thy great strength lieth, and wherewith thou mightest be bound to afflict thee.

combustible was used; objections arising from particular suppositions are therefore no more than suppositions. The question is, Was the matter practicable? And any one who considers that statement in the former note as to the multitudes of foxes, and the facilities of obtaining them—who considers the habits of the animals and the state of the country—and who would but exercise a little ingenuity—will find no difficulty in devising means for the execution of Samson's plan. It is specially to be remembered, that it is not said that Samson let them all loose from one point, or that it was all effected in one night. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—An alliance into profane and graceless families, or giving way to unreasonable jealousies, are sources of great unhappiness: but when we have done our duty to prevent a quarrel, we cannot be charged with the consequences of it. Passion is terrible to all around, but it is glorious when the offended party is the first in coveting reconciliation. God often makes use of his people's enemies to avenge their quarrel. And such as by sin seek to avoid suffering, only bring upon themselves more terrible destruction. The people of God indeed have need to expect but little repose in this world. One conflict closely succeeds to another: and those whom God raises up to be deliverers in church or state frequently receive the most base and treacherous abuse from their friends, for whose sake they spend their pains and risk their life. But if God be for us, no matter what or who may be against us, or how small our assistance be: for though humbling providences closely follow after the most exalting, that we may know that we are but flesh, frail flesh, and may be constrained to a constant dependence on God, and fervent supplication to him; yet will he supply all our wants and fill our mouths with his praise.

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 1. Gaza, 62 miles southwest of Jerusalem. It must have been very ancient, as it is mentioned Ge. 10. 19. It was taken shortly after the death of Joshua, Ju. 1. 18, but must have been soon recovered by the Philistines. It subsequently became a place of great strength, and stood a siege of three months against Alexander the Great. It is at present inhabited by Turks and Arabs, and contains about 3000 inhabitants. C.]

Ver. 3. [Samson lay till midnight. While infidels delight to point to the failings and sins recorded of God's servants, and to deduce from them an argument against the Bible, the believer, with all propriety, adduces from the record of them an irresistible argument on behalf of the Bible. The Bible is the only book that ever recorded the faults and sins of those who may be called its heroes. Were the lives of infidels as faithfully recorded, they would perhaps be slower in bringing railing accusations. The conduct of Samson is a sad disgrace to a Nazarite and a judge—a melancholy example of the weakness of human nature and the power of sin. C.]

Ver. 20. ['The superhuman strength of Samson did not reside in his hair as hair, but in the fact that God

JERUSALEM ROAD—PASSING THROUGH THE TERRITORY OF DAN. [Judges, xvi.]—We give this picture here as an illustration of the sixteenth chapter of Judges, because it illustrates the Jerusalem road from Jaffa to the Holy City, which has in all ages been the great highway through the territory that once belonged to the tribe of Dan, whose most famous historical character, perhaps, was Samson. You observe two of the parties on the camels looking back with a great deal of interest. They appeared to be very curious in regard to our proceedings. They little dreamed that their pictures were being taken, and that they would be used in all parts of the English-speaking world to illustrate the Bible, the product of their own land. It is difficult to comprehend how deeply ignorant the natives of Palestine are. They cannot read, and they have no conception whatever of the modern world. They are as blank in mind as their ancestors in the days of Abraham.

me with seven [1]green[2] withs[3] that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as another[4] man.[5]

8 Then the lords of the Philistines brought up to her seven green withs which had not been dried, and she [a]bound him with them.

9 (Now there were men lying in wait, abiding with her in the chamber.) And she said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson.[6] And he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it [b]toucheth the fire: so his strength [c]was not known.

10 And Delilah said unto Samson, Behold, thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: now tell[d] me, I pray thee, wherewith thou mightest be bound.

11 And he said unto her, [e]If they bind me fast with new ropes[7] that never were occupied,[8] then shall I be weak, and be as another man.

12 Delilah therefore [f]took new ropes, and bound him therewith, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. (And there were liers in wait abiding in the chamber.) And he brake them from off his arms like a thread.

13 And Delilah said unto Samson, Hitherto thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: tell me wherewith thou mightest be bound. And he said unto her, [g]If thou weavest the seven locks[9] of my head with the web.

14 And she fastened[1] it with the pin, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awaked out of his sleep, and went[h] away with the pin of the beam, and with the web.[2]

15 ¶ And she said unto him, [i]How canst thou say, I love thee, when thine heart is not with me? thou hast mocked me these three times, and hast not told me wherein thy great strength lieth.

16 And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him, so that his soul was [j]vexed unto death,

17 That he told her [k]all his heart, and said unto her, There hath not come [l]a razor upon mine head; for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb: if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man.[3]

18 And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart, she sent and called for the lords of the Philistines, saying, Come up this once; for he hath showed me all his heart. Then the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and [m]brought money in their hand.

19 And [n]she made him sleep upon her knees; and she called for a man, and she caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head; and she began to afflict him, and his strength went from him.

20 And she said, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out, as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that [o]the LORD was departed from him.[4]

21 But the Philistines took him, [p]and [5]put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and [q]bound him with fetters of brass; and he [r]did grind in the prison-house.[6]

22 Howbeit[s] the hair of his head began to grow again after he was shaven.[7]

23 ¶ Then the lords of the Philistines gathered them together for to offer a great sacrifice unto [t]Dagon their god, and to rejoice: for they said, Our god hath delivered Samson our enemy into our hand.

24 And when the people saw him, they [u]praised their god: for they said, Our god hath delivered into our hands our enemy, and the destroyer of our country, which slew many of us.[8]

25 And it came to pass, when their [v]hearts were merry, that they said, Call for Samson, that he may make us sport. And they called for Samson out of the prison-house; and he made them[9] sport:[m] and they set him between the pillars.

26 ¶ And Samson said unto the lad that held him by the hand, Suffer me that I may feel the pillars whereupon the house standeth, that I may lean upon them.

27 Now the house was full of men and women; and all the lords of the Philistines were there: and there were [n]upon the roof about three thousand men and women,[1] that beheld while Samson made sport.

28 And Samson [o]called unto the LORD, and said, O Lord GOD, remember me, I pray thee, and strengthen me, I pray thee, only this once, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes.[2] m How Samson came to know that his strength was connected with his hair, as the emblem of Nazaritism, does not appear. The most probable account is that the preservation of his hair was a direction of the angel of the Lord: he was taught to expect the divine aid only so long as his directions were observed.—Note, Samson's great strength was connected with a part of the body with the least apparent vitality, and of the least apparent value. So the Christian's great strength lies in faith and perseverance—qualities utterly disregarded by the world; but so long as he retains them, his treacherous sins—the Philistines—never can subdue him.—C.

29 And Samson took hold of the two middle

1 The temple, like other eastern buildings, had a flat roof, which was densely crowded with spectators; and Samson must have been exhibited in the court below. The existence of two middle pillars shows there were more; but if two were taken from the central parts of a structure—a very probable figure for a place where show, not privity, was the object—the staying and balancing of the building being destroyed, the whole would most probably fall together. Sir Christopher Wren has described an oval building which would be totally destroyed by the removal of one central pillar.—C.

Ver. 22. [The hair of his head began to grow. There is reason to think that Samson's discovery that the Lord had sensibly departed from him, was the beginning of his repentant return to God, and that thus with the growing of his hair he felt his supernatural powers returning. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Dangerous is it to ramble into the company of such as are lewd or frothy. The wrath of God hangs over the bed of lewdness; and the more secure sinners are, the nearer is their destruction. How impossible is it to preserve in safety the persons who are infatuated with fleshly lust! They are fixed in the basest slavery: nor can repeated warnings awaken them to consideration. Where the love of money is rooted in the heart, it will not hesitate to betray soul and body at once, for a supposed competent bribe. And, indeed, they who trust either honour or life to a base woman deserve to be betrayed. God justly gives up men to suffer who give up themselves to sin: and sensual lusts especially bring men at last to the most fearful misery. But dreadful is their ruin who ensnare and make sport with the falls and sufferings of God's people or servants; for God will graciously return to his penitent children, and renew their strength, in order that before and in death they may be avenged of their spiritual enemies.—But this Jewish hero illus-

1 Of the money that Micah first stole, then restored, his mother maketh images, 5 and he ornaments for them. 7 He hireth a Levite to be his priest.

AND there was a man of [a]mount Ephraim, whose name was Micah.[1]

2 And he said unto his mother, [b]The eleven hundred shekels of silver that were taken from thee, about which thou cursedst, and spakest of also in mine ears, behold, the silver is with me; I took it. And his mother said, [c]Blessed be thou of the LORD, my son.[2]

3 And when he had restored the eleven hundred shekels of silver to his mother, his mother said, [d]I had wholly dedicated the silver unto the LORD[3] from my hand for my son, to [e]make a graven image and a molten image; now therefore I will restore it unto thee.

4 Yet he restored the money unto his mother; and his mother took two hundred shekels of silver, and gave them to the founder, who made thereof a graven image and a molten image: and they were in the house of Micah.

5 ¶ And the man Micah had an house of gods,[4] and made an [f]ephod, and teraphim, and [g]consecrated[5] one of his sons, who became his priest.

6 In[h] those days there was no king in Israel, but every man did that which was right [i]in his own eyes.

7 ¶ And there was a young man out of [k]Beth-lehem-judah of the family of Judah, who was a Levite, and he sojourned there.

8 And the man [l]departed out of the city from Beth-lehem-judah, to sojourn where [m]he could find a place: and he came to [n]mount Ephraim, to the house of Micah, as he journeyed.[6]

9 And Micah said unto him, Whence comest thou? And he said unto him, I am a Levite of Beth-lehem-judah, and I go to sojourn where I may find a place.

10 And Micah said unto him, Dwell with me, and be unto me [o]a father and a priest, and I will give thee ten shekels of silver[7] by the year, and a suit[8] of apparel,[9] and thy victuals. [p]So the Levite went in.

11 And the Levite was content to dwell with the man; and the young man was unto him as one of his sons.

12 And Micah [q]consecrated the Levite; and the young man became his priest, and was in the house of Micah.

13 Then said Micah, [r]Now know I that the LORD will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest.

a Jos. 15. 9. 17. 15, 18.

1 It would appear from a careful study of history that the events recorded in this and the following chapters of the book of Judges occurred at a period immediately after the death of Joshua, and long before the time of Samson or Jephthah. This must not be considered strictly correct. The book contains a series of remarkable incidents in early Israelitish history; but it does not give a continuous narrative, nor does it profess to be chronologically arranged. It is very likely that the death of Samson occurred at least 300 years after the event with which this chapter opens.—P. b Lev. 5. 1. 26. 40. Ps. 10. 3. Ex. 22. 7.

3 It is here further to be remarked that though stinginess in the cause of religion is apostolically condemned, 2 Co. 9. 6, yet liberality is no proof that the worship to which it dedicates is acceptable, or the heart of the giver right with God.—C.
Note, God requires both the heart, then the hand; but the open hand of the idolater may often put to shame the parsimoniousness of the Christian.—C.

triously typifies our almighty Redeemer. Express and seasonable were the predictions concerning him, and supernatural the manner of his birth. Solemn was his separation to the service of God; invigorating the spiritual influence which he received; and early and marvellous his exploits. By obedience and death he fulfilled the broken law; and conquered sin, Satan, the world, and death: and sweet is the provision provided by it for himself and his friends; nay, for sinners of mankind, even the chief! Important are his parables, and known only to such as have fellowship with him. Basely was he betrayed by Judas and his countrymen, and delivered to the Gentiles that he might be crucified. His enemies rejoiced to shut his eyes in death, and to imprison him in a grave. Making him the object of their derision, they sealed him up, and watched him in his tomb; but he brake the bands, and carried off the gates and bars of death; and ascending up on high, led captivity captive. All alone he performed his wonderful exploits. By a voluntary death, according to his Father's will, he destroyed thousands of principalities and powers. By the contemned preaching of the gospel he conquers thousands of souls, and kills ten thousands of lusts.—But how dreadful is his justice! By the Romans, like fire-branded foxes, he spread destruction among his Jewish opposers, and burned up their cities: by furious and ravaging Goths, Saracens, Tartars, Turks, &c., he resented, and will resent, the injuries done to his Christian cause: and how tremendously shall his righteous will over all at last prevail!

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 5. Ephod and teraphim. 'Ephod,' the principal part of the priest's dress, and particularly remarkable for having engraved on precious stones the names of the tribes, Ex. 23. 4-6, &c., an emblem of the communion of saints and the preciousness of God's people to the heart of the great High-priest. 'Teraphim:' the word signifies images, but of what form is not precisely known. See note on ch. 18. 14.. C.]

Ver. 6. [In those days there was no king in Israel. The time is not precisely known, farther than that it was after the days of Joshua, and most probably soon after the death of Joshua; for Phinehas, the grandson of Aaron, was still alive, see ch. 20. 28. This and the following chapters may therefore be considered as an appendix to the memoirs of the judges. C.]

Ver. 7. [A young man out of Bethlehem-judah, of the family of Judah, who was a Levite. His father may have been of Levi, his mother of Judah, or this 'Bethlehem-judah' may have belonged to the particular division of the tribe of Judah which bore the family name of Judah; for each tribe was divided into distinct families. C.]

Ver. 13. [The Lord will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest. Micah was a worldly, superstitious, ignorant man—the proper elements of an idolater. Worldly, for he stole his mother's silver; superstitious, for he gave it back, not from a moral feeling of honesty, but dread of a curse; ignorant, for he is led by the name of a Levite, without any reference to the law of God as to the priestly family or place of worship. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Covetousness most frequently besets people in their old age; and churlish parents and thievish children often meet together. It is dreadful when those losses which should make men pray, cause them to curse and blaspheme. Hasty imprecations light unexpectedly where the curser least intended them. Reconcilement in sin is quickly effected: and the most covetous wretches liberally devote their idolized substance to the service of the devil. From what small beginnings are the vilest corruptions introduced into nations and churches! The grossest idolatries are often varnished with high pretences to religion. But sad are the times when faithful ministers are almost starved for want! and what an easy prey for Satan and his agents are unsettled professors, and especially rambling clergymen! God readily leaves those to debase themselves who have once abandoned themselves to a neglect of his worship and service: and permits those who should be reprovers of sin to be principal countenancers of it for the sake of their belly. And upon what slight, nay, damnable grounds, do hardened sinners reckon themselves entitled to the favour of God!

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 7. The earliest name of Laish was Leshem. It was situated in a rich valley between Hermon and Lebanon, at one of the great fountains of the Jordan. Its occupation by the Phœnician inhabitants of Sidon is easily accounted for. Sidon was a commercial city. Built on the coast, with only a narrow strip of plain beside it, and the rocky side of Lebanon over it, a supply of food had to be brought from a distance. The plain around Laish is one of the most fertile in Syria; the enterprising Phœnicians took possession of it, built a town, and placed in it a colony of labourers, expecting to draw from it an unfailing supply of grain and fruit. The old colonists lived quiet luxurious lives, revelling in the richness of the glorious plain, and far removed alike from the control and protection of their parent city Sidon. They thus became an easy prey to the warlike Danites. The country round it was described by the spies just as it would be described by any observant visitor at the present day. P.]

Ver. 29. [The city of Dan is mentioned in the narrative of Abraham's pursuit of the eastern kings who had plundered Sodom, Ge. 14. 14. If the name Dan was first given to the city in the time of the judges, how could it have been known to Moses, who had died at least fifty years previously! Some suppose

1 The Danites send five men to seek out for them an inheritance. 3 At the house of Micah they consult with the Levite, and are encouraged in their way. 7 They search Laish, and bring back news of good hope. 11 Six hundred men are sent to surprise it. 14 On the way they rob Micah of his priest and his consecrated things. 27 They win Laish, and call it Dan. 30 They set up idolatry, wherein Jonathan the Levite, and his sons, inherit the priesthood.

IN those[a] days there was no king in Israel:[1] and in those days the tribe of the Danites sought them an inheritance to dwell in; for unto[b] that day all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Israel.[2]

2 And the children of Dan sent of their family five men from their coasts, men[3] of valour, [c]from Zorah, and from Eshtaol, to spy out the land, and to search it; and they said unto them, Go, search the land: who, when they came to [d]mount Ephraim, to the house of Micah, they lodged there.

3 When they were by the house of Micah, they [e]knew the voice of the young man the Levite:[4] and they turned in thither, and said unto him, Who brought thee hither? and what makest thou in this place? and what hast thou here?

4 And he said unto them, [f]Thus and thus dealeth Micah with me, and hath hired me, and I am his priest.

5 And they said unto him, [g]Ask counsel, we pray thee, of God, that we may know whether our way which we go shall be prosperous.

6 And the priest [h]said unto them, Go in peace: [i]before the LORD is your way wherein ye go.

7 ¶ Then the five men departed, and came to [k]Laish, and saw the people that were therein, how they dwelt careless, after the manner of the Zidonians, quiet and secure; and there was no magistrate[5] in the land, that might put them to shame in any thing; and they were far from the Zidonians, and had no business with any man.[6]

8 And they came unto their brethren to Zorah[l] and Eshtaol; and their brethren said unto them, What say ye?

9 And they said, Arise, that we may go up against them: for we have seen the land, and, behold, it is very good; and are ye [m]still? [n]be not slothful to go, and to enter to possess the land.

10 When ye go, ye shall come unto a people secure, and to a large land: for [o]God hath given it into your hands;[7] a place [p]where there is no want of any thing that is in the earth.

11 ¶ And there went from thence of the family of the Danites, out of Zorah, and out of Eshtaol, six hundred men appointed[8] with weapons of war.

12 And they went up, and pitched in [q]Kirjath-jearim, in Judah: wherefore they called that place [r]Mahaneh-dan unto this day; behold, it is behind Kirjath-jearim.

13 And they passed thence unto [s]mount Ephraim, and came unto the house of Micah.

14 ¶ Then answered the five men that went to spy out the country of Laish, and said unto their brethren, Do ye know that [t]there is in these houses an ephod, and teraphim,[9] and a graven image, and a molten image?[11] now therefore [u]consider[12] what ye have to do.

15 And they turned thitherward, and came to the house of the young man the Levite, even unto the house of Micah, and [x]saluted him.

16 And the six hundred men appointed with their weapons of war, which were of the children of Dan, stood by the entering of the gate.

17 And the five men that went to spy out the land went up, and came in thither, and [y]took the graven image, and the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image: and the priest stood in the entering of the gate, with the six hundred men that were appointed with weapons of war.

18 And these went into Micah's house, and fetched the carved image, the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image. Then said the priest unto them, What do ye?

19 And they said unto him, Hold thy [13]peace, [z]lay thine hand upon thy mouth, and go with us, and be to us [a]a father and a priest: is it better for thee to be a priest unto the house of one man, or that thou be a priest unto a tribe and a family in Israel?

20 And the [b]priest's heart was glad; and he took the ephod, and the teraphim,[14] and the graven image, and went in the midst of the people.

21 So they turned and departed, and put the little ones, and the cattle, and the carriage, before them.

22 ¶ And when they were a good way from the house of Micah, the men that were in the houses near to Micah's house were gathered together, and overtook the children of Dan.

23 And they cried unto the children of Dan: and they turned their faces, and said unto Micah, What aileth thee, that thou comest with such a company?[15]

24 And he said, Ye have taken away [c]my

2 [2]For there had fallen to it, until that day, among the tribes of Israel, an allotted portion. The meaning of this statement is illustrated by the context. From ver. 2, 21 it is evident the Danites were settled on the mountain slopes west of Judah, so that they were not absolutely without inheritance. Their inheritance, however, was not enough for them. The Philistines were so powerful that they could not drive them from the plain; and they were therefore obliged to look elsewhere for a settlement.—P.

6 Many MSS. of the Septuagint read "no intercourse with Syria," which lay on the side opposite to Zidon. This view is supported by the great similarity in the Hebrew of the words Adam, man, and Aram, Syria; but the words in the text are quite intelligible, when taken to mean they had no trade, and minded nothing but idle pleasure, to which their soil and climate so largely contributed. See ver. 10.—Note, The blessings of God in a happy climate and fertile soil are, by the sinfulness of men, frequently converted into curses.—C.

[5] Of the form of the teraphim, generally said to signify images and idols, nothing precise is known. Cocceius thinks they were the cherubim. From comparing this verse with Ho. 3. 4. and considering the enumeration of things known, and seeing what is wanted to complete the externals of divine worship, we are inclined to think the word, being plural, includes altar, candlestick, censers, later, &c. &c.—C.

[6] Molten image, means evidently here and elsewhere, an image produced by pouring molten metal into a mould. By graven image, we cannot understand such a cast finished by the graver, but, more probably, figures or inscriptions on a flat surface accompanied with emblematical devices.—C. u ver 5 Pr.19.27, Is. 8.20.

[7] Consider whether it would not be advisable to carry these with us. Having here, and through means of these, received an oracular response, they seem to recommend the carrying of them off, and the setting up of worship among themselves, as if thus to secure God's presence and favour.—I.

[9] This was the token of silence. These men were very ignorant, and concluded that they should, by taking Micah's gods, secure the presence and favour of the God of Israel in their expedition and settlement. They perhaps supposed the piety of their motives, and the goodness of their intentions, would justify the end. But it was a base robbery of Micah, aggravated by the Levite's ingratitude and their impudence.—I.

[10] The renewed enumeration of the materiel of Micah's idolatry, in which there is no mention of the altar, &c., which we know were portable, seems to favour, if not to confirm, the interpretation of teraphim suggested in the note on ver.14.—C.

that the name was inserted in the book of Genesis by a later writer. This is scarcely probable. It has been suggested that there was another place of the same name in that region; and in 2 Sa. 24. 6 mention is made of Dan-jaan. Another solution may be given. Like Hebron and Jerusalem this city may have had two ancient names, Laish and Dan. The former had come into general use at the time of the Danite conquest; but the latter was better known in the days of Abraham, and the Danites revived it in honour of their progenitor. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Outward straits will push men to great diligence for obtaining the comforts of this life; and often they go far to seek that which, by attending to God's direction, they might have had near home. Very often such are permitted of God to fall into ruinous snares: and however earnestly they shun outward wants or hazards, they rush headlong into the most sinful temptations. When men are ignorant or negligent of consulting God and his word, they readily apply to the devil for direction and encouragement; and receive answers to their wish. But accomplices in wickedness ordinarily prove unfaithful to one another. And none is more apt to be treacherous than a clergy-

KURYET-EL-ANAB—WHERE THE ARK REMAINED TWENTY YEARS. [Judges, xviii:12.] "And they went up and pitched in Kirjath-jearim in Judea." Kuryet el Anab is supposed by some to be the ancient Kirjath-jearim. This place is now called Abu Gosh, after a famous old robber who lived here and whose descendants still reside in the village. A tomb has been built to his memory here by his relatives, and this is one of the most thrifty looking villages between Jaffa and Jerusalem. Kirjath-jearim is first mentioned as one of the four cities of the Gibeonites. The ark remained here for twenty years and was removed from this place by David to the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. Eusebius and Jerome speak of this city and describe it as a village at the ninth mile between Jerusalem and Lydda, and these requirements are exactly fulfilled in Kuryet-el-Anab.

25 And the children of Dan said unto him, Let not thy voice be heard among us, lest angry[d] fellows run upon thee, and thou [e]lose thy life, with the lives of thy household.[6]

29 And they called the name of the city Dan,[i] after the name of Dan their father, who was born unto Israel: howbeit the name of the city was Laish at the first.

30 ¶ And the children of Dan [k]set up the graven image: and Jonathan the son of Gershom, the son of Manasseh,[8] he and his sons were priests to the tribe of Dan until the day of the [l]captivity of the land.[9]

2 And his concubine [e]played the whore against him, and went away from him unto her father's house to Beth-lehem-judah, and was there[2] four whole months.[3]

3 And her husband arose, and [f]went after her, [g]to speak [h]friendly unto her, and to bring her again, having his servant with him, and a couple of asses: and she brought him into her father's house; and when the father of the damsel saw him, he rejoiced to meet him.

4 And his father-in-law, the damsel's father, retained him; and he abode with him three days: so they did eat and drink, and lodged there.

5 And it came to pass on the fourth day, when they arose early in the morning, that he rose up to depart: and the damsel's father said unto his son-in-law, [i]Comfort thine heart with a morsel of bread,[4] and afterward go your way.

6 And they sat down, and did eat and drink both of them together: for the damsel's father had said unto the man, Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thine heart be [k]merry.[5]

7 And when the man rose up to depart, his father-in-law urged him; therefore he lodged there again.

8 And he arose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart: and the damsel's [6]father said, Comfort thine heart, I pray thee. And they tarried until afternoon,[7] and they did eat both of them.

9 And when the man rose up to depart, he, and his concubine, and his servant, his father-in-law, the damsel's father, said unto him, Behold, now the day draweth toward evening,[8] I pray you tarry all night: behold, the day groweth to an end;[9] lodge here, that thine heart may be merry; and [l]to-morrow get you early on your way, that thou mayest go home.[1] man who is ambitious of preferment, and chiefly concerned for his honour and his salary. Deplorable is the case of those who have gods which can be taken from them, and hearts which cannot part with them, though they be the means of their ruin. But hard is their state when men dare not complain of injustice or robbery without risking their life; and unhappy is the condition of those who are destitute of proper government, especially if they are also plunged into carelessness and carnal security; for prosperity in an evil way encourages men to persevere in it. And the most sinful customs, when once they are established, are the most permanent: it is far easier to keep them out than to root them out.

CHAPTER XIX. [Ver. 1. It came to pass in those days when there was no king in Israel. That is, during some of the periods between the death of one judge and the election of another. During these times, however, the country was not altogether without local governments, exercised by the heads of families and territorial princes of the congregation, Jos. 9. 18; but the want of a strong general government permitted such popular outrages against strangers, who had no local friends, as the shocking narrative in this chapter records. C.]

Ver. 2. [His concubine played the whore against him. The translation probably charges the unhappy woman with more guilt than she had really incurred. Josephus and other authorities conceive she had merely separated from her husband. Had her guilt been greater, when eastern manners are considered, it is not probable her father would have received her into his house. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How great is the sovereignty of God in honouring Bethlehem, which lately furnished an idolatrous priest, and now an adulterous concubine, with the birth of his distinguished King and of his only Son! Worthless clergymen and evil women are the greatest plagues to society: and parents' indulgence of their children, and infidelity to marriage-vows, often issue in wide-spread ruin. Frequently the intended kindness of friends is a real injury; and what was designed for our welfare becomes a trap to ensnare us. Where we might reasonably expect distinguished kindness, we often meet with the most abominable neglect and most ruinous abuse. Apostates from God are often void of humanity and natural affection; while truly charitable sojourners on earth are patterns of hospitality and brotherly-kindness; look out for, and are happy in finding, opportunities of doing good, particularly to ministers of Christ. We are apt to hope that our troubles are at an end when the worst storm is but gathering. To what horrible lengths in wicked-that is not of the children of Israel: we will pass over to Gibeah.

13 And he said unto his servant, Come, and let us draw near to one of these places to lodge all night, in [c]Gibeah, or in Ramah.

14 And they passed on, and went their way; and the sun went down upon them when they were by Gibeah, which belongeth to Benjamin.[3]

15 And they turned aside thither, to go in and to lodge in Gibeah: and when he went in, he sat him down in a street of the city; for there was no man that [d]took them into his house to lodging.[4]

16 ¶ And, behold, there came an old man from[e] his work out of the field at even, which was also of mount Ephraim; and he sojourned in Gibeah: but the men of the place were Benjamites.[f]

17 And when he had lifted up his eyes, he saw a wayfaring man in the street of the city: and the old man said, Whither goest thou? and whence comest thou?

18 And he said unto him, We are passing from Beth-lehem-judah toward the side of mount Ephraim; from thence am I: and I went to Beth-lehem-judah, but I am now going to the[g] house of the LORD;[5] and there is no man that [h]receiveth me to house.

19 Yet there [i]is both straw[6] and provender for our asses; and there is bread and wine also for me, and for thy handmaid, and for the young man which is with thy servants: there is no want of any thing.

20 And the old man said, [k]Peace be with thee: howsoever, let all thy wants lie upon me; only[l] lodge not in the street.

21 So he brought him into his house, and gave provender unto the asses: and they [m]washed their feet, and did eat and drink.

22 ¶ Now, as they were making their hearts merry, behold, the men of the city, certain sons[n] of Belial, beset [o]the house round about, and beat at the door, and spake to the master of the house, the old man, saying, Bring forth the man that came into thine house, that we may [p]know him.

A note of the manners of the times is of some importance in settling the meaning of the Hebrew word translated hostler, for the honour of the character of Rahab, Jos. 2. 1, of the mother of Jephthah, Ju. 11. 1, some strenuously contend it should be translated hostess or tavern-keeper. The text clearly shows there were in those days and countries no such persons; had there been, as accustomed lodging-house, the Levite would not have rested with his wife and servant in the street.—C.

The state of agriculture must have been very imperfect, and all the grass at the time burned up—a thing not only common but constant in many eastern countries during summer, so that the carrying of straw for two asses was necessary in so short a journey, the distance from Bethlehem to Shiloh being not more directly than about thirty miles.—Note, A lawless state of society is as incompatible with prosperity, as with morality.—C.

[1] This is a most frightful narrative, and while it awakens thoughts of horror, should equally awaken thoughts of thankfulness for the civilizing power of Christianity, and efficient protection of well-ordered government. The Levite, no doubt, sent a circumstantial account of the wicked conduct of the Gibeonites; and the spectacle of the fragments of the murdered woman was calculated to rouse the tribes to ample vengeance. The practice continued in Israel, but the victim was a bullock, 1 Sa. 11. 11; and from Lucian we learn that the Scythians and Molossians had a similar custom. The Crean Tarigh, a cross seared in fire and quenched with blood, in which the Highland chieftains of Scotland were wont to summon their clans to battle, seems to have originated in similar ideas.—C.

ness will not apostate professors go! and what barefaced impudence continuance in lewdness begets! When sinners are once given up to their own hearts' lust they easily sink into the most unnatural crimes: and when they are become desperate in wickedness, they will neither bear restraint nor hear admonition. When we commit one sin to avoid a greater, we ordinarily plunge ourselves into further snares: and God fearfully marks sin in its punishment. The fleshly lust which had been this woman's sin, is now made her punishment. And in justice never will he extenuate men's wickedness. With the most deliberate concern, unanimity, and faithfulness, ought the important affairs of churches and nations to be transacted. And such as would obtain God's blessing on a land must seek to purge it by the execution of justice on notorious criminals.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 21. Destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men. As objections to Scripture history have frequently arisen from the numbers of the Israelites coming out of Egypt, or subsequently engaging or falling in battle; an answer has been attempted by showing that some eastern nations placed the units first, and thence advanced in their numeration. This mode of numeration would make the number killed at Gibeah 2020 instead of 22,000, but the 18,000 in ver. 25 silences at once these vain attempts to evade and conciliate rather than to reply to infidelity. The proper reply is the character of the historians, and the internal and external evidences which demonstrate the divine origin of the history.—Note, It is worthy of remark, as another and a just reply to infidel objectors, that it is not said, either in ver. 21 or 25, that so many Israelites were slain, but 'destroyed down to the ground,' put, as in modern phrase, hors de combat. C.]

Ver. 28. [They had asked, ver. 23, 'Shall I go up again to battle?' and God bade them go, that is, 'go' to be punished for their presumption in the former question, and their neglect in this. Neglect—for they do not ask, 'Wilt thou go with us?' but, 'Shall we go?' Now they add, 'Shall I cease?' and God promises victory. C.]

Ver. 47. [About 8 miles north by east of Gibeah, among the wild mountains, is a conspicuous white hill, rising like a cone above the neighbouring hill-tops, and overlooking the whole wilderness down to the Jordan valley. Upon it stands a large village called Rummon. This is unquestionably the Rock Rimmon on which the Benjamites took refuge. It is admirably adapted for this purpose. A deep ravine cuts off all approach from the south; and other ravines skirt its western and northern sides, making it a natural fortress. The top of the hill is rounded, affording ample space for the refugees; while in the sides are many caverns. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is comely when professors of the true religion are unanimous and hearty in their zeal against enormous crimes; and when, with prudent deliberations and proper despatch, they proceed to the

the land of Gilead, [c]unto the LORD in Mizpeh.[9]

2 And the chief of all the people, even of all the tribes of Israel, presented themselves in the assembly of the people of God, four hundred thousand footmen that [d]drew sword.

3 (Now the children of Benjamin [e]heard that the children of Israel were gone up to Mizpeh.) Then said the children of Israel, Tell[1] us, how was this wickedness?

4 And the Levite,[2] the husband of the woman that was slain, answered and said, [f]I came into Gibeah that belongeth to Benjamin, I and my concubine, to lodge:

5 And [g]the men of Gibeah rose against me, and beset the house round about upon me by night, and thought to have slain me; and my concubine have they forced,[3] that she is dead.

6 And [h]I took my concubine, and cut her in pieces, and sent her throughout all the country of the inheritance of Israel: for they have committed [i]lewdness and folly in Israel.

7 ¶ Behold, [k]ye are all children of Israel; give here your advice and counsel.

8 ¶ And all the people arose as one man, saying, [l]We will not any of us go to his tent,[4] neither will we any of us turn into his house:

9 But now, this shall be the thing which we will do to Gibeah; we will go up [m]by lot against it:

10 And we will take ten men of an hundred throughout all the tribes of Israel, and an hundred of a thousand, and a thousand out of ten thousand, to fetch victual for the people,[5] that they may do, when they come to Gibeah of Benjamin, according to all the folly that they have wrought in Israel.

11 So all the men of Israel were gathered against the city, knit together[6] as one man.

12 ¶ And the tribes of Israel [n]sent men through all the tribe of Benjamin, saying, What wickedness is this that is done among you?

13 Now therefore [o]deliver us the men, the children[p] of Belial, which are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death, and put away evil from Israel. But the children of Benjamin would not [q]hearken to the voice of their brethren the children of Israel;

14 But the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together out of the cities unto Gibeah, to go out to battle against the children of Israel.

15 And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time, out of the cities, [r]twenty and six thousand men that drew sword, besides the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbered seven hundred chosen men.[7]

[9] No less than seven Mizpehs are mentioned in Scripture. The word signifies 'a place of look-out' or 'watch-tower,' and was therefore applicable to many places in Palestine. The Mizpeh here mentioned is in Benjamin. It was situated on the hill now called Neby-Samuel, which is the most commanding and conspicuous in the whole region. It rises 600 feet above the plain of Gibeah, which lies immediately to the north of it; and it is 4 miles north-west of Jerusalem. The site of Gibeah is clearly seen from it, and is only 3 miles distant. The gathering-place of the tribes was doubtless on the northern slope of the hill, and on the broad plain of Gibeah below. No other place among the mountains of southern Palestine was so well adapted for such an assemblage. Being in Benjamin, too, it was convenient to strike terror into the whole tribe.—P.

[7] It may be impossible now to account for this pre-eminent courage of Benjamin in defying such an army. Some probabilities may be suggested. They may have expected so large an army soon to disband for want of provisions, or they may have expected their indignation soon to cool; or, what is most probable, they may have trusted in the terrible impression of their slingers, who, like the English archers at Cressy and Agincourt, must have made a terrible impression on the close array of their enemies.—C.

16 Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men [s]left-handed: every one could sling stones at an hair-breadth, and not miss.[8]

17 And the men of Israel, besides Benjamin, were numbered [t]four hundred thousand men that drew sword: all these were men of war.

18 ¶ And the children of Israel arose, and went up to the [u]house of God,[9] and [v]asked counsel of God, and said, Which of us shall go up first[1] to the battle against the children of Benjamin? And the LORD said, [w]Judah shall go up first.

19 And the children of Israel [x]rose up in the morning, and encamped against Gibeah.

20 And the men of Israel went out to battle against Benjamin; and the men of Israel put themselves in array to fight against them at Gibeah.

21 And the children of Benjamin came forth out of Gibeah, and [a]destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men.

22 ¶ And the people, the men of Israel, [b]encouraged themselves, and set their battle again in array in the place where they put themselves in array the first day.

23 (And the children of Israel went up and [c]wept before the LORD until even, and asked counsel of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up again to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother? And the LORD said, Go up against him.)

24 And the children of Israel came near against the children of Benjamin the second day.

25 And Benjamin went forth against them out of Gibeah the second day, and [d]destroyed down to the ground of the children of Israel again eighteen thousand men; all these drew the sword.

26 ¶ Then all the children of Israel, and all the people, went up, and came unto the house of God,[2] and [e]wept, and sat there before the LORD, and fasted that day until even, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings before the LORD.

27 And[f] the children of Israel inquired of the LORD, (for the [g]ark of the covenant of God was there in those days, 28 And [h]Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron,[3] stood before it in those days,) saying, [i]Shall I yet again go out to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother, or shall I cease? And the LORD said, [k]Go up; for to-morrow I will deliver them into thine hand.

punishment of them. But infatuated are they who patronize and protect the vicious, especially when at the expense of their own liberties and lives. Proud self-dependence is the ruin of sinners; and such as draw the sword in a bad cause may expect to see it bathed in their own blood. The dispensations of Providence appear very mysterious in thus calling men to work, and yet frowning upon them in the execution of it. But let us not be so inconsiderate as to judge of its use 30 And the children of Israel went up against the children of Benjamin on the third day, and put themselves in array against Gibeah, as at other times.

31 And the children of Benjamin went out against the people, and [m]were drawn away from the city; and they began to smite[4] of the people, and kill, as at other times, in the highways, of which one goeth up to [n]the house of God,[5] and the other to [o]Gibeah in the field,[6] about thirty men of Israel.

32 And the children of Benjamin said, They are smitten down before us, as at the first. But the children of Israel said, [p]Let us flee, and draw them from the city[7] unto the highways.

33 And all the men of Israel [q]rose up out of their place, and put themselves in array at Baal-tamar: and the liers in wait of Israel came forth out of their places, even out of the meadows of Gibeah.

34 And there came against Gibeah [r]ten thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and the battle was sore: but they [s]knew not that evil was near them.[8]

35 And the LORD smote Benjamin before Israel: and the children of Israel destroyed[9] of the Benjamites that day [t]twenty and five thousand and an hundred men; all these drew the sword.

36 So the children of Benjamin saw that they were smitten: for [u]the men of Israel gave place to the Benjamites, because they trusted unto the liers in wait which they had set beside Gibeah.

37 And the liers in wait hasted, and rushed upon Gibeah; and the liers in wait [x]drew themselves along, and smote all the city with the edge of the sword.

38 Now there was an appointed sign[1] between the men of Israel and[2] the liers in wait, that[3] they should make a great flame[3] with smoke to rise up out of the city.

39 And [z]when the men of Israel retired in the battle, Benjamin began to smite[4] and kill of the men of Israel about thirty persons; for they said, Surely they are smitten down before us, as in the first battle.

40 But when the flame began to arise up out of the city with a pillar of smoke, the Benjamites looked behind them, and, behold, [a]the flame of the city ascended up to heaven.

41 And when the men of Israel turned again, the[b] men of Benjamin were amazed:[5] for they saw that evil was come upon them.[6]

42 Therefore they turned their backs before the men of Israel unto the way of the wilderness; but the battle overtook them;[7] and them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them.

43 Thus they [c]enclosed the Benjamites round about, and chased them, and trode them down with ease[8] over against[9] Gibeah toward the sun-rising.

44 And there fell of Benjamin eighteen thousand men: all these were men of valour.

45 And they turned, and fled toward the wilderness unto the rock of [d]Rimmon: and they gleaned of them in the highways five thousand men; and pursued hard after them unto Gidom, and slew two thousand men of them.

46 So that all which fell that day of Benjamin were [e]twenty and five thousand[1] men that drew the sword: all these were men of valour.

47 But[f] six hundred men turned, and fled to the wilderness unto the rock Rimmon, and abode in the rock Rimmon four months.

48 And the men of Israel [g]turned again upon the children of Benjamin, and smote them with the edge of the sword, as well the men of every city, as the beast, and all that came to [2]hand: also they set on fire all the cities that they came[3] to

Sometimes God suffers wicked men to be lifted up in successes and joys, that their fall may be the surer. See how short their joys, and their triumphing yet for a moment. Evil was near them, and they did not know it; they saw, when it was too late, to prevent it, that evil was come upon them. So Israel 'went sore' for the national injury of their rash vow; but, so far from being truly penitent, they prepare to rectify the vow by a verbal evasion, and to remedy one sin by the perpetration of another.—C.

from the prosperity or adversity which attends it. There is need to wait patiently for the issue of things: and such as punish others should be innocent, or at least penitent themselves. Short is the triumphing of the wicked, and fatal to them at last. It is vain to fight where God is our enemy, or to flee when he pursueth. What desolations sin makes in the earth! but dreadful indeed will be the case of sinners at the last day, when there shall be no rock to hide them, nor mountain to cover them. And who knows what extensive and everlasting woe may proceed from one moment of indulged lust!

the LORD? and, behold, there came none to the camp from [k]Jabesh-gilead to the assembly.

9 For the people were numbered,[3] and, behold, there were none of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead there.

10 And the congregation sent thither twelve thousand men of the valiantest, and commanded them, saying, [l]Go and smite the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead with the edge of the sword, with the women and the children.

11 And this is the thing that ye shall do, Ye[m] shall utterly destroy every male, and every woman that [n]hath lain by man.[4]

12 And they found among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead four hundred young virgins,[5] that had known no man by lying with any male: and they brought them unto the camp [o]to Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan.

13 And the whole congregation sent some to speak[6] to the children of Benjamin that were in the[p] rock Rimmon, and to [q]call peaceably unto them.

14 And Benjamin came again at that time; and they gave them wives[7] which they had saved alive of the women of Jabesh-gilead: and yet so they [r]sufficed them not.

15 And the people repented them for Benjamin, because that the LORD had made a breach in the tribes of Israel.

16 ¶ Then the elders of the congregation said, How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing the women are destroyed out of Benjamin?

17 And they said, There must be an inheritance for them that be escaped of Benjamin,[8] that a tribe be not destroyed out of Israel.

18 Howbeit we may not give them wives of our daughters: for the children of Israel [s]have sworn, saying, Cursed be he that giveth a wife to Benjamin.

19 Then they said, Behold, there is a [t]feast[9] of the LORD in Shiloh yearly,[1] in a place which is on the north side of Beth-el, on the east side[2] of[3] the highway that goeth up from [u]Beth-el to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah.[4]

20 Therefore they commanded the children of Benjamin, saying, Go and lie in wait in the vineyards;

21 And see, and, behold, if the daughters of Shiloh come out to [v]dance in dances, then come ye out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife of the daughters of Shiloh, and go to the land of Benjamin.

22 And it shall be, when their fathers or their brethren come unto us to complain, that we will say unto them, [w]Be favourable unto them for our sakes; because we reserved not to each man his wife in the war: for ye did not [x]give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty.[5]

23 And the children of Benjamin did so, and took them wives, according to their number, of them that danced, whom they caught; and they went and returned unto their inheritance, and [y]repaired the cities, and dwelt in them.

24 And the children of Israel departed thence at that time, every man to his tribe, and to his family, and they went out from thence every man to his inheritance.

25 In[b] those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was [z]right in his own eyes.[6]

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 4. Offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings. The transition from a peace-offering to another act of extermination seems an almost incredible contradiction. But the history of human nature furnishes many instances of not merely making professed religious services the prelude to cruelty, but of actually commingling them together. The history of the crusades against the Waldenses affords an example of the one, and the autos-da-fe of the Spanish inquisition afford an example of the other—the massacre of St. Bartholomew in some degree exceeds both; for the massacre of the sleeping and unoffending Huguenots was celebrated at Rome by a solemn Te Deum. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Rash oaths are ordinarily ensnaring. True zeal may be carried too far. And there is often an overdoing in well-doing.—War may be ill ended that was well begun. Even necessary justice ought to be executed with deliberation and deep compassion; for strong passions prepare work for an after repentance. And one rash step, or even rash word, sometimes draws after it the most terrible consequences.

In perplexities and distress it is proper to have recourse to God and the atoning blood of his Son. He can extricate us in a decent and honourable manner. But amidst violent fits of repentance, men are often readier to support their own authority than to consult God, and to extirpate brethren rather than Canaanites. Dancing, even without mixture of sexes, often renders persons an easy prey. And who knows how often the ambuscades of evil spirits transport souls from the dancing-floor into everlasting destruction! How great the confusion of an unsettled government! It is a great mercy for a land to have proper rulers in church or state.

THE BOOK OF RUTH

Is another appendix to the history of the Judges; calculated to represent the marvellous providence of God, the propriety of constant dependence thereon; and to show the happy issue of patience, humility, and industry. It was probably penned by Samuel, and relates to events which happened about the time of Ehud or Barak, Ju. iii. or iv.; particularly the afflictions of Naomi and Ruth, ch. i.; their industry and humility, ii.; their alliance with Boaz, iii.; and happy settlement by means thereof, iv.

[The ancient Jews, and some of the early Christian fathers, accounted Ruth a part of the book of Judges, regarding that whole book as a series of independent narratives, arranged without regard to chronological order. The author of Ruth is unknown, but it has been ascribed with much probability to Samuel. It would appear to have been written a considerable time after the events recorded in it occurred: for in ch. 4. 7 we find reference made to one of its incidents as being an old custom. It could not have been written sooner than the time of king David, for his name is mentioned; and one of the objects of the book evidently was to illustrate David's genealogy. Another probable object in writing this book and placing it in the Canon, was 'to pre-intimate, by the recorded adoption of a Gentile woman into the family from which Christ was to derive his origin, the final reception of the Gentile nations into the true church as fellow-heirs of the salvation of the gospel.' P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 Elimelech, driven by famine into Moab, dieth there. 4 Mahlon and Chilion, his sons, having married wives of Moab, die also. 6 Naomi returning homeward, 8 dissuadeth her two daughters-in-law from going with her. 14 Orpah leaveth her, but Ruth with great constancy accompanieth her. 19 They two come to Bethlehem, where they are gladly received.

NOW it came to pass, [a]in the days when the judges ruled,[1] that there [b]was a famine in the land: and a certain man of Beth-lehem-judah went to [c]sojourn in the country of Moab, he, and his wife, and his two sons.[2]

2 And the name of the man was Elimelech, and the name of his wife Naomi, and the name of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion, [d]Ephrathites of Beth-lehem-judah: and they came into the country of Moab, and continued[3] there.

3 And [e]Elimelech, Naomi's husband, died; and she was left, and her two sons.

4 And they [f]took them wives of the women of Moab;[4] the name of the one was [g]Orpah, and the name of the other [h]Ruth: and they dwelled there about ten years.

5 And [i]Mahlon and Chilion died also both of them; and the woman was left of her two sons and her husband.[5]

6 ¶ Then [k]she arose with her daughters-in-law, that she might return from the country of Moab: for she had heard in the country of Moab how that the LORD had [l]visited his people in[m] giving them bread.

7 Wherefore she [n]went forth out of the place where she was, and her two daughters-in-law with her; and they went on the way to return unto the land of Judah.

8 And Naomi said unto her two daughters-in-law, Go, [o]return each to her mother's house: [p]the LORD deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead, and with me.

9 The LORD grant you that ye [q]may find rest, each of you in the house of her husband. Then [r]she kissed them; and they lifted up their voice, and wept.

10 And they said unto her, Surely we will [s]return with thee unto thy people.

11 And Naomi said, Turn again, my daughters: why will ye go with me? are there yet any more sons in my womb, that they[t] may be your husbands?[6]

12 Turn again, my daughters; go your way; for I am [u]too old to have an husband. If I should say, I have hope, if I should have an husband[7] also to-night, and should also bear sons;

13 Would ye tarry[8] for them till they were grown? would ye stay for them from having husbands? nay, my daughters: for it grieveth me much[9] for your [v]sakes, [w]that the hand of the LORD is gone out against me.

14 And they lifted up their voice, and wept again: and Orpah [x]kissed her mother-in-law; but Ruth [y]clave unto her.

15 And she said, Behold, thy sister-in-law is gone back unto her people, and unto her gods: [z]return thou after thy sister-in-law.

16 And Ruth said, [a]Entreat me not[2] to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.[3]

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. In the days when the judges ruled. The date of the events in this book it is impossible to fix with any certainty, farther than that it was between the days of Joshua and Saul. It is evident, however, either that two or more judges ruled contemporaneously, or that the emigration of Naomi took place under one judge, and her return under another. But as the book relates to the time of Boaz, whose descendants were allied to Jesse and David; and as Nahshon, their ancestor, was contemporary with Moses, and his son Salmon the father of Boaz, the date must be some time in the first half of the government of the judges.—A famine in the land. No one that reads the history of the times of Gideon, Ju. 6. 4, 6, 11, can wonder at the occurrence of famine. But while men clearly discover the secondary causes of want—a weak and unsettled government, and the cruel oppression of invaders—let them not overlook the other causes, the sins of an ungrateful people, and the judgments of an offended God. C.]

Ver. 15. [Return thou after thy sister-in-law. Naomi has been blamed for attempting to send her daughters back to an idolatrous land, instead of bringing them with her to Canaan; but her accusers do not reflect how Israel, at this time, was probably as idolatrous as Moab, as undoubtedly it was during much of the time of the judges. Besides, in the lips of Naomi, an evident believer in Jehovah, the word Elohim, translated gods, does not necessarily convey any recognition of polytheism.—Note, The words of God's people should be judged, not by any meaning they will bear, or that may be forced upon them, but by the meaning that coincides with their acknowledged faith and character. C.]

LOWER POOL OF SOLOMON—SITUATED NEAR THE FIELDS WHERE RUTH GLEANED WHEAT LEFT BY THE REAPERS OF BOAZ. [RUTH, ii:2.]—"And Ruth, the Moabitess, said unto Naomi, Let me now go to the field, and glean ears of corn after him in whose sight I shall find grace. And she said unto her, Go, my daughter." The pools of Solomon are about three miles from the town of Bethlehem and not a great distance from the fields where Ruth gleaned in the field after the reapers of Boaz. The above is called the lower pool of Solomon because it is the last of the three, the two others standing above it. Water from this pool passes to Bethlehem, and perhaps directly through the very field where Boaz met and talked so kindly to Ruth, the damsel that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab. This reservoir of water would float one of the largest ocean steamers.

17 Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: [c]the LORD do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me.

18 When she saw that she was stedfastly minded[4] to go with her, [d]then she left speaking unto her.

19 ¶ So they two went until they came to Beth-lehem.[e] And it came to pass, when they were come to Beth-lehem, that all the city was moved about them,[5] and they said, [f]Is this Naomi?

20 And she said unto them, Call me not Naomi,[6] call me Mara:[7] for the Almighty hath dealt[g] very bitterly with me.

21 I went out full, and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the LORD hath [h]testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

22 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter-in-law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and [i]they came to Beth-lehem in the beginning of barley harvest.[8]

1 Ruth gleaneth in the fields of Boaz. 4 Boaz taking notice of her, 8 showeth her great favour. 18 That which she got, she carrieth to her mother-in-law.

AND Naomi had a [a]kinsman of her husband's, a mighty man of wealth, of the family of Elimelech; and his name was Boaz.

2 And Ruth the Moabitess said unto Naomi, Let me now go to the field, and [b]glean ears of corn after him in whose sight I shall find grace.[1] And she said unto her, Go, my daughter.

3 And she went, and came and gleaned in the field after the reapers: and her [c]hap was to light on a part of the field[2] belonging unto Boaz, who was of the kindred of Elimelech.

4 ¶ And, behold, Boaz came from Beth-lehem, and said unto the reapers, [d]The LORD be with you. And they answered him, The LORD bless thee.[3]

5 Then said Boaz unto his servant that was set over the reapers,[4] Whose damsel is this?

6 And the servant that was [e]set over the reapers answered and said, It is [f]the Moabitish damsel that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab.

7 And she said, [g]I pray you,[5] let me glean and gather after the reapers among the sheaves: so she came, and hath [h]continued even from the morning until now, that she tarried a little in the house.[6]

8 Then said Boaz unto Ruth, Hearest thou not, [i]my daughter? [k]Go not to glean in another field, neither go from hence, but abide here fast by my maidens.[7]

9 Let thine eyes be on the field that they do reap, and go thou after them: have I not charged the young men that they shall [l]not touch thee? and when thou art athirst, [m]go unto the vessels, and drink of that which the young men have drawn.

10 Then [n]she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldest take knowledge of me, seeing I am a stranger?

11 And Boaz answered and said unto her, [o]It hath fully been showed me all that thou hast done unto thy mother-in-law since the death of thine husband; and how thou hast left thy father and thy mother,[8] and the land of thy nativity, and art come unto a people which thou knewest not heretofore.

12 The LORD [p]recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the LORD God of Israel, under whose [q]wings thou art come to trust.[9]

13 Then she said, Let me [r]find favour[1] in thy sight, my lord; for that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken [s]friendly unto thine handmaid, though I be [s]not like unto one of thine handmaidens.

But woe unto him that striveth with his Maker! Is. 45. 9. C.]

REFLECTIONS. Numerous and diversified are the arrows in God's quiver for the punishment of men's sins: and often, while his enemies riot in plenty, his people are pinched with scarcity and want. A diligent care to provide for our family is highly commendable: but it is seldom safe to flee from God's land, though he frown on it; or to suffer scarcity of bread to draw us from the ordinances of God. It is not in fleeing from God's mighty hand, but in humbling ourselves under it, that safety lies. It is not in outrunning crosses, but in taking them up and following Christ, that true comfort is to be had. Young people often mistake in their marriage, through want or neglect of their parents' advice. But marriages and deaths are near neighbours, and one death in a family is but the forerunner and warning of another. Both comforts and crosses are often nearer us than we suspect; and if we are shut up into the society of the wicked, we should escape for our life as soon as our hindrances are removed. It is a mercy when God imbitters our condition of distance from himself, that we may be weaned from it and hastened to our heavenly home; but yet it is pleasant to see near relations knit together in love, and loath to part. With the most strong and fixed resolution should we set out in the Lord's way, as we know not what repeated and strong temptations we may have to turn back: but the difficulties of the way, which discourage the temporary believer, will but bind the faithful soul the more closely to Jesus Christ. Nothing, no, not death, can separate them from him and his people. Poverty and age make great alterations on mankind: and it is proper that all around should remark it with solemn awe and cordial sympathy; for surely it is but madness to set our heart on that comeliness and wealth which so quickly fade. Let us therefore keep waiting on God in the way of his judgments; in patience possessing our souls; eyeing the Lord's hand in all that we meet with; humbling ourselves under humbling providences; mourning, but never murmuring, under his hand; and ever remarking how the minutest circumstances of our lives are directed by the overruling providence of God.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 4. In travelling through Palestine at the present day the salutations here recorded are heard on every highway and in every harvest-field. 'The Lord be with you' is the invariable salutation of stranger or native, rich or poor, on approaching a band of reapers, or meeting a company of wayfarers; and the invariable reply is, 'The Lord bless thee.' Gleaning is now as commonly practised as it was in the days of Ruth. P.]

Ver. 9. [In every harvest-field there is a skin or jar of water for the use of the reapers. Sometimes it has to be brought from a great distance; this must have been the case at Bethlehem, where it had to be drawn up besides from deep wells or cisterns. It was a greater favour to poor Ruth than we can well conceive in this country, to permit her to drink of the water in the field. P.]

Ver. 14. [Dip thy morsel in the vinegar. A sauce prepared from vinegar in which bread is dipped is still a common food in the East, and, in conjunction with olives, is highly relished by a people not habituated to luxury. C. — This is a characteristic trait of eastern life. I have myself witnessed similar scenes in various 14 And Boaz said unto her, [t]At meal-time come thou hither, and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the vinegar. And she sat beside the reapers: and he reached her [u]parched corn,[1] and she [z]did eat, and was sufficed, and left.

15 And when she was risen up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men, saying, Let her glean even among the sheaves, and reproach her[a] not:[2]

16 And [b]let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, and rebuke her not.

17 So she [c]gleaned in the field until even, and beat out that she had gleaned; and it was about an [e]ephah of barley.

18 ¶ And she took it up, and went into the city; and her mother-in-law saw what she had gleaned: and she brought forth, and gave to her [h]that she had reserved after she was sufficed.[3]

19 And her mother-in-law said unto her, Where hast thou gleaned to-day? and where wroughtest thou? Blessed be he that did take knowledge of thee. And she showed her mother-in-law with whom she had wrought, and said, The man's name with whom I wrought to-day is Boaz.

20 And Naomi [i]said unto her daughter-in-law, Blessed be he of the LORD, who hath not left off his kindness to the living and[i] to the dead. And Naomi said unto her, The man is near of kin unto us, [d]one of our next kinsmen.

21 And Ruth the Moabitess said, [e]He said unto me also, Thou shalt keep fast by my young men,[8] until they have ended all my harvest.

22 And Naomi said unto Ruth her daughter-in-law, It is [f]good, my daughter, that thou go out with his maidens, that they meet[9] thee not[1] in any other field.

23 So she [g]kept fast by the maidens of Boaz to glean unto the end of barley harvest, and of wheat harvest; and dwelt with her mother-in-law

CHAPTER III.

1 By Naomi's instruction, 6 Ruth lieth at Boaz's feet. 8 Boaz acknowledgeth the right of a kinsman. 14 He sendeth her home in the morning with six measures of barley.

THEN Naomi her mother-in-law said unto her, [a]My daughter, shall I not seek rest for thee, that it may be well with thee?

2 And [b]now is not Boaz of our kindred, with whose maidens thou wast? behold, he winnoweth barley to-night in the threshing-floor.[1]

3 Wash[c] thyself therefore, and anoint thee, and put thy raiment upon thee, and get thee down to the floor: but make not thyself known unto the man, until he shall have done eating and drinking.

4 And it shall be, when he lieth down, that thou shalt mark the place where he shall lie, and thou shalt go in, and [d]uncover his feet, and lay thee down; and he will tell thee what thou shalt do.

5 And she said unto her, [e]All that thou sayest unto me I will do.

6 ¶ And she went down unto the floor, and did according to all that her mother-in-law bade her.

7 And when Boaz had eaten and drunk, and [f]his heart was merry, he went to lie down at the end of the heap of corn: and she [g]came softly, and uncovered his feet, and laid her down.

8 And it came to pass at midnight, that the man was afraid,[2] and turned[3] himself: and, behold, a woman lay at his feet.

9 And he said, Who art thou? And she answered, I am Ruth [h]thine handmaid: [i]spread therefore thy skirt over thine handmaid; for thou art a near [k]kinsman.[4]

10 And he said, [l]Blessed be thou of the LORD, my daughter: for thou hast showed [m]more kindness in the latter end than at the beginning, inasmuch as thou followedst not young men, whether poor or rich.

11 And now, my daughter, fear not; I will do to thee all that thou requirest: for all the city[5] of my people doth know that thou art [n]a virtuous woman.[6]

12 And now it is true that I am thy near kinsman: howbeit [o]there is a kinsman nearer than I.

13 Tarry this night, and it shall be [p]in the morning, that [q]if he will perform unto thee the part of a kinsman, well; let him do the kinsman's part: but if he will not do the part of a kinsman to thee, then will I do the part of a kinsman to thee, as the LORD liveth: lie down until the morning.

parts of Palestine. The evening meal on the harvest-field is simple. It is spread on the ground. There are piles of thin cakes, and dishes of olives, and various kinds of vegetables steeped in a sour sauce like vinegar. Each one takes a piece of bread, dips it in the sauce, and perhaps takes up on it a portion of the vegetable, and then eats it. It is a very common practice for the master to lift a piece of bread and present it to a guest. I have more than once seen the gleaners invited to take part in the evening meal. P.]

REFLECTIONS—How infinite is the condescension of God in taking notice of a poor Moabitish gleaner! Let me then never be proud, for I know not to what straits I may be reduced in life; and never let me be ashamed of honest industry. If the Lord debase me, it is my honour to concur with his providence, and to be content with the least and coarsest crumbs from his hand. In caring for my poor or aged friends, let me with diligence depend upon his kindness, and thank him for every circumstance thereof. Whether I am master or servant, let a savour of Christ and religion always attend me; and the law of kindness be in both heart and mouth. If I am a stranger, let me be always humble, mannerly, and thankful. If I am not, let me show kindness to strangers, especially to those who are such from a love to Christ. Who knows how they may bless, or even reward me? For the poorest, by their earnest prayers, may return the richest rewards to the most wealthy. The more highly others think of me, let me think the more humbly of myself: and let me always regard my benefactors, and with the utmost care make choice of my companions. A modest, humble, and respectful behaviour, accompanied with a tender regard to parents in age and poverty, is commendable even in the meanest. And when we go out in the way of duty, depending on God, who knows with what rich blessings we may return loaded? Happy is that family where parents and children mutually vie in deep concern for one another's real welfare. And comfortable may even the poorest live together, if they have but godliness with contentment, which is great gain.

3 And he [e]said unto the kinsman, Naomi, that is come again out of the country of Moab, selleth a parcel of land, which was our brother Elimelech's:

4 And I thought to advertise thee,[2] saying, Buy[f] it before the inhabitants, and before the elders of my people. If thou wilt redeem it, redeem it; but if thou wilt not redeem it, then tell me, that I may know: for there is none to redeem it besides thee; and I am after thee. And he said, I will [g]redeem it.

5 Then said Boaz, What day thou buyest the field of the hand of Naomi, [h]thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance.

6 ¶ And the kinsman said, I cannot redeem it for myself, [i]lest I mar mine own [3]inheritance: redeem thou my right to thyself; for I cannot redeem it.

7 Now[k] this was the manner in former time in Israel,[4] concerning redeeming, and concerning changing, for to confirm all things; a man plucked off his shoe,[5] and gave it to his neighbour: and this was a testimony in Israel.

8 Therefore the kinsman said unto Boaz, [l]Buy it for thee: so he drew off his shoe.

9 ¶ And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are [m]witnesses this day, that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi.

10 Moreover, [n]Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, that [o]the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place:[6] ye are witnesses this day.

11 And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders, said, We are witnesses. [p]The LORD make the woman that is come into thine house like [q]Rachel and like Leah, which two did build the house of Israel; and do thou worthily[7] in Ephratah, and be famous[8] in Bethlehem:

12 And let thy house be like [r]the house of Pharez, [s](whom Tamar bare unto Judah,) of the seed which the LORD shall give thee of this young woman.

13 ¶ So Boaz [t]took Ruth,[9] and she was his wife: and when he went in unto her, [u]the LORD gave her conception, and she bare a son.

14 And the [v]women said unto Naomi, Blessed be the LORD, which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel.

15 And he shall be unto thee a [w]restorer of direction across their masters' feet. This translation is not to be construed by European customs or sentiments, but by the customs of the time and place, by the religious and benevolent character of Boaz, and the innocence and purity of Naomi and Ruth.—C.]

Ver. 7. [His heart was merry. There is a striking connection between piety, benevolence, a pure conscience, and cheerfulness, or even well-regulated mirth. We have heard the laughter of fools, and men think it joyful; but this we have also felt, that the more godly men become, the more cheerful and happy they become. —Note, It is a debt that religious men owe to the world, to convince them, by the mildness, meekness, and cheerfulness of their demeanour, that religion is neither austere nor melancholy, while yet it is staid and serious. C. ——This scene is in every respect characteristic of the East. During the harvest rain never falls in Palestine, and the nights are warm and balmy. The whole agricultural population are then accustomed to bivouac round the thrashing-floors, which are usually at some distance from the villages. They all sleep in the open air—masters and labourers alike. This is considered no hardship. A large portion of the population of Palestine sleep in the open air during the summer in preference. I have often done so myself. P.]

Ver. 15. [The veil worn by the peasant women of Syria and Palestine is a piece of strong calico, from two to three yards in length by half as much in width. It is thrown over the head, and can be so worn as to envelop the whole person, or to hang down the back in graceful folds. The end of the veil is not unfrequently used to serve the purpose of a bag for carrying grain or fruit. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is often safest for young widows to marry. And it is the duty of parents to promote the settlement of their children in a comfortable marriage: for it is no small mercy when the married state fixes the affections at a rest in which it is well with the parties. Dress and cleanliness are commendable, so far as they are calculated to engage proper affections. But in courtship and marriage there ought always to be a strict attention to the commands of God. It is not enough that we do no evil;—we must indulge ourselves in no appearance of it. But what an advantage is it when we have to do with such as have the deepest regard to our chastity and honour; who are disposed to think no evil, but to interpret our innocent familiarities in the best sense; and who, in matters of importance, will certainly be faithful and diligent! Yea, hopeful is the match which is made up in dependence on God and regard to the authority of parents. But we cannot be too ready to start at temptations which steal softly upon us; nor too careful to remove every occasion from the envenomed tongue of slander. What is liable to be misinterpreted had best never be known. And when we circumspectly proceed in the way of our duty, we may comfort our minds in the hope of God's salvation in due time.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 5. Thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess. If the kinsman should buy the land from Ruth, it is not very apparent how it could follow from the purchase that he was to take Ruth to wife. Kennicott and others, on the authority of some very valuable MSS., render the passage, 'Thou shalt also obtain Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead;' and this, at all events, is the sense of the passage. C.]

We give a picture of the entrance to the grotto in the Church of the Nativity to illustrate this particular Scripture, for our Savior was a direct descendant of David, and thus through him related to Ruth, the Moabitish damsel. The door we see above is the opening into the manger where our Savior was born. Steps lead down a dimly-lighted stairway, and crowds of pilgrims from all parts of the world come here to look in upon this sacred place. Treasures are also brought from all parts of the world and deposited here. Lamps of silver and gold are suspended, and there is constantly a light in this place.

example of the widow demanding marriage of the nearest kinsman, in which case she was directed to unloose his shoe. This was merely a case of the surrender of right, and drawing off the shoe was a fact in attestation, as more easily maintainable in evidence than any form of words or documents. In many European countries wood, earth, and stone are given as tokens both of surrender and investiture. C.]

Ver. 9. [I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi. The property of the sons had reverted to the mother in point of fact, or its reverting may have been admitted in point of law, because any right derived through Ruth might have been afterwards questioned and difficult to establish. The right of Naomi, passing, however, under the silence or with the consent of Ruth, could not be questioned or disturbed. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is pleasant indeed to behold a man diligent in business, and the providence of God succeeding his endeavours;—to see in marriage the principal regard paid to the holiness and virtue of the partner, not to beauty or wealth;—to see persons of honest intentions risking the most strict and public cognizance;—to see the professed followers of Christ using the most fair and open dealing in all their agreements;—to see affectionate lovers depending wholly on God to make them comfortable to one another;—to see humility, virtue, prudence, and honesty, issuing in remarkable honour and happiness;—to see God raising up the poor, and causing them to sit with princes; and making up the loss of those relations from whom they expected much comfort, in the enjoyment of those from whom they expected nothing;—to see neighbours rejoicing in one another's welfare;—and to see the providences of God, in every circumstance, leading and directing us to Jesus, David's Lord. But, in fine, in Boaz the Bethlehemite I discern Jesus our kinsman-redeemer, who remembered us in our low estate;—pitying our poor and miserable condition, and moved, not indeed by any respectful behaviour in us, but his own infinite compassion, he hath allowed us sinners of the Gentiles to glean in the field of his oracles and ordinances. For our encouragement he hath appointed handfuls of precious promises, and offers of grace and salvation for our use. At infinite expense, and with infinite care and equity, he hath espoused our race, and raised up a seed of servants to God. Let us, conscious of our poverty and affected with his kindness, return him the most humble and thankful acknowledgments. Let us glean for our souls only in his field. Let us abide by his maidens, the faithful ministers of his word. Let us approach his throne of grace in the full assurance of faith, pleading that he, as our nearest kinsman, would spread his robes of righteousness, and garments of salvation, over our naked souls. And let us commit our way to him: he will bring it to pass, and perfect that which concerns us.

THE FIRST BOOK OF # SAMUEL.

This book and the following are denominated from the prophet SAMUEL, perhaps because he wrote the first twenty-four chapters of this; at least from his being the subject of much of it; and whatever relates to David, the subject of the other, is but the issue of his unction to the kingdom by Samuel. This book contains the history of at least eighty years; and exhibits an account (1) Of Eli's negligence and the wickedness of his sons; with the terrible calamities occasioned by these to the Israelites; and even to the Philistines, who took captive the ark. ii.–vi. (2) Of Samuel's birth; education; call to be a prophet; deliverance and government of Israel; resignation of his government; and death. i. ii. iii. vii. xii. xiii. xv. xvi. xix. xxv. (3) Of the Israelites' resolute demand of a king; and the instalment, prosperity, maladministration, and unhappy end of Saul. viii.–xxvi. xxviii. xxxi. (4) Of the unction of David to be king; his diverting of Saul when melancholy with his music; his conquest of Goliath; his friendship with Jonathan; persecution by Saul; marriage with Michal the daughter of Saul, and with Abigail the widow of Nabal; his retreat into the land of the Philistines; discharge from their army; and his slaughter of the Amalekites who had burned Ziklag, xvi.–xxvii. xxix. xxx.

[The books of Samuel were originally regarded as one. The first time the division into two books was made was on the publication of the Septuagint version, about B.C. 260. But long after that period they formed only one book in Hebrew manuscripts; and the early Rabbins universally speak of them as 'The Book of Samuel.' In the first edition of the Hebrew Bible, printed in 1488, they appeared as one continuous history; and it was not until the year 1518 that the present division was adopted in the Bible printed at Venice.

Although this book bears the name Samuel, this is no proof that Samuel was its author, any more than that Ruth and Esther were the authors of the books which bear their names. It is a remarkable fact that there is not in this book itself, or in any other book of Scripture, or in Josephus, a single statement throwing light on the authorship. The common belief in the church is that the first twenty-four chapters were written by Samuel, and the rest by the prophets Nathan and Gad. This view was probably suggested by 1 Ch. 29. 29; though, as will be shown (see note on that passage), there is really nothing in that passage to sanction it. The authorship of the books of Samuel must be regarded a matter of conjecture.

The precise date of the book cannot be fixed; but there are incidental allusions, especially in the early chapters, tending to prove that the narrative must have been written by a contemporary. The language and style also show the book to be of the golden age of Hebrew literature. There appear to be traces of different authors, who probably took up in succession the thread of history, each drawing it out as far as his own knowledge extended.

In the study of the books of Samuel, it is of great importance to read in connection the parallel history of Chronicles. Much additional light is thus thrown upon the narrative, and upon the sentiments of the Jewish people, and the tendency of Jewish thought and feeling at two different epochs.

Samuel, whose name this book bears, was one of the most prominent characters in Jewish history. He was a connecting link between two epochs and two forms of government. He was the last of the judges, and he was the founder of the monarchy. He was also the first of the great line of prophets whose writings embody the leading events in the history of the Jewish church, and whose predictions embody the leading doctrines of the Christian church. Peter makes emphatic mention of him in this latter character: 'All the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.' It is remarkable that of all the great men of Israelitish history Samuel is the only one whose genealogy is unknown. We cannot tell with certainty from what tribe he sprung. It is generally supposed he was a Levite, because he was attached to the sanctuary; but thoughtful examination shows that this is mere conjecsure, for his dedication originated in his mother's vow, and the ecclesiastical duties he subsequently discharged, he discharged as a prophet and not as a priest.—There is another circumstance worthy of note in the life of Samuel. It was he who instituted the system of regular institutions for religious training. They appear to have been established at the noted sanctuaries. There young men were instructed at first under his immediate superintendence (1 Sa. 10. 5, 10; 19. 20). His instructions were remarkably blessed and acknowledged of God. The spirit of prophecy often descended on the whole company of his disciples, and was even imparted, as in the case of Saul (1 Sa. 10. 11), to others who were brought into immediate connection with them. Gad, Nathan, and David were pupils of this first and greatest of prophetic teachers. The schools of Jewish law and literature, and the universities and colleges of Christendom, may be regarded as the natural developments of the schools founded by Samuel. P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 Elkanah a Levite, having two wives, worshippeth yearly at Shiloh. 4 He cherisheth Hannah, though barren, and provoked by Peninnah. 9 Hannah in grief prayeth for a child. 12 Eli at first rebuking her, afterwards blesseth her. 19 Hannah having born Samuel, stayeth at home till he is weaned. 24 She presenteth him to the LORD according to her vow.

NOW, there was a certain man of Ramathaim-zophim, of [a]mount Ephraim,[1] and his name was [b]Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph, an Ephrathite.

2 And he had [c]two wives; the name of the one was Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah: and Peninnah had children, but Hannah had no children.

3 And this man went up out of his city [d]yearly,[2] to worship and to sacrifice unto the LORD of [e]hosts [f]in Shiloh: and the two [g]sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, the priests of the LORD, were there.

4 ¶ And when the time was that Elkanah offered, he gave to Pininnah his wife, and to all her sons and her daughters, [h]portions.[4]

5 But unto Hannah he gave a worthy[5] portion; for he loved Hannah; but the LORD had shut up her womb.

6 And her [i]adversary also provoked her sore, for to make her fret, because the LORD had shut up her womb.

7 And as [k]he did so year by year,[6] when she went up[7] to the house of the LORD, so she provoked her; therefore she wept, and did not eat.

8 Then said Elkanah her husband to her, Hannah, [m]why weepest thou? and why eatest thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? am not I [n]better to thee than ten sons?

9 ¶ So Hannah rose up after they had eaten in Shiloh, and after they had drunk:[8] (now Eli the priest sat upon a seat by a post of [o]the temple of the LORD:)

10 And she was [p]in bitterness of soul,[9] and prayed unto the LORD, and wept sore.

11 And she [q]vowed a vow, and said, O LORD of hosts,[1] if thou wilt indeed look on the affliction of thine handmaid, and remember me, and not forget thine handmaid, but wilt give unto thine handmaid a man-child,[2] then I will give him unto the LORD all the days of his life, and [r]there shall no razor come upon his head.

12 And it came to pass, as she [s]continued praying[3] before the LORD, that Eli marked her mouth.

13 Now Hannah, she [t]spake in her heart; only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard: therefore Eli [u]thought she had been drunken.

14 And Eli said unto her, [v]How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy wine from thee.

15 And Hannah answered and said, [w]No, my lord; I am a woman of a sorrowful spirit:[4] I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have [x]poured out my soul before the LORD.

16 Count not thine handmaid [y]for a daughter of Belial: for [z]out of the abundance of my complaint[5] and grief have I spoken hitherto.

17 Then Eli answered and said, [a]Go in peace: and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of him.

18 And she said, [b]Let thine handmaid find grace in thy sight. So the woman went her way, and did eat, and her [c]countenance was no more sad.[6]

19 ¶ And they rose up in the morning [d]early, and worshipped before the LORD, and returned, and came to their house to Ramah: and El-

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. Ramathaim-zophim. This is the only place in Scripture in which the full name occurs. In other places it is written simply Ramah, of which Ramathaim appears to be the dual ('the two Ramahs'), and Zophim indicates that Zuph, one of Samuel's ancestors, had migrated from his home in Ephrata and settled in a district which was thence called 'the land of Zuph,' 1 Sa. 9. 5. The position of the city is one of the great difficulties of biblical geography. Some seven or eight different localities have been mentioned by different writers as its probable site. None of them appear to me to accord with all the statements of the sacred writers. From a careful comparison of these statements, I have been led to conclude that Ramah was situated a few miles to the west or south-west of Bethlehem; but the exact site is unknown. P.——An Ephrathite. Not that Elkanah was an Ephraimite, that is, of the tribe of Ephraim, but merely a dweller in one of the Levitical cities within the bounds of that tribe; for Elkanah was a Levite, and of the family of Kohath, 1 Ch. 6. 34; 33. 27, 28. C.]

Ver. 3. [Lord of hosts. The title here for the first time used appears to be an abbreviation of Jehovah God of Hosts. It is applied to the Lord as the supreme Ruler of the universe, who governs all the powers of heaven, visible and invisible, who rules the spheres, and exercises dominion over the earth and all that is therein. P.]

Ver. 9. [Temple of the Lord. From mention of the temple, some have supposed that this book was not written till after the time of Solomon. But as the temple is mentioned, Ps. 5. 7; 25. 4, in the time of David, no inference as to time can be drawn from the use of the word. C.]

Ver. 11. [And she vowed a vow. There was a twofold vow—1st. That the son she prayed for should be dedicated to the Lord, and should serve him all his life; 2d. That he should be a Nazarite, as is implied in the words 'there shall no razor come upon his head.' As a descendant of Levi his business was to serve the Lord; but by his maternal vow he was bound to a still closer and holier service. P.——Remember me, and not forget thine handmaid. These are not equivalent expressions, approaching tautology, but expressions in which the thoughts vary from each other with the delicacy with which the commingling colours in a painting vary, yet concur. She pleads, (1) Her affliction; (2) Entreats remembrance of her without any characteristic; (3) Prays not to be forgotten as an handmaid, a servant;—all just arguments of prayer, which she had a right to plead with God, to whom she looks in faith, through sacrifice.—I will give him unto the Lord all the days of his life. As a Kohathite, see ver. 1, he was devoted to the Lord from 25 to 50, but his mother devotes him from his birth, and all his days after 50. An emblem of true Christian education, in which a parent 'trains up a child in the way he should go;' and of believing perseverance, for, 'when such an one is old, he will not depart from it.' C.]

Ver. 16. [Belial is not a proper name; it signifies 'worthlessness.' 'A daughter of worthlessness' is equivalent to 'a worthless woman;' the quality being here, as is common in Hebrew idiom, personified. P.] kanah knew Hannah his wife; and the LORD remembered[g] her.

20 Wherefore it came to pass, when the time was come about,[6] after Hannah had conceived, that she bare a son,[7] and called his name Samuel,[8] saying, Because I have asked him of the LORD.[9]

21 And [h]the man Elkanah, and all his house, went up to offer unto the LORD the yearly sacrifice, and his vow.

22 But [i]Hannah went not up;[1] for she said unto her husband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will bring him, that he may appear before the LORD, and there abide[k] for ever.

23 And Elkanah her husband said unto her, Do what seemeth thee good; tarry until thou have weaned him: only the LORD [l]establish his word.[2] So the woman abode, and [m]gave her son suck, until she weaned him.

24 ¶ And when she had weaned him, she took[n] him up with her, with three bullocks,[3] and one ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine,[4] and brought him unto the house of the LORD in Shiloh:[5] and the child was young.

25 And they slew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli.

26 And she said, Oh my lord! [o]as thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the LORD.

27 For[p] this child I prayed; and the LORD hath given me my petition which I asked of him:

28 Therefore also I have [q]lent[7] him to the LORD; as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the LORD. And [r]he worshipped the LORD there.[8]

CHAPTER II.

1 Hannah's song in thankfulness to God. 12 The sin of Eli's sons. 18 Samuel's ministry. 20 By Eli's blessing Hannah is more fruitful. 22 Eli reproveth his sons. 27 A prophecy against Eli's house.

AND Hannah [a]prayed, and said, My heart rejoiceth in the LORD; [b]mine horn is exalted in the LORD; my [c]mouth is enlarged over mine enemies; because I [d]rejoice in thy salvation.

2 There[e] is none holy as the LORD:[1] for there is none besides thee: neither is there any rock like our God.

3 Talk[f] no more so exceeding proudly; let not arrogancy come out of your mouth: for the LORD is [g]a God of knowledge, and by him actions are weighed.

4 The [h]bows of the mighty men are broken, and they that stumbled are girded with strength.

5 They [i]that were full have hired out themselves for bread; and they that were hungry ceased: so that the [k]barren hath born seven; and [l]she that hath many children is waxed feeble.

6 The[m] LORD killeth, and maketh alive: [n]he bringeth down to the grave, and bringeth up.

7 The LORD [o]maketh poor, and maketh rich: he bringeth low, and lifteth up.[2]

8 He[p] raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory: for the [q]pillars of the earth are the LORD's, and he hath set the world upon them.[3]

9 He [r]will keep the feet of his saints, and the wicked shall be [s]silent in darkness;[4] for [t]by strength shall no man prevail.

10 The[u] adversaries of the LORD shall be broken to pieces; out of heaven shall he thunder upon them: the LORD [v]shall judge the ends of the earth; and he shall [w]give strength unto his king, and exalt the horn of his anointed.[5]

11 And Elkanah went to Ramah to his house; and the child did [x]minister unto the LORD before Eli the priest.

12 ¶ Now [y]the sons of Eli were sons of Belial; they knew not the LORD.[6]

13 And the priest's custom with the people was, that when any man offered sacrifice, the priest's servant came, while the flesh was in seething, with a flesh-hook of three teeth in his hand;

14 And he struck it into the pan, or kettle, or caldron, or pot; [z]all that the flesh-hook brought up the priest took for himself. So they did in Shiloh unto all the Israelites that came thither.

15 Also, before [a]they burnt the fat, the priest's servant came, and said to the man that sacrificed, Give flesh to roast for the priest; for he will not have sodden flesh of thee, but raw.

16 And if any man said unto him, Let them not fail to burn the fat presently,[7] and then take as much as thy soul desireth; then he trouble and vexation who dare transgress God's institution of marriage in order to obtain redoubled pleasures. Rarely do we behave aright under either remarkable prosperity or remarkable adversity: under the former, the heart swells with pride; under the latter, it sinks and rends with discontent and murmuring. The fretfulness of our temper often lays us open to continual uneasiness; and the unthankfulness of our heart doubles our affliction by overlooking our mercies. But sinful and hurtful is that grief which diverts us from our duty to God, and imbitters the comfort which we have in him. Our most deserved crosses are abundantly mixed with undeserved mercies; and religion and reason will afford us a cure. Distress ought to make us double our diligence in attending on the ordinances of God. Fervent prayers and solemn vows are often means of relief to broken spirits: yea, it is peculiarly becoming under sore trials, and amidst general apostasy and profaneness, to be punctual and earnest attenders on the ordinances of God. But base and devilish must that spirit be which can take pleasure to vex the distressed in mind, even when they are attending upon God's solemn worship. It is more becoming to balance others' abuse with our tender affection, and do all that we can to comfort those who are cast down. For peculiarly afflicting is it to perplexed souls to have the godly, and even ministers, misinterpreting their wrestlings with God as hypocrisy and wickedness. Yet, however distressing, injurious reproach should always be answered with the greatest candour and meekness. And men, convinced of their mistake, should turn their sinful censures into fervent prayers for the persons injured. Devotions towards God ought to be preferred to every convenience of our own. Early and earnest devotions are the best presages of happy days and successful undertakings, and nothing but works of necessity and mercy ought to detain us from the solemn worship of God. With the most distinguished expressions of gratitude ought we to commemorate the mercies which we have received in answer to our prayers. Children ought to be carefully trained up, not merely with an eye to the law of nature, DAN—WHERE JEROBOAM BUILT A TEMPLE AND ESTABLISHED THE WORSHIP OF THE GOLDEN CALF. [I. Samuel, iii:20]—"And all Israel, from Dan even to Beer-Sheba, knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord." This is the well known city which marks the northern frontier of Palestine. It was originally called Laish or Leshem. (Joshua, xix:47.) It is now called Tell el-Kadi. It is three miles from Cæsarea Philippi. This was once a very historic place. Here Jeroboam built a temple and established the worship of the golden calf. We have now nothing but a thicket of reeds, oaks and oleanders, which entirely hide the shapeless ruins, but are kept fresh and green by the waters of one of the sources of the Jordan. This is one of the most beautiful places for a city in Palestine. The region round about it is of unrivaled fertility, but the ancient city of Dan is without a single inhabitant. Thus the prophecy uttered concerning it is fulfilled to the letter.

would answer him, Nay; but thou shalt give it me now: and if not, I will take it by force.[8]

17 Wherefore the sin of the young men was very[d] great before the LORD:[9] for men abhorred the offering of the LORD.

18 ¶ But Samuel [e]ministered before the LORD, being a child, girded with a linen ephod.

19 Moreover, his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him [f]from year to year, when she came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice.

20 ¶ And Eli [g]blessed Elkanah and his wife, and said, The LORD give thee seed of this woman for the loan[1] which is lent to the LORD. And they went unto their own home.

21 And the LORD [h]visited Hannah, so that she conceived, and [i]bare three sons and two daughters. And the child Samuel [k]grew before the LORD.[2]

22 ¶ Now Eli [l]was very old, and heard all that his sons [m]did unto all Israel; and how they lay with the women that [n]assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

23 And he said unto them, [o]Why do ye such things? for I hear of your evil dealings[3] by[p] all this people.

24 Nay, my sons: for it is [q]no good report that I hear: ye make the LORD'S people to[4] transgress.[5]

25 If [r]one man sin against another, the judge shall judge him: but [s]if a man sin against the LORD, who shall entreat for him? Notwithstanding they [t]hearkened not unto the voice of their father, because[6] the LORD would slay them.

26 And the child Samuel [u]grew on, and was in favour both with the LORD, and also with men.[7]

27 ¶ And there came [z]a man of God unto Eli,[8] and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Did[y] I plainly appear unto the house of thy father, when they were in Egypt in Pharaoh's house?

28 And [a]did I choose him out of all the tribes of Israel to be my priest, to offer upon mine altar, to burn incense, to wear an ephod before me? and [b]did I give unto the house of thy father all the offerings made by fire of the children of Israel?

29 Wherefore [c]kick ye at my sacrifice,[9] and at mine offering, which I have commanded [d]in my habitation; and [e]honourest thy sons above me,[1] to make yourselves fat with the chiefest of all the offerings of Israel my people?

30 Wherefore the LORD God of Israel saith, [f]I said indeed, that thy house, and the house of thy father,[2] should walk before me for ever: but now the LORD saith, [g]Be it far from [3]me; for [h]them that honour me I will honour, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed.

31 Behold, the days come, that I [i]will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thine house.

32 And thou shalt see [k]an enemy[4] in my habitation in all the wealth which God shall give Israel: and there shall not be an old man in thine house for ever.

33 And the man of thine, whom I shall not cut off from mine altar, shall be to consume thine eyes, and to grieve thine heart: and all the increase of thine house shall die in the flower of their age.[5]

34 And this shall be [l]a sign unto thee, that shall come upon thy two sons, on Hophni and Phinehas; in one day they shall die both of them.

35 And [m]I will raise me up a faithful priest, that shall do according to that which is in mine heart and in my mind: and I will [n]build him a sure house; and he shall walk before mine Anointed for ever.

36 And it shall come to pass, that every one that [o]is left in thine house shall come and crouch to him for a piece of silver, and a morsel of bread,[6] and shall say, Put[7] me, I pray thee, into one of the priest's offices,[8] that I may eat a piece of bread.

6 Just as a man discovers his own appearance better by looking into a mirror than by examining himself; so men are frequently led to self-examination and repentance rather by the afflictions that come through their families, than by any spontaneous movement of their own minds. The history of Eli is written not as a record of an obscure though public man, but as a warning to all fathers, especially to those in office, to chasten their children while there is hope.—C.

as they are ours, but chiefly with an eye to the promise of grace, as they are given to God. And with great care and expedition ought we to perform our vows, particularly in the solemn surrender of our children to God.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 3. By him actions are weighed. The idea of actions being weighed, as in the balance of God, is one well calculated to lead us to examine ourselves. Whether we will hear, or whether we will forbear, God will weigh.—Note, How needful then to pray, God be merciful to us sinners! How blessed our refuge in the 'blood that cleanseth from all sin!' C.]

Ver. 35. [These words are prophetical. They have reference to Eli's successors, Samuel and Zadok: but this reference is only primary. Of neither of them could it be said, 'He shall walk before mine Anointed for ever.' They embrace the whole line of the priesthood, as types; and are perfectly fulfilled in the person and work of the Messiah. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—We owe to God the most exalted praises upon receipt of his favours. Yea, pleasant and valuable mercies should always lead to an affecting contemplation of the excellences which are in God himself. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he often shows them things to come. Nothing is returned with such certainty and interest as that which is lent to the Lord: and early activity in God's service is a hopeful presage of an eminently useful life. But dreadful and threatening is the appearance when those who fill the highest offices in church or state become absolute monsters in impiety, lust, and rapacity. It is criminal to administer to such only a soft rebuke; and their contempt of reproof is an awful prelude of near and certain destruction. God permits such contemners to proceed in their wickedness till they have ripened themselves for ruin. Parents' indulgence of their children in sin may occasion fearful distresses to their family and nation; and the most tremendous judgments appear marked out for those who disregard even the mildest reproofs of their parents. The more remarkable the favours which have been abused, the more tremendous the judgments which may be expected; and sharers in sin shall share in correspondent punishment. But God's work and cause will never fall to the ground for want of hands to carry it on. Though ministers' wickedness may destroy themselves, it cannot destroy the ministry. The church is founded on a Rock, which the gates of hell cannot prevail against. Jesus, the faithful priest on his throne, is her principal governor, who can turn out her wicked officers, and fill their room with such as will be faithful unto death.

LORD was precious[1] in those days; there was no [a]open vision.

2 And it came to pass at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, and [b]his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see;

3 And [c]ere the lamp of God went out[2] in the temple of the LORD, where the ark of God was, and Samuel was laid down to sleep;

4 That the LORD [d]called Samuel: and he answered, Here am I.

5 And he ran unto Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou calledst me. And he said, I called not; lie down again. And he went and lay down.

6 And the LORD called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose, and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again.

7 Now[3] Samuel did not yet know the LORD,[3] neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him.

8 And the LORD [h]called Samuel again the third time. And he arose, and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child.[4]

9 Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down; and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, 'Speak, LORD; for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

10 And the LORD came, and stood, and called, as at other times, Samuel, Samuel! Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth.

11 ¶ And the LORD said to Samuel, Behold, I[k] will do a thing in Israel, [l]at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle.

12 In that day [m]I will perform against Eli all things which I have spoken concerning his house: when I begin,[5] I will also make an end.

13 For[n] I have told him,[6] that I will judge his house for ever, for the iniquity which he knoweth: because his sons made themselves vile,[7] and he [o]restrained them not.[8]

14 And therefore I have sworn unto the house of [p]Eli, [r]that the iniquity of Eli's house shall not be purged[t] with sacrifice nor offering for ever.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 13. His sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not. The charge against Eli is his knowledge of his sons' misconduct, and neglect of restraint. He gave excellent advice, see ch. 2. 23, but it wanted determination and energy. He had allowed his sons to outgrow his authority, and now he pleads with them in vain. C.]

Ver. 17. [God do so to thee, and more also, if thou hide anything. Eli anticipated evil, he remembered the man of God, ch. 2. 27, his conscience smote him, his sons grieved him, he cannot expect good for them as he knows no good of them, and he is anxious to hear the worst. Therefore he says, 'God do so,' &c.; that is, let God inflict all the judgments, and more, upon you than he has threatened against me, if you do not tell me the truth.—Note, This was not an imprecation, but a legal form of appeal to God; for, be it remembered, the same words may be a blasphemy or a prayer according to place, circumstances, and person who utters them. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the case of a church when her fellowship with God is interrupted: but great the mercy, that God raises up new instruments in his church to carry on his work when others have proved unfaithful. Early piety is often honoured with special intimacy with God; when God passes by his aged saints, who have offended him, and perfects praise out of the mouths of babes and sucklings. But it becomes aged ministers to be well satisfied with the Lord's carrying on his work, even at the expense of dishonouring themselves; and to be ready to assist those whose rising glory may eclipse their own. It is an unspeakable mercy when God repeats his calls to men till he renders them effectual: and promising is the appearance when such extraordinary revelations animate men to the very lowest offices in religion, instead of rendering them proud; especially when humble modesty and exact fidelity meet together. Ministers must often begin their work with fearful denunciations of God's wrath against sinners. Yea, how terribly God judges even the sins of his own people, and of their families! He renders their condition base, tormenting, and in appearance desperate; and the most abundant measure of grace is requisite to render one resigned to such a stroke; yet resignation is the proper and only way to lighten the burden. But frequently he renews his visits to those who had been early seekers of him; and such as improve one gracious visit shall not be long without a second. Yea, the most abundant care shall be taken to honour his faithful servants, and to verify their words in the salvation or destruction of mankind.

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—Lesser judgments only exasperate hardened sinners against the Lord, instead of making them search their ways and return to him; while those who are most destitute of the power of godliness glory in, and trust to, their external forms and privileges.—Sinners are often perfectly secure when their destruction comes upon them

TEMPLE OF THE ARK, SHILOH—WHERE THE ARK RESTED FROM JOSHUA TO SAMUEL. [1. Samuel, iv:4.]—"So the people sent to Shiloh, that they might bring from thence the ark of the covenant of the Lord of hosts, which dwelleth between the cherubim; and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there with the ark of the covenant of God." Shiloh is called the place of rest. In Judges, xxi:19, it is said that Shiloh is "on the north side of Bethel, on the east side of the highway that goeth up from Bethel to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah." So the traveler now going north from Jerusalem stops the first night just a little way south of Shiloh. Shiloh was one of the most sacred of the Hebrew sanctuaries. The ark of the covenant was kept at Shiloh from the last days of Joshua to the time of Samuel. The ungodly conduct of the sons of Eli occasioned the loss of the ark of the covenant which had been carried into battle against the Philistines.

between[i] the cherubims:[5] and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there [k]with the ark of the covenant of God.

5 And when the ark of the covenant of the LORD came into the camp, [l]all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again.

6 And when the Philistines heard the noise of the shout, they said, What meaneth the noise of this great shout in the camp of the Hebrews? And[m] they understood that the ark of the LORD was come into the camp.

7 And the Philistines [n]were afraid; for they said, God is come into the camp.[6] And they said, Wo unto us! for there hath not been such a thing heretofore.[7]

8 Wo unto us! who shall deliver us out of the hand of these mighty Gods? these are the Gods that [o]smote the Egyptians with all the plagues[8] in the wilderness.[9]

9 Be strong, and quit yourselves like men,[1] O ye Philistines! that ye be not servants unto the Hebrews, [p]as they have been to you: quit[2] yourselves like men, and fight.

10 ¶ And the Philistines fought, and Israel was smitten, and they fled [q]every man into his tent: and there [r]was a very great slaughter; for there fell of Israel thirty thousand footmen.

11 And [s]the ark of God was taken; and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were slain.[3]

12 ¶ And there ran a man of Benjamin out of the army, and came to Shiloh the same day with[t] his clothes rent, and with earth upon his head.[4]

13 And when he came, lo, Eli [u]sat upon a seat by the way-side watching: for his heart trembled for the ark of God. And when the man came into the city and told it, all the city cried out.

14 And when Eli heard the noise of the crying, he said, What meaneth the noise of this tumult? And the man came in hastily, and told Eli.

15 Now Eli [v]was ninety and eight years old; and his eyes were dim,[5] that he could not see.

16 And the man said unto Eli, I am he that came out of the army, and I fled to-day out of the army. And he said, What is there [6]done, my son?

17 And the messenger answered and said, [y]Israel is fled before the Philistines; and there hath been also a great slaughter among the people; and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead; and the ark of God is taken.

18 And it came to pass, [z]when he made mention of the ark of God,[7] that he fell from off the seat backward, by [a]the side of the gate, and his [b]neck brake, and he died; for he was an old man, and heavy: and he had judged Israel forty years.

19 ¶ And his daughter-in-law, Phinehas' wife, was with child, near to be delivered:[8] and when she heard the tidings that the ark of God was taken, and that her father-in-law and her husband were dead, she bowed herself and travailed; for her pains came[9] upon her.

20 And about the time of her death the women that stood by her said unto her, [c]Fear not; for thou hast born a son. But she answered not, [d]neither did she regard it.

21 And she named the child [e]I-chabod, saying, [f]The glory is departed from Israel: (because the ark of God was taken, and because of her father-in-law, and her husband.)

22 And [g]she said, The glory is departed from Israel; for the ark of God is taken.

CHAPTER V.

1 The Philistines having brought the ark into Ashdod, set it in the house of Dagon. 3 Dagon is cast down and cut in pieces, and they of Ashdod smitten with emerods. 8 The ark being carried to Gath, the men of Gath are smitten with the like plague; 10 and also the men of Ekron, when it is brought thither.

AND the Philistines [a]took the ark of God, and brought it from [b]Eben-ezer unto [c]Ashdod.

2 When the Philistines took the ark of God, they brought it[1] into the house of [d]Dagon, and set it by Dagon.[1]

3 ¶ And when they of Ashdod arose [2]early on the morrow, behold, [e]Dagon was fallen upon his face to the earth before the ark of the LORD.

His piety, however, seems predominant, for he bears the whole catalogue of national and family calamities till the capture of the ark is mentioned—his heart can bear no more—he falls fainting, and dies; a monumental warning to parents, church rulers, and governors, and a melancholy illustration of the fact, that one practical imperfection of temper, or management, may neutralize or destroy the effect of many excellences. — C.

2 The frequency with which early rising is mentioned in Scripture is well worthy of remark. The custom arose partly from the heat of the climate, which requested morning and evening the most comfortable time for travel, labour, or religious exercises. Even the worshippers of Dagon rose early,—an example, an admonition, and, alas! often a rebuke to Christians, whose Sabbath mornings are indolently wasted in 'a little more slumber;' who can rise early to serve the world, but who sleep when they should serve their God! — C.

as a whirlwind. And a good cause may fearfully suffer for the wickedness of those who espouse it. But, very justly, the first and sorest judgments light on the heads of wicked and unfaithful ministers: and quickly they who refused to shed the tears of godly sorrow, are made to shriek under the strokes of judgment. How near the heart of exercised saints do the ark and church of God lie! Yet God pursues his offending servants to the very brink of eternity with awful frowns and fearful strokes; and if they will be unfaithful, they must die without comfort. Pregnant women have need to be in readiness for death; for in an hour which they think not, the Son of man may require their soul. But how great is the misery of a nation when the ordinances and presence of God, which are the glory thereof, are taken from it! Draw near, ye careless, ye indulgent parents, and tremble; behold in what ruin to your family and nation your conduct may issue!

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 1. Ashdod stood on a low rounded hill in the midst of a fertile plain a few miles from the shore of the Mediterranean, and about halfway between Joppa and Gaza. On the top of the hill was the temple of Dagon, then one of the most celebrated shrines in Philistia. The royal city is now represented by a small village of mud hovels. P.]

Ver. 3. [The name Dagon is derived from dag, 'a fish.' The name occurs in the Babylonian mythology, and is applied to a fabled 'fish-god,' who is said to have risen from the waters of the Red Sea, and to have become a benefactor of mankind. His image is represented as having the head and trunk of a man and the lower part of a fish. Dagon was the national god of the Philistines, and had temples at Gaza and Ashdod. The latter after standing for a long period was destroyed by Jonathan Maccabaeus. P.]

Ver. 5. [Nor any that come into Dagon's house tread on the threshold of Dagon. An acknowledged proof of the power of Jehovah, but which the Philistines, blinded by their idolatry, regard not as supreme and omnipotent, but only as a little, and perhaps for a little time, superior to that of Dagon. Nay, such is the subtlety of Satan (for the heathen sacrificed to devils), 1 Co. 10. 20, that he turns the disgrace to a new source of idolatry, and teaches them to reverence, to worship, the very threshold where their idol lay prostrate and broken. — Note, Do not the idolaters of riches, ambition, and pleasures still imitate the foolish Philistines, and worship their idols still, even when convinced of their unsatisfying vanity? C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The interest of religion sometimes sinks very low; but God will in due time, and often when it is least expected, make it to triumph. No power of devils or men can withstand him, or even prevent their own ruin. It is very dangerous to profane his holy things. If men will not glorify God by due reverence, he will glorify himself in taking just judgment, and such as contend with him shall be infallibly ruined at last. Men indeed are often more eager to get rid of God's judgments than to get rid of their sins which procured them: and when they smart under his stroke, they are solicitous to have God put from them, rather than to enter into friendly connec-

And they took Dagon, and set him in his place again.

4 And when they arose early on the morrow morning, behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the ark of the LORD; and [f]the head of Dagon, and both the palms of his hands, were cut off upon the threshold; only the stump of Dagon[2] was left to him.[3]

5 Therefore neither the priests of Dagon, nor any that come into Dagon's house, [g]tread on the threshold[4] of Dagon in Ashdod unto this day.

6 ¶ But the [h]hand of the LORD was heavy upon them of Ashdod, and he destroyed them, and [i]smote them with emerods,[5] even Ashdod, and the coasts thereof.

7 And when the men of Ashdod [k]saw that it was so, they said, The ark of the God of Israel shall not abide with us: for his hand is sore upon us, and [l]upon Dagon our god.

8 They sent therefore and gathered all the lords of the Philistines unto them, and said, What[m] shall we do with the ark of the God of Israel? And they answered, Let the ark of the God of Israel be carried about unto [n]Gath. And they carried the ark of the God of Israel about thither.

9 And it was so, that, after they had carried it about, the [o]hand of the LORD was against the city with a very great destruction: and he smote the men of the city, both small and great,[6] and they had emerods in their [p]secret parts.

10 ¶ Therefore they sent the ark of God to Ekron.[q] And it came to pass, as the ark of God came to Ekron, that the Ekronites cried out, saying, They have brought about the ark of the God of Israel to us,[7] to slay us and our people.

11 So they sent and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines, and said, Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it go again to his own place, that it slay us not, and our people: for there was a [r]deadly destruction throughout all the city; the hand of God was very heavy there.

12 And the men that [s]died not were smitten with the emerods;[8] and [t]the cry of the city went up to heaven.

4 To prostrate one's self on the threshold of a temple was an act of the profoundest reverence: and therefore when Dagon fell before the ark of God, it was as if the worshipped the God of Israel. Maurice, speaking of the destruction of the idol in the temple of Suchnut, says that fragments of it were sent to the mosques of Mecca, &c., to be thrown down at the threshold of their gates and trampled upon by devout Mahometans. The Philistines, however, now looked upon the threshold of Dagon's temple as peculiarly sacred by the touch of their god, and out of reverence forbore to tread on such 'holy ground.'—P.

CHAPTER VI.

1 After seven months the Philistines take counsel how to send back the ark. 10 They bring it on a new cart with an offering unto Beth-shemesh. 19 The people are smitten for looking into the ark. 21 They send to the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim to fetch it.

AND the[a] ark of the LORD was in the country of the Philistines seven months.

2 And the Philistines called for [b]the priests and the diviners,[1] saying, What shall we do to the ark of the LORD? tell us wherewith we shall send it to his place.

3 And they said, If ye send away the ark of the God of Israel, [c]send it not empty; but in any wise return[2] him a [d]trespass-offering:[3] then ye shall be healed, and it [e]shall be known to you why his hand is not removed from you.[4]

4 Then said they, What shall be the trespass-offering which we shall return to him? They answered, Five golden emerods, and five golden mice, according to the number of the lords of the Philistines: for [f]one plague was on you[5] all, and on your lords.

5 Wherefore ye shall make images of your emerods, and images of your [g]mice that mar the land; and ye shall [h]give glory unto the God of Israel: peradventure he will lighten his hand from off you, and from [i]off your gods, and from off your land.

6 Wherefore then do ye [k]harden your hearts, as the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? when he had wrought [l]wonderfully among them, did they not let the people[7] go, and they departed?

7 Now therefore make a [l]new cart, and take two milch kine,[8] on which there hath come no yoke, and tie the kine to the cart, and bring their calves home from them:

8 And take the ark of the LORD, and lay it upon the cart; and put the [m]jewels of gold, which ye return him for a trespass-offering, in a coffer by the side thereof; and send it away, that it may go.

9 And see, if it goeth up by the way of his own coast to [n]Beth-shemesh, then he[9] hath done us this great evil: but if not, then we shall know that it is not his hand that smote us; it was a chance[1] that happened to us.

tions with him. But such as tempt God shall find every essay more and more imbittered by his curse and heavy hand upon them. And what has been gotten by fraud or sacrilege must be thrown back again before the sinner feel quietness within him.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 4. Five golden emerods, and five golden mice. Such votive offerings have been, and still are, common both in heathen countries and amongst superstitious Christians. If it did not previously exist, here is the origin of the custom; and, at all events, this is the earliest historic notice of a practice that flatters human vanity, and indulges will-worship, while it affects to honour God.—Note, Almost all the superstitions that have disfigured and degraded Christianity may be clearly traced to their origin in heathenism. C.]

Ver. 5. [The invasion of mice still continues to be a plague in several countries. In search of food, or under some unknown impulse, they descend from mountains, and issue from forests, in such myriads as to occupy the whole country, to destroy the hoards of grain, and lay the land as waste as if overrun by the most hostile army. C.]

Ver. 16. [Ekron (now Akir) stands on the southern slope of a low ridge which separates the plain of Philistia from Sharon. Immediately to the south of the site, at the foot of the slope, is a broad wady, or depression in the plain, which runs away up eastward to the hills of Judah, gradually contracting and deepening until it becomes a sublime ravine, cutting deeply into the mountain chain. Near the opening of the ravine into the plain, on a broad terrace on its southern bank, are the ruins of Bethshemesh. The route of the ark I was able to trace with ease upon the spot. The kine went down the gentle slope from Ekron, then up the vale towards the mountains, and came at length to a stand in the valley below Bethshemesh. The distance from Ekron is about 10 miles. P.]

Ver. 19. [Smote of the people fifty thousand and three-score and ten men. How so many persons could be collected into a small village appears so strange as to be considered impossible. Hence every effort of commentators has been made to reduce the number, and so reconcile it with probability. Josephus estimates the people smitten at merely 70. The Syriac and Arabic translations at 5070. Others propose to insert a letter, and thereby reduce the number to 50 out of 1000. These efforts, however, are vain, against the almost universal authority of MSS. and translations. But after all, are not the difficulties totally artificial, the fault not of the text, but the work of the commentators themselves? Let the text, as it will justly bear, be translated and pointed thus:—'And he smote the men milch-kine, and tied them to the cart, and shut up their calves at home:

11 And they laid the ark of the LORD upon the cart, and the coffer with the mice of gold and the images of their emerods.

12 And the kine took the straight way to the way of [o]Beth-shemesh, and went[2] along the highway,[3] lowing as they went, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left;[4] and the lords of the Philistines went after them unto the border of Beth-shemesh.

13 And they of Beth-shemesh were reaping their wheat harvest in the valley: [p]and they lifted up their eyes and saw the ark, and rejoiced to see it.

14 And the cart came into the field of Joshua, a Beth-shemite, and stood[5] there, where there was a great stone: and they clave the wood of the cart, and [q]offered the kine a burnt-offering unto the LORD.[6]

15 And the [r]Levites took down[7] the ark of the LORD, and the coffer that was with it, wherein the jewels of gold were, and put them on the great stone: and the men of Beth-shemesh offered burnt-offerings and sacrificed sacrifices the same day unto the LORD.

16 And when the five lords of the Philistines had seen it, they returned to Ekron the same day.

17 And these are the golden emerods which the Philistines returned for a trespass-offering unto the LORD; for Ashdod one, for Gaza one, for Askelon one, for Gath one, for Ekron one;

18 And the golden mice, according to the number of all the cities of the Philistines belonging to the five lords, both of fenced cities and of country villages, even unto the [s]great stone of Abel, whereon they set down the ark of the LORD: which stone remaineth unto this day in the field of Joshua the Beth-shemite.

4 The circumstance of the two kine, which had never before been in the yoke, drawing quietly and keeping the road without a driver, for several miles, neither stopping nor turning aside, and while lowing for their calves, nevertheless urged forward by a stronger impulse to the very place mentioned by the Philistines, and there stopping, is in all respects an astonishing miracle. —J.

6 The city and district was the property of the Levites who thus offered an extemporaneous sacrifice to Jehovah. The propriety of the sacrifice in this place is more than questionable. 20 And the men of Beth-shemesh said, [u]Who is able to stand before this holy LORD God? and to whom shall he go up from us?

21 ¶ And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of [x]Kirjath-jearim, saying, The Philistines have brought again the ark of the LORD; come ye down, and fetch it up to you.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The men of Kirjath-jearim bring the ark into the house of Abinadab, and sanctify Eleazar his son to keep it. 2 After twenty years 3 the Israelites, by Samuel's means, solemnly repent at Mizpeh. 9 While Samuel prayeth and sacrificeth, the Lord discomfiteth the Philistines by thunder at Ebenezer. 13 The Philistines are subdued. 15 Samuel peaceably and religiously judgeth Israel.

AND the men [a]of Kirjath-jearim came and fetched up the ark of the LORD, and brought it into the house of Abinadab in the hill, and sanctified Eleazar[1] his son to keep the ark of the LORD.

2 And it came to pass, while the ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, that the time was [b]long; for it was twenty years: and all the house of Israel [c]lamented after the LORD.[2] of Bethshemesh, because they had looked into the ark; and he smote of the people 50,070 men: and the people lamented because the LORD had smitten of the people with a great slaughter.' Now the text says, God 'smote the men of Bethshemesh, because they had looked into the ark,' but does not state how many. Then the text adds, that 'he smote of the people,' that is, not of the Bethshemites in particular, but of the Israelites generally (Bethshemites inclusive), 50,070 men, but does not state during what space of time the judgment continued. Now, what can be more natural than that, when the news of the return of the ark to Bethshemesh would be noised abroad, there should be a vast concourse of the people, day after day, to hear and to see. Would it not be considered an act of patriotism and religion combined, to go on a pilgrimage to visit the recovered centre of their holy services? Where then is the difficulty of comprehending how, in a few days, and for aught that is said it may have taken weeks or months, not merely 50,070, but five times 50,070, may have visited Bethshemesh? Then it is not said 50,070 died, but only that so many of the people were smitten, most probably by the Philistine epidemic and emerods. And when it is added, that 'the people lamented, because the Lord had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter,' it is not said how many of those who were smitten by the disease actually died in the slaughter, but only that it was great. And now, should any insist that the whole 50,070 must have died, and granting this to have actually been the case, let it only be remembered that these are not asserted to have been Bethshemites, but of the people, while the time of the judgment is not specified; and if 50,070 did perish in the epidemic contracted at Bethshemesh, and carried from Dan to Beersheba by the pilgrim visitants, the experience of all ages can exemplify greater ravages, although men may not have seen or acknowledged in them, as the sacred writers did, the immediate finger of God. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—To be deprived of God's ordinances, though it be only for a time, is very alarming; yet much more so to have them made a plague to us. By holding fast their sins men only prolong their sorrows. God can easily make the stoutest of his enemies to bow down to him, and even cause them to become, to his honour, lasting memorials of their own shame. But it is much happier to be warned by other men's experience than by our own. And when we have repented of our sins, we may hope for a removal of our miseries. Wicked men would fain shift their convictions, and ascribe their sufferings to any cause rather than to the hand of God. And God often patiently suffers himself to be tempted and put to the trial; but the issue shall tend to his own glory; and the very means which men had taken to confirm themselves in infidelity shall turn out to their more unanswerable conviction of the truth. He alone can deliver his church and restore his ordinances when all others lie by unconcerned. And with great joy and thanksgiving, even to the interruption of the most urgent earthly concerns, ought his returns and revivals of religion to be welcomed. But what fear and reverence are due to him, and his ordinances, in the meetings of his saints! He is a holy Lord God! and it is dangerous to indulge a vain curiosity in our concerns with him; and infinitely destructive to come near to behold the broken law, but as fulfilled in Christ. How miserable is that nation in which no common care is taken about the ordinances of Christ: but one place yields them to another, and forfeits those blessings which God has connected with them! Let us learn properly to value the privileges which God graciously bestows; and so to improve them that they may not become a curse but a blessing to us.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 2. The meaning is not that the whole period of the residence of the ark at Kirjath-jearim was only 20 years. It was much more; for it continued there during the whole reign of Saul, and part of the reign of David, 2 Sa. vi. It is here affirmed that 20 years of deep anxiety, in consequence of the Lord's withdrawal from Israel, passed. During these long and painful years there was no manifestation of divine power on their behalf; but at the close of that period Samuel exhorted the people to put away the strange gods; they hearkened, and gained a signal victory over their enemies. P.]

KURYET-EL-ANAB—THE PLACE TO WHICH THE ARK WAS BROUGHT FROM BETH-SHEMESH. [I. Samuel, vii:2.]—"And it came to pass, while the ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, that the time was long; for it was twenty years; and all the house of Israel lamented after the Lord." The name "Kirjath-jearim" signifies "the city of forests." In the book of Joshua the place is twice mentioned as a border city. It lay upon the ancient frontier of Judah and Benjamin. This place is on the road to Ramleh, about nine miles from Jerusalem, and not far from Gibeon. Here the people brought the ark from Beth-shemesh. The position of this place, according to Ritter, the highest authority on Palestine, corresponding as closely as it does with the Old Testament accounts, makes the identity of Kuryet-el-Anab and the ancient Kirjath-jearim in the highest degree probable, and at the same time we are enabled to learn where ran the former boundary between the territories of Judah and Benjamin.

6 And they gathered together to Mizpeh, and [a]drew water, and poured it out before the LORD, and [b]fasted on that day, and said there, We[1] have sinned against the LORD. And Samuel [m]judged the children of Israel in Mizpeh.[4]

7 ¶ And when the Philistines [n]heard that the children of Israel were gathered together to Mizpeh, the lords of the Philistines went up against Israel: and when the children of Israel heard it, they were [o]afraid of the Philistines.

8 And the children of Israel said to Samuel, Cease[p] not to cry[5] unto the LORD our God for us, that he will save us out of the hand of the Philistines.

9 ¶ And Samuel [q]took a sucking lamb, and offered it for a burnt-offering wholly unto the LORD: and [r]Samuel cried unto the LORD for Israel; and the LORD heard[6] him.

10 And as Samuel was offering up the burnt-offering, the Philistines drew near to battle against Israel: but the LORD [s]thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines, and discomfited them; and they were smitten before Israel.

11 And the men of Israel went out of Mizpeh, and pursued the Philistines, and smote them, until they came under Beth-car.

12 Then Samuel [t]took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it [u]Eben-ezer,[7] saying, [x]Hitherto hath the LORD helped us.[8]

13 ¶ So the Philistines were subdued, and they came no more into the coast of Israel: and the hand of the LORD was against the Philistines[9] all the days of Samuel.[1]

14 And the cities which the Philistines had taken from Israel were restored to Israel, from Ekron[y] even unto Gath; and the coasts thereof did Israel deliver out of the hands of the Philistines. And [z]there was peace between Israel and the Amorites.[2]

15 ¶ And Samuel [a]judged Israel all the days of his life.

16 And he [b]went from year to year in circuit[3] to [c]Beth-el, and Gilgal, and Mizpeh, and judged Israel in all those places.

17 And his return was to [d]Ramah; for there was his house: and there he judged Israel; and [e]there he built an altar unto the LORD.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 By occasion of the ill government of Samuel's sons, the Israelites ask a king. 6 Samuel praying in grief, is comforted by God: 10 he telleth the manner of a king. 19 God directeth Samuel to yield unto the importunity of the people.

AND it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he [a]made his sons judges over Israel.

2 Now the name of his first-born was [b]Joel, and the name of his second Abiah: they were judges in [c]Beer-sheba.[1]

3 And[d] his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment.

4 Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto [e]Ramah,

5 And said unto him, [f]Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now [g]make us a king to judge us, like all the nations.

6 ¶ But the thing [h]displeased[2] Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel [i]prayed unto the LORD.[3]

7 And the LORD said unto Samuel, [k]Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for [l]they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them.

Ver. 4. [Served the Lord only. Samuel announces the very principle enforced by our Lord, Mat. 6. 24, 'no man can serve two masters;' and therefore requires, both as a test of sincerity and a means of reformation, the utter putting away of the idols Baalim and Ashtaroth; and a return to the sole worship of JEHOVAH. —Note, The same obstruction stands in the way of revival with Christians that stood in the way of Israel; Baalim—lordly passions, such as pride, ambition, false honour; Ashtaroth—fleshly affections, such as gluttony, drunkenness, licentiousness; all these must be cast out of the heart where the Spirit of God resides, 2 Co. 7. 1. C.]

Ver. 6. [Drew water, and poured it out before the Lord. According to some, shed tears, and poured out, that is, their hearts, in penitential sorrow, 'before the Lord;' others consider the pouring out of the water emblematic of penitence; but as there was no ceremonial law appointed for such drawing and outpouring of water, we are slow to admit an act of will-worship where a Levitical rite will account for what is done. Is it not, therefore, to be considered as the extempore adoption of the laver, an essential preparative for the sacrifice that Samuel was about to offer? comp. Ex. 30. 17–21 with 1 Sa. 7. 9. C.]

Ver. 8. [Cry unto the Lord our God for us. Observe here the spiritual use of temporal calamities. The service of God is forsaken for Baalim and Ashtaroth, till the oppression of the Philistines compels them to cry to JEHOVAH. C.]

Ver. 9. [Samuel took a sucking lamb and offered it for a burnt-offering. Samuel, as appears from ch. 1. 1, was not a priest, though a Levite; he could not therefore legally perform an act of sacrifice, nor is it necessary to suppose he did so in his own person; for according to the language of Scripture, see Le. 2. 1–14; 3. 1, 3, 7, 9, 12, he offers a sacrifice who furnishes it to the priest, which is all that Samuel, as a well-instructed Levite and prophet, would do. C.]

Ver. 17. [There he built an altar unto the Lord. Not as a second or rival to Shiloh, for that would have been illegal; but Shiloh having been deserted since the capture of the ark, Samuel, in virtue of his prophetic office, reinstitutes the tabernacle service at Ramah. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God's ordinances will still find a place somewhere; and if priests neglect them, pious Levites or Israelites will take care of them. The church may continue long in a wilderness state; but when men begin to lament after a hiding God and departed ordinances, their deliverance is nigh. If we wish remarkable interposals of Providence for our relief, we must put away our idols, and apply ourselves to solemn repentance, fasting, and supplication. God saves men from their sins, not in them. But it is a great mercy to have a noted favourite of Heaven with us on critical occasions. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. And a minister's other labours, without earnest prayers, seldom avail to the reformation of the world or the edification of souls. The first struggles for glory are often the hardest. Scarcely can men begin to repent, but hell and earth will be in arms against them. But the prayer of faith, fixed on Jesus' atoning sacrifice, will make things easier than could have been expected. Whatsoever we ask, believing, we shall receive; and when God arises, his enemies must be scattered. But let us remember that noted answers of prayer deserve memorials of gratitude: and while we gratefully acknowledge past help, we may depend on future protection. When a man's ways please the Lord, he makes his enemies to be at peace with him. Prayer and penitence can do more for a nation than the mightiest armies. And every blessing may be expected in that land where magistrates or ministers unite remarkable diligence, equity, and faithfulness, with exemplary holiness and ardent devotions.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 3. Took bribes, and perverted judgment. Samuel, educated under the over-mild régime of Eli, seems to have fallen into Eli's error in the management of his sons; and though their crimes were not identical with those of Hophni and Phinehas, which arose from sensuality, and were therefore more debasing to the man, yet the crimes of Joel and Abiah, arising from unprincipled covetousness, were equally degrading to the judges.—Note, The determined honesty with which the Scriptures relate these blots in the family of Samuel, affords another of the many similar evidences of the divine origin of the Scriptures. Nothing could have been more easy than the suppression of this statement; and had the subject been in the hands of a mere secular historian, the world had never heard of the guilt of his hero's sons. But the Scriptures have have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even unto this day, wherewith they have forsaken me, and served other gods, so do they also unto thee.

9 Now therefore hearken[4] unto their voice: nowbeit yet protest solemnly[5] unto them,[6] and show them the [n]manner of the king that shall reign over them.

10 ¶ And Samuel told all the words of the LORD unto the people that asked of him a king.

11 And he said, This will be the manner of the king[7] that shall reign over you: [o]He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots.

12 And he will appoint him captains over thousands and captains over fifties, and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots.

13 And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers.

14 And he [p]will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants.

15 And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers,[8] and to his servants.

16 And he will take your men-servants, and your maid-servants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work.

17 He will take the tenth of your sheep; and ye shall be his servants.

18 And ye shall [q]cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the LORD will not hear you in that day.

19 ¶ Nevertheless [r]the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel: and they said, Nay; but we will have a king over us;

20 That [s]we also may be like all the nations; and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles.

21 And Samuel heard all the words of the people, and he [t]rehearsed them in the ears of the LORD.

22 And the LORD said to Samuel, [u]Hearken unto their voice, and make them a king. And Samuel said unto the men of Israel, Go ye every man unto his city.[9]

6 Why grant the desire of the people, and yet protest against its propriety? Is there not contradiction or even duplicity in this procedure? Infidels have so asserted, yet is there neither. The protest is both a warning and a prophecy; the warning was despised; the prophecy to the letter fulfilled. The grant was what occurs every day in providence—a fulfilment of wishes employed to punish unreasonable petitioners.—C

7 The description of the despotism to which an unthankful and godless people submitted, is well worthy of attention, as an accurate picture of human nature mistaking experiment for principle, and change for improvement. This description contains eight particulars, viz. (1) Military conscription, compelling men to war. (2) Agricultural and mechanical conscriptions for the king's demesne lands. (3) Domestic slavery enforced upon the Israelites. (4) Violent appropriation of lands to civil or military servants. (5) A tenth part rent upon all agricultural produce. (6) Conscription for public works. (7) A Tenth part rent of the sheep, which probably, according to a common mode of Scripture expression, stands for all clean animals. (8) Unlimited vassalage. C—Very different indeed were the exactions to be enforced by many of their kings, from the rules of kingly conduct that had been prescribed by Moses, De.17.15–20. This is not a statement of the legitimate rights of monarchs, but an account no less graphic than correct of the arbitrary and tyrannical manner of eastern despots.—I.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Saul despairing to find his father's asses, 6 by the counsel of his servant, 11 and direction of young maidens, 15 according to God's revelation, 18 cometh to Samuel. 19 Samuel entertaineth Saul at the feast. 25 Samuel, after a private conversation, bringeth him on his way.

NOW there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was [a]Kish, the son of Abiel, the son of Zeror, the son of Bechorath, the son of Aphiah, a Benjamite,[1] a mighty man of [2]power.

2 And he had a son, whose name was Saul, [b]a choice young man, and a goodly; and there was not among the children of Israel a goodlier person than he: from his shoulders and upward he was higher than any of the people.

3 And the [c]asses of Kish, Saul's father, were lost: and Kish said to Saul his son, Take now one of the servants with thee, and arise, go seek the asses.

4 And he passed [3]through [d]mount Ephraim, and passed through the land of [e]Shalisha, but they found them not: then they passed through the land of [f]Shalim,[4] and there they were not; and he passed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not.

5 And when they were come to the [g]land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return; lest my father leave caring for the asses, and take thought for us.[5]

6 And he said unto him, Behold now, there is in this city [h]a man of God, and he is an [i]honourable man; [k]all that he saith cometh surely to pass: now let us go thither; peradventure he can show us our way that we should go.

7 Then said Saul to his servant, But, behold, if we go, [l]what shall we bring the man?[6] for the bread is spent[7] in our vessels, and there is not a present to bring to the man of God: what have we?[8]

8 And the servant answered Saul again, and said, Behold, I have here at hand[9] the fourth part of a shekel of silver;[1] that will I give to the man of God, to tell us our way.[2]

no heroes; they have no narrative but truth, the whole truth; and no end but the glory of God. C.]

Ver. 7. [They have rejected me, that I should not reign over them. Neither God nor Samuel his prophet found any fault with the people for seeking a king, that being provided for in the divine law, De. 17. 14–20. The displeasure of both arose, (1) From the total want of piety in not consulting God by his high-priest or prophet. (2) From the sight of the people's folly in seeking to model their government on the plan of the wicked and idolatrous nations around them. (3) From the virtual rejection of God, both as judge and king. See ver. 19, 20. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—We had need to be busy in our proper work while we are able; old age will quickly indispose us for it. Neither the piety of parents nor the best education can render a person gracious. All men transmit corruption to their posterity; no man his virtues or graces. Many children, awed by their parents' inspection, conceal the vices which afterwards appear when the restraint is taken off. Yea, many, after promising beginnings, turn out a disgrace to their parents and a plague to their country. The love of money is a prolific root of evil, a most dangerous plague to the soul, and renders the public administrations of church and state a public nuisance and pest. It is a common thing for people to be harmonious in casting off the government of God, discovering the vilest ingratitude to his faithful servants, and studying conformity to the world: but abusive vexation from men should drive us to our prayers for ourselves and for them. God will grant us direction and comfort when others contemn and abuse us. To punish men for their sin, God often grants them what they wish: and things good in themselves become a curse when they are obtained in a wrong way. But rejection of God, when we are at ease, assuredly issues in his rejection of us when we are in trouble. However great a curse unsanctified relations may be, most men are set on obtaining them. And no reproofs or warnings will restrain the obstinate sinner; but the kindest advice is frequently misrepresented, as selfish and designing.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 12. There is a sacrifice of the people to-day in the high place. Why the ark was permitted to remain in Kirjath-jearim does not appear; and that Shiloh had ceased to be the place of sacrifice is historically evident, though the fact is not recorded. The city where Samuel now was seems from ver. 6 to have been his ordinary residence, and that was Ramah, where, as God's prophet, he had localized the national worship. C.]

9 (Beforetime in Israel, when a man went to [m]inquire of God, thus he spake, Come, and let us go to the seer: for he that is now called a Prophet, was beforetime called [n]a Seer.)[2]

10 Then said Saul to his servant, [o]Well said,[3] come, let us go. So they went unto the city where the man of God was.

11 ¶ And as they went up the hill[4] to the city, they found young maidens [p]going out to draw water, and said unto them, Is the seer here?

12 And they answered them, and said, He is; behold, he is before you: make haste now, for he came to-day to the city; for there is a sacrifice[q] of the people to-day in the high place.

13 As soon as ye be come into the city, ye shall straightway find him, before he go up to the high place to eat: for the people will not eat until he come, because he doth [r]bless the sacrifice; and afterwards they eat that be bidden. Now therefore get you up; for about this time[5] ye shall find him.

14 And they went up into the city: and when they were come into the city, behold, Samuel came out against them, for to go up to the high place.[6]

15 ¶ Now[s] the LORD had [t]told Samuel in his ear [u]a day before Saul came, saying,

16 To-morrow about this time I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel, that he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines; for [x]I have looked upon my people, because their cry is come unto me.

17 And when Samuel saw Saul, [y]the LORD said unto him, Behold the man whom I spake to thee of! this same shall [z]reign over my people.

18 Then Saul drew near to Samuel in the gate, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, where the seer's house is.[7]

19 And Samuel answered Saul, and said, I am the seer: go up before me unto the high place; for ye shall eat with me to-day, and to-morrow I will let thee go, and will tell thee all that is in thine heart.

6 The object of this simple narrative is to exhibit the great purposes of Providence as dependent upon little things. Some straying animals, a vain search, an ignorant opinion of a people's duties, the casual meeting of a few water drawers, all combine to bring Saul to Samuel; where a direct revelation from God secures him, when Providence had so mysteriously led.—C.

7 In addition to the object mentioned in the note on ver. 14, another intention of the narrative may have been to demonstrate to the dissatisfied party, that the choice of Saul was from God, and not from any previous knowledge and favouritism on the part of Samuel. This may have been the more necessary, as there were many discontented, probably because disappointed, ch. 11. 12. 27.—C.

2 The shoulder was a distinguished part of some sacrifices, as Ex. 29.27; it is also frequently mentioned in Scripture as an emblem of power, as Is. 9.6; also in relation to slavery and deliverance, Ge. 49. 15. Is. 10. 27. These emblems of power and deliverance may have been in the eye of the prophet in the choice of food for his guest. "That which was upon it," some interpreters think it some appropriate sauce; is it not rather a cover for its protection from flies during the time it was kept?—C.

3 The Hebrew is literally as follows:—"And the cook set up the shoulder and what was on it (perhaps part of the fat not used for sacrifice), and placed it before Saul, and said, Behold what was reserved for thee! place it before thee; eat, for on purpose it has been kept for thee, saying for, since I said, I have called the people.' The speaker must, according to the rules of grammar, be the cook. Samuel is innocent arbitrarily. P.

20 And as for thine asses that were lost three days ago,[8] set not thy mind on them; for they are found.[9] And [e]on whom is all the desire of Israel? is it not on thee, and on all thy father's house?

21 And Saul answered and said, Am not I a [b]Benjamite, of the smallest of the tribes of Israel? and my family the least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? wherefore then speakest thou so[1] to me?

22 And Samuel took Saul and his servant, and brought them into the parlour, and [c]made them sit in the chiefest place among them that were bidden, which were about thirty persons.

And Samuel said, Behold that which is [f]left! set it before thee, and eat; for unto this time hath it been kept for thee since I said, I have invited the people.[3] So Saul did eat with Samuel that day.

25 ¶ And when they were come down from the high place into the city, Samuel communed with Saul [g]upon the top of the house.

26 And they arose early: and it came to pass about the spring of the day, that Samuel called Saul to the top of the house,[4] saying, Up, that I may send thee away. And [h]Saul arose, and they went out both of them, he and Samuel, abroad.

27 And as they were going down to the end of the city, Samuel said to Saul, Bid the servant pass on before us, (and he passed on,) but stand thou still a while,[5] that I may show[6] thee the word of God.

heart, they are like to have portly figures, but little piety or sense. If men have much of this world, they may lay their account with frequent losses. Persons may be affectionate children, and yet destitute of grace. How sadly many mistake the ministerial office and work, and look on the messengers of God as but cunning diviners that need to be hired; and are more solicitous about outward trifles than about their eternal salvation! But it is shameful when handmaids know more of Christ and his ministers than the sons of the great; and when men, like beasts, feast on their daily provision, and attend the ordinances of God, without first asking his blessing thereon! With what deep designs are the most fortuitous circumstances ordered by God; and the most trivial beginnings issue in the most important events! Humility is the most direct road to distinguished honour. And whom God honours we must respect for his sake; never envying those whom he is pleased to advance, though we ourselves should be eclipsed by them.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 2. When thou art departed from me to-day. Were the office of king, as in the times of the peace and prosperity of a nation, an office of honour and ease, we might wonder at the pains taken by Samuel to convince Saul that he was divinely appointed. But such were the times, that as Moses was reluctant to undertake the deliverance out of Egypt, so was Saul reluctant to attempt a contest with the Philistines. Hence the necessity of such evidence of a divine call as would quite remove his scruples and encourage him in his office. C.——Rachel's sepulchre is still well known, and a place of pilgrimage for Jews, Christians, and Mohammedans. It is covered by a small white cupola. It is on the side of the road leading from Bethlehem to Jerusalem, about a mile from the former. Westward of the sepulchre, about half a mile distant, is the village of Beit Jala, which may probably be identical with the Zelzah here mentioned. As Saul was on his way homeward to Gibeah, Ramah of Samuel, from which he set out, must have been somewhere to the south or south-west of Rachel's sepulchre. P.] then thou shalt find two men by [a]Rachel's sepulchre, in the border of Benjamin, at Zelzah; and they will say unto thee, The asses which thou wentest to seek are found: and, lo, thy father hath left the care[1] of the asses, and sorroweth for you, saying, What shall I do for my son?[2]

3 Then shalt thou go on forward from thence, and thou shalt come to the plain of Tabor,[3] and there shall meet thee three men going up [f]to God to Beth-el,[4] one[g] carrying three kids, and another carrying three loaves of bread, and another carrying a bottle of wine:

4 And they [h]will salute thee, and give thee two loaves of bread; which thou shalt receive of their hands.

5 After that thou shalt come to the [i]hill of God, where is the garrison of the Philistines: and it shall come to pass, when thou art come thither to the city, that thou shalt meet a [k]company of prophets coming down from the high place [l]with a psaltery and a tabret, and a pipe, and a harp, before them; and they shall prophesy:

6 And the [m]Spirit of the LORD will come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into [n]another man.[5]
