Nile, a celebrated river of Egypt, which flows from south to north. The great problem of its source has not yet been conclusively settled. The great lake Nyanza in Africa near the equator is supposed to be its main source. It begins to swell at the middle of June, attains its greatest height in September, and subsides to its usual level about the end of October, and, on the northern part of Egypt, it spreads about 20 miles on each side. When the waters subside the inhabitants sow their seed, which settles into the mud, and without further trouble produces a rich crop. The marginal reading of Ge. 10. 11 is to be preferred. It is said to have been 60 miles in circumference, and in the time of Jonah, its population, reckoning children the fifth part, must have been 600,000. It outstripped even Babylon itself in its dimensions. Diodorus Siculus affirms that its walls were 60 miles in compass, 100 feet in height, and so thick that three chariots abreast could be driven along their top; and they were defended by 1500 towers, each 200 feet high. In the year 600 before Christ, it was completely destroyed by fire; and soon after the time of Christ not a trace of it could be found. Jonah preaches there, Jonah 3. 3;—spared on repentance, 10, 11; threatened with destruction, Na. 1. 1; iii. The last notice of it in Scripture is in Zep. 2. 13–15, about 630 B.C. It was for a long time well nigh forgotten. Shapeless mounds opposite Mosul were all that tradition could point to as remaining of it. By recent excavations on the site, commenced in 1842 by M. Botta, French consul at Mosul, and in 1845 by Layard and others, many remarkable sculptured monuments have been discovered, which, from their structure and inscriptions, illustrate certain notable features of that ancient city, and confirm notices of it in the histories of ancient authors.

In Na. 3. 8 it is called 'populous No,' in the Heb. No-Amon, i.e. No of Amon, meaning the place, or possessions, or chief seat of the Egyptian god Amon. It originally stood on both sides of the river Nile, about 300 miles from its mouth. In the time of its splendour it extended on both sides as far as the mountains; it had 100 gates; and on an emergency could send into the field by each of these gates 20,000 fighting men and 200 chariots. About 81 B.C., after a siege of three years, it was finally destroyed by Ptolemy X. Extensive ruins still mark its site. 'It is impossible to wander among these scenes and behold these heavy yet magnificent ruins without emotions of astonishment and deep solemnity. Many of these afford happy illustrations of Egyptian history.' Robinson.

Year, is either solar, or lunar, or civil. The solar year is measured by the apparent motion of the sun through the twelve signs of the zodiac, and consists of 365 days, 5 hours, and 48 minutes. The lunar is measured by twelve lunations, or revolutions of the moon from change to change, and is eleven days less than the solar, consisting of 354 days, 8 hours, and 48 minutes. And the civil is that which, for convenience, computes by whole days; and among us consists of 365 days, and every fourth year of 366. Among the Hebrews the year was partly lunar and wandering, and partly solar and fixed. It consisted ordinarily of twelve, and occasionally of thirteen synodical months, alternately of twenty-nine and thirty days each, so that two months included two moons, and the one of these years 354 days, and the other no less than 383 days. As the former of these falls eleven days short of the true or solar year, they were compelled, in order to keep their festivals at the proper season, to add a whole month to the year as often as it was needful, commonly once in three, and sometimes once in two years. This intercalary month was added at the end of the year, after the month Adar, and was therefore called Veadar, or a second Adar. The year was also distinguished into the civil, and the sacred or ecclesiastical year. The civil year commenced on the fifteenth of our September, because it was an old tradition that the world was created at that season; and by it they computed their jubilees, and dated all contracts, the birth of children, and the reign of kings. The months of this year, consisting alternately of twenty-nine and thirty days, are exhibited in the following table, with the corresponding months of our years:—

Year, the sacred or ecclesiastical, began in March, or the first day of the month Nisan, because at that time they departed out of Egypt, Ex. 12. 2; Re. 23. 5;— by this year they computed their festivals, and the prophets also occasionally dated their oracles and visions, Zec. 7. 1. GARDENS OF DAMASCUS. [Genesis, ii:8-14.]—"And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed." The Garden of Eden was located, it is supposed by some, in the northeast of Arabia, at the junction of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers. Its real position, however, is in doubt. The picture, "Gardens of Damascus," is given here because Damascus comes nearer illustrating for us what an Eastern garden is, than any other city of which we know; and from the mountain we see here rising from the gardens of Damascus, an observer can see the mountains on the borders of the Eastern desert toward the confines of Mesopotamia, where the original Garden of Eden is supposed by some to have been situated. The gardens of Damascus are little enclosed plantations which encompass the city and extend for several miles into the plain.

CHAPTER I.

1 The creation of heaven and earth, 3 of the light, 6 of the firmament, 9 of the earth separated from the waters, 11 and made fruitful, 14 of the sun, moon, and stars, 20 of fish and fowl, 24 of beasts and cattle, 26 of man in the image of God. 29 Also the appointment of food.

IN the beginning [a]God created the heaven and the earth.

2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep; and the [b]Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3 ¶ And God said, [c]Let there be light: and there was light.

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.[1]

5 And God called the light Day,[2] and the darkness he called Night.[3] And the evening[4] and the morning[5] were the first day.[6]

6 ¶ And God said, [d]Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

7 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament:[7] and it was so.

8 And God called the firmament [8]Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.[9]

9 ¶ And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto [e]one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

10 And God called the dry land Earth;[1] and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas:[2] and God saw that it was good.

11 And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit-tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind:[3] and God saw that it was good.

13 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1. That is, in the beginning of time, God created the elements out of which all things in heaven and earth were formed. According to the teachings of chemistry there are about seventy different kinds of atoms which are the elements God used as material to build the universe. He. 11. 3, 'Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear;' Ps. 102. 25, 'Of old thou hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands;' 2 Pe. 3. 5; Je. 10. 12; 51. 15; Ex. 31. 17; 20. 11; Ps. 33. 6, 9; 89. 11, 12; 146. 6; 148. 1–6; Is. 44. 24; Zec. 12. 1; Ac. 14. 15; 17. 24; 4. 24; Is. 42. 5; Re. 4. 11; 10. 6; 14. 7; Ro. 1. 19, 20; 11. 36. The word ELOHIM, here rendered God, is plural, and denotes the WORSHIPFUL ONES, the Divine Persons, who equally concurred in the creation of all things. 1 Co. 8. 6, 'The Father, of whom are all things;' Mat. 11. 25, 'He is Lord of heaven and earth;' Ep. 3. 9, 'God created all things by Jesus Christ;' Jn. 1. 1–3, 'In the beginning was the Word (the Son), and the Word was with God, and the Word was God: all things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made;' Col. 1. 16; Pr. 8. 27–30; Job 26. 13, 'By his spirit he garnished the heavens;' Ps. 33. 6, 'All the host of them were made by the spirit of his mouth;' 104. 30.—[This verse is the introduction to the whole Bible. It is the introduction to history, for it marks the boundary between time and eternity. It cannot be, as has been generally supposed, a mere summary of what follows—a mere heading to the chapter; for it mentions the 'heaven' first, whereas in the following verses 'the earth' is first spoken of. This of itself is sufficient to show that ver. 1 refers to a prior act of God—an event anterior to those described in the subsequent part of the chapter. The terms 'heaven and earth' may mean the universe of mind and matter. Then heaven would include the celestial spheres with angels and spirits, and the earth would include all the animals which the researches of geology have brought to light, entombed in the various strata. The 'heaven and the earth,' whose creation is thus simply announced, embraced the whole pre-adamic universe. The fact of its creation at some undefined past age is recorded; and then it is indicated that from some cause the earth having been reduced to chaos, God put forth anew creative power, and prepared it for a new race of animals, and for the noblest of all—man. P.]

Ver. 2. Earth, deep, and waters, signify the same mingled mass of earth and water. 2 Pe. 3. 5, 'The earth standing out of the water, and in the water.'—It was without form, without any agreeable shape, order, or ornament: and void, without either vegetables to furnish it, or animals to inhabit it. And the Spirit of God in His almighty power proceeding from the Father as the source of all and through the Son as the Mediator moved upon this mingled mass, to prepare it for the intended separation of earth and water, and for the production of vegetables and animals. — [Philosophy can explain the observed laws of motion both on earth and in the heavens; but never can account for its origin. Moses, divinely instructed, ascribes it directly to the Spirit of God. From him originates also every spiritual movement of the soul in returning to God and entering his kingdom. Jn. 3. 5. C.——And the earth was, or had become, waste and desolate. Its physical features were reduced to utter confusion: its elements were in complete disorder—chaos reigned entirely. Darkness was upon the face of the deep. This implies that there was some dense mist or cloud hovering over the earth's surface, so as totally to exclude light from without. The introduction of light, and the succession of day and night, prove that at the very commencement of what is usually called the creative week the sun existed, and the diurnal motion of the earth on its axis was in operation. P.]

Ver. 3. 2 Co. 4. 6, 'God commanded the light to shine out of darkness.' It, as well as all things else, was produced by Christ, who is God's personal Word, Jn. 1. 3; his wisdom and power, 1 Co. 1. 24. God created all things through Jesus Christ. The Son is not only the Mediator of Redemption, but also of Creation, Administration, and Consummation. He is the Alpha and the Omega.

Ver. 4. God divided the light from the darkness, by making them to take different places by turns; the light always shining upon the one half of the mingled mass, and the darkness covering the other; in much the same manner as our sun by turns illuminates the one half of the globe and leaves the other in darkness.

Ver. 5. The time of the first revolution of the dark-

14 ¶ And God said, Let there be [g]lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide the day from the night;[4] and let them be for signs,[5] and for seasons, and for days, and years:

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God made two great[6] lights; the greater light to rule the day,[7] and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth,

18 And to [h]rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

20 ¶ And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving[8] creature that hath life,[9] and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.[1]

21 And God created[2] great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

22 And God [i]blessed[3] them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

25 And God made the beast of the earth after

[1] Heb. face of the firmament of heaven.
[2] Here the word created is used for the first time since the creation of the first matter. All that had been done in the interval was a re-arrangement of matter; now life is introduced, and it requires not simply creative, but creative power. The three expressions, great whales, every living creature that moveth, and every winged fowl are introduced so as to embrace all forms of animal life in air and water.—P.

ness and of the light were the first day; for both the light and the darkness existed together at the same time, but on different parts of the mingled mass.

Ver. 6. This firmament includes the region of the sun, moon, stars, and comets: and the air or atmosphere which surrounds our earth, and separates between the water which is in the clouds and that which is in the seas and rivers. Ps. 33. 6, 9, 'By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. He spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast;' Job 37. 18, 'He spread out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking-glass;' Job 26. 13; Ps. 136. 5; Je. 10. 12; 51. 15; Zec. 12. 1; Je. 10. 13, 'There is a multitude of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the earth;' Job 26. 8, 'He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds, and the cloud is not rent under them;' 38. 22 26, 'Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, and of the hail, which I have reserved? Who hath divided a water-course for the overflowing of waters, to cause it to rain upon the earth?' Job 37. 11; Ec. 11. 3; Ps. 148. 4.—[The firmament, or more literally 'the expanse,' is the atmosphere. At first the body of water on the earth's surface seems to have been in contact with another form of water like a dense mist, hovering over the earth. By the atmosphere, and the light acting upon it, the mist was absorbed, and raised in the form of clouds high above the earth. The Hebrew word translated 'above' in ver. 7 signifies 'upon,' as a sustaining power, thus describing with scientific precision the action of the atmosphere in supporting the water. P.]

Ver. 7. [The use of the word 'made' in this and other parts of the narrative must be carefully noted. It must not be confounded with 'created.' 'In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.' He called the universe into existence; but all his subsequent work upon inanimate matter was a work of rearrangement, which is expressed by the word made, or some such phrase as 'let there be.' P.]

Ver. 9. Job 38. 8–11, 'Who shut up the sea with doors, when I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling-band for it, and brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors, and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further?' 26. 10, 'He compassed the sea with bounds;' Ps. 24. 1, 2, 'The earth he founded upon the seas, and established it upon the floods;' 136. 6, 'He stretched out the earth above the waters;' Ps. 104. 5–9; 33. 7; 2 Pe. 3. 5; Je. 5. 22; Pr. 8. 29. But the whole globe of earth and sea was hung upon nothing, Job 26. 7. The approbation of the second day's work was deferred till the separation of the waters was completed; and we have it, ver. 10. —[Let the waters gather themselves. No direct force of living agency is employed upon the waters; but such an arrangement of the earth's surface is implied as would bring the waters together by the law of gravitation. Some portions of the earth's crust were depressed, some upheaved. The sacred writer takes no notice of this. He has nothing to do with geology. But the Psalmist appears to indicate the way in which the waters were made to gather themselves. See Ps. 104. 7–10. P.]

Ver. 10. [The term earth is employed in a restricted sense here. It signifies 'land,' as contradistinguished from 'sea;' whereas in ver. 1 it signifies 'world,' as contradistinguished from 'heavens.' P.]

Ver. 11. Ps. 104. 14, 15, 'He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man; that he may bring forth food out of the earth, wine, and oil, and bread;' Job 28. 5. The purpose of the writer of Genesis was not to give a scientific description of the order of Creation, but it was to make it clear that God was the author of all things. Moses saw that God and not chance was the creator of all.

Ver. 14. According to verse 14 God appointed the sun to be the great light in the firmament and the moon to reflect that light. The sun is in itself a very extensive body of light; and the moon, though it hath no light in itself, enlightens our earth by reflecting the light of the sun; and both are called great lights, since by reason of their nearness they appear to us much larger than any of the stars. These lights not only form the day and night, but also form or mark out the seasons of sowing, planting, reaping, sailing, travelling, or the like; and are for signs of the weather, and sometimes of remarkable phenomena. Ps. 136. 7–9, 'God made great lights—the sun to rule by day, and the moon and stars to rule by night;' 74. 16, 17, 'The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun. Thou hast made summer and winter;' 104. 19, 20, 'He appointed the moon for seasons; the sun knoweth his going down. Thou makest darkness, and it is night;' De. 4. 19, 'The sun, moon, and stars, even all the host of heaven, God hath divided unto all nations,' for use; Job 38. 12; Ps. 8. 3, 4; 148. 3, 5; 119. 91; Je. 31. 35; 33. 25; Mat. 16. 2, 3, 'When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather, for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day, for the sky is red and lowering;' Lu. 21. 25, 26, 'There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth;' Mat. 24. 29; Is. 13. 10; Eze. 32. 7; Joel 2. 10–31; 3. 15; Ac. 2. 19, 20; Jos. 10. 13.

Ver. 16. [The specific object of the two great lights is mentioned, that of the stars is not. The former had an important bearing upon the earth as the abode of man; the latter had not, and consequently the writer simply mentions them to show that they are the work of God. In the 17th and 18th verses allusion is made mainly, if not exclusively, to the sun and moon. They are the rulers of the day and of the night—regulating their length, the amount of their light or darkness, and the intensity of their heat or cold. P.]

Ver. 20. [The Hebrew words may be more intelligibly translated, 'Let the waters swarm with swarms of living creatures.' There is no allusion to any productive power in the waters. God was the producing cause; the waters were merely the place in which that cause operated. The next clause ought to be rendered, 'And let fowl fly above the earth,' &c. The original does not signify that the fowls were produced in the water. P.]

Ver. 21–25. Ac. 17. 25, 'He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;' Ps. 104. 24–26, 'The earth is full of his riches,' minerals, vegetables, animals. 'So is this great sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts. There is that leviathan,' whales, crocodiles, and other sea monsters; Ps. 50. 10, 11, 'Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine,' by creation; Job 40. 15. God's blessing gave the animals a power to propagate their kinds. Ps. 107. 38, 'He blesseth them, so that they are multiplied greatly,' Job 43. 12; Ps. 144. 13, 14.

Ver. 26. The plural is not here used for the singular in the manner of some modern kings. There is not in Scripture one instance of a sovereign's speaking of himself only in the plural number, we, us, our. But the plural us here denotes a consultation of the divine Persons concerning the production of that species of creatures which was to be the most perfect under heaven, and in which the glory of God was to be for ever most illustriously manifested in his work of redemption.—The image of God on man includes, (1) The resemblance of his soul, in respect of spiritual substance, understanding, and will. (2) The happiness of his state, and his honourable dominion over the creatures. (3) And chiefly the moral conformity of his soul to God, in spiritual knowledge, righteousness, and holiness. Ec. 12. 1, 'Remember thy Creators,' Heb., i.e. Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, 'in the days of thy youth;' Job 35. 10, 'Where is God my Makers?' Heb.; Is. 54. 5, 'Thy Makers, the Lord of hosts;' 1 Jn. 5. 7; Ec. 7. 29, 'God made man upright;' Col. 3. 10, 'Renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him;' Ep. 4. 24, 'The new man after God is created in righteousness and true holiness;' 2 Co. 3. 18 with Ex. 15. 11; Ge. 5. 1; 9. 6: Ps. 8. 4–8, 'Man—thou hast made a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet; all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field, the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea; and whatsoever creeping thing passeth through the paths of the seas;' Ge. 2. 19, 20; 9. 2; Job 5. 23; Je. 27. 6.—[The order of creation was from the lowest forms of vegetable and animal life upwards. Man, as the highest of all, was made last. But man's creation is distinguished in another way. It was not merely accomplished by a divine thought—it was also the subject of a divine council; 'Let us make man.' As in the divine name Elohim, so in this form of expression there seems to be distinct indication of plurality in the Godhead. And yet the whole structure of the sentence shows that there is unity joined with plurality; for in ver. 27 it is said, 'So (as had been decreed in the divine council) God created man in his own image.' It will be observed that the word 'created' is here again used. We can scarcely suppose that the two words 'image' and 'likeness' are synonymous. It seems probable that the former was intended to express man's likeness to God intellectually and physically; he was in his knowledge and commanding aspect God's representative, his image upon earth. The other word most probably refers to man's moral nature, in which he also resembled God. P.] his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind:[4] and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶ And God said, [1]Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

27 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him: [k]male and female created he them.

28 And God blessed them; and God said unto them, [l]Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth[5] upon the earth.

29 ¶ And God said,[6] Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed,[7] which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; [m]to you it shall be for meat.

30 And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life,[8] I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

31 And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

4 Vegetables and animals are arranged each after his kind, and referred to no higher denomination. But when MAN is to be formed, we read, in ver. 26, "Let us make man in our image. So God created man in his own image." Now what is this image? The apostle tells us, He.1. 3, "The Son is the express image of the Father's person." He is further described, 1 Ti. 3. 16, as "God manifest in the flesh." Being thus ever seen in the eternal purpose, Ep.1.4-9, he constitutes the glorious original after which man is formed, in the image of God in man, knowledge, righteousness, and holiness are the principal features, Ep. 4. 24; Col. 3. 10; but every other attribute of God, even eternity, Job 10. 28, in limited measure, is exhibited in man.—C.

Ver. 28. Pr. 10. 22, 'The blessing of the Lord maketh rich,' i.e. numerous and happy; Ps. 128. 1–4, 'Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord—thou shalt eat the labour of thine hand—thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine, thy children like olive plants round about thy table,' many, healthful, comely, and prosperous; 1 Ch. 26. 4–8. Obed-edom had a large and happy family, for God blessed him. And 1 Ch. 4. 10; Job 42. 12; Ps. 107. 38; Ge. 1. 22; 8. 17.—[The second blessing, adding to the former (ver. 22), conquest over the earth, and universal dominion over the living creatures. C.]

Ver. 29. Ac. 17. 25, 28, 'He giveth all things. In him we live, and move, and have our being;' Ps. 104. 14, 15, 'He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man, that he may bring food out of the earth—wine, and oil, and bread;' Ps. 145. 15, 16, 'The eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their meat in due season;' 147. 9, 'He giveth to the beast his food;' Pr. 30. 8; Ps. 111. 5; Mat. 6. 11, 25, 26; Ac. 14. 17; Is. 33. 16. But it doth not appear that either men or animals would have eaten flesh during the state of innocency.

Ver. 30. [There is a difference between the food assigned to man and that given to the lower animals. The former had the higher classes of vegetable products—the cereal grain and fruits; the latter had 'every green herb.' There is no mention of animal food having been permitted. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Stand still, my soul, and consider this wonderful work of God! O how his eternal power and Godhead shine forth in forming so vast, so well furnished worlds of creatures, rational and irrational, animate and inanimate! What infinite wisdom appears marked in the vast variety, the comely order, and the mutual subserviency of all things to the good of one another, and to his glory! What goodness, in forming such multitudes of beings to partake of his bounty as their all in all! and especially towards man, in forming him after his own image, and in so preparing this lower world to be a commodious lodging for him in his way to the mansions of light! Let me, then, in all things—in heaven, in earth, in air, in sea, and in land—in grass, in herbs, in trees, in sun, in moon, in stars, in fishes, in fowls, in cattle, and creeping things—in angels and in man—behold the excellences of my God! Let me enjoy God himself in all things, and all things in God! Let me use them all as his property, his product, and for his glory and honour! And notwithstanding my nothingness, confusion, darkness, and deadness, let me hope that my all-creating God—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—will fashion me, as an abridged world, into a monument of redeeming mercy, to the praise of the glory of his grace! Am I a Christian philosopher? Let me, as I have access, contemplate the creatures of God, in their almost infinitely diversified natures, qualities, and uses! Light and celestial luminaries, in their mysterious nature, extensive range, prodigious but duly proportioned distance, rapid motions, and powerful influences—Air, fixed and unfixed, inflammable and uninflammable, in its fluidity, weight, elasticity, and usefulness for forming of wind, promoting of animal life, transmission of light, and the like—Water, in its fluidity, plenteousness, dispersion, saltness or freshness, penetration, and fitness for forming rains, dews, sea-productions: and for promoting trade and intercourse between nations—Earths, stones, metals, moulds, in their adhesion, ductility, forms, colours, and uses—Vegetables, in their structure, growth, curious parts, almost infinitely diversified forms, colours, and uses—Animals, in their curious parts, connected structure, mysterious life, and dependence on food; their motions in limits, fitness for procreation and self-preservation, beautiful forms, melodious, awful, or plaintive sounds, exquisite and diversified smell and taste: and, along with these, the unlimited divisibility of matter, the laws of air, attraction, gravitation, electricity, magnetism, of muscular motion, and of nervous influences—Rational spirits, in their powers of thinking, willing, recollection, sociality, and union with bodies—as proofs of the existence and manifestations of the mysterious nature and manifold perfections of God, my God in Christ, of whom, through whom, and to whom, are all things. Let me always consider his creatures as memorials of his creating, preserving, and ruling powers, and as means of delightfully and awfully impressing my heart with his presence, observation, and influence! Let me rejoice to view all creatures as formed and fitted for subserving and promoting God's great and principal work of our redemption through Christ, and multitudes of them as instituted emblems of his persons, perfections, relations, and operations, as manifested in it! Let me, by faith, appropriate a particular new covenant-right to and property in them all, in and through Christ as my head and husband, as means of my present and pledges of my future and everlasting enjoyment of God as my ALL IN ALL: as means of exciting and leading me habitually to think on, admire, adore, and live to his glory, while I remain here in his lower sanctuary on earth; and to be always mild and humble, as brother and sister to, and dependent on, the meanest animal, insect, or atom in it!

CHAPTER II. Ver. 2. [This signifies that God ceased from his work during the seventh day, having completed it in six days. The whole of the seventh day was a rest, as is stated in the second clause of the verse. P.]

Ver. 3. [Blessed. This is the third recorded blessing, see ch. 1. 22, 28; and when applied to the Sabbath-day, endows it with the gift of peculiar fruitfulness and multiplication of good. The honour or dishonour of the Sabbath has ever been the means and the evidence of a fruitful or barren, a growing or a withering, church. —Seventh. Here commences that remarkable reference to the number SEVEN, that will be found to continue to the end of the Scriptures. Six days of blessed work, closed by a seventh of sanctified rest, is the original week of creation, and well represents every form of perfection exhibited in the subsequent working of God. —Sanctified. This sanctification includes the separation of the day from common uses, and the dedication of it to the service of God. C.]

Ver. 4. [This is the commencement of a new section, and also, as it appears, of a new narrative, to a large extent complete in itself. It is a narrative of creation from a human point of view; whereas the first section of the book contains a narrative of creation from a divine point of view. The first narrative embraces the universe, giving a full account of the origin of the vegetable and animal world. The second is mainly concerned with man, and those things necessary for his support. In the first the divine Being is uniformly called Elohim, a name expressive of infinite power: in the second he is called Jehovah Elohim, expressing power in conjunction with immutability, so as to inspire man with implicit faith. Jehovah is the incommunicable name of God; it is not, and it cannot be, given to another. In our version it is almost universally rendered LORD.—This section terminates with the fourth chapter, and its subject is the history of man from his origin to the end of Cain's posterity. P.]

Ver. 5. God, by his creative power, brought the vegetables at first to perfection through the exercise of his will acting through soil, sun, rain, and other natural causes.—[Plant. The creation and ordering of sun, moon, stars, and earth, are mighty works, not unworthy of omnipotence; but the lowliest plant or herb equally owes its origin and qualities to God: rightly considered, it no less illustrates his wisdom, power, and goodness. There is no difference to God between the formation of a sun and a blade of grass.—Rain. Rivers, springs, rain, and dew, are appropriate emblems of grace. They are formed without man's aid, they are continued to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man to till the ground.[7]

6 But there went up a mist from the earth,[8] and watered the whole face of the ground.

7 And the LORD God formed man [d]of the dust[9] of the ground,[1] and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and [e]man became a living soul.

8 ¶ And the LORD God planted a [f]garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed.

9 And [h]out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

10 ¶ And [i]a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads.

11 The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth[2] the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold;

12 And the gold of that land is good: there is bdellium[3] and the onyx-stone.

13 And the name of the second river is

7 Two things were wanting in the economy of creation at this period—rain to moisten, and man to till the ground. The place of the rain is supplied, according to our translation, by a mist going up by exhalation, and descending again as dew. The Septuagint translate it by a word signifying 'a spring or fountain,' and other high authorities translate it 'a flood,' which, rising from the earth, watered the garden. In whatever sense we understand it, Moses ascribes the effect, not to what is commonly called nature, but traces it directly to God.—C.

1 The formation of man from dust or earth, rendered incoherent from dryness, and subject to be carried about by every wind, is revealed and recorded as a wonderful example of the work that God can produce from the most unpromising materials; whilst it is no doubt intended to repress all pride, and inculcate humility.—C.

9 We are accustomed to say, a man is dying, just as we say a fire is dying: that is, one part dies, another is following, till finally the whole expires. Just so is man, since death entered by sin. Every moment of his life, some part of the youngest and the healthiest is actually dying; and this process goes on till, at last, like the spark perishing in the midst of the ashes its own burning has produced, the light of life is extinguished, and man returns to the dust from which he was taken.—C. The peculiar grammatical construction of the Hebrew here—the finite verb being preceded by its own infinitive—gives greater emphasis to the sentence. It conveys the idea of absolute certainty. Spiritual death is implied, and it took effect immediately upon the act of disobedience.—P.

18 ¶ And the LORD God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him.[1]

19 And [j]out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air, and brought them [k]unto Adam,[2] to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

without his help, and they produce, by their diffusion, a universal fruitfulness, which no plan of human wisdom and no combination of human agency could ever possibly effect. Springs (Jn. 4. 14), rivers (Jn. 7. 38), rain (Is. 55. 10), dew (Ho. 4. 5), are appropriate. C.——This clause may be translated, 'No plant of the field was yet in the land, and no herb of the field put forth shoots; for,' &c. The meaning is, that while herbs and plants had been originally formed by an immediate exercise of supernatural power, they were left to propagate and spread naturally. Hence moisture and cultivation were requisite. This explanation appears to be given as introductory to the account of the planting of the garden of Eden, and the arrangements made for its irrigation and culture. P.]

Ver. 7. God, with most exquisite art and skill, formed man's body of the dust, and created, in personal union with it, a rational soul; and so made him a human person, capable of exercising the functions of all sorts of life. Is. 64. 8, 'Lord, thou art our Father; we are the clay, and thou our potter; and we are all the work of thy hand;' Ro. 9. 20; Ps. 100. 3, 'God made us, not we ourselves;' Ps. 139. 14, 15, 'I am fearfully and wonderfully made;' 1 Co. 15. 47, 'The first man is of the earth, earthy;' Job 33. 6, 'I am formed out of the clay;' 4. 19, 'Men dwell in houses (bodies) of clay; their foundation is in the dust;' Job 33. 4, 'The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life;' 27. 3, 'The spirit, or breath, of God is in my nostrils;' Zec. 12. 1, 'The Lord formeth the spirit of man within him;' hence he is called (Heb. 11. 9) 'the Father of spirits;' Nu. 16. 22; 27. 16, 'The God of the spirits of all flesh.'—[From a divine point of view, man is created in the image of God—his soul immortal, his moral nature pure and perfect, his intellect capable of apprehending truth. From a human point of view, he is composed of a body of dust formed from the kindred dust of the earth, and of a living spirit breathed into it by the Creator. P.]

Ver. 8–16. Man being thus formed, the Lord graciously placed him in a garden which was an emblem of the heavenly state, called the paradise of God, Re. 2. 7; in a garden, which himself had planted on the third day, ch. 1. 11; in a garden, eastward from Canaan, in Eden, a spot of pleasure, which probably lay not far from the ancient Babylon, where the rivers Euphrates on the west, and Hiddekel or Tigris on the east, joined into one, and watered the garden; and after running a little southward were parted into the two streams of Gihon on the east and Pison on the west; in a garden decked and enriched with every choice and fruitful vegetable; the principal of which were, the tree of life, so called because of the invigorating nature of its fruit, and because it was made a sacramental pledge of man's eternal life in heaven, provided he kept the command which God made to him;—and the tree of knowledge of good and evil, so called, because, by the fruit thereof, God tried Adam's obedience, and by the eating thereof man knew the good he had fallen from, and the evil he had fallen into.——[Ver. 8. The topographical notice here, though very brief, is definite. Eden was a large district. The garden was in the eastern part of it. A river flowing through Eden entered the garden; and either in the garden, or after emerging from it, separated into four distinct channels. Two of these bear the names of two well-known rivers, the Euphrates and Tigris; but by no legitimate mode of interpretation can they be identified with those rivers as they now exist. There is no known spot whose physical features accord with the description of the text; it is vain therefore to speculate about the site of Eden. P.——Ver. 9. Tree of life. The tree of life is an emblem of Christ, 'that eternal life that was with the Father, and was manifested to us,' 1 Jn. 1. 2. Knowledge of good, as emanating from obedience; evil, as emanating from disobedience.——Ver. 10. Eden. Nothing with certainty is known of the precise situation of Eden, but two points: that it was situated somewhere on the banks of the Euphrates and Tigris. To the Euphrates Moses refers, ver. 14, as to an object of perfect familiarity to the people whom he was leading from Egypt; and Hiddekel is identified (Da. 10. 4) with the Tigris. The Pison has been supposed to be the Phasis, a river running into the Euxine; the Gihon, to be the Araxes, which runs into the Caspian. This account cannot be received, as it appears from ver. 10 that a single river went out of the garden, which was, in its course, parted into four heads.——Ver. 12. Gold. The Bible is essentially a geographical book, and this is the most ancient specimen of geography on record. Moses, who wrote by divine inspiration, for the instruction of a people familiarly acquainted with working in gold and precious gems, describes the lands watered by the rivers of paradise, by means of these natural productions. God has gifted different lands with different forms of riches, yet exposed every country to some inconvenience or want, and by this means he has provided that, where better principles are wanting, the self-interest of nations shall promote social intercourse and prevent want. The possession and right use of riches is good, it is the love of money that the apostle pronounces 'the root of all evil.' C.——Ver. 13. It may be inferred from this passage, and from the geographical notices in Ge. 10. 6–12, that there was a primeval Cush in Central Asia, and a later Cush (called Ethiopia) in Africa. The former was the original home of the Cushites; the latter was the country to which the great body of the nation migrated, and in which they permanently settled.——Ver. 14. The Hebrew word is radically identical with the modern Arabic name of the Tigris. P.]

Ver. 16, 17. Here we have God entering into a covenant of works with Adam, and with all his natural posterity in him. This is the covenant afterwards published from Sinai, and which gendereth to bondage, Ga. 4. 24. This is the covenant which Adam transgressed, Ho. 6. 7. The breach of this covenant was necessarily supposed by the remedial one, published after the fall, Ge. 3. 15; Ro. 5. 12–21. The annexing of death to a positive command of abstinence from fruit, indifferent in itself, by an infinitely good, gracious, and wise God, inferred likewise the annexing of a glorious reward to his obedience: and in this the form of a covenant consists. The adjoining of the tree of life, and of knowledge of good and evil, to this transaction, as confirmatory seals of life or death; the frequent republication of the moral law, in a covenant form, to men, when they could not keep it as such, Le. 18. 5; De. 27. 26; Mat. 19. 17, Ga. 3. 10, 12; Ro. 10. 5; 3. 27, but especially the crediting of Adam's first sin to his natural posterity Ro. 5. 12–19, plainly establish this point. Here we have the parties of a covenant: God, manifesting his supreme authority, his unbounded goodness, and infinite condescension, on the one hand; and Adam, as without sin and righteous, capable of performing whatever God required, Ge. 1. 26, 27; 5. 1; Ec. 7. 29, and as the common head and representative of all his posterity, Ro. 5. 12–19; 1 Co. 15. 22, on the other.—Here we have a condition required—abstinence from the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, which supposed and implied perfect obedience to the whole law of God written on man's heart, or revealed to him. The end of this covenant being to render mankind happier than the duties of the natural state necessarily entitled them to be, it was proper that some positive institution should be added to the natural laws inscribed on the heart of Adam at his creation, and which might promote obedience to them. This institution, relative to the tree of knowledge, which, being in the midst of the garden, was almost continually in his view, was extremely proper, as it tended, (1) To manifest the high government of God over men, as one who could enact his good will into an exact law. (2) To render Adam's obedience or disobedience, and consequently the justice of God in rewarding or punishing him, more conspicuous, Ro. 3. 4. (3) To mark that, even in paradise, he held all which he enjoyed of God as his great Creator and Father, and ought to do nothing without his allowance. (4) To be a standing monitor to Adam, that he was fallible, and needed to take heed to his ways, and watch against every spiritual enemy; that he was not come to his full happiness and rest, since, even in paradise, he was under remarkable restraint; that his happiness lay in God himself alone; and that nothing was to be desired, but in submission to his will, and for his sake. (5) To be a summary of the law of nature, by obedience to which he might honour God, loving him with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength, and loving himself, and his posterity as himself. Here is a penalty threatened in case of disobedience—certain, manifold, and dreadful death, viz. (1) Death legal, or a sentence of condemnation fixing upon the covenant-breaker in the very moment he begins to transgress. (2) The execution of this sentence in real death; which is either spiritual, comprehending everything relative to the soul's loss of God's favour and image, and to its defilement and misery in this life, Ro. 1. 28–31; 3. 10–18; 8. 7, 8; Ep. 2. 1, 3, 12; or natural, which comprehends every calamity on the body, and whatever its comfort depends upon in this world, Ge. 3. 16, 19; De. xxviii.; Ec. 12. 7; 2 Pe. 3. 12; or eternal, comprehending all the misery of loss or of pain, to which the lost are for ever subjected in hell, Mat. 25. 41; Re. 14. 10, 11.—In the express annexing of so great a death especially to the breach of the positive part of the law of the covenant, a promise of a life directly opposite as the reward of perfect fulfilment of the condition was implied; comprehending the continuance of the natural and spiritual life, which he had, in all the vigour, comfort, and prosperity of it; and the enjoyment of a more glorious and eternal life in heaven, in consequence of his finishing his course of unfailing obedience. Thus the sum of the covenant was, Mat. 19. 17, 'If thou wilt enter into life eternal, keep the commandments;' Ga. 3. 10, 12, 'The man that doeth these things shall live in them;' 'Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them;' Eze. 18. 4, 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.' The fruit of the tree of life, as a seal of the covenant, confirmed the promise of life upon condition of perfect obedience; and the fruit of the tree of knowledge confirmed the threatening of death annexed to disobedience. The representation of all Adam's natural posterity in him was most reasonable and kind; as it was the shortest, and, humanly speaking, the safest means of securing their eternal happiness. The whole tenor of this covenant was so highly equitable and gracious, that man's uncorrupted conscience could not but approve of it; his love to himself and his posterity could not but incline him to it; his perfect conformity to the divine image could not but make him consent to whatever terms God proposed, and to receive his favours in a method so answerable to the divine perfections.—[God speaking to the man implies the man's comprehension of God's words; and here we have the first record of human intelligence and language. C.——Ver. 17. We have here the first indication of law. There is implied also the possession, on the part of man, of a moral faculty capable of comprehending that law, and of a will capable of obeying it. P.]

Ver. 21–24. God formed the woman of a rib, with the flesh thereon, out of Adam's side, to note the wife's equality with her husband, and that she is his companion, and to be treated with the utmost kindness and affection. He brought her to Adam, to honour the institution of marriage, and to teach us that children ought to marry by the disposal or consent of their parents, and all only in the Lord, ch. 21. 21; 24. 4; 28. 2; Ju. 14. 2; 1 Co. 7. 38, 39; Adam accepted her as a help meet for him, suitable to his nature, acceptable to his person, and useful on all occasions for their mutual comfort and the propagation of their species. And God, by Adam, declared the general law of marriage, requiring the most affectionate cohabitation, inseparable union, and intimate communion during life, as if the parties were but one person. 1 Pe. 3. 1, 7, 'Wives, be in subjection to your husbands. Husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife as to the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life;' Ep. 5. 22–28, 'Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head of the wife. Let the wives be subject to their own husbands in everything. Husbands, love your wives: as Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it, so ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.' Ge. 3. 16; 1 Co. 14. 34; 7. 16; Tit. 2. 5; Col. 3. 18, 19; 1 Ti. 5. 8; 2. 11, 12; Mal. 2. 14–16; Mat. 19. 3–9; 1 Co. 7. 14, 15.——[Ver. 23. The 'deep sleep' must have been, in its effects on the whole system, somewhat similar to the state produced by chloroform. The man was unconscious of all that occurred. But it would seem that immediately after awaking the Lord revealed to him what had been done, and at the same time presented the woman. Adam, knowing how she had been formed, and perceiving her complete adaptation to his felt want, exclaimed, with joyful and thankful surprise, 'This, at length, is the very thing; bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh.' P.]

Ver. 25. They had no cause of shame; as there was neither deformity in their bodies, nor guilt on their consciences, nor any sinful inclination in their hearts.

REFLECTIONS.—In the faith of God's institution and blessing of the Sabbath, let me always observe it as in his sight, ceasing from my own works, as he did from his. Let me never prefer the example of a wicked generation to that of God; nor prefer the pleasures of recreation or sloth, or the profits of carnal labour, to fellowship with, and enjoyment of, God and his blessings. Let my care be to receive out of his fulness, and grace for grace; to remember his mighty works of creation and redemption, and to worship him in the beauty of holiness. How easy is it for him to work, with or without means, as he pleaseth! But O how great his kindness to man! In him the animal and the angelical natures were united; the best of this world was allotted him for his residence; and while its choicest fruits were assigned him for his food, the multitudes of its animal inhabitants were subjected to his dominion and service. A woman, everyway perfect, was provided for his comfort, and for the increase of mankind. Nay, God himself entered into familiar fellowship and a gracious covenant with him, in which everlasting happiness was promised to him and his posterity upon the easiest terms. But in this first Adam, as in a figure, do I not behold the second, the Lord from heaven, Jesus the Redeemer? He is indeed the Son of God, the express image of his Father's person, the image of the invisible God; the new thing created in the earth, and the blessed fruit of it, excellent and comely. He, as Mediator, is the great product of Jehovah's counsels, the illustrious ornament and glorious centre of all his works. He is our head and representative in the second and better covenant, established upon better promises. He is our spiritual parent, who communicateth to us his indelible image, and entitles us to all the fulness of God. He is our great Prophet, Priest, and Governor, to whom all things in heaven and earth are subjected for our sake. Having by his blood purchased and by his Spirit planted a gospel-church, he dwells there, and cultivates the same; and having regained the celestial paradise, there we shall be for ever with the Lord. In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge; and having all life and fruitfulness in his own person, he giveth to us power to eat of himself, the Tree of life. Being by the infinite love of God cast into the deep sleep of suffering and death in this world, his church was formed out of his broken body and pierced side. She is divinely brought and espoused to him; and to her he cleaves, at the expense of once leaving his Father in heaven, and of now leaving his mother, the people of Israel.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1–6. Serpents in general have a natural subtlety beyond other creatures. Mat. 10. 16, 'Be wise as serpents.' But this one had an extraordinary measure of it, being actuated by a fallen angel who had just apostatized from his holy and happy state. Re. 20. 2, 3, 8, 'The dragon, that old serpent, the devil and Satan, goeth out to deceive the nations;' 2 Co. 11. 3, 'The serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety;' Jn. 8. 44, 'The devil was a murderer from the beginning, a liar, and the father of it;' 2 Co. 2. 11, 'We are not ignorant of his devices;' 11. 14, 'Satan is transformed into an angel of light.' In the temptation of our first parents, Satan acted with the utmost subtlety. (1) He chose a serpent, which was seemingly simple, but really subtle, and perhaps beautiful, which might make Eve take it for an angel, to be his instrument. (2) He accosted the woman—who perhaps had only heard the terms of the covenant from Adam—in the absence of her husband. (3) According to some, he improved their being more naked than the wild beasts of the earth, to render them discontented with their condition. But thereof, then [e]your eyes shall be opened; and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

6 ¶ And when the woman [f]saw[1] that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant[2] to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise,[3] she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat; and [g]gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat.

7 And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed[4] fig-leaves together, and made themselves aprons.[5]

8 And they heard the [h]voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool[6] of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.

9 ¶ And the [i]LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

12 And the man said, The woman, [k]whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, [l]What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

14 ¶ And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed[7] above all cattle, and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

15 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his [m]heel.

16 ¶ Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children: and thy desire shall be[8] to thy husband, and he shall [n]rule over thee.

1 It is hence probable that our first parents avoided to approach or look upon the tree of knowledge of good and evil. God is of purer eyes than to look upon iniquity, Hab.1.13; man, his image and his servant, must not contemplate sin, Job 31.1; Ps.119.37.—C.

3 The temptation now assumed a triple form. It assailed the appetite—'the tree was good for food;' the eye—'it was pleasant to the eyes;' and the intellect, which has a natural craving for knowledge—it was 'a tree to be desired to make one wise.' Dazzled and deluded by these new feelings, God and his holy law were for the moment forgotten, and the forbidden fruit was eaten.—P.

7 This is the first instance of a curse, and from the details of its several parts has no doubt contributed still further than the word serpent to suggest the idea of that animal having been employed as an instrument of the temptation. But if the curse were pronounced against a mere animal, the seed of the woman must bruise that very animals head and the same animal must bruise his heel. Besides the cursed serpent has a seed at enmity with the seed of the woman, a circumstance totally inapplicable to any mere animal. Let us examine the constituents of his curse. 1. Upon thy belly shalt thou go. This phrase, when applied to Satan, represents that state of abasement under righteous judgment, in which God punishes him. 2. Dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. This phrase is employed to signify reluctant yielding to a conqueror, as in Ps.72.9. 3. An unholy enmity of Satan against the human race, and specially against the seed of the woman, Christ—which unholy enmity is encountered by a holy enmity in Christ against all evil. C.

The bruising of Satan's head, the seat and emblem of his usurped dominion over the world.—C.

it is more certain that he moved the doubt relative to God's prohibitory charge in such ambiguous terms that it was hard to discern whether he intended merely to ask if God had really forbidden the use of that fruit,—or to insinuate that the forbidder could not be the true God, who had kindly created them but just before,—or to suggest that God was a hard master, who had forbidden them to eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden in which he had placed them. (4) Finding that the woman adhered to the command, he endeavoured to make her believe that the threatening was dark in its meaning, and uncertain or false with respect to its execution. (5) He pretended a great regard for her and her husband's welfare, as if he had been extremely desirous of promoting their knowledge and happiness. (6) Perhaps he pretended that himself had acquired what knowledge he had above other brutes by eating of that prohibited fruit. It is certain he attempted to confirm his contradiction of the threatening by a solemn appeal to God. (7) Having prevailed with the woman, he by her means tempted her husband, who complied, not from any such fondness for her as rendered him willing to transgress with her, but as deceived: and the rather as he saw she did not immediately die upon her eating of the fruit. This sin of our first parents, in eating this forbidden fruit, was exceeding great. It contained, (1) Horrid unbelief to such a degree that the devil, in the form of a beast, was believed in opposition to the solemn declaration of God. (2) The most presumptuous pride, ambition, and bold curiosity; they were in paradise, and lords of the lower world—they knew and enjoyed very much—but nothing would content them but to be as God in knowledge and happiness. (3) The most shocking ingratitude and discontent; God had given them everything proper for conveniency and delight—he had made them the lords of animals and earth, the companions of angels—and yet they revolted at the inconsiderable reserve of a tree. (4) The most contemptuous apostasy from and rebellion against God; they renounced his covenant of friendship, and threw off all subjection to and professed dependence on him. (5) In this one act the whole law of God was transgressed. The authority of God, which is the foundation of it, was trampled under foot; the love, which is the complete fulfilment of it, was neglected, and hatred established, Ja. 2. 10. The symbolical law, which was a summary of and a fence to the moral, was expressly contemned and violated. Nay, each of the moral precepts was plainly broken. The aggravations of this sin were no less remarkable. (1) It was committed by persons newly made after the image of God; perfectly without sin, and capable of continuing so. (2) It was committed by them just after he had graciously received them into the most honourable covenant of friendship with himself. (3) It was very early committed, perhaps on the same day they were created, Ps. 49. 12. (4) It was committed against God's most express command, and when they had the fullest warning of the danger thereby incurred to them and their seed. (5) It was committed in paradise, where God dwelt as in his temple; and where everything concurred to proclaim his infinite kindness to mankind, and invite to obedience. (6) It was committe upon a very slight and but one single temptation. (7) It was occasioned by an object of very small importance, which man had no need of in paradise. (8) It respected what had been solemnly separated to the service of God, and so amounted to a sacrilegious robbing of him. In this manner, 1 Ti. 2. 14, 'The woman being deceived, was first in the transgression;' Ro. 5. 12–19, 'By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for, or in whom, all have sinned.—Death reigned over them which had not sinned actually after the similitude of Adam's transgression. Through the offence of one many be dead.—The judgment was by one to condemnation.—By one man's offence death reigned by one.—By the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation.—By one man's disobedience many were made sinners;' 1 Co. 15. 22, 'In Adam, by his first sin, all die.'——[Ver. 1. The character of the temptation strikingly illustrates the wiliness of the 'old serpent.' There is nothing at first to awaken suspicion, or to shock the moral sense. There is a sly insinuation calculated to excite natural curiosity. Then there is an assertion embodying a direct lie, combined, however, with just enough of truth to give it plausibility: 'Ye shall not die; for God doth know,' &c. The temptations of Satan still exhibit the same fatal craftiness—the same knowledge of the weakness of human nature.—It will be observed that while by the historian God is called Jehovah Elohim, Satan only uses the one name, Elohim. P.——Ver. 3. Some have supposed that Eve here stated the first untruth, by adding to the commandment of God (ch. 2. 16, 17); but there is no reasonable ground for this charge, as God may have graciously added those other limitations which she here enumerates, though not previously recorded by Moses. C.——Ver. 5. The translation here tends to create a misconception in the mind of the English reader. It would leave the impression that polytheism was already known—'Ye shall be as gods.' The fact is, however, that it is the same Hebrew word which in the first clause of the verse is rendered 'God,' and in the second 'gods.' The proper translation is, 'Ye shall be as God.' P.]

Ver. 7–13. Here we have their wretched evasions after their fall. (1) When their eyes were opened—their consciences being touched with a sense of the heinousness of their sin, whereby they had defiled their souls, and of the greatness of that misery which they had brought upon themselves and their posterity, they began to be ashamed of their nakedness, which they now found to be an occasion of sinful motions and affections; and covered with fig-leaves those parts by which the corruption of nature is propagated, upon which, for that reason, God hath put the deepest impression of shame, that fruit of sin;—and to which he appointed circumcision, the sacrament of remission, regeneration, and mortification, to be applied, ch. 17. 11. (2) When the Son of God, probably in human shape, as a presage of his future incarnation, came to seek and to save them, they, sensible of guilt and dreading punishment, foolishly sought to hide themselves from him. But 'there is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves,' Job 34. 22; Am. 9. 3; Ps. 139. 7–9; Pr. 15. 3; Je. 23. 24. (3) When, to convince them further, he questioned them concerning their conduct, they attempted to excuse themselves, and shift the blame upon their tempters; and, Adam appears inclined to lay the blame of his fault upon God himself, as if he had given him a tempter under the character of an helpmeet for him, Job 31. 33; Pr. 19. 3. ——[Ver. 8. 'The voice of the Lord' may signify, as in Ps. 29. 3, some manifestation of his presence in terrible commotion of the elements, which filled the guilty pair with fear; or it may perhaps be the name of the second person of the blessed Trinity, and thus equivalent to the Greek Logos.—'The wind of the day' is in the East the evening, when a cool refreshing breeze always springs up, and makes walking agreeable. P.]

Ver. 14–19. In this condemnation of the criminals, the serpent, which had been only an irrational instrument, is cursed, as a mark of God's high detestation of the crime; as Ex. 21. 28, 29; Le. 20. 15. Perhaps he had formerly moved upon the hinder part of his body, and so was numbered among the wild beasts which eat herbs, and are distinguished from creeping things, ch. 1. 25, 30. But now he and all his kind must henceforth be reckoned most despicable and detestable. They must creep along the earth, take down part of its dust with their food, Is. 65. 25; Mi. 7. 17, and must be the stated objects of the hatred of mankind. But this sentence, directed against the serpent, chiefly respected Satan and his angels. He is cursed above all the irrational animals; is left under the power of invincible folly and malice; and is in disgrace depressed below the vilest of beasts, and appointed to misery, when they have perished in death. He goes on his belly, and eats dust. His actions are base and troublesome to himself: he can never ascend higher than this world. He is trampled under the feet of Christ and his people.

THE ABANA RIVER PASSING THE GARDENS OF DAMASCUS—THE CITY KNOWN TO ABRAHAM. [Genesis, iii:23.]—"Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken." In the blooming season, the trees which stand in the Gardens of Damascus are very attractive, because of their great variety and the luxuriance of their foliage and flowers. The Damson or Damascene plum gets its name from growing in the Gardens of Damascus. Here we have the orange, the apricot, the white mulberry, and alternating with these fruit trees, rose bushes and other flowering shrubs stand thick upon the ground. Because of this it is not difficult to persuade one's self that Damascus represents more in a living way the paradise in which our first parents lived for a while, than any other city upon earth. The Garden of Eden was created and perpetuated by the rivers of Mesopotamia, and Damascus is created and kept green by the Abana river.

17 And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; cursed[1] is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

18 Thorns also and thistles shall it bring[2] forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field.

19 In the sweat of thy face shall thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for [a]dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

20 And Adam called his wife's name Eve;[3] because she was the mother of all living.

21 ¶ Unto Adam also, and to his wife, did the LORD God make coats of skins,[4] and clothed them.

22 ¶ And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us,[5] to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever;[6]

23 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken.

24 So he drove out the man: and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming [b]sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

1 This is the second curse, and is inflicted on the ground for man's sake; and from it comes upon man himself. Let us examine its bitter ingredients. 1. Bread eaten in sorrow all our days. 2. Thorns, and thistles contending in unhappy intermixture with the herb of the field allotted for food. 3. Toil and exhaustion through-out Life. 4. Death.—C.

5 Who was as one of us.

6 The former attempt of man, ver. 5, was to become as God, and now, left with equal mercy and folly, he again put forth his hand to the tree of life, in hope of living for ever. God drives him from the garden, and by cherubim and a flaming sword intercepts any attempt at return. The tree of life was an emblem of Christ, Re. 22. 2; the cherubim, winged angelic intelligences and powers, Eze. 10. 5, 7, &c.; and the flaming sword, either an emblem of death by the hand of an angel, Nu. 22. 23, or an angel, so called, according to the words of Task, Heb. 1. 7. C.

b Numbers 20. 13 Ch. 21. 6, 17.

His power is restricted to earthly men, or to killing of the bodies of believers –for their souls he cannot kill; nay, their temporal death promotes the destruction of sin in them. He takes such pleasure as he is capable of in seducing reprobates to the basest wickedness, and in vexing the godly with his abominable temptations. God further threatens that the very woman whom he had seduced, and many of her posterity, should, by their free justification and their reconcilement and conversion to God, be made stated enemies to him and his friends, and enabled, through Jesus Christ, to tread on his policy, power, and his life of permitted authority on earth, to his great grief and agony of mind, notwithstanding all he should be able to do to oppose them by temptation or persecution. But the principal part of Satan's curse lay in the ruin brought on him by Jesus Christ, the eminent seed of the woman, in his redemption of mankind. Jesus Christ is called the seed of the woman, not only to import the reality of his manhood, and his close connection with believers –who are also called her seed, as followers of her in faith and holiness –but chiefly to signify that he was none of Adam's natural posterity represented in the covenant of works, and that he would be born of a virgin. He, by fulfilling the broken law –which is the strength of sin—in our stead, by making atonement for sin, and by removing the curse, has undermined the whole power and authority which Satan had over the world as the executioner of God's justice. And as by the word of his power he dislodged him from the bodies of multitudes –and by the word of his grace in the ministration of the gospel did and will expel the worship of him from multitudes of nations; so by the powerful application of his word, Spirit, and blood, to men's consciences and hearts, he casts him and his works down from their throne in them, and by the influences of his grace enables his people to resist the devil, and make him flee from them; and to mortify the deeds of the body that they may live. Thus, 1 Pe. 5. 8, 'Our adversary the devil goeth about seeking whom he may devour;' Job 1. 7, 'Going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it;' Jn. 8. 41, 44. 'Wicked men are of their father the devil, and the lusts of their father they will do;' Ac. 13. 10; 1 Jn. 3. 8, 10; Mat. 13. 38; Ro. 9. 8, 'Only the children of the promise are counted for Eve's seed;' Ga. 4. 29; Pr. 29. 27, 'An unjust man is an abomination to the just; and he that is upright in the way is an abomination to the wicked;' Jn. 15. 18; Mar. 13. 13; but, 1 Jn. 3. 5, 8, 'The Son of God was manifested to take away sin—to destroy the works of the devil;' Is. 7. 14, 'A virgin did conceive, and bring forth a Son—Immanuel;' Da. 9. 24, 26, 'The Messiah shall be cut off, not for himself, but to finish transgression, and make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in an everlasting righteousness;' Ps. 91. 13, 'The lion, adder, and dragon shall be trampled under feet;' Col. 2. 15, 'Having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in his cross;' He. 2. 14, 'That through death he might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil;' Jn. 12. 31, 'Now shall the devil, the prince of this world, be cast out,' of his kingdom and authority in and over men: Jn. 16. 11; Is. 49. 24–26; Lu. 10. 18, 19; Ro. 16. 20, 'God shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly;' 1 Jn. 2. 13, 'Ye have overcome the wicked one;' 1 Pe. 5. 9; Ja. 4. 7; Ps. 91. 13. While Satan receiveth the ruinous bruise in his head, he bruiseth the heel of the seed of the woman; that is, he assaults by temptations, stirs up persecution and trouble against the human nature of Christ, and against his people, while they continue on the earth: or their bodies, crushed to the dust of death by his influence, lie in the grave. But at the last day he and his agent death shall be quite overthrown and swallowed up in eternal victory. He. 2. 15; 2 Co. 13. 4; Is. 53. 4, 5; Jn. 16. 33; Ac. 14. 22; Is. 25. 8; 1 Co. 15. 25–57. The woman was condemned to a multitude of sorrows and pains, particularly in the conception, bearing, and bringing up of her children; and to a further degree of subjection to her husband, whom she had overlooked in parleying with the serpent as her instructor. 1 Ti. 2. 12, 15; 1 Co. 7. 28; 14. 34; Tit. 2. 5; 1 Pe. 3. 6; Ep. ii. iv.; Mat. 19. 8, &c. To punish Adam, the proprietor, the whole ground was cursed with respect to its soil and product. The whole lower world, being defiled under its inhabitants, was devoured by the curse, and subjected to the bondage of corruption. Is. 24. 5, 6; Ro. 8. 20–22; Ge. 5. 29; Job 31. 40; He. 6. 8; Je. 12. 13. Himself was condemned to much grief and sorrow. Ps. 127. 2. To eat the herbs of the field, instead of the delicious fruits of paradise; and to be occupied in hard labour in the cultivation of them till he died. 2 Th. 3. 10; Ep. 4. 28; Ec. 1. 1, 2, 13, 14; 2. 11, 17, 21, 26. Thus in these few verses we have a predictory description of the agency and success of Satan the destroyer, and of the incarnation, office, state, and work of Jesus our Redeemer; and in fine, of the whole fate of this lower world, particularly of mankind, from the fall of Adam till the end of time. Nor can any one seriously review the state of the world—of fields, of persons, of families, of churches, or nations, for almost six thousand years past, but he must perceive a constant and exact accomplishment thereof. Nor are the subsequent predictions, whether of mercies or judgments, anything else but a gradual opening and explication of this; the latter always pointing out more clearly and circumstantially what had been contained in the former; nor are the histories aught else but an account of the fulfilment. But one thing is remarkable, that in this declaration of Jehovah now before us the first intimation of a Saviour, and salvation through him for mankind, is not directed to Adam or Eve, but is included in a threatening directed to Satan, plainly intimating that the work of our redemption remarkably aggravates the misery of our original destroyer, and that we are not immediate parties in the covenant of our recovery, nor doth it, either in point of reality or application, depend on our work, but on the blood of Jesus Christ, and the faith we exercise in it. Ro. 5. 20, 21; Ep. 2. 1–8. ——[Ver. 14. It is worthy of observation here, as elsewhere in Scripture, that the curses consequent upon sin are not pronounced or executed solely upon rational beings; irrational creatures, and even the fruits of the field, and the very earth itself, are visited by divine judgments. The serpent is cursed because Satan had assumed its form when tempting Eve. The earth is cursed because it is the habitation of sinful man.—'Cursed is the ground for thy sake.' P.——Ver. 15. Bruise his heel. By coming behind him stealthily, and bruising him through his false followers, Ps. 49. 5; Jn. 13. 18. C. — It is a remarkable proof at once of the wisdom and of the love of God, that the first curse pronounced on account of sin embodied in it the first promised deliverance from sin. The words are prophetic, indicating first, a long and hard struggle between the children of the devil—'thy seed,' and the children of God—'her seed;' and second, a complete victory gained by the GREAT SEED of the woman over Satan– 'It shall bruise thy head,' after a conflict. P.]

Ver. 20. Having heard, and perhaps believed, the promise relative to the seed of the woman, Adam gives his wife a new name, importing her being the mother of Jesus, the quickening spirit, and author of eternal life, and of his living members. Jn. 10. 10; 11. 25.

Ver. 21. The Lord, who had taught them to offer animals in sacrifice, as a figure of Jesus' oblation of himself for the salvation of men, taught them to make coats of the skins, as a memorial that by sinfully hearkening to the serpent they had made themselves as the beasts which perish, and that there could be no salvation from shame and danger but by the garment of Jesus' blessed atonement. Is. 61. 10; Ro. 13. 14.

Ver. 22. Perhaps we have here no ironical derision of man's folly in attempting to become wise as God: but God's affectionate lamentation over his ruined condition, and gracious resolution to turn him out of paradise, lest his vain hopes to fortify himself against death, by eating of the tree of life, should tempt him to neglect the great salvation which was offered to him in the covenant of grace. Ro. 9. 30–32; 10. 2, 3.—[One of us. When in ch. 1. 26 God said, 'Let us make man in our image,' the counsel of the DIVINE ELOHIM, or Holy Trinity, in the formation of man is revealed. When in ch. 3. 22 God says, 'The man is become as one of us, to know good and evil,' the word 'us' must refer as in the former case to the Godhead, but who in the Godhead had knowledge of good and evil? even the Son, whose eternal delights were with the children of men (Pr. 8. 31), who loved his people 'before the foundation of the world,' and who in the fulness of time was 'made a curse for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.' The word evil here does not signify moral evil, but that sorrow, toil, and death, inflicted as natural evils, with which alone he that 'knew no sin,' yet who 'bore our griefs, and carried our sorrows,' was acquainted. C.—— The plural form of the name of God, Elohim; the expression, 'Let us make man;' and here again the statement, 'The man is become as one of us,' all appear to shadow forth the wondrous doctrine of plurality in unity– three persons, and yet one God.—It would undoubtedly appear from this statement that there was some inherent virtue in the fruit of the tree of life calculated to preserve life indefinitely. It would seem too as if man before the fall was rendered immortal by eating of the tree of life; for if he was created immortal, the tree of life was unnecessary. P.]

Ver. 23, 24. The words used for the turning of man out of paradise import that he was turned out as a divorced woman from the house of her husband, never to be admitted back to a state of happiness under the broken covenant of works. Perhaps while the flaming sword turned every way to keep men from the tree of life, the divine Majesty, as reconciled in Christ, manifested himself between the cherubims, as on his throne of grace, to encourage them to humble and familiar fellowship with himself. He. 4. 16.——[Ver. 24. Heb. The cherubim and the flaming sword which revolved. Cherubim is a plural form, and denotes an order of celestial beings distinct from angels, and apparently higher in dignity. They are represented as closely attached to God, standing beside his throne, and bearing him. Carved figures of cherubim with outspread wings covered the mercy-seat; hence God was said to dwell 'between the cherubim.' The exact form of these figures is unknown; but it has been conjectured

AND Adam knew Eve his wife: and she conceived, and bare[1] Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the LORD.

2 And she again bare his brother Abel.[2] And Abel was a keeper[3] of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground.

3 And in process of time[4] it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.

4 And Abel, he also brought of [t]the firstlings of his flock,[5] and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had respect unto Abel and to his offering:

5 But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell.

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, [u]Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If thou doest well,[6] shalt thou not be accepted?[7] and if thou doest not well, sin[8] lieth at the door.[9] And unto thee[1] shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

8 ¶ And Cain [b]talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and [c]slew him.

9 And the LORD said unto Cain, [d]Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, I [e]know not:[2] Am I my brother's keeper?

REFLECTIONS.—Be sober, be vigilant, my soul, lest thine adversary the devil get an advantage of thee, and beguile thee through his subtlety. Never encounter him, separated from Jesus, or in thy own strength. Never dally with, but boldly and immediately resist him, and he will flee from thee. Never indulge the smallest doubt of the veracity or importance of what the Lord hath spoken. Let me always be content with such things as I have. It is not in becoming a god, but in enjoying God, as my ALL AND IN ALL, that my happiness consists. In what shame, what misery, sin always issueth!—Behold how the offended majesty of heaven flies on the wings of infinite love and mercy for the immediate relief of self-ruined men, and to proclaim, offer, and bestow upon them redemption through the blood of his Son! But alas! how they flee from him, and by covering their transgression, endeavour even to evade his favours! Blessed Jesus, if thou arraignest me, let me always fly into thy bosom of mercy and kindness; let me gladly entertain thy convictions, and acknowledge my offence, that I may not fall into the condemnation of the devil! Let all the troubles which affect this world call my sin to my remembrance, and deeply affect me with it! Blessed be Jehovah that his only-begotten Son became the seed of the woman, Immanuel, God with us—that he had his heel bruised, travailed in pangs of woe at Love's delivery of a lost world, was made to endure suffering, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief—was crowned with thorns, and being in an agony did sweat great drops of blood—that dust he was, and to dust he returned—and all for men—all for ME! Let my naked soul put on, not the fig-leaves of my self-righteousness, but his law-magnifying atonement. Bewailing the tremendous fall of my race, and turning my back on the law as the ministration of death, and on this blasted world as emptied of all enjoyments, let me embrace the better covenant, founded on better promises, and seek a better paradise, where not merely angelical cherubims, but divine arms of infinite and everlasting love, shall for ever shut me up to the most immediate fellowship of Jesus the Tree of Life, which beareth twelve manner of fruits every month, and whose leaves are for the healing of the nations.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. If Eve thought that in Cain she had gotten THE MAN- JEHOVAH, THE MESSIAH, as the words in the Hebrew may bear, she found herself sadly mistaken.—[Some translate 'I have gotten a man—Jehovah,' and believe that Eve supposed him to be the promised seed, who was to bruise the serpent's head. But the passage will not bear such a rendering. The emphatic word is kanithi, 'I have gotten;' hence the son was called Cain, which comes from the same root; and the sense of the whole is, 'I have gotten a man from (or with the assistance of) Jehovah.' P.]

Ver. 3. By instruction from God, more or less express, several of the Mosaic rites were practised long before the giving of the law at Sinai; as the distinction between clean and unclean beasts, Ge. 7. 2; priests, altars, burnt-offerings, and drink-offerings, 8. 20; 14. 18; 22. 13; 35. 14; abstinence from blood, 9. 4; oil for consecration, 28. 18; 35. 14; marriage of brothers' widows, 38. 8, 9, 20.

Ver. 4. He. 11.4, 'By faith—as to the divine appointment, of which their father had informed them, and by faith in the promised Messiah, signified thereby—Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain; (perhaps more proper in its matter, and certainly so in its manner), by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts.' Perhaps the Lord testified his respect by consuming his sacrifice with fire from heaven, as in the case of Aaron, Le. 9. 24; Gideon, Ju. 6. 21; David, 1 Ch. 21. 26; Solomon, 2 Ch. 7. 1; and Elijah, 1 Ki. 18. 38.

Ver. 5–15. Full of rage against God and his brother, Cain's looks became sour, dejected, envious, and angry. To convince him of his fault, God showed him that it was his own want of faith and sincerity which hindered his acceptance; and that, if he did not repent, his sin would quickly subject him to punishment; and that in temporals Abel continued as subject to him and was as affectionate as ever. While they talked in the field, Cain, still enraged in his heart, murdered his righteous brother on account of his piety, Ps. 55. 21; 1 Jn. 3. 12. Abel's blood cried to God for just vengeance upon Cain, He. 12. 24. God, notwithstanding Cain's denial and insulting pretence that he had given him no charge of his brother, condemned him to punishment, and cursed the fields which he should cultivate into a further degree of barrenness, Ps. 9. 12. Cain never lamented the heinousness of his sin, but complained that it could not be pardoned, and that his punishment was too great; and that now everybody would be ready to kill him, as the public enemy of mankind, and devoted of God to destruction. But God marked him with some visible token, and denounced a still heavier vengeance against the person who should kill him. Thus, Job 18. 11; 15. 20-24. Terrors made him afraid on every side, and drove him to his feet. He travelled in pain all his days, &c.—Le. 26. 17, 36. 'But God slew him not, lest his people should forget,' Ps. 59. 11.—[Ver. 5. Why was this? The apostle Paul replies, 'By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent (literally, a fuller) sacrifice than Cain.' The faith was shown in the nature of the offering. Cain's was an acknowledgment of God's sovereignty—it was the offering of a Deist. Abel's, in addition, was an acknowledgment of guilt, of the necessity for an atonement- it was the offering of a humble, conscience-stricken sinner. P.——Ver. 7. Rule over him. There is no cause for jealousy, for Abel, though specially honoured of God, is still ready to obey Cain, as his elder brother. C.——This very obscure sentence appears to be connected with what immediately precedes—'Sin lieth at the door.' Sin is personified. Cain is represented as making it his slave, and employing it to execute his own wicked purposes; and the result is the murder of Abel. P.——Ver. 8. Field. The field, and not the altar of worship, as painters frequently represent, is mentioned as the scene of this melancholy transaction. Does not this suggest the probability that the immediate occasion of quarrel was some division of the land, becoming necessary in consequence of the different occupations of the brothers—pasturage and tillage?——

begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methusael: and Methusael begat Lamech.[2]

19 ¶ And Lamech took unto him two wives:[3] the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah.

20 And Adah bare Jabal: he was the father[4] of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.

21 And his brother's name was Jubal: he was the father[5] of all such as handle the harp and organ.

22 And Zillah, she also bare Tubal-cain, an instructor[6] of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tubal-cain was Naamah.[7]

23 And Lamech said unto his wives, Adah and Zillah, hear my voice; ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: for I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt.[8]

24 If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold, truly Lamech seventy and seven-fold.[9]

25 ¶ And Adam knew his wife again; and she bare a son, and called his name Seth:[1] For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed[2] instead of Abel, whom Cain slew.

26 And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name Enos:[3] then began men to call upon the name of the LORD.[4]

CHAPTER V.

1 The genealogy, age, and death of the patriarchs from Adam unto Noah. 24 The godliness and translation of Enoch.

THIS is the [a]book of the generations of Adam. In the day that God created man, in the [b]likeness of God made he him:[5]

2 Male and female created he them; and blessed them, and [c]called their name Adam,[1] in the day when they were created.

3 ¶ And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his [d]own likeness, after his image; and called his name [e]Seth.

4 And the days of Adam, after he had begotten Seth, were eight hundred years; and he [f]begat sons and daughters.

5 And all the days that Adam lived were [g]nine hundred and thirty years: and he [h]died.

6 ¶ And Seth[2] lived an hundred and five years, and begat Enos.

7 And Seth lived, after he begat Enos, eight hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.

8 And all the days of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years: and he died.

9 ¶ And Enos[3] lived ninety years, and begat Cainan.[4]

10 And Enos lived, after he begat Cainan, eight hundred and fifteen years, and [i]begat sons and daughters.

11 And all the days of Enos were nine hundred and five years: and [k]he died.

12 ¶ And Cainan lived seventy years, and begat Mahalaleel.[5]

13 And Cainan lived, after he begat Mahalaleel, eight hundred and forty years, and [l]begat sons and daughters.

14 And all the days of Cainan were nine hundred and ten years: and [m]he died.

15 ¶ And Mahalaleel lived sixty and five years,[6] and begat Jared.[7]

Ver. 15. Seven-fold. Why was not Cain sentenced to death, according to Ge. 9. 6? Simply because his crime, however aggravated, was not murder, but manslaughter. C.]

Ver. 19. Contrary to God's original institution of marriage, and the stated equality preserved by his providence among the males and females of mankind, Lamech, the descendant of Cain, to gratify his intemperate lust, first took a plurality of wives, and introduced a custom which still remains in many places of the world; and with which not a few of the pious Hebrews, inadvertent to the sinfulness thereof, complied; Ge. xvi. xxix.; 2 Sa. iii. v. 1 Ki. xi., &c. But Christ fully laid open the iniquity of this practice, and restored marriage to its original form: Ge. 2. 18–24; Mal. 2. 14, 15; Mat. 19. 8.

Ver. 20. [Houses were of earlier origin than tents. The tent is here connected with the keeping or rearing of cattle as a trade. The reason of this will be apparent to those acquainted with the East. Large flocks require a constant supply of grass throughout the year. This cannot be had in one locality. Shepherds therefore must move from place to place—southward in winter, northward in summer. A wandering life requires a movable habitation; hence the necessity for, and the invention of, the tent. P.]

Ver. 23, 24. To deter his wives from hurting him, or to render them fearless of his being hurt by others, he boasts that he was well able to take care of himself; and that God, who took so much care of Cain, would certainly take much more care of his life, who had never been a murderer. Perhaps for this purpose he puts it to them as a question, 'Have I slain a man to my wounding, or a young man to my hurt?' &c.

Ver. 26. The professors of the true religion, descended from Seth or others, called themselves the children of God, as a mark of distinction from the profane descendants of Cain; and they set up or re-established the more public and solemn worship of God on the Sabbath, or on other occasions.—[It is evident from this passage that at the birth of Enos some remarkable change took place in the manner in which the people of God paid their homage to the divine Being. It would seem that hitherto the worship had been chiefly ritualistic—by sacrifices and oblations; and that this had largely degenerated into a cold and heartless formalism. Now, however, the true nature of God, as expressed by the name JEHOVAH, began to be fully apprehended; and the consequence was that spiritual worship was given to him—'Then it was begun to invoke the name of Jehovah.' The phrase is impersonal. In the Hebrew there is no equivalent to 'men.' The mode of invocation was doubtless by prayer, both private and social; and God was invoked as JEHOVAH—the immutable, promising, and faithful God. The descendants of Cain devoted themselves to the pursuit of the arts and sciences, but the children of Seth rose to a true sense of man's dignity as an accountable and immortal being. They saw that God was a Spirit; and they worshipped him in spirit and in truth. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Let me believe the promise of God; but never sinfully hasten to obtain the promised blessing, lest I grasp a devil, a murderer, instead of the great God my Saviour! Never let me partially esteem children, or anything else, lest what I regard become the plague of my soul, or my house; while what I contemn as vanity be highly favoured of the Lord! Let me train up my children betimes in proper callings, and especially in the fear and service of God! Let me always honour the Lord with the best I possess, ever remembering that 'without faith it is impossible to please him!' If he show a superior regard to others, never let my eye be evil because he is good, but let me ascribe righteousness to him, and take to myself shame and confusion of face! But how great is the strength of enraged natural corruption! Nothing is so base, so impious, so unnatural, but it will attempt it. How fearful for guilty transgressors to fall into the hands of a just God! No falsehood can deceive him, nor force withstand him. Nor can all the carnal expedients on earth relieve a conscience divinely charged and burdened with guilt. Never let me envy the prosperity of the wicked, their cities erected, their numerous and thriving families, their artful inventions, or pleasures of sense! But when Jesus adds to his church, or reforms the worship of it, let me rejoice thereat. Meanwhile, in the name, the employ, the sacrifice, and death of Abel, let me behold Jesus appearing in the likeness of sinful flesh, and sullied with the vilest reproach!—Jesus, as the great Shepherd of his Father's church!—Jesus, as the faithful offerer of himself unto God for a sacrifice of a sweet-smelling savour!—Jesus, the hatred and murder of whom, by his brethren the Jews, issued in the curse of their country, the rejection of their church, and the scattering and misery of their nation, as a lasting monument of the justice of heaven!

CHAPTER V. Ver. 3. Seth was begotten, not in the image of God, in which Adam had been created, but in the image of fallen Adam, that is, with tendencies to evil in him. 'He was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did his mother conceive him,' Ps. 51. 5. 'A child of disobedience—by nature a child of wrath, even as others,' the profane descendants of Cain not excepted, Ep. 2. 2, 3.—What was born of flesh, corrupted parents, was flesh infected with sinful corruption, Jn. 3. 6; Job 14. 4. Observe: believing parents produce children according to their nature, not according to their grace.

Ver. 22–24. The pure use of conjugal life does not hinder the strictest practice of holiness. Amidst all the cares and pleasures of a family, Enoch walked with God as his intimate and glorious Friend and Companion, who manifested to him his amiable perfections in their new-covenant form, and bestowed his gracious blessings and influences upon him, Mi. 6. 8; Ge. 6. 9. He walked after God, imitating him as his perfect and engaging pattern, and always dependent on his drawing and

THE PILGRIMS—TENTING IN THE CITY WHERE CHRIST WAS BROUGHT UP. [Genesis, iv:20.]—"He was the father of such as dwell in tents." In the twentieth verse of the fourth chapter of Genesis, tents are mentioned for the first time in the Bible. Many people continue to live in tents in Palestine, and the tents used by the natives to-day do not vary much from such as were used in the early history of the country. They are woven of goat's hair and last a long time. The picture given above is of the traveling tent used by the parties who were sent to Bible lands to get the pictures of Bible places which illustrate this work. This modern tent, with apartments, carpets, iron bedsteads, and every convenience necessary to comfort, is as far from the tents of the Bedouins in Palestine, as Western civilization is from the primitive civilization of the crude sons of the desert. The modern tent we here see stands in Nazareth, near the Greek Church, and just above the Fountain of the Virgin.

1 The wickedness of the world, which provoked God's wrath, and caused the flood. 8 Noah findeth grace. 14 The order, form, and end of the ark.

AND it came to pass, when men[3] began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,

2 That the sons of God[4] saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose.

3 And the LORD said, [a]My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days[5] shall be an hundred and twenty years.

4 There were giants[6] in the earth in those days; and also after that,[7] when the sons of supporting grace, De. 13. 4; Ca. 1. 4; 8. 5. He walked before God, as his Master, Witness, and future Judge, always deeply impressed with a lively sense of his authority, presence, and purity, ch. 17. 1; 24. 40; Ps. 16. 8; 116. 9. He walked worthy of the Lord, fruitful in every good word and work, answerable to what God was to him, and had done or had promised to do for him, Col. 1 10,—answerable to his clear foresight of the future judgment, Jude 14, 15; 2 Pe. 3. 11, 14. He walked in Christ, living by faith on him, and through the grace of God 'denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and living soberly, righteously, and godly,' Col. 2. 6; Ga. 2. 20; Tit. 2. 11, 12. Publicly to approve and reward his holiness, and to render him a type of Christ's ascension, and a pledge of the complete and eternal glorification of the saints, God took him out of this world to heaven, both soul and body: He. 11. 5, 'By faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death, and was not found on earth, for God had translated him to heaven; for he had this testimony—that he pleased God.' —[Ver. 22. There is a peculiarity in the Hebrew word here. It has the article; 'Enoch walked with the Elohim.' Probably this may be intended to show that idolatry was already practised, and that false gods were worshipped by many. Enoch devoutly worshipped and faithfully followed the true God. P.]

Ver. 29. Noah brought rest and comfort by the building of his ark, in which the seminary of both the world and church did rest and was saved, Ge. vii. viii. ix. And by his inventions in husbandry he freed men from much of their toil occasioned by the curse on the ground. Ge. 9. 20 with 3. 17, 18. And, as a type and a preacher of righteousness, he was a mean of directing them to everlasting rest and consolation in Christ, 1 Pe. 3. 18–20.—[Moses does not mention that Enoch was a prophet, but this information was supplied by Jude 14. So Moses does not expressly say of Lamech (not the son of Cain of the same name, but of Methuselah) that he was a prophet. Yet the name Noah, which he gives to his son, signifying rest or comfort, intimates a prophetic foresight of the work he was destined to accomplish in the salvation of the church by water (He. 11. 7; 1 Pe. 3. 20, 21), at the very time when his faith condemned, and water destroyed an unbelieving and rebellious world. C.]

Ver. 32. Japheth was the eldest of Noah's sons, ch. 10. 21. and Ham the youngest, ch. 9. 24: but Shem is first mentioned, because of his piety, and his being one of the Messiah's progenitors, and because his posterity are the principal subject of Moses' writings; for the same reason Abram, though born sixty years later than Haran, is put first in the family of Terah, ch. 11. 26 with 12. 4. In the early ages of the world Providence wisely ordered it that people should live long, for the speedy replenishing of the world, and for the more effectual propagation of the true religion and other useful knowledge; and, no doubt, the superior wholesomeness of the air, and of their diet, and their temperance in the use of it, contributed to promote this longevity.

REFLECTIONS.—Whilst I read, let me with deep concern cry out, 'How is the gold become dim, and the most fine gold changed!' Behold how death reigns, through sin, from Adam to Noah; and how sure, though sometimes slowly, it strikes! Ah! what a nothing must I, my age, and all my labours be in his sight, before whom the long, long lives of ten patriarchs and replenished world make so insignificant a figure! To be born, to breathe, to rear up a family, and give up the ghost, how mean! Yet this is all of man! and how few, in a replenished world, are worthy of God's love! Let therefore Enoch, who walked with God, —or rather Jesus, the dedicated servant of God,—Jesus, who set the Lord always before him, and did always the things which pleased the Father—Jesus, who foretold the breaking forth of the floods of wrath upon Judah, and the world of the ungodly—Jesus, who clearly predicted the last judgment, and the procedure in it, and who, 'having by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high'—be my pattern in life, and my forerunner to glory! And let him be my rest and consolation to comfort me concerning my labour and toil, to take away the curse from all my enjoyments, to afford security and rest through all my trials, till he bring me to his new world of righteousness and glory!

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1, 2. The descendants of Cain, or other profane persons who had joined them, are here called men, because they had quite cast off all regard to God and his ways; and the professors of the true religion are called the sons of God—they had a visible relation to him, lived in his church, and professed to be born from above, and to be ready to yield a cheerful and evangelical obedience to his commands, ch. 4. 26; De. 14. 1; 2 Co. 6. 18. These wantonly gazed on the daughters of Cain, who seem to have been extremely handsome and jovial, Ju. 14. 1; 2 Pe. 2. 14; Mat. 5. 28; and, regardless of God's direction or allowance, they followed their fancies, and married them. Such unequal marriages of professors with the carnal and profane are expressly prohibited by the law of God, and have been a common plague to families, nations, and churches, 1 Co. 7. 39; 2 Co. 6. 14, 15; Mal. 2. 11; De. 7. 3, 4; Ex. 34. 16; Jos. 23. 12; Ge. 24. 3; 26. 34, 35; 27. 46; 28. 1, 2; xxxviii.; 2 Sa. 3. 3; with 13. 28, 29; xv.; 1 Ki. xi.; Ezr. 9. 1–3, 12; Ne. 13. 24–27.

Ver. 3. God's Spirit strove with them by his inward good motions, by the checks which he caused their consciences to give them, and by the counsels and warnings given them by Noah, the preacher of righteousness, or others, 1 Pe. 3. 18, 19; 2 Pe. 2. 5; Ne. 9. 30. They were flesh, not only frail and weak in their nature, but exceedingly and obstinately corrupt, carnal, and sensual in their heart and life—under the reign of actual sin, which is called flesh, Ro. 8. 1, 4. 7, 8; Jude 19—and mad on practising the manifest works of the flesh: adultery, fornication, &c., Ga. 5. 19–21.—[The action of the divine Spirit upon inert matter is mentioned in ch. 1. 2—he originated motion. His action upon man is here indicated. He strives with his sinful nature by internal, moral suasion; or, as it is called, the voice of conscience. God left man to himself; he 'gave them over to a reprobate mind,' Ro. 1. 28. The doctrine of the Holy Spirit is thus developed in the opening chapters of the Bible. P.]

Ver. 4. These giants, or huge-bodied men, in the pride and confidence of their stature and strength, became despisers of God and goodness, and oppressors of mankind.—[The Hebrew word nephilim ('giants') occurs only in one other passage (Nu. 13. 33), and there it is unquestionably used to denote men of extraordinary stature:—'There we saw the nephilim, the sons of Anak, who came of the nephilim, and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight.' The statement of the sacred writer is strikingly corroborated by eastern tradition. The nephilim existed previous to the mixed marriages: and were therefore a different race from the 'mighty men—men of renown.' P.]

Ver. 5. Je. 17. 9, 10, 'The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. I, the Lord search the heart, and try the reins, to give to every man according to his works;' Ro. 8. 7, 'The carnal mind is

God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.[7]

5 And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination[8] of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually.[9]

6 And it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart.[1]

7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man, whom I have created, from the face of the earth, both man and beast,[2] and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them.

8 ¶ But Noah found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

9 These are the generations[3] of Noah: Noah was a just man, and perfect[4] in his generations, and Noah [b]walked with God.

10 And Noah begat three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

11 The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence.

12 And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; [c]for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

13 And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is [d]filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth.[5]

14 ¶ Make thee an ark[6] of gopher-wood; rooms[7] shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

15 And this[8] is the fashion which thou shalt make it of: the length[9] of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.

16 A window[1] shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

17 And, behold, [e]I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; and every thing that is in the earth [f]shall die.

18 But with thee will [g]I establish my covenant;[2] and thou shalt [h]come into the ark; thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

19 And of every living thing of all flesh, [3]two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female.

20 Of fowls [i]after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind; two of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

21 And [k]take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee and for them.

22 Thus[l] did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he.

9 Heb. every day.

1 We must remember in interpreting this passage that language is intended to express human ideas. Words used to describe the attributes, nature, or acts of God, it must not be interpreted in its mere literality. The repentance of God is not the same as the repentance of man. It undoubtedly expresses some measure of the internal Spirit—a process, too, in a measure analogous to what we call repentance. But which is, at the same time, in perfect harmony with the eternity of the divine purpose. We cannot understand it, for it is beyond the range of our faculties.—P.

The Septuagint translators have declined to fix its meaning in Greek, perhaps from want of a correspondent word. Corrupt are they, they have done abominable iniquity. God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God. Ver. 6, 7. God's repentance denotes not any change of his purpose or will within himself. In this respect he is unchangeable, and cannot repent, Mal. 3. 6; Nu. 23. 19; 1 Sa. 15. 29; Ja. 1. 17. But it denotes the change of his providence correspondent with his fixed purpose, 1 Sa. 15. 11; Ps. 106. 45; Je. 18. 10; De. 32. 36; Ho. 11. 8. It is a word suited to our capacity; and here it denotes God's detestation of sin, and his fixed resolution to punish it, after man had made himself quite another thing than God had made him at first.

Ver. 8. To find grace in the eyes of the Lord, is to be freely loved and delighted in by him, in order to preservation from some remarkable destruction, or to the bestowal of some distinguished blessing, Ge. 19. 19; Ex. 33. 12, 13; 2 Sa. 15. 25; Lu. 1. 30; Ac. 7. 46; 2 Ti. 1. 18; He. 4. 16; thus Pr. 8. 35, 'Whoso findeth Christ findeth life, and shall obtain favour of the Lord;' 12. 2, 'A good man obtaineth favour of the Lord;' 3. 4; 18. 22.

Ver. 9. Noah was a just man, justified by faith in the blessed righteousness of Christ: Hab. 2. 4; He. 11. 7; Ro. 1. 17; 3. 22, 24; 5. 1; 8. 33; Ro. 5. 19, 'By the obedience of one (Christ) shall many be made righteous;' 2 Co. 5. 21, 'For God made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him;' Is. 14. 24, 25; Je. 23. 6; 33. 16; Phi. 3. 9. He was perfect, upright, and sincere, a man of great integrity and godly sincerity, having his heart wholly consecrated for God, entire in his obedience to all God's commandments, and watchfully keeping himself unspotted from the world, as ch. 17. 1; De. 18. 13; Job 1. 1, 8; Ps. 37. 37; 119. 1, 5, 6; Pr. 2. 21; Mat. 5. 48; Lu. 8. 15; 2 Co. 13. 11; 2. 9; Ep. 4. 11, 12; Phi. 3. 15; Col. 1. 28; 2 Ti. 3. 17; He. 13. 21; 1 Pe. 5. 10; Re. 3. 2; Lu. 1. 6, 'Righteous before God, and walking in all the commandments of the Lord blameless;' 2 Co. 1. 12, 'In simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in this world.' Noah was perfect in his generation, amidst men extremely wicked, and notwithstanding their evil counsels, examples, and persecutions. Phi. 2. 15, 'Be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world;' 1 Pe. 2. 15, 'That with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men;' 3. 16.—[We have apparently another ancient document commencing here in the usual form, 'These are the generations,' &c.; see ch. 2. 4; 5. 1; 10. 1; 11. 10, &c. Let it be observed that two distinct Hebrew words are translated 'generations' in this verse. The first signifies 'families,' or 'race,' while the second signifies 'the period of a man's life.' Noah was a perfect man in his period or age. P.]

Ver. 11. Multitudes of the most enormous sins abounded among all ranks, and were committed before God in an open and presumptuous manner; without any fear of him; nay, in defiance to his justice. So the wickedness of Nimrod and the Sodomites was committed, ch. 10. 9; 13. 13; 19. 13.

Ver. 13. The end of all flesh is come before me. The time for the destruction of mankind and animals, fixed in my purpose, is near at hand; as Je. 51. 13; Eze. 7. 2, 3, 6; Am. 8. 2.

Ver. 22. He. 11. 7, 'By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear' of the approaching flood, and notwithstanding manifold scoffs from his neighbours, 'prepared an ark to the saving of his house.'

REFLECTIONS.—Behold the dreadful fruits of professors' intimacy and matrimonial connection with the carnal and profane! How sin transforms this world into a kind of hell, filled with corruption, wickedness, and disorder! Behold how quickly it ripens it for a destructive deluge of divine wrath! How long and how patiently God bears with the manners of these monsters of impiety, after they seem ripened for ruin! But how sad their case when his Spirit ceaseth to strive with their consciences for their conversion and reformation! What a blessing are upright saints in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation! How highly regarded and honoured of God! And what distinguished means of preserving families, nations, churches, or even the world, from utter ruin!

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—Behold, my soul, the goodness and severity of God! His goodness—in saving the man whom his own grace had qualified for that mercy—in saving others, even the wicked part of his family, for his sake—in saving the brute animals in proportion to their serviceableness to man,

2 Of[c] every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens, the male and his female; and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female.[4]

3 Of fowls[5] also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth.

4 For yet seven days, and [d]I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights; and every living substance that I have made will I destroy[6] from off the face of the earth.

5 And Noah did [e]according unto all that the LORD commanded him.

6 And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth.

7 ¶ And [f]Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

8 Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth,

9 There [g]went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and the female, as God had commanded Noah.

10 ¶ And it came to pass after seven days,[7] that[h] the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

11 In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day[8] were all the [i]fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows[9] of heaven were opened.[1]

12 And the rain was upon the earth [k]forty days and forty nights.

13 In[1] the self-same day entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark:

14 They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every sort.[2]

15 And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

16 And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him: and the LORD [m]shut him in.

17 ¶ And the flood[3] was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.

18 And [n]the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

19 And the waters [o]prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high hills that were under the whole heaven were covered.

20 Fifteen cubits[4] upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

21 ¶ And [p]all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

22 All in whose nostrils was the breath of life,[5] of all that was in the dry land, died.

23 And[q] every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth:[6] and [r]Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

24 And the waters prevailed upon the earth [s]an hundred and fifty days.

AND God remembered Noah, and [a]every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: and God made [b]a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters assuaged;

2 The [c]fountains also of the deep, and the windows of heaven, were stopped, and the rain from heaven was restrained;

3 And the waters returned from off the earth continually;[7] and [d]after the end of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

4 ¶ And the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains[8] of [e]Ararat.[9]

5 And the waters decreased continually[1] until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

6 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah [f]opened the window[2] of the ark which he had made:

7 And he sent forth a [g]raven, which went forth to and fro,[3] until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

8 Also he sent forth [h]a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground:

It is mentioned in 2 Ki. 19. 37; Is. 37. 38; but in both places the Authorized Version has 'Armenia.' It is a mountainous region, the highest peak in it being the traditional Ararat, which has an elevation of 17,210 ft. The great elevation of this region made it a natural resting-place for the ark; and its geographical position, affording easy outlets by fertile valleys to all quarters of the globe, fitted it in a remarkable manner for the impartial distribution of the primeval tribes.—P.

in adding seven days' space of repentance to the wretched profligates who had abused the former reprieve of 120 years, and, after all, bringing the flood gradually on them, for their awakening, and to give them still further space to repent! But let me tremble at his righteous judgments! How the clouds from above, the wells from below, so long beneficial to mankind, now concur to destroy them! What multitudes who had despised his warnings now perish by his hand! And how ineffectual is every attempt to escape! While the ark of God's testament, his new covenant, is open, let me escape thither for my life, and bring with me, of my fellow-sinners, all whom I can. The day is at hand when the earth and the works thereof shall be burned up, and the door of mercy for ever shut. God forbid that I should be among those multitudes who shall then be shut out into outer darkness, where there is 'weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth!'

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 1. God's remembering persons or things denotes his manifesting his notice of them, either in a way of mercy for their deliverance or benefit, according to his promise, as here, and ch. 19. 29; 30. 22; Ex. 32. 13; Nu. 13. 14, 22; Job 14. 13; Ps. 132. 1; 106. 4; 136. 23; or in a way of wrath for their punishment, Ps. 137. 7; Am. 8. 7; Re. 16. 19; 18. 5.

Ver. 12. [It is important to note the periods of seven days which are repeatedly mentioned in this narrative. They indicate that the creation week still regulated the smaller divisions of time, and that the Sabbath was observed by the family of Noah. P.]

Ver. 14. [It thus appears that the rain continued forty days, the waters prevailed during one hundred and fifty

10 And he [k]stayed yet other seven days, and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark:

11 And the dove came in to him in the evening; and, lo, in her mouth was an olive-leaf[6] pluckt off. So Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

12 And he [m]stayed yet other seven days, and sent forth the dove, which returned not again unto him any more.

13 ¶ And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year,[7] in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth; and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

14 And in the [n]second month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

15 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, saying,

17 Bring forth with thee every living thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that [p]they may breed abundantly in the earth, and be fruitful, and multiply upon the earth.

18 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him:

19 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth, after their kinds,[8] went forth out of the ark.[9]

20 ¶ And [r]Noah builded an altar unto the LORD, and took of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt-offerings on the altar.[1]

9 The calendar of this melancholy year has been calculated as follows by Bayinger:—A. M. 1656, supp. Methuselah dies. Oct. Noah enters the ark. Nov. 17th, the fountains of the great deep broken open. Dec. 26th, the rain begins, and continues forty days. Jan. all men and beasts on earth perish. Feb. rain continued. March, the waters remained covering the mountains till the 27th, when they began to abate. April 17th, the ark rests on Ararat. May, the waters are receding. June 1st, mountain tops appear. July 11th, Noah lets go a raven: 18th, a dove which returns: 25th, the dove returns with an olive leaf. Aug. 31, the dove let out, returns no more. Sept. 1st, dry land appeared. Oct. 27th, Noah leaves the ark with his family.—C.

1 The language of the original is here very expressive. The altar was dedicated to JEHOVAH, Noah's covenant God, of whose faithfulness he had now experimental evidence. The offering consisted of one at least of every species of clean animals which he had taken into the ark. It was, besides, as the Hebrew word signifies, a holocaust, the victims being wholly consumed upon the altar. Noah thus, while expressing gratitude for complete deliverance, devoted all that was saved to God.—P.

Now, when he extends to Noah the permission to use animal food, he likewise retains a portion—the blood, which is the life, to testify that he is the alone giver of life, to remind man that he is subject to the sentence of death, and to lead him to the blood of 'the Lamb in purpose, promises, and types! slain from the foundation of the world.'—C.

days; and the whole period from the time Noah entered the ark till he left it was a lunar year and ten days, or just one solar year of 365 days. P.]

Ver. 20. It was common for the patriarchs to erect altars and offer sacrifices of thanksgiving for mercies received, and for the expiation of their own guilt, as in the case of Abraham, ch. 12. 7, 8; 13. 18; Isaac, 26. 25; Jacob, 35. 7; and Moses, Ex. 17. 15. These were typical of Christ our New Testament altar, as the sacrifices were of his oblation of himself, He. 10. 10-15.

Ver. 21. The Lord accepted it as a thing pleasant and delightful, proceeding from faith and gratitude, 1 Sa. 26. 19; Le. 26. 31; Am. 5. 21. God would hereafter improve the sinfulness of mankind as an occasion of manifesting his patience and mercy, Ps. 103. 11-14; 25. 21; Ex. 34. 9; Is. 43. 24, 25; 44. 22; 48. 8, 9; 7. 17, 18; 1. 18; Je. 3. 1, 4, 5, 14, 22. Thus, Ps. 106. 6-8, 'Though we have sinned with our fathers, have committed iniquity, have done wickedly, nevertheless he saved, for his name's sake, that he might make his mighty power to be known;' Eze. 16. 60-63, 'Nevertheless, notwithstanding innumerable and grievous provocations, I will remember my covenant with thee; I am pacified towards thee for all that thou hast done;' 20. 4-44, 'I have wrought with you for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings;' compare 36. 16-32; Ro. 5. 20 21. 'Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound; that as sin had reigned unto death, grace might reign through righteousness unto eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.'

Ver. 22. How remarkably exact over all the world hath been the fulfilment of this prediction for more than 4000 years past!

REFLECTIONS.—How graciously God remembers, and in mercy visits, his people in due time! Therefore, though the vision tarry, let me wait for it. How easily, and often gradually, the Lord accomplishes his merciful designs! As he never wants instruments of affliction and ruin, so neither of gracious deliverances. Whatever means I may use of information, or of affecting my conscience and heart, let me in all my ways acknowledge God, and wait for his direction out of straits as well as in them. If I receive deliverance, let my heart be lifted up in his way, and my thanksgivings wait for him in Zion! Let my hopes of future favours wholly depend upon his tender mercy, not on my own or others' reformation: for, alas! blessed or chastised, we are flagrant rebels still! But in this patriarch's ark do I not discern Jesus Christ? He is the absolutely necessary mean of our escaping the justly deserved and destructive floods of God's everlasting wrath. Everything in his mediatorial person and office was devised and appointed of God. He was gradually reared up in promises before he was actually incarnate, and gradually he finished his all-covering atonement. How wide is the gate of access to him revealed in the gospel! and what abundant room is there in his saving power, his love, his blood, his intercession, his covenant, and promise, for endangered sinners of mankind! His stories are his ancient undertaking, his humiliation, and his endless glory. No light is in him but what is of a spiritual and heavenly nature. By exposing himself to the deluging rains, the fearful billows, of his Father's wrath; to depths wherein was no standing, till at last he rested in his grave, and at his Father's right hand he bears up and saves sinners. How many despise him and his atonement! But by the power of God all who believe, both of Jews and Gentiles, are saved by him, and made heirs of new promises, inhabitants of a new covenant state, and an eternal world of blessedness!—And is not the same a figure of the gospel-church, in which, reared by Jesus' labours of love, the nations of them that are saved do live in this world 'till the winter be past, and the floods be over and gone?' And, happy period, when, after tossings unnumbered, the Lord shall call us forth into our fields, 'our house eternal in the heavens,' where rains, where storms, where nights, where winters, where curses never enter!

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 4. This restriction seems also to imply that the animals intended for food should be regularly killed by drawing off the blood; it thus 11 And [l]I will establish my covenant with you: neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

12 And God said, This is the token[g] of the covenant which I make between me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

13 I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.[1]

14 And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

15 And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

16 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I [m]may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

17 And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

18 ¶ And the sons of Noah, that went forth of the ark, were [n]Shem, and Ham, and Japheth; and Ham is the father of Canaan.[2]

19 These are the three sons of Noah; and of them was the whole earth overspread.

20 ¶ And Noah began to be an [o]husbandman, and he planted a vineyard:[3]

21 And he drank of the wine, and was [p]drunken; and he was uncovered within his tent.

22 And Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father, and [q]told his two brethren without.

23 And [r]Shem and Japheth took a garment, and laid it upon both their shoulders, and went backward, and covered the nakedness of their father; and their faces were backward, and they saw not their father's nakedness.

24 And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him.

25 And he said, [s]Cursed be Canaan;[4] a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.

26 And he said, [t]Blessed be the LORD God of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.[5]

27 God shall enlarge[6] Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.

Ver. 18. [The last clause of this verse is manifestly inserted as introductory to the painful incident which is narrated below. The mind of the writer being specially directed to that incident, he naturally connects Canaan with Ham. It would seem, too, from the tenor of the whole narrative, that Canaan must have been in some way implicated. Probably he was the first who discovered Noah, and then told his father. P.]

Ver. 24. [Some suppose that this expression, which may be translated 'his little son,' applies to Canaan, Noah's grandson. This, however, is contrary to the idiom of the Hebrew. There can be no doubt that the words apply to Ham, and ought to be rendered 'his youngest son,' thus indicating Ham's position in the family of Noah. P.]

Ver. 25 27. These predictions are greatly extensive: almost every prediction in Scripture relative to the Egyptians, Canaanites, Tyrians, and Sidonians, is comprehended in this repeated curse of Canaan. Almost every prediction relative to the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and Arabs, and especially what relates to the Jewish nation and Jesus Christ, is included in the blessing of Shem. Almost every prediction relative to the Greeks, Romans, Goths, Tartars, and Turks, and especially what relates to the gospel-church among the Gentiles, is contained in the blessing of Japheth. The fulfilment of these predictions is no less remarkable. Much of the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, much of the history of nations, is no more than an account of it. The descendants of Ham, by his sons Cush, Mizraim, Phut, and Canaan, peopled Africa and part of Western Asia. For about four thousand years past the bulk of the Africans have been abandoned of Heaven to the most gross ignorance, rigid slavery, stupid idolatry, and savage barbarity. Scarcely ever hath a state formed of them made any respectable figure - the Egyptians and Carthaginians excepted; and even they had little dominion over any part of the descendants of Shem or Japheth. For many ages the northern parts of Africa were enslaved or harassed by the Assyrian, Chaldean, and Persian descendants of Shem; and next by the Greeks, but especially the Roman and Vandal descendants of Japheth. For eleven hundred years past they have been enslaved by the Ishmaelite Saracens descended from Shem, or by the Seljukian and Ottoman Turks descended of Japheth. And what multitudes of the Western Africans were formerly bought for slaves by the English, and further by the Spaniards, the French, Portuguese, and Dutch, and condemned to the hardest drudgery in their American plantations! It was Canaan, I suppose, who first saw the nakedness of Noah, and told his father of it. His posterity first settled in the west of Asia, and the curse hath pursued them in a still more remarkable manner. About A.M. 2079 Chedorlaomer and his Elamite descendants of Shem rendered tributary the Canaanitish kingdoms of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar. Upon their revolt he invaded and pillaged their country, Ge. xiv. Not long after they, Zoar excepted, were destroyed with fire and brimstone from heaven, for their unnatural lewdness and other abominations, Ge. xix. The Hebrews, chiefly under Moses, Joshua, and Barak, cut off most of the other Canaanites, and seized on their country, Nu. xxi.; Jos. vi.–xix.; Ju. iv. The Gibeonites and others, whose lives were spared, were subjected to slavery, Jos. ix.; Ju. i.; 2 Sa. v. Solomon had more than 150,000 of them employed as slaves in the building of the temple, 1 Ki. 9. 20, 22; 5. 15, 16. They who settled in the north-west of Canaan, and formed the once flourishing states of Tyre and Sidon, were by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Persians, but chiefly by the Greeks, Romans, Saracens, and Turks, reduced to great misery and bondage, till at last they were totally ruined, Is. xxiii.; Eze. xxvi, xxviii. They who fled from Joshua, or afterwards to Northern Africa, and formed the Carthaginian and other states, were, after much contention and mutual enslavement, reduced by the Romans to the basest servitude and misery; and for about two thousand years that country hath been one continued scene of slavery to the Romans, Vandals, Saracens, or Turks. The Phœnician Canaanites, who, pushing their fortunes, settled in the Mediterranean islands, or in Greece, Italy, or on the border of the Euxine Sea, have shared a similar fate of thraldom and misery from the Persians, Greeks, Romans, Saracens, Normans, or Turks. But the countries of Persia, Assyria, Chaldea, Lydia, Syria, Arabia, India, and I suppose most of China, were peopled by the posterity of Elam, Asshur, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aram, sons of Shem. The blessings bestowed upon them by God have been remarkable. The most rich or fertile parts of the world fell to their share. They formed the Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, and Saracen monarchies, which in their turns enslaved the offspring of Canaan. For two thousand years, from the death of Noah to that of Christ, the knowledge of the true religion and the new covenant relation to God, as his church and people, were almost wholly confined to them, particularly to the Jews; and from them the Messiah, the Lord from heaven, had his human descent; and from them the apostolic founders of the gospel church did spring. The sons of Japheth were Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras. Their descendants, the Celts or Gauls, the Tartars, Medes, Greeks, Romans, Goths, Turks, &c., prodigiously multiplied, and peopled the whole of Europe, the northern half of Asia, and I suppose most of America. For many ages they have been settling themselves in the original habitations of the posterity of Shem. The Medes, assisted by the Chaldeans, overturned the Assyrian empire; and afterwards, assisted by the Persians, whom they had subdued, ruined the Chaldean. Perhaps it was their Scythian brethren who about two hundred years after founded the powerful monarchy of the Parthians in Persia and the places about; while multitudes of the overstocked Gauls from Europe invaded Asia, and partly took up their residence in Mesopotamia. About three hundred and thirty years before the birth of our Saviour, the Greeks, under Alexander, overran Asia to the river Indus, and for several ages held it in subjection. Next the Romans pushed their conquests into Syria, Assyria, and Canaan; and for more than seven hundred years retained what they could of it. For many ages the Tartarian Huns and Turks continued to pour themselves into Persia and the countries about. In the eleventh century of the Christian reckoning, the Seljukian Turks formed themselves into the four kingdoms of Bagdad, Damascus, Aleppo, and Iconium, and quickly extended their dominion as far as the Indus. Meanwhile Mahmud-Gazni, with an army of Tartars and others, invaded India, and founded there a mighty empire, which continued about two hundred years. In the 13th century Jenghis Khan and his sons, with their Tartar troops, conquered the greater part of Asia. The empires which they founded in China and in Persia continued about nine generations. In the beginning of the 15th century Tamerlane with his Tartars overran great part of Asia.

There appears from the statement of Moses no good reason for understanding the phrase in a hostile sense. Our Lord tells the disciples they should be fishers of men, a phrase as indicative of aggression as hunter. The words before the Lord express God's visible or acknowledged presence in a place or emergence, 1 Chron. 18. 22. Jer. 27. 18, and seem intended to ascribe to Nimrod a religious regard to God in his rural employment as a hunter, as having the foundation of that energy of character which progressively raised him to the throne of the first empire. and founded an empire in Persia, and another in Western India, which still subsists under the Great Mogul. For about three hundred years the Ottoman Turks have been masters of Assyria, Syria, Canaan, and the places about; while the Portuguese, the Spaniards, the English, the Dutch, the Danes, and French, have been rendering themselves masters of islands or settlements, almost innumerable, in the East Indies. Thus there is scarce one single country of note which originally pertained to the offspring of Shem but is now possessed or governed by the enlarged posterity of Japheth, Arabian Hejiaz excepted. Multitudes too of the posterity of Japheth in Asia and America, but chiefly in Europe, have been persuaded of God to embrace the true religion, and become his church, ever since the Jews were rejected. The far greater part of that race known to us do, and for many ages have, at least in word, made profession of the Christian faith, while very few of the descendants of Shem or Ham have so much as pretended it. Nor do I remember that the Christian religion ever had a public establishment from one of them, the Abyssinians excepted. What an exact, an explicatory, and confirming counterpart is the whole providence of God to his word! What understanding of the divine authenticity of the scriptures, and of the love and faithfulness of God, may I attain by a wise and careful observation thereof!——[Ver. 27. This remarkable prophecy is given in the form of a short poem, and consists of three parts—a curse upon Canaan, and a blessing upon Shem and Japheth. But it will be observed that each blessing embodies, while it illustrates, the first curse. Canaan appears to be mentioned as the representative of the whole Hamites—the head of that section of the Hamitic race with which the Israelites came specially into contact. The whole prophecy has been remarkably fulfilled in the history of mankind since it was uttered. The Hamites as a race have been 'servants of servants,' i.e., as the Hebrew idiom implies, they have been in a state of perpetual servitude under the Shemitic Israelites, and the Japhetic Greeks, Romans, and Saxons. Japheth has been enlarged. His descendants occupy at this day the territories of Shem, and constitute the leading nations of the civilized world. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Lord, what is man, that thou shouldst be so mindful of him and his concerns! that thou shouldst so care for his welfare and his life! that thou shouldst so familiarly covenant with him, and so often repeat thy declarations for the strengthening and confirmation of his faith! May I always accept thy favours with thankfulness, and obey thy commandments with cheerfulness! But ah, how quickly do we forget his mighty works! how fearfully do the best stumble and fall, if the Lord uphold them not mightily! How readily do fools trample on every tie of relation or duty, in order to make a mock of sin! But dreadful is the curse, lasting and extensive the disfavour, which awaits those who contemn and deride their aged parents: while blessings shall lie on their head who regard them, and cover their infirmities. But let me not bid adieu to the dying patriarch, till in him I contemplate the great God my Saviour! His name is a bed of rest, and source of comfort. He is the distinguished favourite of Heaven. In the midst of a crooked and perverse generation he dared to be singularly good: at once he gave an unblemished pattern of uprightness, and boldly preached righteousness in the great congregation. To him mankind owe their recovery from ruin. By him the church is gradually built up as the mean of our salvation, and his believers are rendered true members thereof. Upon the savour of his sweet-smelling sacrifice God hath promised no more to curse the world. With him and believers is the new covenant for ever established; and to them are the inheritance and rules of the new covenant state conferred. By him is the church, the vineyard of the Lord of hosts, planted and cultivated; and in his word is irreversibly declared the everlasting fate of his faithful ones. Behold how those who love his person, and hide the infirmities of his saints, are blessed with all spiritual blessings! Behold how the curse of sin pursues both wicked Jews and carnal professors, who stumble at this corner-stone, who turn his grace into licentiousness, and the infirmity of his saints into ridicule! and what everlasting ruin it entails upon them.

Ver. 2. [Japheth was Noah's oldest son. Of his children Gomer was the ancestor of the Cimbri and Celts; Magog of the Scythians and Mongolians; Madai of the Medes; Javan of the Ionians and Greeks; and Meshech of the Muscovites or Russians. P.]

Ver. 5. Europe, Lesser Asia, and the islands of the Mediterranean Sea, are these isles of the Gentiles. The Jews called countries situated on the sea-shore, or parted from their own by sea, isles, Je. 47. 4, 'Country (Heb. isles) of Caphtor; 25. 22. To these isles of the Gentiles the gospel promises are peculiarly directed, and on their inhabitants they have been peculiarly fulfilled, Ps. 72. 10; 97. 1; Is. 24. 15; 42. 4, 10, 12; 49. 1; 51. 5; 60. 9; 66. 19; Zep. 2. 11, &c.

Ver. 6. [The word Ham signifies 'warmth;' and Ham's descendants all migrated southward. Of his sons Cush was ancestor of the Ethiopians; Mizraim of the Egyptians; Phut of the Lybians; and Canaan of the Canaanites, of whom there were many sub-tribes. P.]

Ver. 8, 9. Perhaps Nimrod first made himself popular by hunting down the wild beasts which began to infest the country, and then openly, and without fear of God, he usurped the government over his neighbours, and became so cruel an oppressor or persecutor, Je. 16. 16; La. 4. 18; Eze. 13. 18, that his name became a proverb of reproach; comp. 2 Ch. 28. 22.

Ver. 10. [Babel is Babylon; Erech is the ruin Warka, about 90 miles S.E. of Babylon, on the banks of the Euphrates; and Calneh, now called Niffer, is situated about 60 miles N.E. of Erech, in the plain of Mesopotamia. These great cities are now desolate heaps. P.]

Ver. 12. [The ruins of Nineveh cover the plain on the east bank of the Tigris, opposite Mosul. About 60 miles farther south, on the right bank of the Tigris, lie the ruins of Calah. Between the two, 20 miles from Nineveh, are extensive ruins called Nimrud, which are probably identical with Resen. P.]

Ver. 21. The children of Eber are the Hebrews, who being followers of him in his faith and holiness, and the peculiar people of God from whom the Messiah sprung, were the principal descendants of Shem, and those on whom his blessing was chiefly conferred, Nu. 24. 24. children of Eber,[8] the brother of Japheth the elder, even to him were children born.[9]

22 The [a]children of Shem; Elam,[1] and Asshur, and Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram.[2]

23 And the children of Aram; Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and Mash.

24 And Arphaxad begat Salah;[3] and Salah begat Eber.

25 And[t] unto Eber were born two sons: the name of one was Peleg; for in his days was the earth divided; and his brother's name was Joktan.

26 And [u]Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah, 27 And Hadoram, and Uzal, and Diklah,

28 And Obal, and Abimael, and Sheba,

29 And [v]Ophir, and [w]Havilah, and Jobab: all these were the sons of Joktan.

30 And their dwelling was from Mesha,[4] as thou goest unto Sephar, a mount of the east.

31 These are the sons of Shem,[5] after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their nations.

32 These[x] are the families of the sons of Noah, after their generations, in their nations: and by these were the nations divided in the earth after the flood.

CHAPTER XI.

1 One language in the world. 3 The building of Babel. 5 The confusion of tongues. 10 The generations of Shem. 27 The generations of Terah the father of Abram. 31 Terah goeth from Ur to Haran.

AND the whole earth was of one language,[6] and of one speech.[7]

2 And it came to pass, as they journeyed from the east,[8] that they found a plain in the land of Shinar;[9] and they dwelt there.

3 And they said one to another, [a]Go to, let us make brick, and burn them thoroughly. And they had [b]brick for stone, and slime[1] had they for mortar.

4 And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach [c]unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.[2]

5 And the LORD [d]came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

6 And the LORD said, Behold,[3] the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will[4] be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.

7 Go to, let [e]us go down, and there [f]confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech.[5]

8 So the LORD [g]scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

9 Therefore is the name of it called [h]Babel; because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.

10 ¶ These[h] are the generations of Shem: Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood.

11 And Shem lived,[7] after he begat Arphaxad, five hundred years, and [i]begat sons and daughters.

12 And Arphaxad lived five and thirty [k]years, and begat Salah.

13 And Arphaxad lived, after he begat Salah, four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

14 And Salah [l]lived thirty years,[9] and begat Eber.

15 And Salah lived, after he begat Eber, four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

16 And[k] Eber lived four and thirty [l]years, and begat Peleg [2]

17 And Eber lived, after he begat Peleg, four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.

18 And Peleg lived thirty years,[3] and begat [m]Reu.

19 And Peleg lived, after he begat Reu, two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

20 And Reu lived two and thirty years,[4] and begat [m]Serug.

21 And Reu lived, after he begat Serug, two hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.

22 And Serug lived thirty years,[5] and begat Nahor.[6]

23 And Serug lived, after he begat Nahor, two hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

24 And Nahor lived nine and twenty [7]years, and begat [n]Terah.

25 And Nahor lived, after he begat Terah, an hundred and nineteen years, and begat sons and daughters.

26 And Terah lived seventy years,[8] and [o]begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran.

REFLECTIONS.—How quickly God can repair the most remarkable breaches in external things, and make families increase and spread when he pleaseth! But alas! how soon human pride and lust of dominion revive, notwithstanding the most tremendous judgments of God upon them! Neither floods, nor flames, nor sword, nor famine, nor pestilence, but Jesus' blood and Spirit alone, can extirpate our sinful inclinations. How insatiably do carnal men covet and grasp at power or property! and the more they have, the more they hunt after! But let me remember, that all my hunting after these vanities is against, as well as before, the Lord. How often God prospers the wicked under their energy and industry, and also by the same means provides wealth for his people! But much happier is it to be with Eber, a father of saints, than to be with Ham, a parent of ambitious and tyrannical hunters, or of numerous Canaanites devoted to misery and ruin.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 2. Shinar embraced the great plain on both sides of the Euphrates, which was afterwards called Babylonia. Bitumen (or 'slime') wells are still found in it. Some of the most ancient bricks in the desolate mounds of Babylonia and Chaldea are 'thoroughly burned,' and are usually inscribed with the name of the reigning monarch. P.]

MOUNT GERIZIM—WHERE THE SAMARITANS WORSHIPED. [Genesis, xii:6.]—"And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land." The "place of Sichem" referred to was afterward known as Shechem, and now is called Nablous. Shechem, or Nablous, is built between the mountains Ebal and Gerizim. It is more completely at the foot of Mount Gerizim. The mount really slopes down into the town. This is the first town mentioned in Palestine connecting it with the history of God's chosen people. Abraham erected an altar here and consecrated the place to the worship of Jehovah, and after the children of Israel took possession of the country, the bones of Joseph were deposited at Shechem, in the parcel of land which Jacob purchased of the children of Hamor, the father of Shechem, for a hundred pieces of silver. (Joshua, xxiv:32.) This mountain is notable because it is the one to which the woman of Samaria referred in her conversation with our Savior at Jacob's well.

27 ¶ Now these are the generations of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat Lot.

28 And Haran died before his father Terah in the land of his nativity, in [p]Ur of the Chaldees.

29 And Abram and Nahor took them wives: [q] the name of Abram's wife was [r]Sarai; and the name of Nahor's wife [s]Milcah, the daughter of Haran, the father of Milcah, and the father of Iscah.[t]

30 But Sarai was [u]barren; she had no child.

31 ¶ And Terah[1] took Abram[2] his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter-in-law, his son Abram's wife; [v]and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto [w]Haran,[3] and dwelt there.

32 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.

CHAPTER XII.

1 God calleth Abram, and blesseth him with a promise of Christ. 6 He departeth with Lot from Haran. 6 He journeyeth through Canaan, 7 which is promised him in a vision. 10 He is driven by a famine into Egypt. 11 Fear maketh him feign his wife to be his sister. 14 Pharaoh, having taken her from him, by plagues is compelled to restore her.

NOW the [a]LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee.

2 We learn from Ac. 7. 2, that God's first appearance and direction to Abram was before he dwelt in Charran. We learn from Jos. 24. 2, that Terah and his progenitors were all idolaters previous to this call; and from this verse, 31, we find that Terah took Abram his son, &c. from Ur, to go into the land of Canaan. Is it not therefore reasonable to conclude that Terah had been converted by the testimony of Abram his son, whom he not more unwillingly parted, but took him forth to the promised land? —C.

[2] Haran, or Charran, situate in the northwest of Mesopotamia, has retained its name with little variation in all ages. The Greeks and Romans called it Carræ. It is mentioned in Ezek. 27. 23, as a place that traded with Tyre. Benjamin of Tudela (12th cent.) found it altogether decayed: in 1796 it was reported to Niebuhr as a small place much frequented by Jews.—C.

[3] This seems to be the second appearance of the Lord to Abram, after he removes from from Haran, where the family of Terah had settled. They had returned at least, some part of their idolatry (see ch. 31. 30), and therefore the total separation of Abram became absolutely necessary for himself and his family.—C. See next note.

[4] Note.—It is often a sore trial to flesh and blood to separate, in any degree, from irreligious relations; but if their principles and example tend to injure ourselves or our children, the sacrifice must be made. It is one form of that denial of self and taking up of the cross, Mat. 16. 24, essential to the following of our Lord.—C.

[5] We learn from Jn. 1. 18 that no man hath seen God at any time; but "the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared (or educed) him." Therefore the LORD who appeared to Abram, whatever was the manner of that appearing, was the Son of God, and as such received Abram's worship.—C.

3 And[c] I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

4 ¶ So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.[4]

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan;[5] and[d] into the land of Canaan they came.

6 ¶ And Abram passed through the land unto the place of [e]Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the [f]Canaanite was then in the land.

7 And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an [g]altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.[6]

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of [h]Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai on the east; and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD.

his manifesting his notice of it in his deliberate and just judgments upon them for it, ch. 18. 20, 21.

Ver. 28. [The Hebrew word is Kasdim, but our translators have adopted the name Chaldea from the Greek. As a geographical term it has a wide signification, embracing the whole country of Mesopotamia, with the region extending southward to the Persian Gulf. Chaldea proper was confined to the plain on both banks of the Euphrates from Babylon southward to the Tigris. The city of Ur has been recently identified with the vast mounds of Mugheir or Mugayer, about 90 miles S.E. of Babylon, on the west bank of the Euphrates. On bricks dug up from the mounds of Mugheir the name Ur has been discovered by Loftus. It is worthy of note that Mugheir signifies 'Mother of Bitumen.' P.]

Ver. 31. [Terah, instead of striking right across the Arabian desert to Palestine, went north-west along the banks of the Euphrates. It is the route an Arab tribe would still follow; because in the desert there is little pasture for flocks, and no water. Haran still retains its ancient name, and some relics of former greatness. It is now a small and poor village standing on the bank of a small river called Belik, which flows into the Euphrates about 50 miles to the southward. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How awful the presumption of sinners, who dare attempt to withstand the known command and purpose of the Almighty! Deeply should it affect us that we find the serpent's seed so harmonious and active in wickedness, while the children of promise are so divided and inactive in holiness. But with equity and ease the Lord frustrates the devices of the crafty, and turneth the counsel of the froward headlong, while he causes men's sinful attempts towards fame and power effectually to issue in their infamy and weakness. What a mercy that, as the confusion of tongues effected the dispersion of mankind, the miraculous gift of tongues contributed to spread the gospel, to gather sinners to Jesus, and to build up his church throughout the earth! Behold how the blessing of Noah begins to operate in the family of Shem, and will do till after the ascension of Christ! How proper to remark the providences of God in the names of our children, or otherwise! How precious are the saints, the church, in God's sight! They are allowed far more room in his inspired registers than all the world besides. If Terah, who set out for Canaan, died by the way, let me tremble, lest, a promise being left me of entering into God's rest, I should seem to come short of it!—tremble lest I should be almost, but never altogether, a Christian, not far from the kingdom of God, but never a true member thereof here, or partaker of it hereafter!

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. While Abram was in Ur of the Chaldees, God appeared to him, probably in human shape, Ac. 7. 2, as he did at least eight times afterwards, Ge. 12. 6, 7; 13. 3, 4; 15. 1; 17. 1; 18. 1; 21. 12; 22. 1, 15, and called him to leave his country and his father's house, which for some time past had been infected with idolatry, Jos. 24. 2; 2 Co. 6. 17; Re. 18. 4; Is. 41. 2; Ne. 9. 7. He readily surrendering all for the sake of Christ, Ps. 45. 11; Lu. 14. 26, in obedience to the divine command, and relying on his direction and protection, went forth, not knowing whither the Lord intended to lead him, He. 11. 8. But as they had stopped too long in Haran, I suppose the call here mentioned was one which he received anew after the death of his father.

Ver. 2. Abraham was made a great nation. His posterity by Ishmael, by the sons of Keturah, and by Esau, were exceedingly numerous, ch. 16. 10; 17. 20; 21. 13; 25. 1–18; xxxvi.; Nu. xxxi.; Ju. vi. vii. His seed of promise, by Jacob, were as the stars of heaven and the dust of the earth in multitude, ch. 13. 16; 15. 5; 22. 17; 28. 3, 14; 32. 12; Nu. i.; 23. 10; He. 11. 12; 1 Ch. xxi.; 1 Ki. 4. 20; 2 Ch. xvii.; Je. 33. 22. His spiritual seed, followers of his faith and obedience, are still more numerous, a multitude which no man can number, Ps. 2. 8, 9; 22. 27–30; lxii. xcviii.; Is. xlii. xlix. lx.; Re. 7. 4–9; 11. 15.—All the spiritual children of Jesus, his eminent seed, are included herein, Is. 53. 10–12. God blessed Abram, (1) with the numerous seed mentioned; (2) with Canaan, as the future property of part of them; (3) with Christ as his eminent seed, Ga. 3. 16; (4) with all spiritual blessings in Christ, Ga. 3. 14, with Ep. 1. 3. Abram was a blessing, (1) to his friends and servants, who were instructed by him, Ge. 14. 14; 18. 19; (2) to his posterity, who were blessed for his sake, Ex. 3. 6–8; Le. 26. 42; Ge. 17. 20; (3) to the world, as an eminent pattern of faith and holiness, Ro. iv., and as the progenitor of Christ the Saviour, Ga. 3. 13, 16.—God did and will remarkably befriend and prosper the friends of Abram and his natural seed, but especially of Jesus Christ and his spiritual seed; and did and will remarkably punish their enemies, Jos. 2. 9; Ge. 15. 13, 14; Ex. 17. 8–16; Mat. 10. 42; 25. 41–46. All the families of the earth are blessed in Abram. He was of great service to the Canaanites, in imparting revelation to some of them, or in setting before them all an engaging example of virtue. His seed of promise, and especially his spiritual seed, are useful on that account, and have been and are still the means of the prosperity or protection of nations, Is. 6. 13; 19. 24, 25; Mat. 24. 22. But it is properly in his seed (Christ) that men are blessed. Multitudes of nations receive much outward happiness, and the dispensation of gospel ordinances, in consequence of his undertaking for his people, Mat. 24. 24; Is. xxxv. xlix. lx.; 6. 13. And believers, gathered out of all nations, are blessed in him with temporal, spiritual, and eternal blessings, Ga. 3. 16; Ac. 3. 25, 26; Ep. 1. 3; Ps. 72. 17–19; Is. 45. 17–25. It is easy to see, that the subsequent promises and threatenings, nay, the doctrines and laws, mentioned in Scripture, are but an enlarged exposition of these two verses; and the whole fate of the Jewish and gospel church, nay, of the saints in heaven and lost in hell, are but one continued fulfilment thereof.

Ver. 3. [The command given to Abraham involved great personal sacrifices—country, kindred, and home; and also great faith—he knew not where he was going. But the blessing promised was most cheering and comprehensive. It embraced himself, all who favoured and honoured him, the whole nation that was to spring from him, and all the families of the earth. Abraham by faith saw in this last promise the most glorious and blessed of all truths—the atoning work of the Messiah, Ac. 3. 25; Ga. 3. 8. P.]

Ver. 6. [Sichem, or Shechem, or Sychar, was situated in a beautiful valley between the mountains Ebal and Gerizim. It was called by the Romans Neapolis, and its modern name is Nabulus. A mile east of it, at the opening of the valley, is a broad and fertile plain—no doubt the place where Abraham, and afterwards Jacob, pitched their tents. P.]

Ver. 7. For about four hundred and seventy years after, the Canaanites remained fixed in the possession of Canaan; during which time God, for the confirmation of his people's faith, renewed this grant of their

THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT—A MONUMENT ABRAHAM SAW. [Genesis, xii:11.]—When Abraham made his first visit to Egypt, 1921 B. C., the Great Pyramid, according to the estimate of Wallis Budge, Assistant Keeper of the Department of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities, British Museum, had been standing 1,812 years; so while we look at the Great Pyramid to-day, we may know at least that we are beholding one monument seen by Abraham. This pyramid was built by Cheops as his tomb. This is the largest of all the pyramids; covers about thirteen acres of land, and in the center of it is what is called the King's Chamber, where Cheops was buried. It is the first object that meets the eye when approaching Cairo, and is one of the monuments that the traveler never forgets. There is enough stone, it is said, in this great pyramid to build a wall all around the frontiers of France. Much of this material has been used in the building of modern Cairo.

9 And Abram journeyed, going on[r] still toward the south.

10 ¶ And there was a [s]famine in the land: and Abram went down[s] into Egypt to sojourn there; for the [t]famine was grievous in the land.

11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art[t] a fair woman to look upon:

12 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife; and they [m]will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

13 Say,[n] I pray thee, thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for thy sake; and my soul shall live because of thee.[g]

14 ¶ And[1] it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians[o] beheld the woman that she was very fair.

15 The [p]princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before [q]Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house.

16 And he entreated Abram well for her sake:[2] and [r]he had sheep, and oxen, and he asses, and men-servants, and maid-servants, and she-asses, and camels.

17 And the LORD [s]plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai, Abram's wife.

18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, What[t] is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

20 And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him: and they [u]sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

The Spirit of God records it without comment, not because it is to be commended, or in any form imitated, but as a mere fact, illustrative of the weakness of man, and his need of more faith and of the power of grace that can bring good out of evil, and the mercy that can pardon iniquity, transgression, and sin.—C.

[7] The view from the crown of the ridge between Bethel and Ai is most commanding. It embraces a large section of Southern Palestine, and the whole valley of the Jordan around Jericho. The reference to Egypt is natural, whether we regard this passage as written by Moses, who was familiar with Egypt, or by Abraham himself, who had just returned from that country. The rich and well watered valley of the Jordan bears in places a striking resemblance to the valley of the Nile; and it seems that resemblance was even greater before the destruction of Sodom and the enlargement of the Dead Sea. All difficulty is removed from the passage if we translate according to the grammatical construction of the Hebrew, thus: 'Lot . . . beheld all the plain of Jordan towards Zoar, that it was well watered,' &c. From the spot on which Lot stood Zoar lay directly beyond the plain, or 'circuit' of the Jordan, hence it is said, 'All the circuit of the Jordan towards Zoar.'—P.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Abram and Lot return out of Egypt. 7 By disagreement they part asunder. 10 Lot goeth to wicked Sodom. 14 God reneweth the promise to Abram. 18 He removeth to Hebron, and there buildeth an altar.

AND Abram went up out of Egypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, into the [a]south.[3]

2 And Abram was [b]very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys from the south[4] even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Hai;

4 Unto the [c]place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and [d]there Abram called on the name of the LORD.

5 And Lot also, which went[5] with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and [e]tents.

6 And the [f]land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

7 ¶ And there was a [g]strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle. And the [h]Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelt then in the land.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, [i]Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren.[6]

9 Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

10 ¶ And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld [k]all the plain of Jordan,[7] that it was well watered every where, before the LORD destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the LORD, country, times almost innumerable, to Abram and his seed, Ge. 13. 15; 15. 7, 18; 17. 8; 22. 17; 26. 3; 28. 4, 13, 14; 35. 12; 46. 4; 48. 21; 50. 24; Ex. 3. 8, 17; 6. 8; 12. 25; 13. 5; 20. 12; Le. 25. 2; De. 2. 24; 4. 1, 21; 11. 10, 17–31; 15. 4, 7; 8. 7, 9; 9. 1, &c. Canaan was granted as a pledge of heaven to him and his spiritual seed, Ro. 9. 6–8; Ga. 4. 22, 31.—[The land of Canaan, so called from the son of Ham, had the Mediterranean to the west, Egypt to the south, Arabia to the east, and Phœnicia and Syria to the north. From Dan on the north, to Beersheba on the south, it is in length about 150, and its average breadth is about 90 miles. But this did not include the entire possession promised to Israel, as appears from Jos. 1. 4, which extension was realized in part to David, and completely to Solomon, 1 Ki. 4. 21.—Builded he an altar. That Abram, before this time, knew and worshipped God, there can be no doubt; but this is the first altar erected by him; that is, the first decided and public establishment of the worship of Jehovah in his family.—Note. It is well known, that young Christians, who worship God in private, often find considerable difficulty in commencing family worship. Let them remember Abram's faith, and Abram's altar, and Abram's blessing, and take courage. C.]

Ver. 8. Abram called on God, i.e. worshipped him by prayer, by preaching to his family, and by offering sacrifices for himself and them, ch. 18. 19; 21. 13.—[Abram, in his new habitation, erected a second altar to God.—Note. It is not uncommon for men to speak and act religiously in one company or place, where religion is prevalent, or if it may be so called, fashionable, who yet totally lay it aside in another place or company, where religion is less regarded, or perhaps altogether despised. Abram testifies for God wherever he goes. C.——Bethel is 20 miles south of Sichem, and 10 north of Jerusalem. The site of Abraham's camp was about a mile east of Bethel, on the broad summit of a rocky ridge. P.]

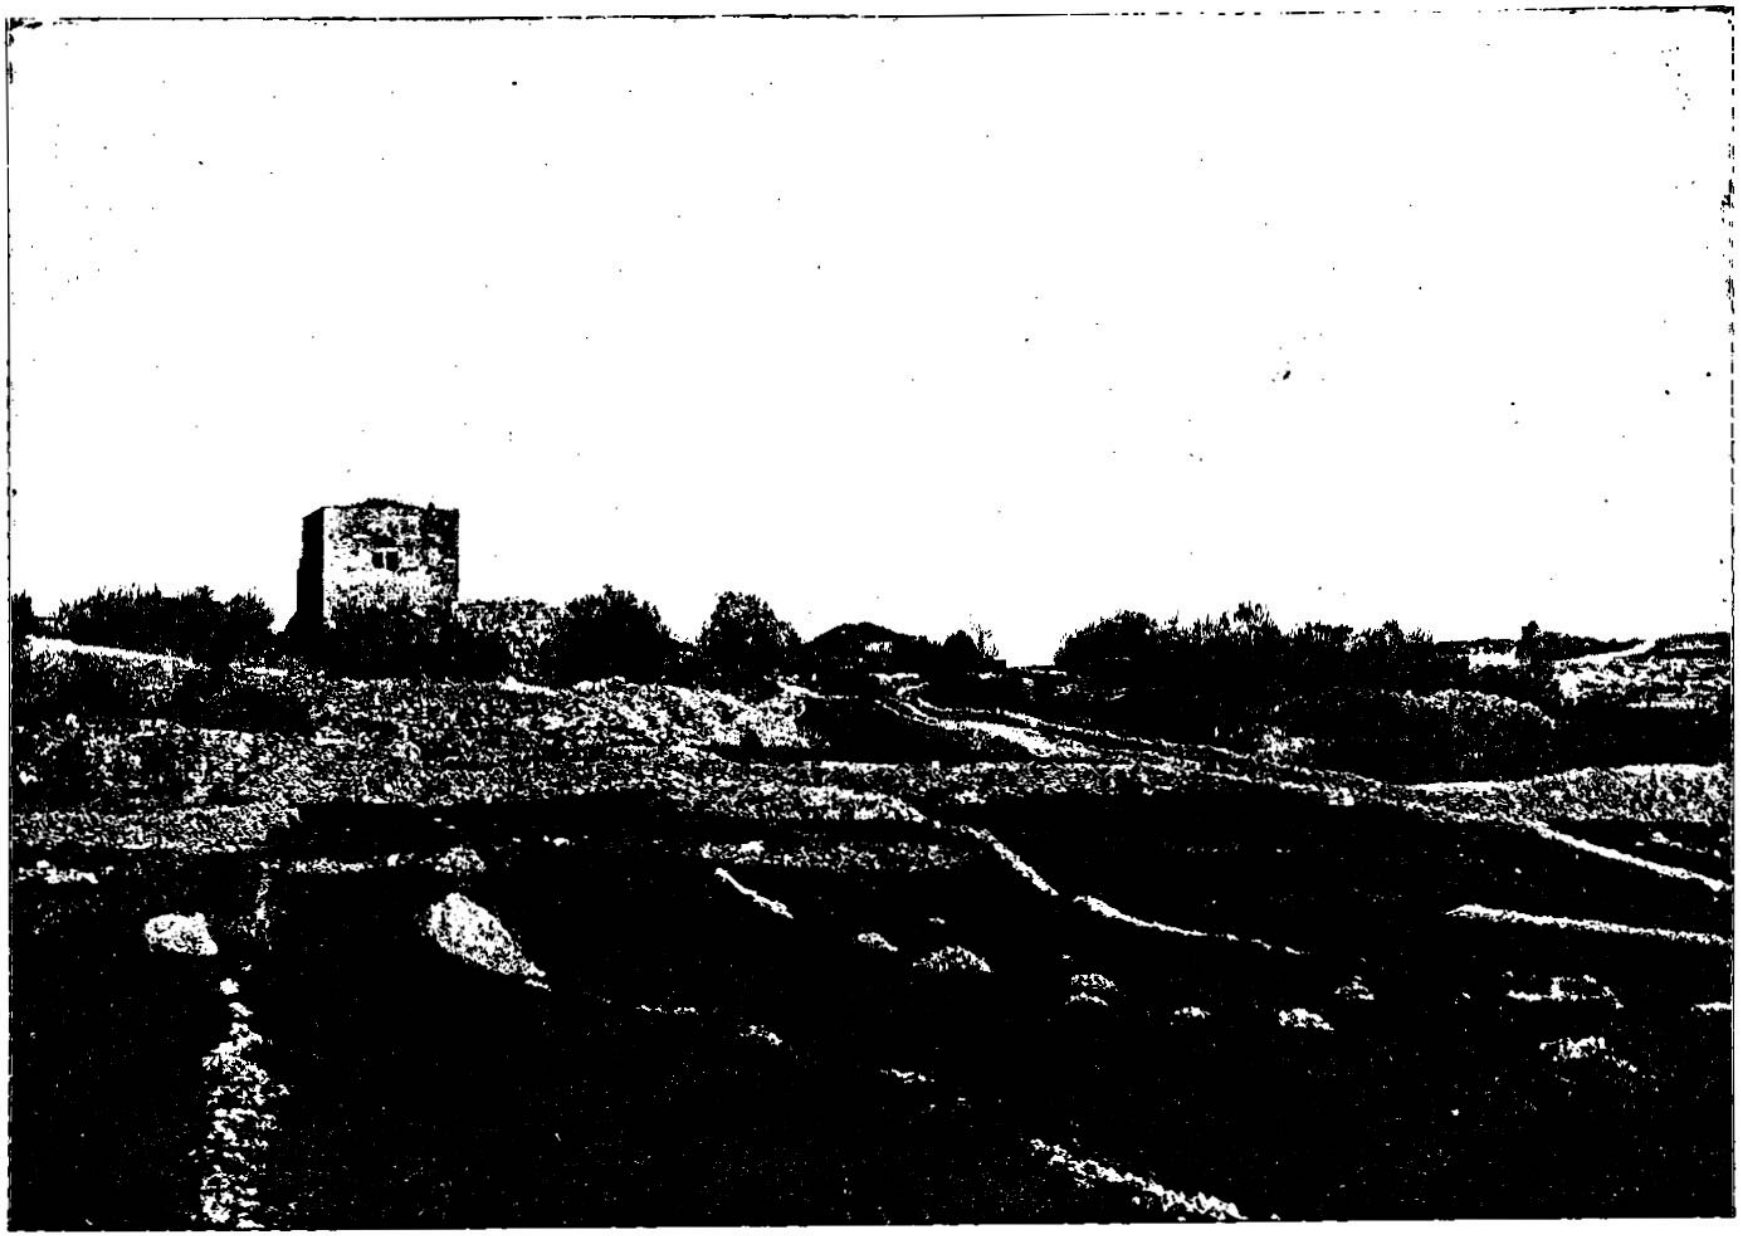
Ver. 13. Sarai was his sister in some sense, as Lot was his brother, ch. 13. 8; 14. 12, 14, being his father's grand-daughter, ch. 20. 12; 11. 29; but it was not in that sense, but in the common acceptation of the words sister and brother, they sinfully wished the Egyptians to understand them.



Ver. 17. Thus the Lord rebuked the king; ordered him not to touch his anointed, or to do his prophets any harm, Ps. 105. 14, 15; and punished his intended whoredom with such distempers as prevented the defilement of Sarai, perhaps with a kind of emerods, ch. 20. 18; 1 Sa. 5. 10.

REFLECTIONS.—How ready and cheerful ought our obedience to be, when God plainly calls and powerfully encourages to it! What secrets of his grace and providence does the Lord manifest to such as fear him! And with what earnestness ought they to do good to all around them! Surely no discouragement, or apparent enemy, should ever make us to distrust the promise or protection of such a God! How gracious, frequent, and familiar are the visits of God to such as remember him in all their ways! May his kindness attach my heart to his service, as the first, the principal part, the all, of my business in life! Let no earthly enjoyment—no, not a land flowing with milk and honey—be the portion of my cup, but JEHOVAH himself, and the Canaan above, where wants are never known! Never let me, for the sake of carnal relief or advantage, quit the place or the station in which God hath fixed me, without his plain warrant. If I presume to direct my own way, or choose out my own lot, let me dread snares to my conscience and plagues upon my concerns! If in such cases the Lord hath ever granted me deliverance, let me bewail my folly, and praise him for the sovereignty of his grace!

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 7. It was not proper these heathens should be scandalized by a strife between such as were brethren both by natural relation and by profession of the true religion.

Ver. 8. Ps. 133. 1–3, 'Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!' He. 13. 1, 'Let brotherly love continue;' Ge. 45. 24, 'He sent his brethren away, and said unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way;' Ac. 7. 26, 'Ye are brethren, why do ye wrong one to another?' Ro. 12. 10, Ep. 4. 3; 1 Th. 4. 9; He. 6. 10; 1 Pe. 1. 22; 2. 17; 3. 8, 4. 8; 2 Pe. 1. 7; 1 Jn. 2. 9, 11; 3. 14–19; 4. 7, 20, 21.

Ver. 14. [From the spot on which he stood, on the mountain east of Bethel, ch. 12. 8; ver. 3, Abraham saw a large section of Mount Ephraim on the north, Benjamin and Judah to the west and south, the Jordan valley and the long range east of the Jordan from Edom on the south almost to the base of Hermon. P.]

BETHEL—WHERE ABRAHAM WENT WITH LOT AND HIS WIFE. [Genesis, xiii.3.] When Abraham went up out of Egypt with Lot and his wife, his cattle, his silver, and his gold, he went on his journey from the South, even to Bethel, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Bethel and Ai. In the picture we have a view of Bethel as it is to-day. It is twelve miles from Jerusalem, and is a place where tourists take lunch the first day out from the Holy City. It is a desolate looking place, and the ruins of the ancient city are about three or four acres in extent. These consist of foundations, fragments of walls, and large heaps of stone. In the picture we are looking toward the northeast. South of the village there is a great reservoir. Every stone and ruin about this old place speaks of the past. Bethel means "The House of God." Hence so many churches all over the world have been called Bethel.

like the land of Egypt, as thou comest [t]unto Zoar.[7]

11 Then[8] Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

12 Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan,[9] and Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

13 But the men of Sodom were [m]wicked, and sinners before the LORD exceedingly.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

15 For [n]all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed [o]for ever.[1]

16 And I [p]will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee.

18 ¶ Then Abram removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the plain[2] of Mamre, which is in Hebron, and [q]built there an altar unto the LORD.[3]

AND it came to pass, in the days of Amraphel king of [a]Shinar, Arioch king of [b]Ellasar, Chedorlaomer king of [c]Elam, and Tidal king of nations;

2 That these made war with Bera king of Sodom,[d] and with Birsha king of [d]Gomorrah, Shinab king of [d]Admah, and Shemeber king of Zeboiim,[d] and the king of Bela, which is Zoar.

3 All these were joined together in the [e]vale of Siddim, which is the salt sea.

4 Twelve years they [f]served Chedorlaomer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled.

5 And in the fourteenth year came Chedorlaomer, and the kings that were with him, and smote the Rephaims[4] in Ashteroth Karnaim, and the Zuzims in Ham, and the [g]Emims in [5]Shaveh Kiriathaim,[6]

7 And they returned, and came to En-mishpat, which is [i]Kadesh,[9] and smote all the country of the [k]Amalekites, and also the Amorites that dwelt in [l]Hazezon-tamar.[1]

8 And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, (the [m]same is Zoar;) and they joined battle with them [n]in the vale of Siddim;

9 With[o] Chedorlaomer the king of Elam, and with Tidal king of nations, and Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar; four kings with five.

10 And the vale of Siddim was full of [p]slime pits; and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and [q]fell there; and they that remained fled to the mountain.

11 And they took all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their [r]victuals, and went their way.

12 ¶ And they took [s]Lot, Abram's brother's son, (who dwelt in Sodom,) and his goods, and departed.

13 And there came one that had [t]escaped, and told Abram the Hebrew; for [u]he dwelt in the plain of Mamre the Amorite,[2] brother of Eshcol, and brother of Aner: and these were confederate with Abram.

14 ¶ And when Abram heard that his [v]brother was taken captive, he armed[3] his trained[4] servants, born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them unto [w]Dan.

15 And he divided himself against them, he and his servants, by night, and smote them, and pursued them unto Hobah, which is on the [x]left hand of Damascus.

16 And he [y]brought back all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

17 ¶ And the [z]king of Sodom went out to meet him (after his return from the slaughter of

It was also called Mamre, though this appears to have been the specific name of a place beside the town, opposite Machpelah, see ch. 23. 19; 35. 27, once possessed by a powerful Amorite chief called Mamre, ch. 14. 13. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Mark, my soul, what a load, what an occasion of strife, the riches of this world are! And how sinful and imprudent it is for the children of God to indulge contention before a carnal generation! Better to be losers in outward things than strivers about them! Never let me dare to mingle myself with monsters of wickedness for the sake of carnal advantage, lest, where I expect a paradise, I should find a hell! If, by yielding for the sake of peace, I submit myself to the worst, new visits from God, new promises, and new surveys of the Canaan above, will more than make up my loss. Meanwhile, wherever I go, let me set the Lord always before me, and attend to his worship and service, as my principal employ; then shall his blessing go with me, and render every change on earth a pleasing earnest of the promised inheritance.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 1. These princes were all from Mesopotamia, and one of them was from Elam, or Chaldea, Abraham's native country. It is a remarkable fact that within the last few years bricks have been found in the ruins of Mugheir (Ur), the capital of Elam, bearing the name of a king, apparently contemporary with Abraham, and closely resembling Chedorlaomer. It is written Kudur-Mabuk. The first part is evidently identical with the Hebrew Chedor. This prince also has a title which signifies 'ravager of the west.' The direct distance from Elam to the Dead Sea is about 800 miles. P.]

Ver. 14. [The well-known border city, anciently called Laish, did not get the name Dan till the time of the judges; but there was another ancient city in the same region called Dan-jaan, which may perhaps be that alluded to in this passage and in De. 34. 1. P.]

Ver. 18. Who this Melchizedek was, this priest of God among the Canaanites, greater than Abram, the friend of God, who were his parents or his successors, is on purpose concealed by the Holy Ghost. And hence he is without father or mother, predecessor or successor, in historical account, in order that he might typify the incomprehensible dignity, the amazing pedigree, and unchangeable duration of Jesus Christ, our great High-priest. He. 6. 20, 'Jesus was made an high-priest after the order of Melchizedek;' 5. 6, 10; Ps. 110. 4; He. 7. 1–24, 'For this Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of the most high God, met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all the spoil: first being Melchizedek, which is, by interpretation, king of righteousness; and after that

BEDOUIN VILLAGE NEAR JERICHO—THE PLAIN LOT SELECTED. [Genesis, xiii:10.]—"And Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered everywhere, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah." In the above picture we have a view of a Bedouin village as it appears to-day, that stands in the very plain of Jordan that Lot saw well watered everywhere. The waters from Elisha's Fountain, that have always been used to irrigate this plain, pass through this village. It would be hard to conceive of a village with a more tumbled-down, wretched appearance than this, and the people who live in the village are as degenerate looking and degraded as one would judge them to be from their place of abode. These houses are seven or eight feet high, and are built of stone, and are then covered with thorny acacia trees. This is about eight miles from the ancient site of Sodom and Gomorrah.

1 God encourageth Abram, who complaineth for want of an heir. 4 God promiseth him a son, and a multiplying of his seed. 6 Abram is justified by his faith. 7 Canaan is promised again, and confirmed to him by a sign and a vision.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram in a [a]vision, saying, Fear not, [b]Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward.[4]

[8] The effect of these miraculous interpositions was to isolate Abram's mind entirely from earthly scenes and thoughts, and to bring him into immediate communication with God. God alone was seen; his voice alone was heard; the mind was filled with the one subject to the exclusion of all else. Thus the divine promise had a reality and a vividness which impressed it indelibly on the mind of the patriarch.—P.

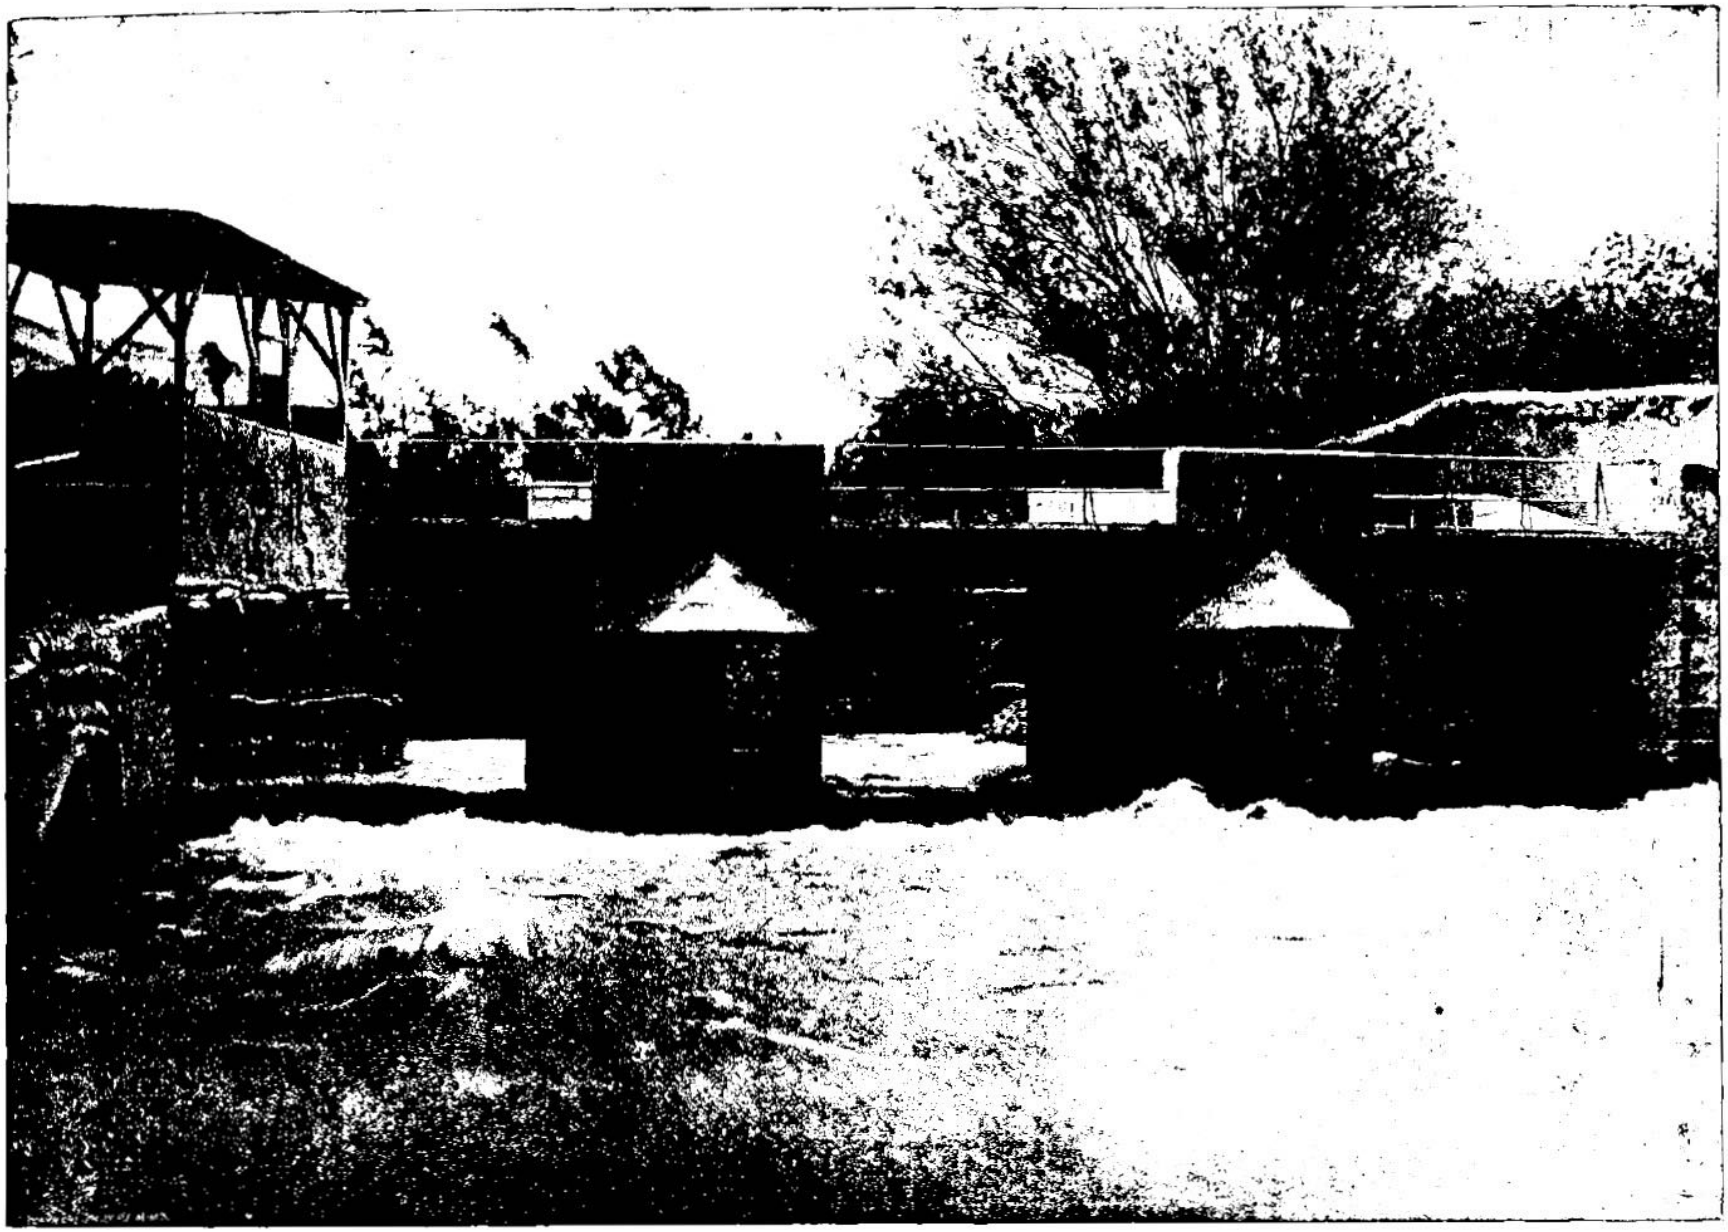
also, king of Salem, which is king of peace; without father, without mother, mentioned in history, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, recorded in scripture, but made like unto the Son of God, who abideth a priest continually. Consider how great this man was, unto whom even Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils, and who blessed him that had the promises. And, without all contradiction, the less is blessed of the greater. Levi, who receiveth tithes, paid tithes in Abraham. After the similitude of Melchizedek there ariseth another priest, even Jesus, who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life; and, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood.'

Ver. 22. In matters of importance, it is sometimes necessary to interpose an oath for the confirmation of our assertions or engagements, He. 6. 13–17; ch. 21. 31; 26. 31; 31. 53; 1 Sa. 20. 17; Nu. 5. 21; Ex. 22. 11; 1 Ki. 8. 31; 2 Ch. 6. 22, &c. All oaths are to be sworn by God alone, and import a taking of him to witness the truth of what we declare or engage, and calling him to avenge himself upon us if we utter falsehood, or neglect to perform our engagement, ch. 31. 53; De. 6. 13; 10. 20; Is. 45. 23; 65. 16; Je. 12. 16; Ps. 63. 11; He. 6. 13–17. In some cases, the putting of the hand of the inferior under the thigh of his superior was the declaratory sign used in swearing, ch. 24. 9; 47. 29; but lifting up of the hand was the common sign, Ex. 17. 16; De. 32. 40; Da. 12. 7; Re. 10. 5, 6.



REFLECTIONS.—How dreadful is the curse of God! After four hundred years' respite, it breaks forth upon the sinners of Sodom and the places about. From what distant quarters does God bring the executioners of it! How short-lived is that pleasure or quiet which saints attempt to procure by unnecessary connections with wicked men! How becoming and godlike to forget the injuries which we have received; and to risk, or even to lay down, our lives for the brethren! What honour—what comfort—what blessings—attend such a conduct!—But in this Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of the most high God, let me behold Him who is a priest for ever—Jesus, without father as man, without mother as God—the Lord from heaven! He is King of Righteousness. In his obedience and suffering he made reconciliation for iniquity, and brought in an everlasting righteousness; in righteousness he rules his subjects, and causeth them to work righteousness. He is King of Peace. By his blood he secured our peace with God, with our conscience, and with one another; in his intercession he pleads for it; and by his word and Spirit he effects it. He is our incomparable High-priest, who received not his office from any creature, nor leaves it to another. In and by him we are blessed of God with all spiritual and everlasting blessings; and with his bread and wine, presented in the gospel—His flesh, which is meat indeed, and his blood, which is drink indeed—he refresheth our souls while we are engaged in and after our warfare with sin, Satan, the world, and death. And to him is due, from every minister and saint, the voluntary tithes of everlasting praise.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1. Fear not, indulge no slavish or excessive terror on account of thine enemies, wants, or dangers; or on account of the awful appearances of God, Is. 43. 1; 41. 10; Mat. 28. 5; Re. 1. 18. I am thy shield, infallibly to protect thee, Ps. 3. 3; 84. 11; 91. 4, and thy exceeding great but gracious reward of thy piety and love, giving myself, in all that I am and have, to thee, as thine everlasting all and in all, Pr. 11. 18; Ps. 19. 11; 16. 5, 6; 142. 5; De. 33. 26–29; Is. 41. 10; 1 Co. 3. 22; 15. 28, 58; Col. 2. 9, 10.

Ver. 2, 3. What avails it what outward comforts be promised me, so long as I have no child of my own, but only this Syrian servant, to be my heir.—[Ver. 3. The full force and meaning of Abram's words can only be seen by considering his position in connection with the promise originally given to him. He was not only childless, but to all human appearance hopelessly so. God had promised him that his seed should be as the stars of heaven for multitude. As yet there was no sign, and as he thought, no hope of its fulfilment. Consequently when the Lord now says, 'I am thy shield,' &c., Abraham replies in the bitterness of hopelessness, 'What wilt thou give me?' What can make up for the want of a child? 'The heir of my house is this Damascus-Eliezer'—my slave must be my heir. Abram's complaint just amounts to this: All gifts and promises are nothing to me since a child is withheld. P.]

Ver. 8–15. Moved by the Spirit of God, he asked this sign. The beasts he presented to God were emblems of his seed: the heifer prefigured them in their patience, labour, and proneness to backsliding, Ho. 4 16; the goat in their mischievousness and lust, Je. 5. 7, 8; the ram in their strength and fortitude, Nu. 24. 8, 9; the doves in their simplicity and harmlessness in their purest state, Ps. 74. 19. The division of the four-footed animals (1) represented the torn condition of his seed, by the division of their kingdom, &c., 1 Ki. 11. 12, 13; (2) ratified the covenant made with him and his seed, in God's passing between the pieces, in the symbol of the burning lamp. The pieces being laid over against one another, imported that God would in due time join the separated and scattered Hebrews into one body, Eze. 37. 15–22. The fowls which attempted to light on the pieces, denoted the Egyptians, and other enemies of Israel, which should in vain attempt to devour them, Eze. 17. 3, 7, 12. The horror of great darkness which fell upon Abram, signified their great distress and vexation in Egypt, and under their subse-

BRIDGE AT DAMASCUS—"IN THE OLDEST CITY OF THE WORLD." [GENESIS, xv: 2.]—"And Abram said, Lord God, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?" In this second verse of the 15th chapter of Genesis, Damascus is mentioned for the first time in the Bible. Thus we see that two thousand years before Christ, this city was known to Abraham, Father of the Faithful. Because of this Damascus has enjoyed the honor throughout the ages of being regarded as the oldest city in the world. In Damascus the peculiar manners and character of the orientals are seen to perfection. Here we have the houses built around an open court, which is planted with trees, with a trickling fountain in the center. Here are bazaars, coffee houses, goldsmiths and silversmiths and manufacturers of sword blades. About a quarter of a mile from the eastern gate of the city a spot is pointed out as the scene of the conversion of Saint Paul.

14 And [n]also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance.

15 And thou [o]shalt go to thy fathers[7] in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age.

16 But in the fourth[8] generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full.

17 And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and a burning[9] lamp that passed between those pieces.

18 In that same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, [p]Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Sarai, being barren, giveth Hagar to Abram. 4 Hagar, being afflicted for despising her mistress, runneth away. 7 An angel sendeth her back to submit herself, and telleth her of her child. 15 Ishmael is born.

NOW Sarai, Abram's wife, bare him no children: and she had an [a]handmaid, an Egyptian, whose name was Hagar.

2 And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD hath [b]restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may obtain children by her.[1] And Abram [c]hearkened to the voice of Sarai.

3 And Sarai, Abram's wife, took Hagar her maid, the Egyptian, after Abram had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram, to be his [d]wife.[2]

4 ¶ And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was [e]despised in her eyes.

5 And Sarai said unto Abram, My wrong be upon thee: I have given my maid into thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: the LORD [f]judge between me and thee.

6 But Abram said unto Sarai, [g]Behold, thy maid is in thy hand: do to her as it pleaseth thee.[3] And when Sarai dealt hardly with [h]her, she fled from her face.

7 ¶ And the angel of the LORD[5] found her by a fountain of water [i]in the wilderness, by the fountain in the way to Shur.

8 And he said, [k]Hagar, Sarai's maid, whence camest thou? and whither wilt thou go? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sarai.

9 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, [l]Return to thy mistress, and submit thyself under her hands.

10 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, [m]I will multiply thy seed exceedingly,[6] that it shall not be numbered for multitude.

[h] This is the first mention of the angel of the Lord. Angel is a name not of nature, but of office, and signifies messenger, [in a manner of speaking, ver. 10, and Hagar's declaration, ver. 13, shows that he was] JEHOVAH made manifest. See also Hos. 12. 4, 5, where of Jacob, the prophet says, 'He had power [the power of believing prayer] over the angel, and prevailed: he wept, and made supplication to him—even the Lord God of hosts, the LORD is his memorial.'—C.

6 The Arab tribes, very many of whom are the descendants of Ishmael, occupy the country extending from Egypt to the Arabian sea, and from Egypt to the Gulf of Persia. It is 1800 miles long and 900 broad. Besides, there are multitudes of Arabs in various parts of India and the north of Africa.—C.

quent oppressors, Ps. 55. 3–5; Da. 10. 8, 9; and hence they are like to a bush burning and not consumed, Ex. 3. 2, 3. The burning lamp denoted their manifest and joyful deliverance, Ju. 6. 21; Is. 62. 1; the smoking furnace, their affliction in Egypt, De. 4. 20; Je. 11. 4. Abram went to his fathers in death, his soul to the world of spirits, and his body to the grave, where they were gone before him, He. 12. 23; Ec. 12. 7; ch. 25. 8, 17; 49. 29; Nu. 20. 21; 27. 13; Ju. 2. 10; 1 Ch. 23. 1; 29. 28; Job 42. 17; Je. 8. 2. And it was in peace, without remarkable trouble; and in peace with God and his own conscience, and with his neighbours, Ps. 37. 37; Is. 57. 2; 2 Ki. 22. 20. It was also in a good old age; when he was full of years, weary of this world, and ready and longing for heaven, yet free from any of the infirmities of old age, and falling like ripe fruit in the time of gathering, ch. 25. 8; 1 Ch. 29. 28; Job 5. 26.

Ver. 16. Iniquity is full, when it is arrived at such a number of acts, such a degree of aggravation, and time of continuance, that God, in consistence with his purpose or honour, can no longer forbear to punish it, Je. 51. 13; Da. 8. 23; Joel 3. 12; Mat. 12. 32; 1 Th. 2. 16.

Ver. 17. [Those pieces. The first emblem, a smoking furnace, was an apt representation of the state of Abram's seed under the Egyptians and the Gentiles, see Je. 11. 4; Zec. 13. 9. The second, a burning lamp, was a no less expressive emblem of that word of which they were made the preservers (see Ps. 119. 105; Ro. 3. 7; 9. 4), of that Light of the world (Jn. 1. 9) that was to arise amongst them, and of that finally glorious state of light, that, in the promise of truth and mercy, still awaits them, Is. 60. 1–3; 62. 1. C.]

Ver. 18. Through their sloth and wickedness they never, but in the reign of David and Solomon, possessed the whole territory here assigned them, Ju. i. ii. iii. iv., with 2 Sa. viii. x.; 1 Ki. 4. 21, 24; 2 Ch. 9. 26.

[The river of Egypt is the Nile. The Hebrew word is different from that employed in Nu. 34. 5; Jos. 15. 4; 1 Ki. 8. 65, though in the English version the same phrase is used. In the latter passages the Hebrew word signifies 'torrent-bed,' and not river; and Wady el-Arish is meant. National sin prevented the Israelites from possessing the whole country originally promised to Abraham, Ex. 23. 20–33, with Jos. 23. 13–16; Ju. 2. 20–23. The country as promised here to Abraham was much more extensive than that described by Moses in Nu. xxxiv. P.]

Ver. 19, 20. It seems the Kenites, Kenizzites, Kadmonites, and Rephaims had either been mostly extirpated before the time of Moses, or were blended with the seven nations which he mentions, De. 7. 1, 17–24; Ex. 23. 23; 33. 2; 34. 11.

REFLECTIONS.—Blessed indeed are they whose God is the Lord! There is no woe, no want, to them that fear him! How happy the issue of familiar intimacy with God! Before they call, he answers; and whilst they are yet speaking, he saith, Here I am. Scarcely will he do anything important without revealing his secrets to them. How he condescends to our weakness, in giving us signs in ordinances, signs in providence, for the confirmation of our faith in his promises! But even his faithful ones must often wait long for the beginning or the full accomplishment of these promises; and through manifold trials it must be obtained. Meanwhile, then, let me wait with patient expectation; and, with the patriarch, look beyond a numerous seed, and an earthly Canaan, to Jesus, and the travail of his soul, and to the better country above, the everlasting pleasures of which shall more than balance all the discouragements I can meet with by the way.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 5. Since you indulge your concubine in her contempt of me, may God plead my cause, and avenge the injury done to me on both you and her, 1 Sa. 24. 12, 15; Ge. 31. 53; Ex. 5. 21; De. 32. 36; 2 Ch. 20. 12; Re. 6. 10.

Ver. 7. Here, and in many other places, the Angel of the Lord, or Angel Jehovah, denotes Jesus Christ, who is the messenger of the new covenant, ch. 22. 11; 48. 16; Ju. 2. 1; 6. 11; 13. 3; Is. 63. 9; Zec. 1. 12; 3. 5; Mal. 3. 1.

Ver. 8, 9. He puts her in mind of her relation to Sarai, to render her sensible of her fault, and dispose her to a dutiful return and subjection to her, Tit. 2. 9; 1 Pe. 2. 18; Ep. 6. 5.

Ver. 10–12. Here it is foretold that Ishmael and his seed should be wild free men, like wild asses; mischievous to all around them, and extremely numerous. For almost four thousand years the fulfilment hath been amazingly remarkable. Ishmael had twelve sons, who gave rise to as many tribes or nations, called by their names, and who dwelt southward in Arabia, before the face or in the presence of their near relations, the Ammonites, Moabites, descendants of Keturah, Edomites, and Jews, ch. 17. 20; 21. 13, 18; 25. 11–18. All along they have been a nuisance and plague to the nations around them; infamous for theft, robbery, revenge, pillage, and murder. It hath therefore been the continued and common interest of mankind to extirpate them from the earth. But though almost every noted conqueror who hath appeared in the world, whether Hebrew, Egyptian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, Grecian, Roman, Tartar, or Turkish, hath pushed his conquests to their borders, or even beyond them into Egypt or Arabia Felix, not one hath ever been able to subdue these Ishmaelites, or deprive them of their freedom. The mighty Shishak, King of Egypt, was obliged to draw a line along their frontiers for the protection of his kingdom from their ravaging inroads. The Assyrians under Shalmaneser and Sennacherib, and the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, greatly harassed them, and almost extirpated some of their tribes, Is. 21. 11–17; Nu. 24. 22; Je. 25. 23, 24; 49. 28 33. Provoked with their contempt, Alexander the Great made vast preparations for their utter destruction; but death cut short his purpose. Antigonus, one of his valiant captains and successors, provoked with their depredations, more than once, but to his repeated dishonour, attempted to subdue them. Flushed with his eastern victories, Pompey, the famed Roman general, attempted to reduce them; but his army being recalled when they had hopes of gaining their purpose, these wild Arabs pursued them, almost at their heels, and dreadfully harassed the Roman subjects in Syria. Augustus, the renowned emperor, made one or more fruitless attempts to subdue them. About A.D. 110, Trajan, one of the most powerful emperors and valiant generals that ever filled the Roman throne, with a mighty army, determined if possible to subdue them, and laid siege to their capital. But storms of hail, which are scarcely ever seen in that country, thunder, lightning, whirlwind, swarms of flies, and dreadful apparitions in the air, terrified or repulsed his troops as often as they repeated their attacks. About eighty years after, Severus, another warlike emperor, determined to punish their siding with Niger, his rival, by an utter reduction of them. But, after he had made a breach on the wall of their principal city, an unaccountable difference between him and his beloved and faithful European troops obliged him to raise the siege, and leave the country. In the seventh century of the Christian era, these Ishmaelites, under Mahomet, their famed impostor, and his successors, furiously extended their empire, and their new and false religion, through a great part of Asia and Africa, and even some countries of Europe, Re. 9. 1–11. Since the fall of their empire, the Turks have made repeated attempts to subdue them; but instead of succeeding, they have been obliged, for near three hundred years past, to pay them a yearly tribute of forty thousand crowns, for procuring a safe passage for their pilgrims to Mecca, the holy city, where Mahomet was born. If, to fulfil his promise, God hath done so much for protecting the temporal liberty of miscreants, what will he not do for the salvation of his people!—[Ver. 12. The 'wild ass' (pere, the Hebrew word here translated 'wild') was the emblem of wild, rude, uncontrollable freedom—total disregard of law and social restraint, Job 24. 5; 11. 12. Such has ever been, and is still, the character of the Arab. He roams free through his native desert. No power has been able to control his movements, or to induce or compel him to adopt the settled habits of civilized life. His hand has been, and is, against every man who, without his protection, enters his country; and the hand of every surrounding ruler has been and is against him. Yet he dwells to this day, as he has done for nearly forty centuries, in the presence of all his brethren. He meets them on the east, west, north, and south; and none can extirpate or subdue him. P.——Against every man, and every man's hand against him. The descendants of Ishmael were divided into tribes, after the manner of the Jews, differing to a certain extent in dispositions, habits, character, and government. Many of them made great advances in civilization and learning; and exhibited the ordinary aspect of powerful, settled, and regular communities. Still there has been a vast number, of whom the Bedouins are most generally known, who have, in all ages, practically and literally realized this prediction, and lived, as they still do, in a state of uninterrupted hostility with all men; seeking no home but the desert, submitting to no law but their will, and acknowledging no right but their sword; 'their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them.'—And he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren. To ascertain the meaning of this phrase, we must recollect that one peculiarity in the prophecies concerning the Jews—another branch of the Abrahamic tree—was, De. 28. 64, 'And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other.' Now this was foretold of the child of the promise, the descendants of Isaac; but of Ishmael, the son of the bond-woman, it is said, He shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren; that is, while Israel shall be scattered, dispersed, and outcast, Is. 11. 12, from the land promised to Abram, Ishmael shall abide in the land promised to Hagar. The event has verified the prediction, and proved that it proceeded from him who 'determined the bounds of their habitation.' Israel is scattered in judgment as chaff of the thrashing-floor; Ishmael abides immovable as Sinai. C.]

Ver. 13. Have I, in this desert as well as in my master's family, and notwithstanding my misbehaviour, received a gracious visit from God, as my powerful guardian and kind benefactor? and have I duly considered, and thanked him for, and improved the same? Ps. 9. 13; Lu. 1. 48, 49.

REFLECTIONS.—The best of saints too often degrade themselves to obtain what they desire before God's time, and with some plausible pretexts endeavour to conceal their guilt. An uneasiness of temper, and too much affection to creatures, often induce us to comply with their sinful proposals. But the best intended transgressions will quickly issue in shame and trouble to the guilty, especially if saints; while our tempters prove our first and principal accusers. How transcendent the mercy of God, in visiting transgressors in the very troubles which they had drawn upon their own heads! Yet remember no happy deliverance is to be expected but in the way of returning to our duty. Let me never therefore hope for comfort in children, or in anything besides, but in the Lord's way. Let me always leave it to him to give his promise a proper and honourable accomplishment in the season which he thinks fit. And if he grant me undeserved visits, while the yoke of my transgressions is wreathed about my neck, let me with wonder remark his kindness, and take to myself shame and confusion of face.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 1. The name Shaddai, rendered Almighty, denotes all-sufficiency, as well as infinite power. And what strong encouragement to the study of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord is it, that God is all-sufficient and almighty to prepare us for, assist us in, and reward us for it; 2 Co. 12. 8, 'My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness;' Phi. 2. 12, 13, 'Work out your salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in you, both to will and to do, of his good pleasure;' 1 Co. 15. 58, 'Be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; knowing that your labour is not in vain in the Lord'—[Almighty God. This is the first time Jehovah calls himself Almighty; or, as some render it, and the word will bear, All-sufficient. It is important to remark, that God, whose perfections are infinite, can never, in the language of a finite being, fully bring out the catalogue of his attributes. But, on all occasions, he puts forth that special view of his perfections which is best calculated, in his special circumstances, to be the pillar of the believer's faith. Abram was a stranger, and surrounded by enemies, God therefore declares himself the Almighty, able to protect him in all dangers, as well as to fulfil all his promises. C.——El-Shaddai, 'God-Almighty,' was the name by which the Lord announced himself or made himself formally known to Abram and to the early patriarchs. It indicated the special relationship in which he stood to them:—he was their omnipotent Protector and Provider in a strange land. P.]

Ver. 2. God's making a covenant here, and in many other places, denotes the enlargement, renewal, establishment, or confirmation of it. It cannot be imagined that, in the various instances in which this phrase is used, he had not respect to his former declarations of the same kind as still in force, Ps. 105. 8–10; Ge. 15. 18; Ex. 34. 10–27; 1 Ki. 8. 9; Je. 31. 33; Ho. 2. 18; Ge. 6. 18; ver. 7, 19, 21; Ex. 6. 4; Le. 27. 9; De. 8. 18; Eze. 16. 60, 62.

Ver. 3. He fell on his face, in token of his fear and reverence, as being afraid and ashamed to look upon God; ver. 17; Ex. 3. 6; Le. 9. 24; Nu. 22. 31; Jos. 5. 14; Ju. 13. 20; Eze. 1. 28; 3. 23; 9. 8; 42. 3; Da. 8. 17; Mat. 17. 6; Re. 1. 17; Ps. 89. 7, 'God is greatly to be feared—to be had in reverence of all that are round about him;' 95. 6, 'Let us worship and bow down before the Lord;' Ps. 96. 4, 9; 91. 9; Re. 15. 4.

Ver. 4. Abram was not only the natural parent of multitudes, and the example and teacher of faith to all believers, but was the covenant-head with respect to the Israelitish nation, and was typical of Jesus Christ as the covenant-head and father of all who believe, ch. 12. 2; Ro. 4. 16, 17; Ga. 3. 28, 29.—[This was fulfilled to the letter. Abram was the progenitor of the Ishmaelites, the Jews, the several nations of the Keturites, the Edomites, &c. P.]

Ver. 5. God's giving names to persons, imports his making them to correspond with them in their condition or usefulness, ch. 32. 28; 2 Sa. 12. 25; Is. 62. 2, 4, 5; Re. 2. 17; Je. 20. 3; 23. 6; 33. 16; Mat. 1. 21. Abram signifies high father; Abraham, the high father of a multitude; Sarai, my princess; Sarah, princess of a multitude.

Ver. 6. The Ishmaelites, Midianites, Edomites, Hebrews, and their kings, ver. 20; Nu. xxxi.; Ge. xxxvi., Mat. i., but chiefly Jesus and his spiritual subjects, Re. 17. 14; 15. 3; 11. 15; 1. 6; 1 Pe. 2. 9; Ps. 45. 16.

Ver. 7, 8. Isaac and his Hebrew descendants were properly the natural seed with whom this covenant was established, ver. 21. By it God in Christ became, to the Hebrews in general, the head of their nation and church, and assumed them for his peculiar people: he bestowed upon them the land of Canaan as his land, in the enjoyment of which they tasted his goodness.

and I will make nations of thee; and kings shall come out of thee.

7 And [g]I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

8 And [h] I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger,[6] all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.

9 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee, in their generations.

10 This is my covenant,[7] which ye shall keep, between me and you, and thy seed after thee; Every [i] man-child among you shall be circumcised.

11 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

12 And he that is eight days[8] old [k]shall be circumcised among you, every man-child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

13 He that is [l]born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised; and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

14 And the uncircumcised man-child, whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

15 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, [m]As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be.[9]

16 And [n]I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations;[1] kings of people shall be of her.

17 Then Abraham [o]fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

18 And Abraham said unto God, Oh that Ishmael might live before thee!

19 And God said, [p]Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him.

20 And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, [q]and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget; and I will make him a great nation.[2]

21 But [r]my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year.

22 And he [s]left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.[3]

23 ¶ And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house, and [t]circumcised the flesh of their foreskin in the self-same day, as God had said unto him.[4]

24 And [u] Abraham was ninety years old and nine when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

25 And Ishmael his son was thirteen years old when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

26 In the self-same day was Abraham circumcised and Ishmael his son;

27 And all the men of his house, born in the

[3] The idea of the Arabians is a nation originally formed from what is related by travellers of the wild Bedouins. They form, however, but one specimen of this most extraordinary people. They were really a great nation, in the sense in which national greatness is understood, at an early period: that is, they were numerous: they were subdued in wars and conquests, and if they did not carry their arms abroad, they were valiant and accustomed in defence of their homes. The Egyptian, the Persian, the Grecian, and the Roman armies, were each in their turn commanded to retire before them. From them also sprung Mahomet, who, in scourge on Heretical and Apostate church, was permitted to rise to unprecedented greatness, and to fulfil the threatened prosperity of Christ, and with a sceptre and irresistible hand to 'remove their predestined out of its place.'—C.

[4] God went up from Abraham. The best comment on this passage is found in Ac. 1. 9, 10, in which it is recorded that the Son of God, after his resurrection and forty days' converse with his disciples, 'was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight;' and in which it is proposed that 'he shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.'—C.

[9] The meaning of Sarai is doubtful. It probably signifies 'struggling or 'contending,' and would thus indicate a woman who struggled amid difficulties. Sarah means 'queen' or 'princess;' the feminine of Sar, a prince. The name is most expressive. Sarah was to be the mother and head of nations.—P.

Ver. 14. Not infants, who could not circumcise themselves, but such as wilfully neglected this ordinance when they were grown up, would nationaly be cut off from their people. Such as renounced the distinguishing badge of Abraham's seed, renounced their covenant-alliance with God, and fellowship with his people. Nothing could therefore be more reasonable than that they should be excluded from the privileges of the Hebrew church and nation, and accounted as heathens. And this is perhaps the whole import of cutting off from his people, in most of the passages where we find it, Ex. 12. 15, 19; 30. 33, 38; Le. 7. 20, 21, 25, 27; 17. 4, 9, 10, 14; 22. 3; Nu. 9. 3; 19. 13, 20. But, in some cases, death, by the immediate hand of God, or of the magistrate, is certainly included, or therewith connected, Ex. 31. 14; Le. 18. 29; 19. 8; 20. 3, 5, 6, 17; Nu. 15. 30, 31. And surely there is no injustice that a presumptuous and obstinate rebel against a fundamental law of the church and nation of God should be punished with death.

Ver. 17. Abraham laughed, in virtue of his firm belief of the promise, and his satisfaction therein, Ro. 4. 19, 20; Jn. 8. 56; but Sarah laughed in unbelieving derision, ch. 18. 12.

Ver. 18. Let Ishmael live, and prosper in thy favour, and under thy special care, ch. 48. 15; Ps. 31. 22.

REFLECTIONS.—How infinite the extent, how rich the mercy, of God's granting himself, as God Almighty, God All-sufficient, to be my God, and the God of my seed! Let me by faith heartily and hastily catch the word at his mouth, and cry—'My Lord and my God, and the God of my seed!' Thrice blessed heritage of the hosts of nations, secured to us as our portion for ever!' Though neither my house nor my heart be so with God as they ought, yet he hath made with me the everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure: and this is all my salvation and all my desire. Upon this foundation let me and mine be sealed to the day of redemption, by receiving the circumcision which is of Christ. Through his blood shed for us, and his Spirit applied to us, must our natural corruptions be mortified, our hearts purified, and our souls saved. Without this we can in no wise enter the kingdom of God. Nor let me ever forget to entreat that the Ishmaels of my carnal relations may be made alive to God through Jesus Christ our Lord; be partakers of his covenant-blessings now, and live before him for ever hereafter.

house, and bought with money of the stranger, were circumcised [a]with him.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Abraham entertaineth three angels. 9 Sarah is reproved for laughing at the strange promise. 17 The destruction of Sodom is revealed to Abraham. 23 Abraham maketh intercession for the men thereof.

AND the LORD appeared unto him in the plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent-door in the heat of the day;

2 And[a] he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: and, when he saw them, he [b]ran to meet them from the tent-door, and bowed himself toward the ground,

3 And said, My Lord,[5] if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant.

4 Let a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet,[6] and rest yourselves under the tree;

5 And I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort[7] ye your hearts; after that ye shall pass on: [c]for therefore are ye come[8] to your servant. And they said, So do as thou hast said.[9]

6 And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, Make ready[1] quickly [d]three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.

7 And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf [e]tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hasted to dress it.

8 And he took butter and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and [f]they did eat.[2]

9 ¶ And they said unto him, Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, in the tent.

10 And he [g]said, I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of life;[3] and, lo, Sarah thy wife shall have a son. And Sarah heard it in the tent-door, which was behind him.

11 Now [h]Abraham and Sarah were old and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women.

12 Therefore Sarah laughed within herself, saying, [i]After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my lord being old also?

13 And the LORD said unto Abraham, Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

14 Is[k] any thing too hard for the LORD? At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

15 Then Sarah [l]denied, saying, I laughed not: for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.

16 And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them to bring them on the way.

17 ¶ And the LORD said, [m]Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do;

18 Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and [n]all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?

19 For [o]I know him, that he [p]will [q]command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him.

20 And the LORD said, Because [r]the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their sin is very grievous, 21 I will [s]go down[5] now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, I will know.

22 And the men[6] turned their faces from thence, and went toward Sodom: but Abraham [t]stood yet before the LORD.

23 ¶ And Abraham drew near, and said, [u]Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

24 Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?

25 That[t] be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked; and that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?

26 And the LORD said, [v]If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

27 And Abraham answered and said, [z]Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, which am but dust and ashes:

28 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, [x]If I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.

29 And he spake unto him yet again, and 9 The hospitality of the Arabs, especially those who dwell in tents, is proverbial. No stranger could pass a tent door without receiving a pressing invitation to enter. I have many times been addressed by Arab chiefs in words almost identical with those in the text. The Bedawin are polite as they are hospitable. Their manners are polished and dignified, and their language chaste. They are profuse in the use of titles of honour, saluting every stranger as 'my lord.' In their cookery too I have found them as expeditious as is here represented.—P.

6 Judgment was now about to commence on the descendants of Canaan, ch.10.5—19, who had been educated by the unscrupulous Ham: the LORD therefore contrasts with it the opposite character of Abraham, as one who would 'command his children and house hold to keep the way of the Lord.' But the LORD 'might bring' on him, in his person and posterity, 'that which he had spoken of him.' Note, Parental education, consisting in word, temper, patience, example, and prayer is the all and in all of a family or a country. There are two teachers—God and man. To parents it is said, 'Train up a child in the way that he should go,' and to the church it is promised, 'They shall all be taught of God.'—C.

1 Lot entertaineth two angels. 4 The vicious Sodomites are stricken with blindness. 12 Lot is sent for safety to the mountain. 18 He obtaineth leave to go into Zoar. 24 Sodom and Gomorrah are destroyed. 26 Lot's wife is made a pillar of salt. 30 Lot dwelleth in a cave. 31 The incestuous origin of Moab and Ammon.

AND there came [a]two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot[4] sat[b] in the gate of Sodom: and Lot, seeing them, rose up to meet them; and he [c]bowed himself with his face toward the ground;

2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and [d]wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, [e]Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.[5]

3 And he [f]pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house; [g]and he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat.[6]

4 ¶ But [h]before they lay down, the men [i]of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young, all the people from every quarter.

5 And [k]they called unto Lot, and said unto him, Where are the men which came in to thee this night? bring them out unto us, that we may know them.

6 And Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him,

7 And said, I pray you, [l]brethren, do not so wickedly.

[4] The sacred historian, tracing the history of Abraham has for some time been silent as to Lot. [6] Lot had been trained to tent life. He had the feelings of a genuine Bedawy in regard to the claims of hospitality. He acted in the city as he would have acted in the desert—he not only invited, but he pressed, the strangers to enter his house. No invitation was given by any of the people of Sodom. It is the same to this day in Syria. A stranger would be left to lie in the street of a large city, while at passing through an Arab encampment he would get a pressing invitation to every tent.—P.

7 That temptation may lead a wise man to say a foolish thing, and a good man to propose or do an evil thing, is often exhibited in the history of frail humanity. There can be no excuse, nor should any be attempted, for Lot in this offer. To violate hospitality would, no doubt, have been wrong; but one sin cannot be remedied by another. He is brought forcibly out, and warned to escape to the mountains; yet he entreats a refuge in a city of the plains. But the weakness of man is overruled to magnify the mercy of the LORD, who hearkens to his humble intercession, and spares the city for his sake. The name of this city, formerly Bela, Ge. 14. 2, was changed to Zoar, which signifies little, in commemoration of the plea for mercy which Lot presented.—Note. Every work is easy to omnipotence; every grant as little to the richness of mercy. 8 Behold now, [m]I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes:[7] only unto these men do nothing; for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.

9 And they said, [n]Stand back. And they said again, This [o]one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee than with them. And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.[8]

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

11 And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with blindness,[9] both small and great: so that they [p]wearied themselves to find the door.

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons-in-law, which married his daughters, and said, [s]Up, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city. But he [t]seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.

15 And when the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, [u]Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are [1]here; lest thou be consumed in the iniquity[2] of the city.

16 And, [x]while he lingered,[3] the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; the LORD [y]being merciful unto him: and they brought him forth, and set him without the city.

17 And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, [z]Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

18 And Lot said unto them, [a]Oh! not so, my Lord.

REFLECTIONS.—Whilst I highly esteem the kind simplicity and humble modesty of these ancient times, let me chiefly admire the kindness of my Redeemer, in so frequently visiting our world in human shape, before the fulness of time for his being made of a woman! But alas, that ever his messages of peace should be laughed to scorn!—laughed to scorn by a saint! O what infinite mercy and patience, that he did not strike her—that he doth not strike us—dead in the very act of unbelief! How great is the honour and kindness which God hath prepared for such as are careful to win souls! While his procedure to punish the most abandoned transgressors is gradual and slow, readily he grants whatever forbearance his favourites can ask on their behalf—but much more what is asked on behalf of his children. What a deep sense of their own meanness and pollution familiar intercourse with God produceth in the choicest saints! His presence must always fill them with a holy fear, while, as their covenant God, they dare to plead before him, assured of a ready audience and a gracious answer.

THE DEAD SEA—WHERE SODOM AND GOMORRAH ARE SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN SITUATED. [GENESIS, xix : 29.]—"And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in which Lot dwelt." The cities of the plain are supposed to have been Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, and they were situated in the midst of the garden-like plain that lies between the Moab mountains and the Judean Mountains, just to the north of the Dead Sea. A shower of brimstone and fire fell upon these cities, we are told in the nineteenth chapter of Genesis, and destroyed them. The sites, especially of Sodom and Gomorrah, are now supposed to be under the waters of the Dead Sea at the upper and northern end of it. This part of the sea is represented in the view given above. The awful doom of Sodom and Gomorrah is held up in numerous passages in the Old and New Testament as warnings, as Mark, vi : 11; II. Peter, ii : 6; Jude i : 7.

in thy sight, and thou [b]hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast showed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest [c]some evil take me, and I die.

20 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: Oh! let me escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

21 And he said unto him, [d]See, I have accepted thee[3] concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

22 Haste thee, escape thither; for [e]I cannot do any thing[4] till thou be come thither: therefore the name of the city was called Zoar.

23 The [f]sun was risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

24 ¶ Then [g]the LORD rained[5] upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven;

25 And he overthrew those cities, and [h]all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.

26 ¶ But his wife [i]looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.[6]

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the place where he stood [k]before the LORD:

28 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and, lo, the [l]smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

29 And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God [m]remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30 ¶ And Lot [n]went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in [o]Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

Yet would they reflect for a moment, they would remember how it is said, The rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, Is. 55. 10. 6 Burning sulphur produces a vapour which, if it once fill the lungs, is instantly destructive to life. Lot's wife, looking back, while the vapour followed, was accordingly suffocated. This vapour, and the bituminous fire (see De. 29. 23), would literally convert the body into a salt. And the body being deprived of motion, and assuming rigid in a standing posture, and it may be, surrounded and sustained by various volcanic products, would literally become a pillar, or statue, of salt.—C.

Similarly on the same ground that Peter's blasphemous denial of our Lord, Mat. 26. 70, 74, is consistent with his afterwards receiving suffering, when Jesus turned and looked on him. The Scriptures record the sins of men because they must be truth; and they denounce their punishment or display their evil consequences or record the repentance of the sinner, to teach us to flee from the wrath to come.—C.

32 Come, let us make our father [r]drink wine, and we will [s]lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

33 And they made their father drink wine that night: and the first-born went in, and lay with her father; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

34 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the first-born said unto the younger, Behold, [t]I lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine this night also; and go thou in, and lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

Ver. 27. [This place was a few miles east of Hebron, on the brow of the mountain ridge which commands that section of the valley in which the doomed cities stood. P.]

Ver. 28. [Recent researches have thrown some little light on this wondrous catastrophe. The Dead Sea occupies the lowest part of a long deep valley—so deep that the surface of the water is no less than 1292 feet below the level of the ocean. The northern section of the sea is very deep, and the southern very shallow, only a few feet of water covering a slimy plain, along whose shores are salt-springs and fragments of sulphur and bitumen. In this southern section once stood the cities. The plain around them was filled, as we are told, with bitumen pits. Bitumen is inflammable, and when ignited would burn fiercely. Mr. Tristram visited a wady at the southern end of the sea, which he thus describes: 'There are exposed on the sides of the wady large masses of bitumen mingled with gravel. These overlie a thick stratum of sulphur, which again overlies a thicker stratum of sand strongly impregnated with sulphur.' He says that the bitumen is calcined, and bears marks of having been subjected to extreme heat —'The whole appearance points to a shower of hot sulphur, and an irruption of bitumen upon it.' The sacred writer farther says that the vale of Siddim became the Salt Sea. Suppose the vale to have sunk a few feet, or the water to have risen a few feet, after the burning of the cities, either supposition would accord with the biblical narrative, would not be without a parallel in the history of countries exposed to earthquakes, and would not be opposed to any results of modern observation. It would accord, besides, with the views of ancient writers and with uniform Jewish tradition. P.]

Ver. 29. God showed his regard to his own promise of making him a blessing, ch. 12. 3, and to his intercession in behalf of Sodom, ch. 18. 25, and to Lot's relationship to him, ch. 14. 14, 16.

Ver. 30. [The character of Lot is marked by timidity (compare ver. 19 and 30), yet was he a righteous man, 2 Pe. 2. 7.—Note, Grace, in conversion, seldom takes away the original character of the natural man; but merely overrules its deficiencies to humble him and warn others; and refines and elevates its excellencies; and thus, by the Spirit, mortifies the old while it quickens and establishes the new man. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What an advantage it is for the world that in very wicked places some persons truly pious may be found! How encouraging to entertain strangers, when 'some have thereby entertained angels unawares!' To what shocking impudence, in the vilest abominations, men's corruptions can carry them, and that notwithstanding sharp corrections or remarkable deliverances, ch. xiv. How readily those who reprove sin by their godly conversation are an eyesore to the wicked! How quickly the protectors of God's messengers are rewarded with remarkable protection or with rescue from danger! How prone are hardened sinners to sport with the most serious warnings of ruin, near and terrible!—and even saints, if strongly attached to worldly things, to defer or shift the means which have been prescribed by God for their safety! But let us remember that it is infinitely hazardous to be under the reigning power, or even the prevalence, of a carnal and unbelieving heart; for though God wonderfully restricts the range of his judgments for the sake of his people, and in answer to their prayers, yet he is and will be just in depriving them of that wealth which they sinfully attempted to increase by mingling themselves with the wicked, ch. 13. 10, 11. Yea, he causes men to be quickly wearied of the shifts which themselves devised for their safety, and obliged to take that at last which he at first prescribed them. But how dangerous is drunkenness! for it readily issues in whoredom and lasting shame.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 3. God often intimated his mind in dreams, ch. 28. 12; 31. 24; 37. 5; 40. 8; 41. 1; 1 Ki. 3. 5; Je. 23. 25, 28, 32; Da. 2. 1; 4. 5.

3 But [c]God came to Abimelech in a dream by night,[3] and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife.

4 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, wilt thou [d]slay also a righteous nation?

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: in the integrity[4] of my heart, and innocency of my hands, have I done this.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also [e]withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

7 Now therefore restore the man his wife; for he is a [h]prophet, and he shall [i]pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, know[5] thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine.

8 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears:[5] and the men were sore afraid.

9 ¶ Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, [l]What hast thou done unto us? And what have I offended thee, that thou hast brought on me, and on my kingdom, [m]a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that ought not to be done.

10 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?[6]

11 And Abraham said, Because I thought, Surely[n] the fear of God is not in this place; and they will slay me for my wife's sake.

12 And yet indeed [o]she is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.

13 And it came to pass, when God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy kindness which thou shalt show unto me; at every place whither we shall come, [p]say of me, He is my brother.

Ver. 4. He was afraid that he, or even his subjects, however innocent in this point, might for his sake, 2 Sa. 24. 17; 1 Ch. 21. 17; Je. 15. 4, be destroyed as the Sodomites had been.

Ver. 7. Abraham was a prophet and interpreter of God's will, Ex. 7. 1, and one to whom he freely and familiarly manifested his perfections and purposes, Am. 3. 7.

Ver. 11. The true fear of God is not a slavish dread of him, as ch. 15. 1; but an abiding, kindly, and reverential awe of him, wrought in the heart by his Spirit—disposing and enabling to keep his commandments, and to hate and avoid whatever is sinful, Je. 32. 40; Ec. 12. 13; Pr. 8. 13; 16. 6; Ge. 22. 12; 39. 9; 42. 18; Ne. 5. 15; Job 1. 1; Ro. 3. 18.

Ver. 16. Either he gave this present of about £115 sterling to Sarah, to purchase veils for her and her maidens, for the concealment of their beauty; or to Abraham, as a memorial for Sarah to take heed henceforth to own him, not as her brother, but as her husband, as the best safeguard of her chastity.—[Kalisch gives what appears to be the true meaning of this obscure passage. He translates it thus:—'And to Sarah he said, Behold, I have given to thy brother a thousand shekels of silver: behold, he is to thee a protection, and to all who are with thee, and with all: and thou wilt be recognized.' His exposition is as follows:—'Since Sarah deserved likewise a compensation for the anxiety suffered by her in the house of the stranger, he gave to Abraham for her a thousand shekels of silver, and addressed to her a remark embodying the experience which he had just made, and the respect with which it inspired him; he said, though she might profess that Abraham was her brother, he was her protector against every man; she might be taken by others as his sister, but she would soon be known and convicted of being his wife by the supernatural interference of God, who, both in his case and that of the Egyptian king, had watched over her purity.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—In my wanderings through this world let me commit myself and all my concerns to God, as my God! If Jehovah be my God, my shield, and my exceeding great reward, I have no need of assistance or protection from Satan, nor of any evasive arts to shelter me from danger. Never therefore let remarkable favours from God be immediately followed with sinful unwatchfulness and fear of man, which causeth a snare! And if I have been once overcome by them, let me take heed to my steps, lest my last error be worse than my first; but especially if I have real grace, let me beware of becoming a tempter to the profane or graceless! How much God detests uncleanness! To prevent it he inflicts judgments upon and gives extraordinary warnings even to heathens. How pitiful are the best excuses which men, particularly saints, can make for their sinning! And it must be considered as an infinite mercy that God, though he sometimes puts his people to shame for their folly, takes more care of their honour, and especially of the honour of his promises, than they do. And the prayers of penitent saints are profitable to the greatest men upon earth.

15 ¶ And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.

16 And she went, and sat her down over against him a good way off, as it were a bow-shot: for she said, [p]Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, and lift up her voice, and wept.

17 And [q]God heard the voice of the lad: and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Hagar? fear[r] not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.[6]

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for [s]I will make him a great nation.

19 And God [t]opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

20 And [u]God was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, and became an archer.

21 And he dwelt in the wilderness of Paran:[7] and[x] his mother took him a wife out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And it came to pass at that time, that Abimelech, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, spake unto Abraham, saying, [y]God is with thee in all that thou doest:

23 Now therefore [z]swear unto me here by God, that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

24 And Abraham said, [a]I will swear.

25 And Abraham reproved Abimelech [b]because of a well of water, which Abimelech's servants had violently taken away.[8]

26 And Abimelech said, [c]I wot not who hath done this thing; neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to-day.

27 And Abraham [d]took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and both of them made a covenant.

28 And Abraham set seven ewe-lambs of the flock by themselves.

29 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What mean these seven ewe-lambs which thou hast set by themselves?

30 And he said, For these seven ewe-lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that they [e]may be a witness unto me that I have digged this well.

31 Wherefore he called that place [g]Beer-sheba, because there they sware both of them.

32 Thus they made [f]a covenant at Beer-sheba: then Abimelech rose up, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Philistines.

33 ¶ And[1] Abraham planted a grove[2] in Beer-sheba, and [h]called there on the name of the LORD, [i]the everlasting God.

34 And Abraham [k]sojourned in the Philistines' land many days.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Abraham is tempted to offer Isaac. 3 He giveth proof of his faith and obedience. 11 The angel staveth him. 13 Isaac is exchanged with a ram. 14 The place is called Jehovah-jireh. 15 Abraham is blessed again. 20 The generations of Nahor, from whom came Rebekah.

AND it came to pass after these things, that [a]God did tempt[3] Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham. And he said, Behold, here I am.[4]

2 And he said, Take now [b]thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of [c]Moriah, and offer him there for a burnt-offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

[a] He.11.17. Ja.1.12, with Ja.1.13.

[3] 'God,' says James, i. 13, 'is not tempted of evil, neither tempteth he any man.' How then does this consist with the statement that God tempted Abraham? God tempteth no man to evil; but God proveth the faith of his children by labours, difficulty, affliction, self-denial, and sacrifice.—C. 'Try' would be a more appropriate word here than 'tempt.' Temptation, as we understand it, implies solicitation to sin. Nothing of the kind is, or can be, implied here. Trial is often man's best teacher. He knows not his own weakness and want on the one hand, nor his own courage and faith on the other, until he has been tried. Trial therefore is a wholesome disciplining to the person tried. Besides, God is pleased to instruct the world by examples as well as by direct precept. The example of Abraham's faith and devotion to God has cheered and instructed the universal church.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—What a pleasure God sometimes takes to delay the fulfilment of promises, till it becomes, humanly speaking, improbable, if not impossible, for the trial of our faith and patience; but he never defers it a moment beyond the due time; and the joys which attend the seasonable fulfilment thereof are great and certain: and yet even then our attempts to anticipate it often mingle our joys with wormwood and gall! How proper in all our straits to consult the Lord, and to request and hope for his watchful care over our relations, particularly such as are exposed to dangers! Let my care be to honour God in all my conduct, and he will take care to honour me before the world, as is good in his sight! And while Sarah and her family rejoice over her son, let me, let all the redeemed, rejoice that 'to us a Child is born, to us a Son is given, whose name is Wonderful;' and that God in him hath made us, like Isaac, children of the promise! Let us Gentiles rejoice that while the Hebrews are, like Ishmael, cast out, to be wandering, wild, and hated, we are called to the fellowship of the sons of God! Here likewise let us observe how sharply God corrects those who have been insolent despisers of others, and how near the most seasonable mercies may be, whilst we perceive them not!

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 1. God tempts no man by enticing him to sin, Ja. 1. 13; nor doth the word nissah here used ever signify any such thing, but to try exquisitely; nor doth God try men in order to promote or confirm his own knowledge of them, but to manifest what they are to themselves and to the world, that his rewarding or punishing them may appear the more wise and equal, or his blessing them the more gracious, De. 3. 2; 13. 3; Ju. 2. 22; 2 Ch. 32. 31; Ps. 139.

THE ROCK IN THE TEMPLE—WHERE ABRAHAM IS SAID TO HAVE STARTED TO SACRIFICE ISAAC. [GENESIS, xxii: 3.]—"And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him." This Rock in the Temple is now inclosed by the Mosque of Omar. It is claimed that upon this rock Abraham prepared to slay his son at God's command, and here in later days David built his altar upon the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite, where the angel of the pestilence stayed his hand. Here stood the first temple in which Jehovah dwelt. It was at this place that God said, "Here will I dwell, for I have desired it." And in the sacrificial victims which for hundreds of years were offered on this spot, there was remembrance made of the promise of a nobler sacrifice which could alone procure the remission of sins.

3 ¶ And Abraham [d]rose up early[e] in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and rose up, and [e]went unto the place of which God had told him.

4 Then on the [f]third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

5 And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide[g] ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.[5]

6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt-offering, and [h]laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife: and they went both of them together.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father. And he said, Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood; but where is the lamb[6] for a burnt-offering?

8 And Abraham said, My son, [i]God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt-offering: so they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the [k]place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and [l]laid him on the altar upon the wood.

10 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

11 ¶ And the [m]angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham! And he said, Here am I.

12 And he said, [n]Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now [o]I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me.

13 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, [p]behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt-offering in the stead of his son.

14 And Abraham [q]called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh:[7] as it is said to this day, [r]In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

15 ¶ And the angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

16 And said, [s]By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord; for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son;

17 That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying [t]I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess [u]the gate of his enemies:[8]

18 And[x] in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice.

19 So Abraham returned unto his young men; and they rose up and went together to [y]Beersheba: and Abraham dwelt at Beersheba.

20 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that it was [z]told Abraham, saying, Behold, [a]Milcah, she hath also born children unto thy brother Nahor;

21 Huz[b] his first-born, and Buz his brother, and Kemuel the father of [c]Aram, 22 And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and [d]Bethuel.

23 And Bethuel begat [e]Rebekah: these eight Milcah did bear to Nahor, Abraham's brother.

By this command God tried the faith of Abraham with respect to his believing that in Isaac his seed should be called; and that through the death of the Messiah he and other believers should obtain everlasting salvation; and tried his obedience in the most tender point that could be conceived—his deliberate slaying of his darling, his only son by his wife, his only son now left in his own house, ch. 21. 1, 12, 14.

Ver. 2. [Moriah signifies 'the vision' or 'manifestation of Jehovah.' The name is here given to 'the land' on one of whose mountains the sacrifice was to be offered up; it is also given to the mountain on which the temple was built. The common belief is that these two places were identical, and we see no reason to doubt or question it. Mount Moriah is an oblong-shaped hill, or rather point of a ridge, having the deep glen of the Tyropœon on the west, and the Kidron on the east. The glens unite at the foot of the hill on the south. The elevation of the summit above the bottom of the glens is about 350 feet. Moriah is now crowned by the Great Mosque, and is one of the most venerated sanctuaries of the Mohammedans. P.]

Ver. 12. After lying under a sentence of death three days, Isaac was released by the orders of Heaven, as a figure of Christ's resurrection on the third day, 1 Co. 15. 3, 4; Mat. 16. 21; 17. 23; 20. 19; Lu. 13. 32.

Ver. 14. In the extremities of distress God interposeth as an helper and deliverer, De. 32. 36; Mi. 4. 10; Mat. 15. 32. And on Mount Moriah in the temple God was long manifested in the symbols of his presence, 2 Ch. 3. 1; Ps. 76. 2; and there Jesus often appeared while in the flesh, Hag. 2. 7; Jn. ii. v. vii.–x.

Ver. 16–18. He. 6. 13–18, 'When God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, &c.—an oath for confirmation is an end of all strife; wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things, his word and oath, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation.' The promises here solemnly confirmed by oath almost wholly related to his Hebrew and his spiritual seed, ch. 21. 12. To possess the gates of their enemies, is to obtain their country, or have dominion over them, and rule among them, ch. 24. 60; De. 21. 19; 22. 24; 25. 7. The Jews had temporal dominion over their enemies in the time of Joshua, David, &c., Jos. vi.–xix.; 2 Sa. viii. x. And Christ and his people have a spiritual dominion over theirs, Ps. 2. 8, 9; 22. 27–30; Da. 4. 34, 35; Col. 2. 15; 1 Co. 15. 25, 57; Ro. 8. 37.

Ver. 24. Concubines were women of a middle condition, between wives and harlots; a kind of half-wives, sharing in bed and board, but not in the government of the family, ch. 25. 1, 6; 30. 4; 35. 22; Ju. 19. 1; 1 Ki. 11. 3; 1 Ch. 1. 32. They served under the lawful wives, if alive, ch. 16. 6, 7; 32. 22; and their children had no title to the inheritance, ch. 25. 5, 6.

REFLECTIONS.—How necessary to count the cost when we enter upon a religious life! for who knows how many and how great our trials in it may be, since trials are increased in proportion to men's faith and spiritual comfort. Those trials are most afflicting to the believer which not only fly in the face of natural affection, or of outward honour and pleasure, but even threaten to frustrate the promises of God; yet thrice happy are they who, under the sorest trials, heartily acquiesce in the will of God, and firmly cleave to his promise, who, though he slay them, yet will still trust in him! For often when the nights of trial are at the very darkest, the Lord steps in, compasseth them about with songs of deliverance, and blesseth with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus. But while I admire the faith and obedience of Abraham, and the cheerful submission of Isaac—while I place these bright examples before me—my faith directs me to more glorious objects: let me with astonishment think of JEHOVAH bringing his only begotten Son into this world, permitting him to be laid on the altar, and through his sacrifice forgiving our sins! Let me behold Jesus caught, seasonably caught, in the thickets of men's wilful transgressions of his own compassion, and of our transgressions resting on him, and borne in our stead! Let me listen to the new testament in his blood, in which JEHOVAH swears that men shall be blessed in him, and all nations shall call him blessed

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 The age and death of Sarah. 3 The purchase of Machpelah, 19 where Sarah was buried.

AND Sarah was [a]an hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

2 And Sarah died in [b]Kirjath-arba; the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to [c]mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

3 ¶ And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying,

4 I am a [d]stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a burying-place with you, that I may [e]bury my dead out of my sight.

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, my lord: Thou art a mighty prince[f] among us; in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

7 And Abraham stood up, and [g]bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and entreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar,

9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah,[g] which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for as much money[1] as it is worth he shall give it me, for a possession of a burying-place among you.

10 And Ephron dwelt[2] among the children of Heth. And Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gate[3] of his[2] city, saying, 11 Nay, my lord, hear me: The field [h]give[4] I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; [i]in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.

12 And Abraham [k]bowed down himself before the people of the land.

13 And he spake unto Ephron, in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: [l]I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

14 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: The land is worth four hundred shekels of silver;[5] what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

16 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham weighed[6] to Ephron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, [m]current money with the merchant.

17 And [n]the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were [o]made sure

18 Unto Abraham for a possession, in the presence of the children of Heth, before [p]all that went in at the gate of his city.

19 ¶ And after this, Abraham [q]buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah, before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20 And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham [r]for a possession of a burying-place by the sons of Heth.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Abraham sweareth his servant. 10 The servant's journey: 12 His prayer and sign. 15 Rebekah meeteth him, and fulfilleth his sign, 22 receiveth jewels, 23 showeth her kindred, 25 and inviteth him home. 26 The servant bloweth God. 29 Laban entertaineth him. 34 The servant showeth his message. 50 Laban and Bethuel approve of it. 58 Rebekah consenteth to go. 62 Isaac meeteth her, and bringeth her home.

AND Abraham was [a]old, and well [y]stricken in age: and the LORD had [b]blessed Abraham in all things.

2 And Abraham said unto his [c]eldest servant of his house, that ruled over all that he had, Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh;

3 And I will make thee [d]swear by the LORD, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, [e]that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites,[8] among whom I dwell:

Abraham evidently understood the offered gift as a mere complimentary mode of expression, without any serious meaning that the offer should be accepted. C.

8 Abraham's care about the marriage of Isaac, suggests an important parental duty. The rich Canaanites, that dwelt around him, and who might have strengthened his son by their connection and influence, he utterly rejects; and directs his attention to a distant land, and a family comparatively poor. Education and principle, not riches and power, were the grounds upon which he sought to secure his son's domestic happiness and prosperity. The language of Laban, ver. 31, and of both Laban and Bethuel, ver. 50, 51, in which they ascribe the ruling of all events to the LORD; but above all their parting blessing in the name of the LORD, ver. 60, exhibit the quality of that religious system under which Rebekah was nurtured, and the greatness of the choice that Abraham made. CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 3–20. Abraham wanted to purchase a burying-place in Canaan, and to have the claims thereto ascertained, that he and his nearest relations might have their dust laid there apart from the heathen natives; and might have it as a pledge and earnest to confirm their faith in God's promise of their possession of the whole country in his due time, ch. 25. 9; 47. 29, 30; 49. 31; 50. 13, 24, 25.——Ver. 10. In ancient times the gate of a town or village was the place where the elders or judges sat, where cases were heard and adjudicated, and where all matters affecting the public welfare were discussed, Ge. 34. 20; De. 16. 18; Ru. 4. 1. At the present day in many of the outlying villages of Palestine, where primitive customs are still kept up, I have seen the elders sitting in the gates conducting public business.——Ver. 19. Machpelah still exists, encompassed by a high and massive wall, which must have been built before the Christian era. It is one of the holiest shrines of Mohammedanism, and consequently neither Jew nor Christian is permitted to enter it. The Prince of Wales was admitted within the walls, but was informed that the entrance to the cave had long been walled up, and that no person can now gain admission. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Ponder, my soul, how the clouds of trouble return after the rain; how death parts the nearest and most affectionate relatives! The marriage state is but the forerunner of death and sorrow; it is but a porch of entrance into eternity! Tears and grief are the tribute which we owe to our departed friends. But if they and we be Christ's, let us not 'mourn as those that have no hope.' 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord'—they are not lost, but gone before us. How death changes the comely countenance, and makes the dearest body loathsome! Let the death of others always remind me of my own; and let me live as a stranger and sojourner in this world. Let me so behave as to make my friendship valued and sought for by all around me. Never let Hittites or other heathens outstrip me in humanity or kindness, but let good manners, civility, modesty, and the strictest regard to equity, adorn my profession, and mingle themselves with all my behaviour. Let me carefully avoid being a burden to my neighbours, or being too much indebted for favours to carnal men; and though I be heir of the world through the righteousness of faith, let me be content with little of it now, and rejoice that the Canaan above, where neither death, nor famine, nor war ever enter, is my inheritance! If my flesh rest in hope, it is enough if I am allowed a grave on earth.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 2. This form of swearing might import the subjection of Eliezer the servant, and that the Messiah should proceed from his master's

THE OAK OF MAMRE; ABRAHAM'S OAK—WHERE ABRAHAM PITCHED HIS TENT AND BUILT AN ALTAR. [GENESIS, xxiii: 20.]—Abraham lived in Hebron, and buried there Sarah, his wife, in the cave of the field of Machpelah, before Mamre. The garden in which this oak stands belongs to the missions, who have here built a hospital for pilgrims. The drive to the famous oak, through the beautiful and extensive vineyards lying north and west of Hebron, is very charming. This oak of Abraham was revered as far back as the 16th century and is undoubtedly of great age. It is a fine old evergreen tree measuring 26 feet in girt, while its thick branches extend over an area 96 feet in diameter. The location is near the head of Wady Sebta, and there is a fine old well of sweet water just behind it. The Jews of Hebron hold picnics here, upon the soft grass that is allowed to grow beneath this old oak of Father Abraham.

4 But thou shalt go unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

5 And the servant said unto him, [f]Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

6 And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again.

7 The LORD God of heaven, which [g]took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he [h]shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be [i]clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.[k]

9 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

10 ¶ And the servant took ten camels,[9] of the camels of his master, and departed; (for all the goods of his master were in his hand;) and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia,[1] unto [l]the city of Nahor.

11 And he made his camels to [m]kneel down without the city by a well of water, at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water.[2]

12 ¶ And he said, O LORD [n]God of my master Abraham, I pray thee, [o]send me good speed this day, and show kindness unto my master Abraham.

13 Behold, [p]I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city [q]come out to draw water:

14 And [r]let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink; and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she that thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast showed kindness unto my master.[3]

15 ¶ And it came to pass, [s]before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher[4] upon her shoulder.

16 And the damsel was very fair[4] to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man [u]known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water[5] of thy pitcher.

18 And she said, Drink, my lord: and she hasted, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she hasted, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.

21 And the man, [x]wondering at her, held his peace, to wit whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden earring[6] of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of ten shekels weight of gold,[7]

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee. Is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

24 And she said unto him, I am the [z]daughter of Bethuel the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor.

25 She said moreover unto him, We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man [a]bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

27 And he said, [b]Blessed be the LORD God of my master[8] Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD led me to the house of my master's [c]brethren.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's [d]house these things.

29 ¶ And Rebekah had a brother, and his name was Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man unto the well.

30 And it came to pass, when he saw the ear-ring, and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me, that he came unto the man; and, behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, thou [e]blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? [9]for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

32 And the man came into the house: and he[1] ungirded his camels, and gave straw and provender for the camels, and water [f]to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

8 There is often a remarkable similarity between the characters of master and servant; the servant insensibly, or by direct imitation, imbibing a portion of the master's spirit, sentiments, and manner. The conduct of Abraham's servant well illustrates and confirms this observation. His diligent application to business, ver. 33. 54. 56, well answers to the conduct of Abraham, ch. 22. 5, while his piety in the 12, 27, 42, 48, and 52 verses of this chapter, beautifully corresponds to the invariable practice of Abraham in building an altar, and calling on the name of the LORD, wherever Providence ordered his lot.—Note. How common is it to hear complaints of unfaithful servants. Let those who complain remember this faithful servant of Abraham—the pious example and instruction by which, under grace, his character was formed.—C.

9 From the circumstance of the mother's house being mentioned, ver. 28, some have conjectured that her father, Bethuel, was dead, and the person called Bethuel, ver. 50, was a younger brother. This is possible; but the mother's house might be mentioned were even the father alive. For in Asiatic countries the women have apartments entirely separate from those of the men, in which their little children and grown-up daughters reside with them.—J.

Ver. 5, 6. It was extremely proper that the servant should know the full meaning of the oath before he took it, Je. 4. 2; Pr. 13. 16. God had ordered Abraham's departure from Mesopotamia; it was therefore improper that either he or his son should return thither, where they would be tempted to a partial idolatry.

42 And I came this day unto the well, and said, O LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do [n]prosper my way which I go;

43 Behold,[o] I stand by the well of water: and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;

44 And she say to me, [p]Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the LORD hath appointed out[7] for my master's son.

45 And before I had done speaking [q]in mine heart,[8] behold, Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee.

46 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink; and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.[9]

47 And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I put the ear-ring[1] upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands.[r]

48 And [s]I bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had [t]led me in the right way, to take my master's brother's daughter unto his son.

49 And now, if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the [u]right hand, or to the left.

50 ¶ Then Laban[2] and Bethuel answered and said, The thing proceedeth from the LORD: we cannot speak unto thee [x]bad or good.

51 Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath [y]spoken.

52 And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, [z]he worshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.

53 And the servant brought forth jewels[3] of silver, and jewels of gold,[4] and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother [a]precious things.

54 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning; and he said, [b]Send me away unto my master.

55 And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us [c]a few days, at the least ten; after that she shall go.

56 And he said unto them, Hinder me not, seeing the LORD hath prospered my way; send me away, that I may go to my master.

57 And they said, We will call the damsel, and inquire at her mouth.[5]

58 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her,[6] Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

59 And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and her nurse, [d]and Abraham's servant, and his men.

60 And they [e]blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister; [f]be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gate[7] of those which hate them.

61 And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

62 ¶ And Isaac came from the way of the [g]well Lahai-roi: for he dwelt in the south country.

Similar civilities had been shown me in other parts, but here it appeared particularly remarkable, as Rebekah, who was certainly brought up in these parts, showed herself equally obliging to travellers.—Niebuhr.

REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy it is to have at once a good servant, a good son, and a gracious God! A noble foundation these for truly happy success in our designs! In weighty cases it may be proper to interpose an oath, but that carefully explained, solemnly administered, and judiciously taken. The marriages of true believers, on which the temporal and eternal happiness of multitudes may depend, should be formed with remarkable and religious attention; for an unconverted partner in life often proves a dreadful and a dangerous snare. Happy the families which have praying and pious members! In difficult cases it is best to begin with prayer if we wish to succeed. And it manifests no small prudence to look for and follow the direction of God's providence; for the Lord kindly answers the prayers of faith when put up in behalf of his dear favourites. In order to obtain a truly happy marriage, how much more efficacious are a single regard to the glory of God, and a dependence on his direction, than all the wanton dalliances or false and fulsome flattery in the world! In religious courtship plain-dealing is the best wooing; and they who are most humble, kind, and industrious in the house of their father, are likely to prove most amiable and useful in the house of their husband. In children's marriages parents ought to advise, but not to constrain. It is useful to commemorate past mercies to encourage us in a present dependence on God's care and kindness for future ones: and the more mercies we receive, the more we ought to praise and worship God. New relations need new prayers; for new joys on earth are connected with new griefs. But doubly sweet are the blessings of Providence when we receive them with a devout temper of spirit. How useful for the soul is devout retirement! None will ever feel the want of company who have learned, through the medium of sensible objects, to converse with God himself. Alas, that so few deep-sworn servants of JEHOVAH should so little resemble Abraham's, in their endeavours to woo a bride for his dear Son! How little fervent prayer and accurate observation of his word and providence they mingle with their work! How often their own temporal provisions lie nearer their heart than that sinners should be made willing in the day of his power! May God make them equally faithful and equally successful!

Of them all the Midianites alone attained to historic importance. They settled on the eastern borders of Moab and Edom, and pastured their flocks as far south as the peninsula of Sinai. Among them Moses took refuge when he fled from Egypt. And Jethro, his father-in-law, was priest of Midian. 3 The junction of Ishmael with Isaac in the burial of Abraham, shows that they must have lived not very far from each other, and in a considerable degree of intimacy. Hence we conclude, with every reasonable probability, that Abraham and Isaac must have exercised considerable influence over the religious opinions and character of Ishmael. This idea is further strengthened by the fact that when Esau perceived that Isaac was displeased with his Hittite wives, ch. 28. 8, he went to Ishmael and married one of his daughters, with the expectation of her being more acceptable; what, from his knowledge of her father, he could not reasonably have expected upon any ground but the religious character of Ishmael's family. Accordingly, we interpret the phrase—was gathered to his people—to intimate Ishmael's dying in faith and entering into rest.—C.

CHAPTER XXV. Ver. 1–4, 6. The natural vigour wherewith God had endowed Abraham, for the procreation of Isaac, continued with him for the further enlargement of his family. These children of Keturah, and their posterity, peopled a considerable part of Arabia to the south and the east of the Promised Land, under the name of Midianites, Shuhites, Sabeans, and Ashurites.

Jacob prepares a mess of pottage, Esau returns hungry, their characters are exhibited, and their own future lives, and the conditions of their descendants, are decided. Jacob commercially buys, and Esau profanely sells, the patriarchal birthright. Esau, as a man of the field, is justly condemned because he does not more manfully endure a little hunger; while his contempt of the civil and religious privileges of his birth indicates a man who, lightly valuing his own rights, is not likely to respect the rights of others. God is a God of truth, Ps. 31. 5, and requires it of his people, at all times, in all places, and upon all subjects. Isaac is therefore to be condemned, as Abram was under similar circumstances. His prevarication is not to be defined as a small fault in so good a man, but as a great stain on so fair a character. Lord, what is man! thy grace is sufficient for us! Remember, Christian, thou canst do all things through Christ strengthening thee. Be valiant, therefore, for the truth.—C.

AND there was a famine in the land, besides the [a]first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went [b]unto Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar.[9]

2 And the Lord [c]appeared unto him, and said, Go not down [d]into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of:

3 Sojourn in this land, and [e]I will be with thee, and will bless thee: for unto thee, and unto thy seed, [f]I will give all these countries; and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father:[1]

4 And I [g]will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

5 Because[h] that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

6 ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar.

7 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and [i]he said, She is my sister:[2] for he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah, because she was fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been womb presaged that they and their posterity would live at variance one with another, and exceedingly differ in their religion, laws, manners, &c. The Edomites, descended from Esau, were at first the strongest people, ch. xxxvi.; but the Israelites, sprung from Jacob, under David (2 Sa. 8. 14), under Amaziah (2 Ch. 25. 11, 12), and under Hyrcanus, subdued them. Nay, Jacob's obtaining the birthright and blessing, ver. 29–34; 27. 29, 37, 40, rendered him and his posterity superior to Esau and his Edomite seed.

Ver. 25. That redness and hair marked the present strength of Esau's body, and the savage and cruel disposition of him and his posterity, ch. 27. 11, 40, 41; Ob. 10; Eze. 25. 12; 35. 3–5.

Ver. 26. Jacob took hold of his heel, as if he would have drawn him back, so that himself might be born first, or as if he would overthrow and suppress him, as he afterwards did, ver. 33; ch. xxvii. And rightly was he named Jacob, a heel-holder, or supplanter, on that account, ch. 27. 36.

Ver. 27. Esau was a wild, savage kind of man, spending most of his time in hunting, learning the art of war, and the like, ch. 10. 9; 16. 12. Jacob was a sincere, mild, plain-dealing man, keeping much at home, attending to his household affairs, and to his father's flocks and herds, ch. 6. 9; 46. 34.—[And the boys grew. The early development of different propensities in Esau and Jacob is very remarkable, and the visible causes of their respective characters may be traced to the dispositions and partialities of the parents. Isaac loves venison, and first to please his father, and then to gratify his own acquired habits, Esau becomes a cunning hunter. Rebekah loves domestic retirement, finds her comfort in the society of her infant Jacob, and forms his future character on the model of her own.—Note, These things are to be carefully observed: (1) How early, and insensibly, some part of the character of a father or mother may be propagated in their children. (2) The consequent importance of well considering all the habits in which a child is indulged or encouraged, as part, and often the most influential part, of its education. (3) The danger of parental partialities, from which, in this remarkable instance, many of the future troubles of Isaac and Rebekah, and Esau and Jacob, arose. C.]

Ver. 30. The name Edom, signifying red, at once marked his origin and colour, and his excessive lust after the red pottage, and his selling his birthright to obtain them.

Ver. 31–34. This birthright entailed upon the possessor a double portion of the paternal inheritance, De. 21. 16, 17; a claim to his father's principal blessing, and to the promise of Canaan, and a peculiar relation to God therein.——[Ver. 34. Altogether this is a most painful narrative. One does not know whether most to condemn the folly and recklessness of Esau, bartering his birthright for a mess of pottage; or the unbrotherly spirit and grasping selfishness of Jacob, refusing to a fainting brother a mouthful of food until he had given him all he possessed. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Before I part with Abraham, this celebrated patriarch, let me, in him, contemplate Jesus the everlasting Father. How astonishing his meekness—his kindness to men—his intimacy with, fear of, obedience to, and trust in his God! He is the chosen favourite of JEHOVAH—the father and covenant-head of innumerable millions of saved men. To him all the promises relative to the evangelical and eternal state of his church were originally made. All obedient at his Father's call, he left his native abodes of bliss, and became 'a stranger and sojourner on earth,' not having where to lay his head. At his Father's call, he offered himself an acceptable sacrifice to God; by his all-prevalent intercession, and supernatural influence, he offers men salvation from sin and from the hand of their enemies; and, after long patience, he wins untold disciples in the Jewish and gospel church. In his visible family are many professors, children of the bond-woman, the covenant of works; who, in the issue, are like Ishmael, or the modern Jews, whose unbelief brings them to misery and woe; others are children of the free-woman, the covenant of grace, and are, like Isaac, begotten to God because of their faith in Christ. Now let me observe, how invigorating is a strong faith in God's promise; for God delights to add abundant blessings to such as, by courageous believing, give him the glory of his power and faithfulness. Often the best of men have little remarkable fellowship with God in old age, but must live even to the end by faith, and not by sight; while wicked families are loaded with temporal mercies for the sake of their pious progenitors. Promised events are often ushered in by the most discouraging appearances; and mercies must be long prayed and waited for ere they be granted. It is good when husbands and wives unite their supplications; for to spread our griefs before a throne of grace is the greatest and surest relief. How often much trouble and vexation attend what is too eagerly desired! But how tender is God, in fixing the temporal, and even eternal, states of persons according to their faith! And how early are children known by their doings! yet in their education great care is to be taken in consulting their tempers and dispositions. Parents frequently expose themselves to future troubles by their partial regard to children. But why should we set our hearts on them, or any other worldly comfort, when we must so quickly leave them by death? At that time it should be the concern of parents so to dispose of their effects, that there may be no disputes after they are gone; and such deserve to have most assigned them as are likely to make the best use of it. How often the wisest worldlings act the most foolish part, while 'the Lord preserveth the simple!' How marvellously God overruleth even the sins of men, to the accomplishment of his purpose or promise, and the advancement of his glory! How dreadful, when men, even those who have had a religious education, gratify their sensual appetites at the expense of the temporal and eternal ruin of themselves and their seed; and when God permits them to be afterwards hardened in their sin, and standing monuments of that affecting truth, that numbers of the descendants of God's children are sometimes left out of his church, and unacquainted with their parents' blessings!

CHAPTER XXVI. [Ver. 4. The same promise, in all its details, which was originally given to Abraham, is here renewed to Isaac, see ch. 12. 3; 22. 17, 18. P.]

Ver. 12. This fertility was emblematical of fruitfulness in grace, Ps. 67. 6; Mat. 13. 23; and of the bountiful but gracious rewards which we shall enjoy in heaven, Ga. 6. 7, 8; Ps. 31. 19; 19. 11.

ENTRANCE TO THE GARDEN OF THE VIRGIN—WHERE JOSEPH LIVED. [GEN. xxvi: 2.]—When Herod issued his cruel decree that all the children in Bethlehem under two years of age should be put to death, the Lord appeared unto Joseph in a dream and said, Arise, take the young child and his mother and flee into Egypt. There is a tradition of long standing that the place of the sojourn in Egypt was at Matariyeh. It was near this place that Joseph lived, because it is only a short distance from Heliopolis where Potipherah resided, whose daughter Joseph married. This is a few miles east of Cairo, and the village is connected with it by telegraph and telephone. The region about Matariyeh is very fertile. Cotton grows here; orange groves are near by, and only a short distance is an ostrich farm kept by a Frenchman. It is a beautiful road from Cairo out to this place.

ROSHPINA—NEAR WHERE JOSHUA CONQUERED JABIN KING OF HAZOR. [GENESIS, xxvi: 3, 4.]—"Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father." Nearly four thousand years from the time these words were spoken to Abraham, we find a village as shown above, built by the Rothschilds, descendants of Abraham, in Palestine, the country that was promised to Abraham, and built as a place of residence for the Jews. It is a striking and interesting commentary upon the covenant between Heaven and these ancient people, that we find in these the last days of the nineteenth century, a disposition on the part of the Jews, which liberal and fortunate men of their race are helping them to carry out, to go back and possess the land of their fathers. Roshpina stands near the waters of Merom.

there a long time, that Abimelech, king of the Philistines, [h]looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was [i]sporting with Rebekah his wife.[1]

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, [m]What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that [n]toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.[2]

12 ¶ Then Isaac sowed in that land, and received[3] in the same year [o]an hundred fold: and the LORD blessed him.

13 And the man waxed great, and went forward,[4] and grew, until he became very great:

14 For he [p]had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of servants:[5] and the Philistines [q]envied him.

15 For all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had [r]stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for thou art much mightier than we.

17 And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18 And Isaac digged again the [s]wells of water which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he [t]called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of [u]springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well Esek;[6] because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also:[7] and he called the name of it Sitnah.[8]

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it Rehoboth;[9] and he said, For now the LORD hath [v]made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence to [w]Beer-sheba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, [x]I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed, for my servant Abraham's sake.

25 And he [y]builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD,[1] and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶ Then [z]Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath[2] one of his friends, and Phichol the chief captain of his army.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, [a]seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?

28 And they said, We saw[3] certainly [b]that the LORD was with thee: and we said, Let there be now [c]an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 That thou wilt[4] do us no hurt, as we have [d]not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou art now the [e]blessed of the LORD.

30 And[h] he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31 And they rose up [f]betimes in the morning, and [k]sware one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, [l]We have found water.

33 And he called it Shebah:[5] therefore the name of the city is [m]Beer-sheba unto this day.

34 ¶ And Esau was forty years[6] old when he took to wife [n]Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite;

It was not so with Isaac: in the midst of all his wealth and prosperity he does not forget God. Family religion is not expelled by family advancement; but, like Abraham, his father, he builds an altar, and calls on the name of the LORD; that is, acknowledges and worships him in all his revealed attributes, consequently seeks not only the promised protection from the Almighty God which his defenceless and ill-at weary circumstances, and situation required; but the pardon of the merciful God, which his sense of his sin, especially in the case of Abimelech, must have dictated to a pious and awakened mind.—C.

REFLECTIONS. — A mixture of providential smiles and frowns is ordinarily in the lot of God's loved children. But what a mercy is it to have the promise of grace established between God and our progenitors, that it may be renewed with us! The fear of men, the fear of temporal death, often causeth a snare: and we readily rush into the same snares in which others before had almost ruined themselves. Yet the kindness of God is infinitely great in rescuing his people, when they are thus busied in entangling themselves. But what a scandal to a saint to be discovered a dissembler! and how painful to have the snares which we laid for the innocent entangling ourselves, or their sins charged to our account before God! To what trouble and expense will envious men put themselves in order to gratify their lust. And how often are the most flourishing outward enjoyments imbittered by the envy which attends them! What a mercy to have God smiling on us when the world frowns! For, when our ways please the Lord, he maketh even our enemies to be at peace with us, and to pursue the friendship which they once refused. The wickedness of children, who break their parents hearts when they ought to be their comfort, is great, and observed by God; and his curse frequently attends

35 Which were [o]a grief of mind unto Isaac and to Rebekah.[5]

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Isaac sendeth Esau for venison. 6 Rebekah instructeth Jacob to obtain the blessing. 18 Jacob under the person of Esau obtaineth it. 30 Esau bringeth venison. 33 Isaac trembleth. 34 Esau complaineth. and by importunity obtaineth a blessing. 41 He threateneth Jacob's life. 42 Rebekah disappointeth it.

AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old,[6] and his eyes [a]were dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son. And he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old, I know not the day of my [b]death.

3 Now therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and go out to the field, and [c]take me some venison;

4 And make me [d]savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul may bless thee before I die.[7]

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶ And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee [e]before the LORD[8] before my death.

8 Now therefore, my son, [f]obey my voice, according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is [g]a hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

12 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as a [h]deceiver; and I shall bring a [i]curse upon me, and not a blessing.

13 And his mother said unto him, [k]Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took goodly[9] raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son.

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck.

17 And she gave the savoury[1] meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶ And he came unto his father, and said, My father. And he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy [m]first-born; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it to me.[2]

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands; so he [n]blessed him.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? And he said, [o]I am.[3]

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat; and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the [p]smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

28 Therefore [q]God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine:[4]

29 Let [r]people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: [s]cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and

3 This whole scene is painful and even revolting; but it is thoroughly oriental in character. Its cunning, duplicity, and base falsehood, it only resembles scenes enacted almost every day even in families of the highest station among the inhabitants of Western Asia. The sins of Esau, Rebekah, and Jacob did not pass unpunished. Bitterly did they all lament their errors and crimes during long years of estrangement, danger, and suffering.—A.

4 The nature and extent of the patriarchal birthright, which Esau despised, ch. 25. 34, is here fully exhibited. It consists, 1. In a propitious climate, a fertile soil, with that abundant return that unites an industrious, peaceable, and prosperous people. 2. The service and subjugation of foreign nations by conquest. 3. The service and submission of his own relatives by voluntary choice. 4. A curse upon all his enemies, and a blessing upon all his friends. What a glorious emblem of the birthright of Jesus! Hasten the time, O Lord! when the heathen shall be his inheritance, and the utmost ends of the earth his possession!—But while Rebekah or Jacob must be praised for valuing this patriarchal birthright so highly, is either to be imitated in seeking it so unlawfully? No. Like Paul with Peter, Ga. 2. 11, we must, as it were, withstand them to the face, because they are to be blamed. The goodness of the end sought can never justify the wrong means employed. God, who cannot lie, had already told Rebekah, ch. 25. 23, that the elder (Esau) should serve the younger (Jacob), and relying upon his truth and power, as well as valuing his promised gift, Rebekah should have waited on God's means for accomplishing his own purposes. Her human wisdom, however, brought its own punishment. It made Esau an intending murderer, verse 41, and Jacob a banished exile.—C.

CHAPTER XXVII. Ver. 4. That, invigorated with the savoury meat, I may bestow upon thee my blessing, constituting thee heir of all the benefits promised to me and my father Abraham: ver. 27–29; ch. 28. 3, 4; 48. 15; xlix. De. xxxi. xxxiii.; He. 11. 20.

Ver. 13. The manner in which she imprecates the curse cannot be justified; but, from the promise of God, and from Jacob's having obtained the birthright, ch. 25. 23, 33, she was confident of a happy issue.

Ver. 27. He regarded the smell of Jacob's garments as a token that God had intended to bless him abundantly, and to render him a particular blessing to others.

Ver. 28, 29. In this blessing Isaac at once requested and predicted the benefits mentioned. These temporal favours were more remarkable under the Old Testament than under the New; and represented the spiritual and temporal influences and fulness of the new covenant and of the church of God: He. 14. 6, 7; De. 32. 2; Is. 45. 8; 1 Co. 1. 30; 3. 22; Re. 1. 6; 5. 10; Ep. 1. 3.

Ver. 39, 40. This blessing imported that Esau and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born, Esau.

33 And Isaac trembled very exceedingly,[4] and said,[5] Who? where is he that hath taken[6] venison, and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, and he shall be blessed.

34 ¶ And when Esau heard the words of his father, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter[a] cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father!

35 And he said, Thy brother came with [z]subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, Is not he rightly named Jacob?[7] for he hath supplanted me these two times: he took away my birthright;[8] and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, Behold, I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I [y]sustained him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

38 And Esau said unto his father, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father! And Esau [x]lifted up his voice and wept.

39 And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, [w]Behold, thy dwelling shall be the fatness[1] of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above;[2]

40 And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother: and it shall come to pass, when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.[3]

41 ¶ And [v]Esau hated Jacob, because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, The days of mourning for my father are at hand, [u]then will I slay my brother Jacob.

42 ¶ And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah:[4] and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth [t]comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; and arise, flee thou to Laban my brother, to Haran;

44 And tarry with him [s]a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: then I will send and fetch thee from thence. Why should I be [r]deprived also of you both in one day?

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth; if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Isaac blesseth Jacob, and sendeth him to Padan-aram. 6 Esau marrieth Mahalath, the daughter of Ishmael. 10 The vision of Jacob's ladder. 18 The stone of Beth-el. 20 Jacob's vow.

AND Isaac called Jacob, and [q]blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, [p]Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan.[5]

2 Arise,[c] go to Padan-aram, to the house of Bethuel thy mother's father, and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of Laban thy mother's brother.

3 And [o]God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people;[6]

4 And give thee [n]the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art [m]a stranger,[7] which God [l]gave unto Abraham.

5 And Isaac sent away Jacob: and he went to [k]Padan-aram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.

6 ¶ When Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that, as he blessed him, he gave him a charge, saying, [j]Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

4 Heb. trembled with a great trembling greatly.

5 If Isaac knew the prophecy delivered to Rebekah, ch. 25. 23, and we can of imagine him ignorant of it, then his purpose of blessing Esau, and endowing him with the birthright, was contrary to God's production. We may conjecture, but we cannot absolutely discover, by what means Isaac was led to forget this word, any more than we can discover how Peter did not remember the words of Christ, till he turned and looked on him, Lu. 22. 61; but to the second question of God's promise, and of his own neglect of it, we may mainly attribute this trembling that answered upon Isaac. —Note, While Rebekah and Isaac we must not take an improper means to effect God's known purposes; but with Isaac we must not neglect any legitimate or authorized means in our power to give effect to God's commands and promises. C.

2 Isaac obtained possession of Mount Seir. It was a mountainous country, intersected by deep wild ravines. But it is far from being barren. The deep glens, the terraces along the mountain sides, and the broad downs, on the summits of the ridges, are covered with rich soil, capable of cultivation, and in which trees, shrubs, and flowers now grow luxuriantly. All this shows how accurate were the prophetic statements in Isaac's blessing: 'Thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above.' Compared with the regions immediately adjoining it, Edom is fertile.—P.

4 The information was given to Rebekah, as her posterity for 2,000 years well knows. Being a prudent woman, as well as a tender mother, she advises Jacob not to attempt the intended mischief by complaint to his father, or private revenge; but rather to give place to his brother's anger, fully aware of the irritable and fiery temper of Esau, she enforces her argument on Jacob by reminding him how soon the paroxysm would be over and make way for his return.—C.

his seed should inhabit Mount Seir, a soil then moderately fertile, He. 11. 20; ch. 36. 6–8; that they should live much by war, violence, and rapine, Mat. 10. 34; should, by David, Amaziah, Hyrcanus, &c., be subjected to the Hebrew yoke, De. 33. 29; Ps. 60. 8; 2 Sa. 8. 14; 2 Ch. 25. 11, 12; Ob. 18, 19; but should under Jehoram cast it off, 2 Ki. 8. 16, 20.

Ver. 41. In this manner Esau hoped to recover both birthright and blessing; but Isaac nevertheless lived about forty-three years after.—[Esau was afraid to attempt any open violence during his father's life. The disease under which Isaac was labouring had brought on premature debility, and it appears to have greatly affected his sight. He must have in a great measure recovered from it, however, for he lived for forty years after Jacob's departure. P.]

REFLECTIONS. When dimness of sight, or other harbingers of death, fasten upon us, it is high time for spiritual diligence, particularly in committing ourselves and our families to God. But even then it is hard to rectify the partial affection which we have conceived for our children. How unseemly in parents, especially if godly, to become tempters of their children to offend God, and to despise the awful curse which he hath annexed to sin! Their evil counsels are a most entangling snare; and it is unnatural for the dearest relations to become deceivers of one another; especially as one sin so naturally leads to another still worse; and nothing but disorder, grief, or other murderous consequences, can justly be expected. The wisdom of God is often remarkably evident in accomplishing his great designs through means of the wicked practices of men; but the heirs of promise, notwithstanding, entail upon themselves the most fearful perplexity and trouble, in taking sinful methods to obtain their promised benefits. With what earnestness will the most carnal men pursue after spiritual things, for the sake of the carnal advantages which they hope will attend them! But, if disappointed, readily they pervert their way, and their heart fretteth against the Lord, while with malice and murder they think to defeat the purposes of God. How readily this malice reduces to great perplexity and fear such as have been the sinful instruments of their disappointment! Stand in awe, my soul; seek the Lord's blessing only in his own time and method! Let lying lips be an abomination to me! Never let me despise the heavenly birthright, lest I be denied the blessing when afterward I seek it carefully with tears. Is any provoked by or even unjustly enraged at me, let me, by yielding, pacify great offences; or, by flight, escape for my safety. Perhaps what now seems base or bitter to my corrupt heart, may yield me consolation in the latter end. Let intimacy, therefore, and especially marriage-connection, with the wicked, be always the detestation of my soul.

CHAPTER XXVIII. Ver. 12, 13. This vision represented the peculiar care of God concerning Jacob and other saints, and the ministration of angels to them, 2 Ch. 16. 9; Ec. 5. 8; Ps. 135. 6; Is. 41. 10; Ac. 18. 10; 2 Ti. 4.

7 And that Jacob [k]obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Esau seeing that the daughters of Canaan pleased not[7] Isaac his father,

9 Then went Esau unto [l]Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had, Mahalath[8] the daughter of Ishmael, Abraham's son, the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

10 ¶ And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran.[9]

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set: and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his [m]pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.[1]

12 And he [n]dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13 And,[o] behold, the LORD stood above it, and[1] said, I am the LORD [p]God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, [q]to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

14 And [r]thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread[2] abroad [s]to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee, and [t]in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed.[3]

15 And, behold, [u]I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land: for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place, and I[x] knew it not.

17 And he was [y]afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is [z]none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Jacob [a]rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and [b]set it up for a pillar, and poured oil[4] upon the top of it.

19 And he called the name of that place [c]Bethel: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first.[5]

20 ¶ And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If [d]God will be with me,[7] and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

21 So that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the LORD be my God:

22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's [e]house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give [f]the [8]tenth unto thee.

THEN Jacob went on his journey,[9] and came into [a]the land of the people[1] of the east.[2]

2 And he looked, and behold [b]a well in the field, and, lo, there were [c]three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.[3]

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of [d]Haran are we.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the [e]son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, [f]Is he well?[4] And they said, He is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

7 And he said, Lo, [g]it is yet high day,[5] neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

8 And they said, [h]We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

The narrative does not profess to give a full itinerary of his journey. The night at Bethel is specially mentioned, because of the events which occurred there. It is no unusual thing in Palestine to sleep in the open air. Towards the present population do so during the summer months on house-tops, in fields, or with their flocks on hillsides. He, in his manhood, is of the earth, a descendant of Jacob; and in his divine person is the Lord from heaven, Js. 7. 14; 9. 6; Jn. 1. 14; Ro. 1. 3, 4; 9. 5; 1 Ti. 3. 16; he is the only means of fellowship between God and men, Jn. 14. 6; Ep. 2. 18; 3. 12; 1 Ti. 2. 5, 6; and he directs and enjoys the ministration of angels, Jn. 1. 51; 1 Pe. 1. 12; 1 Ti. 3. 16,—in his conception, Lu. 1. 31; Mat. 1. 20,—his birth, Lu. 2. 14; He. 1. 6,—his temptation, Mat. 4. 11,—his agony, Lu. 22. 43,—his resurrection, Mat. 28. 2, 5,—his ascension, Ac. 1. 10, 11; Ps. 47. 5; 68. 17, 18; Da. 7. 10, 13,—and second coming, 1 Th. 4. 16; 2 Th. 1. 7; Mat. 25. 31.

Ver. 20. A vow is a solemn promise made to God, by which we bind ourselves more strictly to necessary duty, or what indifferent things are calculated to promote it, Ps. 76. 11; 119. 106; Is. 19. 21; 44. 4, 5; 45. 23; 2 Co. 8. 5; De. 5. 2, 3; 29. 1, 12, 13; Jos. 24. 25; 2 Ki. 11. 17; 2 Ch. 29. 10; 34. 31–34; Ezr. 10. 3; Ne. 9. 10; Ac. 18. 18; 21. 23, 24; and that either in thankfulness for some mercy received, Jonah 1. 16; or for obtaining some special benefit, Nu. 21. 1, 2; Ju. 11. 30; 1 Sa. 1. 11; Pr. 31. 2.

Ver. 21. Owned and worshipped by me and my family, as the author of our whole happiness, and as our valuable and everlasting portion, Ex. 15. 2; Ps. 118. 27.

REFLECTIONS. How crosses and crowns are mingled together in the lot of the saints! But it is comfortable when the blessing of parents and of God prepares men for their trials; and to have a godly friend's house to lodge in, amidst our distress, alleviates the grief. What care both parents and children ought to take to prevent unequal marriages with the ungodly! How shrewd the contrivances of carnal men to promote their temporal advantage! But they who aim only at pleasing men often meet with the most bitter disappointments. They who rest on partial reformations lie down but the more securely under the wrath of God. It is too late to be wise when the opportunity is lost. How amazing the mercy of God, in graciously visiting such as, by their sin, have made their own homes dangerous for them to tarry at! Easily he renders even trouble sweet with his kindness; and happy they who have him and his angels to be their protectors! No danger can come near them. And, if he love, he will never leave us. He is often nearer us than we are aware; and his comfortable presence in ordinances is the very gate to celestial joys. How effectually nearness to God humbles us under a sense of our own vileness and corruption! And happy is it when our fellowship with God leaves a lasting impression on our spirits—powerfully constrains us, by solemn engagement, to surrender ourselves, and all that we have, to his service—and renders us content with a moderate share of the good things of this life! But while I thus regard the kindness of his providence, let me here contemplate the person and the work of my glorious Redeemer, that Mediator between God and man. On earth, in the condescension of his humanity; in heaven, in the glory of his divinity; through him I come near to God, and enjoy his presence and his favour; through him I behold the promises of guidance and protection; and after all my wanderings in this world, defended by his care, shall return to my Father's house in peace, laden with the blessings of eternal glory.

OUR TENT NEAR BETHEL—WHERE JACOB SAW THE LADDER AND THE ANGELS. [Genesis, xxviii:12.]—This is supposed to be the place where Jacob tarried all the night and where he dreamed and "behold a ladder set up upon the earth with its top reaching to heaven, and where the angels of God ascended and descended upon it."

The bed was earth, the raised pillow stones,
Whereon poor Jacob rests his head, his bones,
Heaven was his canopy, the shades of night
Were his drawn curtains to exclude the light.

Who would not sleep on such a bed,
With stony pillow for his head,
If they might dream with thee,
Whose glad dreaming is no seeming,
Nor whose sleeping ends in weeping,
And whose waking is no breaking
Of the bright reality.

Bethel is on the road from Jerusalem, and along this way our Savior often walked.

9 ¶ And [t]while he yet spake with them, Rachel came with her father's sheep; for she kept them.

10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

11 And Jacob [u]kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, [v]and wept.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's [w]brother, and that he was Rebekah's son: and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the tidings[2] of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and [x]kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.[3]

14 And Laban said to him, Surely thou art [y]my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him the space of a month.[4]

15 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender-eyed, but Rachel was beautiful and well-favoured.

18 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, [z]I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.[5]

19 And Laban said, [a]It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

20 And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, [b]for the love he had to her.

21 ¶ And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days [c]are fulfilled,[6] that I may go[t] in unto her.

22 And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and made [d]a feast.

23 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took [e]Leah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.

5 In modern times, and in European society, the father gives a dowry with his daughter; in the times and country of Laban, the father received it for his daughter: a custom still prevalent in Arabia and some other eastern countries. How shall we account for this difference of customs? 1. From the system of polygamy so prevalent in the East, which rendered the proportion of unmarried females inadequate to the number of males, and enabled covetous fathers, like Laban, to make a profitable traffic of their daughters. 2. From the nature of the servile employments to which even females of rank (such as Rachel, ver. 6) were appointed. It is evident that, in former times, the wife, in eastern countries, was but a superior servant, or rather slave, as she still, down to these days, continues to be, and therefore we can be little surprised that she was purchased as by a master, for whom she was to toil as an inferior, and not tendered as for a husband with whom she was to live as an equal.—Note. It was reserved for Christianity, in every country where it has prevailed, to raise the condition of woman to her proper rank in society.—C.

8 The duplicity of Laban in imposing upon Jacob, and even pleading a custom, hitherto unmentioned, or that perhaps never had a being, in justification of it, is utterly to be condemned. The world is full of duplicity, saying one thing and meaning another, promising an act of kindness while intending an act of injury. Like all other evils it leads to more. First, it divides the concentrated affections of Jacob; then it introduces him to polygamy, this leads to envy between the sisters, to a farther extension of the first evil; and terminates in the slavery of Joseph, and nearly brings the grey head of Jacob with sorrow to the grave.—C.

26 And Laban said, It must not be so done in our country,[7] to give the younger before the first-born.

27 Fulfil her [k]week, and we will give thee [l]this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.[8]

28 ¶ And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week; and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.[9]

29 And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter Bilhah his handmaid to be her maid.

CHAPTER XXIX. Ver. 23. Leah being veiled, as ch. 24. 65, and it being dark, Jacob could not discern the fraud. Thus he who beguiled his brother, and imposed on his dim-sighted father, was now, in like manner, beguiled himself.

Ver. 25. [By bitter experience Jacob was now taught how painful, how harrowing to the feelings of others, was that cunning and duplicity which he himself had practised on his father and brother. From this moment till the day of his death he continued to be the victim of deception and falsehood. Retributive justice seems to have followed him until, in God's good providence, it completely purified him. P.]

Ver. 31. To punish Leah for consenting to her father's deceit, she was hated, that is, less loved than Rachel, ver. 30.

REFLECTIONS.—Behold how cheerful and prosperous the gracious visits of a reconciled God render men! Behold the plainness, humility, and kindness which once prevailed in the world! How kind is it to assist others unasked; and how unnatural to refuse our relations assistance in the time of their distress! The diligent labourer is worthy of his hire. Virtuous love brings its own reward along with it. Nothing is irksome when done in fervent affection. With what deliberation ought men to proceed in marriage, even when they are assured of God's blessing on it! How powerful is the abominable influence of a covetous heart! It will make parents to sell their children or prostitute them as harlots, and men to impose upon their nearest friends! How justly God marks the sins of his own people in their chastisements; and yet mercifully tries them with disappointments, that the love of creatures may not engross their whole heart! How little comfort men have ever found in transgressing God's original institution by taking a plurality of wives! Real marriage love cannot be divided. Nothing can be heavier to an affectionate wife than to have her husband's love estranged from her. But readily the Lord takes part with them who have least help in man; and makes up in one thing what he denies to them in another. Let us therefore, like Leah, diligently observe the providence of God, not only in the birth of children, but in every other thing which may befall us; that we may acknowledge it with gratitude, trust him more cheerfully, and praise him to his glory.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—Sinful marriages have sad consequences. Wives chosen for their beauty often bring a troublesome temper along with them. Envious discontentment and disappointed said unto Jacob, Give me children, [b]or else I die.

2 And Jacob's [c]anger was kindled against Rachel; and he said, [d]Am I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the [e]fruit of the womb?

3 And she said, Behold my maid Bilhah, go in unto her; and she shall bear [f]upon my knees, that I may also have children by her.[5]

4 And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid to wife;[g] and Jacob went in unto her.

5 ¶ And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son.

6 And Rachel said, God hath judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name [h]Dan.[6]

7 And Bilhah, Rachel's maid, conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

8 And Rachel said, With great wrestlings[7] have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name [i]Naphtali.

9 When Leah saw that she had [k]left bearing, she took Zilpah her maid, and gave her Jacob to wife.

10 And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bare Jacob a son.

11 And Leah said, A troop cometh: and she called his name [l]Gad.[8]

12 And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bare Jacob a second son.

13 And Leah said, Happy am I,[9] for the daughters will [m]call me blessed: and she called his name [n]Asher.[1]

14 ¶ And Reuben went in the days of wheat-harvest, and found [o]mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.[2]

15 And she said unto her,[3] Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to-night for thy son's mandrakes.

16 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me; for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

17 ¶ And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived, and bare Jacob the fifth son.[4]

18 And Leah said, God hath given me[5] my hire, because I have given my maiden to my husband: and she called his name [p]Issachar.

19 And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son.

20 And Leah said, God hath endowed me with a good dowery; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name [q]Zebulun.

21 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name [r]Dinah.

22 ¶ And God [s]remembered Rachel, and God hearkened to her, and opened her womb.

23 And she conceived,[6] and bare a son; and said, God hath taken away my [t]reproach:

24 And she called his name [u]Joseph; and said, The LORD shall [x]add to me another son.

25 ¶ And it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, Send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to [y]my country.

26 Give me my wives and my children, for whom I have served thee, and let me go:[7] for thou knowest my service which I have done thee.

27 And Laban said unto him, I pray thee, if I have [z]found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for I have learned by experience that [a]the LORD hath blessed me for thy sake.

28 And he said, [b]Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it.

29 And he said unto him, Thou knowest [c]how I have served[8] thee, and how thy cattle was with me.

30 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now [d]increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee [e]since my coming: and now, when shall I provide for mine own house also?

31 And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me [f]any thing. If thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock.

32 I will pass through all thy flock to-day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats; and of [g]such shall be my hire.

33 So shall my [h]righteousness answer for me [i]in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me.

34 And Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.[9]

35 And he removed that day the he-goats that were ring-straked and spotted, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hand of his sons.

2 The mandrakes (in Heb. dudaim) has been very variously described. some translate the Hebrew dudaim, violets; others, lilies, jasmines, musk-roses; others, flowers in general. Abp. Marsh thus describes the plant, commonly called mandrake. "It grows low, like a lettuce, to which its leaves have a great resemblance, except that they have a dark green colour. The flowers are purple. The fruit, when ripe, in the beginning of May (the wheat harvest in Palestine) is of the size and colour of a small apple, exceedingly ruddy, and of an agreeable odour. Pythagoras denominated it anthropomorphon. Theophrastus refers to it as productive of love. There can be no doubt that in ancient times the plant, commonly called mandrake, was in high repute as an ingredient in charms or love potions, and it is not unlikely that some such idea might have occupied the mind of Rachel, who, though a believer in the true God and his promises, was not yet thoroughly clear of the superstition of her country, as especially appears from ch. 31. 34.—C.

pride make multitudes miserable! Immoderate desire of children, or other created enjoyments, hurry many into fearful disorders! But it is vain ever to expect that happiness from creatures which can be had only in and from God himself. No love to persons should hinder our detestation and reproof of their sins. Even the godly are apt to fall into snares laid for them by their near relations. And bad examples are more readily imitated than good ones. If we are once overcome by sin, we are apt to yield to it more easily afterward. Many are more governed by the estimation of the world than by reason or religion. It is very wicked for parents to transmit their quarrels to their children. It is no lessening of our guilt that God brings good out of our evil. People often promise themselves happiness in that which will be their death or ruin. Saints have need to trust their God, as all others may deceive them; and reason to desire their heavenly home, as this world is not their rest. What an advantage to families are servants remarkably pious! How criminal for covetous masters to defraud them of their wages! What good words worldly men can give to serve their own ends, and how wise they are for their own carnal interests! But their caution is vain when God designs

36 And he set three days' journey[g] betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks.[1]

37 ¶ And Jacob took him [h]rods of green poplar,[2] and of the [i]hazel and [m]chestnut tree; and pilled white strakes in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

38 And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering-troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive[3] when they came to drink.

39 And the flocks [n]conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ring-straked, speckled, and spotted.

40 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ring-straked and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle.[4]

41 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

42 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man [o]increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maid-servants, and men-servants, and camels, and asses.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Jacob upon displeasure departeth secretly. 19 Rachel stealeth her father's images. 22 Laban pursueth after him, and complaineth of the wrong. 34 Rachel's policy to hide the images. 36 Jacob's complaint of Laban. 43 The covenant of Laban and Jacob at Galeed.

AND he heard [a]the words of Laban's sons, saying, Jacob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this [b]glory.

2 And Jacob beheld the countenance of Laban, and, behold, it was not toward him [c]as before.

3 And the [d]LORD said unto Jacob, [e]Return unto the [f]land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be [g]with thee.

4 And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock,

5 And said unto them,[5] I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but the God of my father hath [h]been with me.

6 And ye know, that [i]with all my power I have served your father.

7 And your father hath deceived me, and changed my wages ten [k]times; but God [l]suffered him not to hurt me.

8 If he said thus, [m]The speckled shall be thy wages; then all[6] the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ring-straked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattle ring-straked.

9 Thus God hath taken away [n]the cattle of your father, and given them to me.

10 And it came to pass, at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw [o]in a dream, and, behold, the [7]rams which leaped upon the cattle were ring-straked, speckled, and grisled.

11 And [p]the angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob. And I said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ring-straked, speckled, and grisled: for I have [q]seen all that Laban doeth unto thee.

13 I am the [r]God of Beth-el, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: [s]now arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.

14 And Rachel and Leah answered and said unto him, Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?[8]

15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath [t]sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.

16 For[u] all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is ours, and our children's: now then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.

17 ¶ Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels;

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram, for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the [v]images that were her father's.[9]

20 And Jacob stole away unawares to [1]Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

21 So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and passed over the river,[2] and [w]set his face toward the mount Gilead.

22 ¶ And it was told Laban [x]on the third day that Jacob was fled.

23 And he took [y]his brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days' journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gilead.[3]

24 And [z]God came to Laban the Syrian in a dream by night, and said unto him, [a]Take heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.[4]

25 ¶ Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now

As a husband and father he had power to direct upon the movements of his family; but he does not act upon that power but wisely asks his wives into consultation, explains his motives, and obtains their full concurrence in his plans.—Note. Piety, reason, and affection should ever be the assistants, guides, and balances of conjugal and parental authority—what force and irresistible control from between husband and wife, in all their domestic plans, interests, and pursuits, removes contrariety, promotes cohesion, fixes affection, and, under the providence of God, lays the main foundation for family comfort and success. C.

to frustrate their purposes; and they often outwit themselves who intend to impose upon others. All agreements ought to be made with great clearness and accuracy, that no stain be thereby occasioned to our character; and in the use of lawful means to promote our wealth, our trust should be fixed on the promised providence of God. His blessing can quickly increase a little, and make it a great store.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 13. This is a simple statement, but there is most cheering truth embodied in it. He had vowed prospectively to dedicate a tenth of his property to the Lord, and thus in the ordinary affairs of life to testify his complete dependence on the divine will. Now after a long and hard struggle, when wealth was acquired, and by the envy of an unjust master was placed in peril, the Lord graciously reminds him of the vision at Bethel. P.]

Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said to Jacob, [b]What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and carried away my daughters, [c]as captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and steal away from me,[4] and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away [d]with mirth, and with songs, with tabret,[5] and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me [e]to kiss my sons and my daughters? Thou hast now [f]done foolishly in so doing.

29 It [g]is in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the [h]God of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

30 And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou [i]stolen my[i] gods?

31 And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because [k]I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, let him not live: before [l]our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into [m]Leah's tent, and into the two maid-servants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

34 Now [n]Rachel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them.[6] And Laban searched[7] all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease [o]my lord that I cannot [p]rise up before thee; for [q]the custom of women is upon me. And he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶ And Jacob [r]was wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household-stuff? [s]set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

38 This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she-goats [t]have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have [u]I not eaten.

39 That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it: of [v]my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

40 Thus I was; [w]in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

41 Thus [x]have I been twenty years in thy house: I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle; and thou hast changed my wages [y]ten times.

42 Except the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and [z]the Fear[8] of Isaac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty: God [a]hath seen mine affliction, and the labour of my hands, and rebuked thee yesternight.

43 ¶ And Laban answered and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born?

44 Now therefore come thou, [b]let us make a covenant, I and thou; and let it be for a witness between me and thee.

45 And Jacob took a [c]stone, and set it up for a pillar.

46 And Jacob said unto his [d]brethren, Gather stones; and they took stones, and made an heap; and they did eat there upon the heap.

47 And Laban called it [e]Jegar-sahadutha; but Jacob called it Galeed.[9]

48 And Laban said, This heap is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called [f]Galeed;

49 And [g]Mizpah: for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

50 If thou shalt afflict my daughters, [h]or if thou shalt take other wives besides my daughters, no man is with us; see, God is witness betwixt me and thee.

6 The objections of unbelievers against the Bible are generally founded on two false principles. 1. They contemplate all the weaknesses, errors, and sins of the most prominent Scripture characters as things approved of God, because recorded in his word. 2. Presuming that Christians must consequently approve and defend every part of their conduct, they accuse Christianity and Christians of approving and defending what is evil. Both these assumptions are erroneous in all cases, consequently erroneous in the present example. Rachel was weak, superstitious, and, alas! it may now have been covetous, and as sin is ever progressive, she succeeded in concealing one fault only by committing another. And if the Spirit of God in this, and in similar cases, have not uttered any special sentence of condemnation, it is simply because the law of God is presumed to be so well known as to require no particular exposition or application.—C.

8 Fear is a state of mind modified by its object. A slave may fear a severe task-master, a child a tender parent. This modification of the feeling of fear arises from the feelings with which it is associated. In the slave it is associated with anticipated severity, in the child with unquestioned love. In the one it is the fear of terror, in the other the fear of reverence. There is a fear, sometimes supposed to be the fear of God, which is altogether inconsistent with true religion. It is not, however, the fear of God, but the fear of punishment. Thus slavish fear love casteth utterly out of the heart. 1 Jn. 4. 18, while love cherisheth that godly fear which the Scripture declares to be the very beginning of wisdom, Pr. 1. 7. C. —— The 'Fear of Isaac' signifies 'the God of Isaac.' The Hebrew word is used to denote not merely the abstract idea of 'fear,' but the person or object which causes it. It has this latter sense here. The rebuke which Jacob administered to Laban was sharp and deserved.—P.

After Jacob and Laban made the covenant, Jacob raised the heap of stones and called it Galeed, 'the heap of witness:' thus making the name of the mountain apply, by a slight change of sound, to the heap he had raised. Such a play upon words is very common in the East even yet. Laban called the heap Jegar - sahadutha, which in his own Aramaic language was identical in meaning with Galeed. The exact spot is unknown; but it must have been near Mahanaim.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—What stings do riches carry with them, that for them a man is envied of his neighbour! But base-minded indeed are those wretches who are ungrateful, and who reckon temporal wealth the principal glory. What an evil world is this, where the best behaviour cannot secure one's reputation! Too often sour looks deprive families of their best supports. It is a mercy that, in the very crisis of difficulty, God visits and comforts his people: that he never changes, but wills that we should live near to him. When we get worldly blessings in a new-covenant channel, they are doubly sweet; and yet, when outward mercies increase, we have great need to be stirred up to think of our celestial home. When we have gone safely out under God's direction, we need not fear to return under his care. But how apt are the best to forget the distinguished service of God, unless they be both driven and drawn to it! How pleasant when married persons dwell together in unity, and do nothing important without mutual consent! How strong is our affection to idols, when we will rather steal them than want them! and how despicable those deities that can be stolen and hidden among the stuff! God hath in his hand the hearts of all men; and he will continue to rescue his people when upon the brink of ruin, and will restrain their most outrageous enemies. Bad hearts are pregnant with evil surmises; and, if God hinder their mischievous designs, they readily pretend that they never formed them. Whatever wicked men think of foolish mirth and riotous feasting at the parting of friends, it is ordinarily a token of much coldness or corruption in religion. Rough and undeserved reproaches provoke even good men and of calm spirits to vindicate themselves with heat, and to recriminate on their reproachers; and even to utter hasty wishes, which would render them miserable if they took effect. But God can marvellously overrule the rage of men to a most friendly issue. And with meekness and prudence we ought to cherish even the smallest approach towards peace and reconciliation. To forgive and forget injuries, and render good for evil, is truly Christian; and near relations are doubly bound to mutual forgiveness and living

51 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee;

52 This heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap, and this pillar, unto me, for harm.

54 Then Jacob offered sacrifice[2] upon the mount, and called his brethren [o]to eat bread: and they did eat bread, and tarried all night in the mount.

55 And early in the morning Laban rose up, and kissed his sons and his daughters, [p]and blessed them: and Laban departed, and returned unto his place.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Jacob's vision at Mahanaim. 3 His message to Esau. 6 He is afraid of Esau's coming. 9 He prayeth for deliverance. 13 He sendeth a present to Esau. 24 He wrestleth with an angel at Peniel, where he is called Israel. 31 He halteth.

AND Jacob went on his way, [a]and the angels of God met him.

2 And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's [b]host: and he called the name of that place [c]Mahanaim.

3 ¶ And Jacob sent messengers before him to Esau his brother, unto the land of [d]Seir, the country[3] of Edom.[4]

4 And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye speak unto [e]my lord Esau; Thy servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now:

5 And I have oxen, and asses, flocks, and men-servants, and women-servants;[5] and I have sent to tell my lord, that I may find grace in thy sight.

6 ¶ And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also he [f]cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him.[6]

7 Then Jacob was [g]greatly afraid and distressed: [h]and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;

8 And said, If Esau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.

9 ¶ And Jacob said,[7] O[i] God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the LORD which saidst unto me, [k]Return unto thy country and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

10 I am not [l]worthy of the least of all[8] the mercies, and of all the [m]truth, which thou hast showed unto thy servant; for [n]with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands.

11 Deliver[o] me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, [p]and the mother with[9] the children.

12 And [q]thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 ¶ And he lodged there that same night; and took of that which came to his hand [r]a present for Esau his brother;

14 Two hundred she-goats, and twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams, 15 Thirty milch camels[1] with their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-asses and ten foals.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a [s]space betwixt drove and drove.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept of me.[2]

21 So went the present over before him; and himself lodged that night in the company.

22 And he rose up that night, and took [t]his two wives, and his two women-servants, and his eleven sons, and passed over the ford [u]Jabbok.

23 And he took them, and sent[3] them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

24 ¶ And Jacob was left alone: and [x]there wrestled[4] a[y] man with him until the breaking [z]of the day.[5]

25 And when he saw that he [a]prevailed not against him, [b]he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

26 And he said, [c]Let me go, for the day breaketh.[6] And he said, [d]I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

in peace. But solemn covenants, amongst all, should be undertaken with the greatest deliberation, and observed with the most heedful attention.

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 24–28. The Son of God in human form appeared to Jacob as if he intended to cast him down; but Jacob, enabled of God with bodily, and chiefly spiritual strength, in fervent prayer prevailed over what opposition Christ gave him. To render him sensible of his weakness, Christ disjointed his thigh, 2 Co. 12. 7; but after encouraging his supplications, he changed his name as a token of bettering his condition. Hence, when the church is represented as infirm, she is called Jacob, Am. 7. 2, 5, 8; Is. 41. 14; but when her valour and excellency are signified, she is called Israel, Ga. 6. 16. Thus God gave Jacob strength to overcome, and also the reward and praise of the victory.

27 And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob.

28 And he said, [c]Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and [d]with men, and hast prevailed.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, [e]Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? [25] And [h]he blessed him there.

30 And Jacob called the name of the place [6]Peniel: for I have seen God [k]face to face, and my life is preserved.

31 ¶ And as he passed over Penuel, the sun rose upon him, and he [l]halted upon his thigh.

32 Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, [7] which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day; because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the sinew that shrank.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 The kindness of Jacob and Esau at their meeting. 17 Jacob cometh to Succoth. 18 At Shalem he buyeth a field, and buildeth an altar called El-elohe-Israel.

AND Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he [a]divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

2 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindermost. [8]

3 And he passed [b]over before them, [c]and bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother. [9]

4 And Esau ran to meet him, and [d]embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children, and said, Who are those with thee? [1] and he said, [e]The children which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

9 Jacob was still distrustful of Esau. He had himself practised cunning and deception, and now he was harassed by the fear of others, when in reality there was no cause. 8 And he said, What [f]meanest thou by all this drove [2] which I met? And he said, These are to find grace in the sight of my lord.

9 And Esau said, I have [g]enough, [3] my brother; keep that thou hast unto thyself. [4]

10 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I have seen thy face, as [h]though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

11 Take, I pray thee, my [i]blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have [k]enough. And he urged him, and he took it.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, [5] and I will go before thee.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that [l]the children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me; and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant; and I will lead on softly, [6]according as the cattle that goeth before me and the children be [m]able to endure, until I come unto my lord unto Seir.

15 And Esau said, Let me now leave [7] with thee some of the folk that are with me. And he said, What needeth it? [8] let me [n]find grace in the sight of my lord. [9]

16 So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

17 ¶ And Jacob journeyed to [o]Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called Succoth. [1]

REFLECTIONS.—What sore trials saints often meet with in the very way which God directs them to take! But seasonable are the visits which God and his angels make to his people in such times of need. May Jesus and his angels so meet me in my way to the Canaan above! Deep-rooted, indeed, is that resentment which neither length of days can wear out, nor the most submissive yielding assuage; and when what would make a friend rejoice, makes a brother envy and rage! Malicious spirits never forget injuries. Jealousy is cruel as the grave; and in this disordered world power and policy are often with the oppressors. In distress it is necessary to betake ourselves to prayer, and to join the protection of God with our prudent endeavours; and amidst fear of danger we ought to trust to and plead God's promises; and while commemorating our mercies, and conscious of our unworthiness, we must insist on his fulfilment of his word. In danger it is prudent to present a part, if that can preserve the whole, for peace cannot be bought too dear; and a large present is a good recommendation to a worldly mind; since apparent courage and confidence in a man's goodness lay him under a kind of obligation to show it. They who would prevail in temptations must first wrestle with God in prayer. If he exercise us with sore trials, we may depend on him, that as our days are so shall our strength be. A deep sense of our insufficiency gives our faith occasion to take more firm hold of Christ—God loves importunate prayers; and perseverance therein will be crowned with victory. How pleasant to have our hearts, and names, and all things made new! Such memorials of remarkable fellowship with God are honourable and pleasing; and even children may look back upon their parents' mercies, as upon their own, with regard and thankfulness. Let me here ask myself, What experience have I had of the ministration of God's angels? In what instances have I broken the bones with a soft answer, and pacified strong wrath with a gift in the bosom? What promises, spoken to my heart, have I pleaded at the throne of grace? What nights or days have I spent in wrestling with God, in behalf of myself, my family, my country, or the church of God? What blessings and answers of peace have I obtained? Where are those Bethels and Peniels in which God Almighty hath appeared unto me, and I have seen him in the person of Jesus Christ, 'as it were face to face,' and been preserved?

CHAPTER XXXIII. REFLECTIONS.—It is prudent to keep out of view whatever might revive old quarrels; and humble submission powerfully mollifies offended pride. Cheerfully may we wait the issue of that which hath been committed to God. He often makes the issue of our trials much better than our fears suggested; and easily he mollifies the most fierce and froward heart. How sweet in itself, and what a token of a pious soul, is it to view all that we have as the gifts of our gracious God! What a distinguished mercy it is to obtain the answer of our prayers, and to recover the favour of offended friends! And how inconsiderable the wants, and great the wealth, of those who have God their portion and guardian! A heart truly Christian is open and generous: but, if we have enough of our own, we ought civilly to refuse needless obligations, though

[8] Among barbarous people, and in the early history of every nation which afterwards became civilized, the father of a girl, in relinquishing her to a husband, conceives he has a right to receive a compensation for losing the benefit of her services, as well as for the trouble and expence of bringing her up and providing for her wants. The antiquity of this usage will appear from many passages in the book of Genesis, although the only instance in which a provision for the female is overlooked is that of Jacob's engagement with Laban.

[9] The Shechemites submit to the rite of circumcision from mere selfish considerations, making a religious profession which was insincere, the nature of which they probably did not understand, though the profanation on their part was not so great as in the sons of Jacob, who knew its divine origin and intention.—A.

[u] Jos. 5. 8. (The third day, as physicians take notice, was the time when fevers generally attend circumcision, occasioned by the inflammation of the wound, which was more painful then, as the Hebrews observe, than at any time else; and for this reason the sons of Jacob took the opportunity of falling upon the Shechemites, when they were most of all in a condition to defend themselves.)

12 Ask[n] me never so much dowery and [8]gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me; but give me the damsel to wife.

13 ¶ And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father [o]deceitfully, and said, (because he had defiled Dinah their sister,)

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is [p]uncircumcised; for that were a reproach unto us:

15 But in this will we consent unto you: If ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised;

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised, then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.

18 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem Hamor's son.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was [q]more honourable than all the house of his father.

20 ¶ And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto [r]the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying, 21 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, it is large enough for them: let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.

23 Shall[s] not their cattle, and their substance, and every beast of theirs, be ours? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with [9]us.

24 And unto Hamor, and unto Shechem his son, hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city: and every male [t]was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

we should never be behind in acts of civility. Parents ought to manifest a most affectionate regard for their families, and especially to take care of their young ones. Perils of dangers escaped deserve a thankful remembrance; and wherever saints have houses, there God must be worshipped as their God and their glory. O, my soul, never fear that anything is too hard for the Lord! but always think, and speak, and act, as one whose God is JEHOVAH, and who follows peace with all men, and holiness! Never, therefore, let houses and booths for cattle have the preference of an altar for the Lord. We must not expect earthly enjoyments at free cost, because we have the heavenly so; but let the faith of God, as my own God, and the God of my seed, be rendered familiar to my heart and life; and then contentment, and patient expectation, will lead me cheerfully through all.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 7. Were very wroth. A sensitive regard to family honour, when conjoined with personal purity of principle and conduct in all its members, is one of the most important public feelings, and one of the surest indexes of public morals. That this noble sentiment may, when dissevered from religion, produce deceit and violence, as in the case of Jacob's sons, ver. 13, 25, is no charge against the sentiment itself, but rather an admonition to cherish it, in conjunction with that fear of God without which every human principle of morals is either too weak to insure its observance, or speedily degenerates into some specious vice. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Into what scenes of guilt and misery do the pride, the vanity, and lust of young persons often plunge themselves and their relations! One sin naturally makes way for another: and young women who are given to gadding abroad, rarely maintain their chastity. Yet it is but just that such as have defiled young women should espouse them in marriage, and repair their outward injury, though they cannot lessen their guilt before God. How readily the affairs of a family run wrong when parents' authority is so low that they must stand in awe of their children! How often heathens show more respect to parents, in point of their marriage, than many professed Christians! Men's rage at one sin frequently issues in their doing what is still worse—in making religious pretences the mean of accomplishing the most devilish villanies; or in pretending public welfare in order to obtain private ends. The hopes of gain will carry some men a great way in religion: and yet, after all, they lose their aim; for the profane reception of the seals of God's covenant issues most surely in just and inevitable ruin. Nothing is so treacherous or cruel that indulged malice will not attempt. But it is still worse when children, after plunging their parents into disgrace and danger, add to their grief by an insolent justification of their conduct. Let parents restrain their children from idle visits and foolish amusements; let them retain their proper authority; let them transact marriages with candour and self-denial—if they wish to be happy.

NABLOUS—WHERE JACOB HID THE EARRINGS. [Genesis, xxxv:4.]—"And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand and all their earrings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Shechem." Nablous is the modern name of Shechem. It is now a thrifty, well kept Eastern city with a population of about 20,000, of which 160 are Samaritans, 600 are Christians, 200 are Jews, and the rest Mohammedans. The principal structures of the city are mosques. The only Samaritans in the world live here near their sacred mountain, where they continue to worship as they did when the woman of Samaria talked with our Savior at Jacob's well. There is a Samaritan synagogue here, where is kept what is said to be the oldest copy of the Bible in the world. The whole country in the neighborhood of Shechem or Nablous is historic.

Jacob, [a]Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and [b]slew all the males.

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the edge[7] of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house,[8] and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and [c]spoiled the city, because [d]they had defiled their sister.

28 They[9] took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field,

29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was[9] in the house.

30 ¶ And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, [e]Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink [f]among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

31 And they said, [g]Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 God sendeth Jacob to Beth-el; he purgeth his house of idols. 6 He buildeth an altar at Beth-el. 8 Deborah dieth at Allon-bachuth. 9 God blesseth Jacob at Beth-el. 16 Rachel travaileth of Benjamin, and dieth in the way to Edar. 22 Reuben lieth with Bilhah. The twelve sons of Jacob. 27 Jacob cometh to Isaac at Hebron. 28 The age, death, and burial of Isaac.

AND God [a]said unto Jacob, Arise, go up [b]to Beth-el, and dwell there; and make there an altar unto God, that appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother.

2 Then Jacob said unto his household, and to all that were with him, [c]Put away the strange gods that are among you, and [d]be clean, and change your garments:[1]

3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, who answered[e] me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went.

4 And they gave unto Jacob [f]all the strange gods which were in their hand, and all their ear-rings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid[g] them under the oak which was by Shechem.

5 And they journeyed: and [h]the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

6 ¶ So Jacob came to [i]Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, (that is, Beth-el,) he, and all the people that were with him.

7 And [k]he built there an altar, and called [l]the place El-beth-el; because there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

8 ¶ But [m]Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, [n]died, and she was buried beneath Beth-el [o]under an oak: and the name of it was called Allon-bachuth.[3]

9 ¶ And God [p]appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padan-aram, and blessed him.

10 And God said unto him,[4] Thy[9] name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel[5] shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel.

11 And God said unto him, [q]I am God Almighty; be fruitful, and multiply: a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee; and kings shall come out of thy loins;

12 And[r] the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

13 And [s]God went up from him in the place where he talked with him.

14 ¶ And Jacob [t]set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone; and he poured a drink-offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

15 And Jacob called the name of the place where God spake with him,[6] Beth-el.

16 ¶ And they journeyed from Beth-el; and there was but a little way[7] to come [u]to Ephrath: and Rachel travailed, and she had [v]hard labour.

17 And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not; thou shalt [w]have this son also.

18 And it came to pass, as her soul [x]was in departing, (for she died,) that she called his name Ben-oni;[8] but his father called him [y]Benjamin.

19 And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to [z]Ephrath, which is Beth-lehem.

20 And Jacob [a]set a pillar upon her grave: that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day.[9]

21 And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond [b]the tower of Edar.

22 And it came to pass, when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and [c]lay with

His tribe, as it may be called, could scarcely have numbered fewer than from two hundred to three hundred persons, old and young. These had all come from Mesopotamia, and most of them had been trained in idolatry. So long as Jacob resided in Mesopotamia it is probable he had not the power to prevent idolatrous practices; but now, having come to another country—a country in which the power of Jehovah had been so signally manifested to himself and his fathers—he felt that he might safely and effectually eradicate idolatry from his people.—P.

CHAPTER XXXV. Ver. 1. He was to go thither to build an altar for sacrifices of thanksgiving for deliverances received, and to strengthen his faith in God's protection against present fears, ch. 34. 30.

Ver. 2. Their outward purification was to be attended with internal purification of their heart from idols, or from cruel dispositions.—[Put away. Whilst 'wicked men and seducers wax worse and worse,' Jacob labours to make the sin and sorrow of his family an occasion of family reformation; and thus, out of evil, to extract good. That he did not sooner attempt to purge them from idolatry, cannot be charged against Jacob; for though the narrative is silent about any such attempt, no one can thence infer that the attempt was never previously made. Let the extent of Jacob's family (for he was a prince in the land) be considered; let the idolatrous materials of which it was originally composed be taken into account; and let Jacob be judged, not by those who neglect or despise family religion, but by those who, in circumstances somewhat similar, have most efficiently introduced and most successfully maintained it; and they, instead of censuring past failure as evidence of past neglect, will admire that grace of God which led Jacob to reform his family religion, and that moved his children and household to renounce every rite of idolatry to embrace the truth and worship of God.—Clean. Compared with Ex. 19. 10, this verse furnishes the first recorded example of washing as a ceremonial picture of regeneration. 'Ye must be born again,' and 'except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God,' Jn. 3. 5–7. C.]

Ver. 7. He had formerly called it Beth-el, i.e. the house of God. Now, to attest his experience of God's fulfilment of his promises, he calls it El-Beth-el, i.e. the God of Bethel.

TOMB OF RACHEL- WHERE JACOB SET UP A PILLAR. [GENESIS, xxxv:19.]—"And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehem. And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave; that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day." This tomb is between Jerusalem and Bethlehem, near the latter place. Jews, Moslems and Christians all agree that here Rachel was entombed. Some monument has marked this spot for 3,600 years. The present square structure is modern, and was repaired a few years ago by Sir Moses Montifiore. The Jews meet here every Friday to pray. The building is 23 feet on each side. The height of the wall is 20 feet; the dome is 10 feet high. This is about one mile from Bethlehem and about five miles from Jerusalem. It is on the road from Jerusalem to Hebron and Egypt.

Bilhah, his father's concubine:[p] and Israel heard it. Now [q]the sons of Jacob were twelve.

26 And the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Gad, and Asher. These are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him [r]in Padan-aram.

27 ¶ And Jacob came unto Isaac his father unto [s]Mamre, unto the city of Arba, (which is Hebron,) where Abraham and Isaac sojourned.

28 ¶ And the days of Isaac were an hundred and fourscore years.[1]

29 And[t] Isaac gave up the ghost,[2] and died, and [u]was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days; and his sons Esau and Jacob buried[1] him.

NOW these are [a]the generations of Esau, who is Edom.

2 Esau [b]took his wives of the daughters of Canaan; [c]Adah the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite;

3 And [d]Bashemath, Ishmael's daughter, sister of Nebajoth.

5 And Aholibamah bare Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah. These are the sons of Esau, which were born unto him [f]in the land of Canaan.

6 ¶ And Esau took his wives,[3] and his sons, and his daughters, and all the [g]persons of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his substance, which he had got in the land of Canaan; and [h]went into the country from the face of his brother Jacob.

7 For[i] their riches were more than that they might dwell together; and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle.

8 Thus dwelt Esau in [k]mount Seir: Esau is Edom.

12 And [o]Timna was concubine to Eliphaz, Esau's son; and she bare to Eliphaz [p]Amalek:[7] these were the sons of Adah, Esau's wife.

13 And [q]these are the sons of Reuel; Nahath, and Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah: these were the sons of Bashemath, Esau's wife.

14 And these were the [r]sons of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon, Esau's wife; and she bare to Esau Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

16 Duke Korah, duke Gatam, and duke Amalek. These are the dukes that came of Eliphaz in the land of Edom: these were the sons of Adah.

17 And these are [v]the sons of Reuel, Esau's son; duke Nahath, duke Zerah, duke Shammah, duke Mizzah. These are the dukes that came of Reuel in the land of Edom: these are the sons of Bashemath, Esau's wife.

18 And [w]these are the sons of Aholibamah, Esau's wife; duke Jeush, duke Jaalam, duke Korah: these were the dukes that came of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah, Esau's wife.

19 These are the sons of Esau, (who is Edom,) and these are their dukes.

20 ¶ These[x] are the sons of Seir the [y]Horite, who inhabited the land;[1] Lotan, and Shobal, and [z]Zibeon, and Anah, 21 And Dishon, and Ezer, and Dishan. These are the dukes of the Horites, the children of Seir in the land of Edom.

[p] In the utter want of all sense of a sensitive regard to family honour was remarked; but the necessity of covering it with personal purity was neglected. Reuben, through the power of the one sentiment, family honour, fearlessly deserted and join in revenge, slaughters a whole city; while, for want of the other, personal religion, he is himself guilty of a crime as foul as that which he avenged, with this additional aggravation, that he silenced against a stranger, but a father.—Ness. We must not mistake indignation against the sin for spiritual hatred of the sinner. 1 The record of Isaac's death is not inserted in its chronological order. This will appear from the following facts, which ought to be kept in mind. Isaac was sixty years old when Jacob was born. Jacob was seventy-eight years old when he went to Haran, and his father one hundred and thirty-eight. Jacob remained in Haran twenty years, and Joseph was seven years old when he left. Ten years later Joseph was sold into Egypt, ch. 37. and thirteen years afterwards he stood before Pharaoh. ch. 41. 46. He was then thirty years old. Consequently, Isaac was one hundred and fifty-eight years old when Jacob returned from Haran to Canaan; he was one hundred and sixty-eight when Joseph was sold by his brethren: and his death took place only about one year before Joseph was presented to Pharaoh.—P.

7 The Amalekites mentioned in Gen. 14. 7. were unquestionably a much older race than the Edomite Amalekites. The two nations have been confounded by Josephus and many others, but such mistakes lead greatly to confuse the Scripture narrative. 9 The Horites, "dwellers in caves," were the primeval inhabitants of Mount Seir. They appear to have been a gigantic race, related to the Emim and Rephaim. The chiefs here mentioned probably reigned in the country before the days of Esau. Esau conquered the Horites, seized their country, and either exterminated them or reduced them to submission. The descendants of Esau had full possession of Mount Seir, and were firmly established in it before the exodus.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how apt are the best of saints to forget their Bethel-enjoyments and their Bethel-vows, till the Lord by his providence shuts them up, and by his word reminds them of them! And yet how precious are such visits, and how fixed and lasting ought to be our care in maintaining intimate fellowship with God when once we have attained it! What corruptions and idols have need to be purged from the best hearts and families on earth, especially before solemn approaches to God! for let us always remember, there is no acceptable drawing near to God without having on Jesus' righteousness and grace, nor with allowed sin in the heart; and sins must be put away with a resolution never to return to them. How much better to pay our vows too late than never! What deaths, what disorders, may we expect to meet with on earth! But surely it is a mercy much to be esteemed, that our forgetfulness of God doth not make him forget his kindness or promises to us. He often sweetens our past troubles, and prepares us for future ones, with the manifestations of his favour; and his sweetness never changes, even when the family, the wives, the children, or other created enjoyments, which we have so impatiently desired, prove deathful or distressing to us. Ah! how plainly men's sins are written on their judgments; and how infatuated they must be who think so little of death, amidst so many births, deaths, and graves, which all warn us of it! May our hearts be set upon our Christ, our family, our house eternal in the heavens! An old age on earth is so filled up with sins and troubles that it is scarcely worth coveting. But in the now deceased Isaac let me behold my Redeemer! How often promised! how earnestly desired! how long expected! how supernatural! and how gladdening to angels and men was his birth! How maliciously was he, the Father's only begotten Son, hated, mocked, and persecuted by his Jewish brethren, at the expense of their ejection from the church of God! With what cheerfulness he assumed our nature, bore our sins and punishments, bore his cross, and laid down his life a ransom for men, that he might render the everlasting covenant a new testament in his blood, and purchase all spiritual blessings for us! Being raised from death he is espoused to a chosen church, chiefly consisting of Gentile sinners; and his blood, his prayers, and his power produce a most numerous offspring of spiritual and professed seed. But how great is his glory at his Father's right hand! and he will be glorious in the church below, where he digs the wells of salvation to give drink to his people, notwithstanding the envy of a carnal world. For a time what a struggle between his Jewish and Gentile church, till at last the former, rejecting their birthright and forfeiting their blessing, were cast out, and the latter became the highly-favoured but much-afflicted people of God!

CHAPTER XXXVII.

2 Joseph is hated of his brethren. 5 His two dreams. 13 Jacob sendeth him to visit his brethren. 18 His brethren conspire his death, but Reuben saveth him. 26 They sell him to the Ishmeelites. 31 His father, deceived by the bloody coat, mourneth for him. 36 He is sold to Potiphar in Egypt.

AND Jacob dwelt in the land [a]wherein his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan.

2 These are [b]the generations of Jacob. Joseph, being seventeen years old,[5] was feeding the flock with his brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's [c]wives: and Joseph brought unto his father their[6] evil report.[7]

3 Now Israel [d]loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the [e]son of his old age: and he made him a [f]coat of many [g]colours.

4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, [g]they hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

5 ¶ And Joseph [h]dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren; and they [i]hated him yet the more.

6 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

7 For, behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your [k]sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

8 And his brethren said to him, [l]Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

9 ¶ And he [m]dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; [n]and, behold, the sun, and the moon, and the eleven stars, made obeisance to me.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked[9] him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I, and thy mother,[1] and thy brethren, indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

11 And his brethren [o]envied him;[2] but his father [p]observed the saying.

12 ¶ And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in [q]Shechem.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem? come, and I will send thee unto them. And [r]he said to him, Here am I.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, [s]see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks; and bring me word again.

me remark that if men sin wilfully, they may expect their name to be tainted with infamy, for the purpose of God must stand firm amidst all the changes upon earth. How Esau, of his own accord, removes from Canaan, leaving that land of promise to the proper heirs; and that where Christ is not concerned, God contemns the persons and families of men, however dignified, and cuts short the account. Earthly honours are not much to be coveted, since wicked men have ordinarily the first and largest share of them; and they who join themselves with heathens may expect to be held by God as such. We must wait with patience for the fulfilment of God's promises, for promised privileges come often slowly, however certainly; and while the heirs of promise live in distress and want in this world, the heirs of the curse often attain great power and wealth.

CHAPTER XXXVII. Ver. 29, 34. Rending the upper garments was an emblem of rending the heart, Joel 2. 13; and was used at funerals, 2 Sa. 3. 31; or upon the news or sight of any great calamity, Job 1.

RAS EL 'AIN, NABLOUS--WHERE JOSEPH'S BRETHREN WENT TO FEED THEIR FLOCK. [GENESIS, xxxvii:12.]—"And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem." Here we have another view in Shechem. We see a stream flowing down in a small channel cut for it from the foot of Gerizim. The springs of Gerizim make the valley of Shechem the most beautiful and fruitful of Central Palestine. We see sloping up toward the left of the picture the sides of Mount Gerizim. Upon the summit of this mount there once stood a temple built by the Samaritans, when the Jews returned from captivity and would not allow them to help rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem because they had become a mixed race. Across the valley from Mount Gerizim is Mount Ebal. Between these two mountains Jesus often passed as he traveled from Nazareth to Jerusalem. Shechem is the oldest city connected with the history of Palestine.

FLOCKS NEAR THE PIT INTO WHICH JOSEPH WAS THROWN BY HIS BRETHREN. [GENESIS, xxxvii: 17.]—Joseph was sent by his father to look after the welfare of his brethren, and was found by a man wandering in a field at Shechem, and the man asked him saying: What seekest thou? and he said, I seek my brethren. Tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks. "And the man said, They are departed hence, for I heard them say: Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren and found them in Dothan." And when his brethren saw him coming, they said: Come, therefore, and let us slay him and cast him into some pit.

We see the flocks still feeding on the hills of Dothan, and the young shepherd we see watching them has on his coat of many colors, very much like that which excited the envy of Joseph's brethren. The hillside is still dotted, it is said, with rock-cut bottle-shaped cisterns, and it was in one of these that Joseph was thrown by his brethren.

So he sent him out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem.[1]

15 And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren: tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence: for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan.[t] And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.[2]

18 ¶ And when they saw him afar off,[3] even before he came near unto them, [u]they conspired against him to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer[4] cometh!

20 Come[x] now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some[y] evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

21 ¶ And [z]Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

22 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.[5]

23 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they [a]stripped Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours that was on him;

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit:[b] and the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

25 And they [c]sat down to eat bread:[6] and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of [d]Ishmeelites came from Gilead, with their camels bearing spicery, and balm, and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, [e]What profit is it if we slay our brother, and conceal his blood?

27 Come, and let us [f]sell him to the Ishmeelites, and let not our hand be upon him; for he is our brother, and our flesh. And his brethren were content.[7]

29 ¶ And Reuben returned unto the pit; and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit: and he rent his clothes:

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child [i]is not; and I, whither shall I go?

31 ¶ And [k]they took Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood:

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father, and said, This have we found: know now whether it be thy son's coat[1] or no.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an [l]evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Jacob rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

35 And all his sons, and all his [m]daughters, rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted: and he said, For I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him.

36 ¶ And the [n]Midianites sold him into Egypt, unto Potiphar, an officer[2] of Pharaoh's, and [3]captain[4] of the guard.

REFLECTIONS.—How dangerous it is for parents to mark their partial regard to children in finery of apparel, or in any other manner; for the Lord chiefly tries his people in the most tender points; and our trials are frequently rendered doubly heavy in respect of the instruments which Providence uses to accomplish them. How devilish must be the nature of envy, that can make excellency, nay, the favour of God, a reason of the most bitter hatred and bloody cruelty, and can repay the most affectionate love with deliberate murder! But evil-doers commonly hate such as labour to reform them. How often young men's dreams of prosperity make them overlook the trouble that is in the way to it! And no less frequently is the fond indulgence of parents repaid with grief or with the most unnatural cruelty! But notwithstanding every seeming hindrance, the Lord's gracious designs and promises to his people shall be exactly accomplished; while they who mock at his intimations of his purpose, will but expose themselves to shame. God's providences indeed often appear darkest when the deliverance is at hand. He makes the common events of providence to become critical for the purposes of his glory; and so overrules wicked men as to make one sin a restraint from a greater, and bitter disappointments to issue in mercy. To what an amazing pitch of insensibility do crying sins stupify the conscience! Seldom is a crime committed but a lie is framed to conceal it—so natural to men is a lying spirit! Immoderate love is often followed with obstinate and immoderate sorrow; and yet many of our bitterest griefs are founded upon mistaken imaginations. But shall I not here also turn aside, and behold Jesus the Lamb of God! Was he not the darling of his Father? Did not his Father invest him with the robes of manhood and of mediatory office? Did not his brethren of Judah hate him for his faithful reproofs, for his prediction of his own future greatness, and on account of the distinguished regard shown to him by his Father? How astonishing his kindness in coming into the world to seek and to save that which was lost? And yet, when he came, how ungratefully was he driven into Egypt! how basely betrayed! sold for the price of a slave! and delivered into the hands of sinners to be crucified!

FENCE AT DOTHAN—WHERE JOSEPH'S BRETHREN SOLD HIM TO THE ISHMAELITEISH MERCHANTS. [Genesis, xxxvii 25] -The thorny cactus everywhere abounds in Palestine, and is used by the natives for the purpose of making fences. One of the tallest of these cactus fences we saw at Dothan. In agreement with the narrative in Genesis, it is remarkable to find that the great highway from Gibeon to Egypt still passes near Dothan. It was along this road, beside which stands this cactus fence, that the Ishmaelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spices and balm and myrrh, going to carry them down to Egypt, to whom Joseph was sold by his brethren; and it is said that modern Ishmaelites passing in the same way would not hesitate to make such a purchase now. The plains about Dothan have been used for pasturing sheep in all ages. Here the nomadic shepherd still reigns, while the higher lands are held by a settled population. Elisha resided at Dothan.

son; and called his name Shelah: and he was at [a]Chezib when she bare him.

6 And [b]Judah took a[6] wife for Er his first-born, whose name was Tamar.

7 And Er, Judah's first-born, was [c]wicked[7] in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD slew him.

8 And Judah said unto Onan, Go [d]in unto thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.

9 And Onan knew that the seed should [e]not be his: and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, [f]lest that he should give seed to his brother.

10 And the thing which he did [g]displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew him also.

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter-in-law, [h]Remain a widow at thy father's house till Shelah my son be grown: (for he said, Lest peradventure he die also, as his brethren did.) And Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house.

12 ¶ And in process of time the daughter of Shuah, Judah's wife, died:[8] and Judah was comforted,[9] and went up [i]unto his sheep-shearers to [j]Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up to Timnath to shear his sheep.[9]

14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself, and sat in [k]an open place, which is by the way to [l]Timnath: for she saw that Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

15 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; because she had covered her face.

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, [m]Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter-in-law.) And she said, [n]What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me?

17 And he said, I will send thee a kid from the flock. [o]And she said, Wilt thou give me a pledge till thou send it?

18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, [p]Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave it her, and came in unto her; and she conceived by him.

19 And she arose, and went away, and laid by her veil from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

20 And Judah sent the kid by the hand of his friend the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand; but he found her not.

21 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot that was [q]openly by the way-side? And they said, There was no harlot in this place.

22 And he returned to Judah, and said, I cannot find her; and also the men of the place said, that there was no harlot in this place.

23 And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we [r]be shamed: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.

24 ¶ And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, [s]Tamar thy daughter-in-law hath played the harlot; and also, behold, she is with child by whoredom. And[a] Judah said, Bring her forth, and let her be [t]burnt.[2]

25 When she was brought forth, she sent to her father-in-law, saying, By the man whose these are am I with child: and she said, Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, the signet, and bracelets, and staff.

26 And Judah acknowledged them, and said, She hath been more [u]righteous than I; because that I gave her not to Shelah my son. And he [v]knew her again no more.[3]

27 ¶ And it came to pass, in the time of her travail, that, behold, twins were in her womb.

28 And it came to pass, when she travailed, that the one put out his hand; and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first.[4]

29 And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out; and she said, How hast thou broken forth?[5] this breach be upon thee: therefore his name was [w]called Pharez.[6]

30 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand; and his name was called [x]Zarah.

marriage of Judah took place immediately after, or rather before, the selling of Joseph, is not absolutely certain.

Ver. 8. According to this patriarchal custom, afterwards enacted into an express law of God, De. 25. 5, 6, the first-born was accounted legal son and heir to the deceased brother, and the rest of the children reckoned his who begot them.

Ver. 9. His sin was extremely heinous, not only as it proceeded from envy of his brother's honour, and contempt of the promised seed, but as it was horrid and unnatural in itself. Nor, till the last judgment, will it appear what guilt of this nature hath been committed among mankind, nor how fearfully God hath punished the same.

REFLECTIONS. — Unhallowed and over-hasty marriages often issue in fearful and numerous mischiefs; and such sins in parents are punished by the like in their children. The lusts of the flesh issue in terrible plagues and untimely deaths. And extremely foolish is their choice who dare to purchase a momentary enjoyment of their lust by exposing themselves to everlasting despair in hell. How tremendous the discernment of God in marking out men for objects of his distinguished judgment against sin! And empty professors of the true religion are generally fixed upon for this purpose. At what an easy rate do most men part with their true honour and salvation, while they are mightily concerned about their temporal interests or worldly securities! Temporal loss and worldly shame weigh more with them than sin, with all the sorrow which attends it. So deceitful indeed is sin, that hardened sinners are sometimes the most severe against their fellow, but less guilty, offenders! and malice against their persons puts on the cloak of zeal against their sins. O what a mercy, if such be brought to a timely sense of, and return from, their sinfulness at last! Especially ought we to exercise much tenderness and compassion towards such as we have tempted into sin. But is anything so astonishing, as that this enormous wickedness, this unnatural sin, should be used by JEHOVAH as the distant means of the incarnation of his only begotten Son! Behold how—where sin had abounded and reigned unto disorder, shame, and death—grace reigns, through righteousness, unto

COFFEE HOUSE IN THE GARDEN OF THE VIRGIN AT MATARIYEH—WHERE JOSEPH LIVED. [GENESIS, xxxix:1.]—"And Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelites which had brought him down thither." We give this picture of a coffee house in the garden of The Virgin, because Matariyeh is only about a half mile from the site of the Temple of the Sun which stood in Heliopolis. It was a priest of this temple whose daughter Joseph married, and it was doubtless in this place that Joseph lived and met his father when he came down from Canaan under the exigency of famine to live in Egypt. This coffee house is for the accommodation of tourists who come out from Cairo to visit Matariyeh because of its connection with the sojourn of Joseph and Mary, and with the history of Joseph the son of Jacob in Egypt.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Joseph is advanced in Potiphar's house. 7 He resisteth his mistress's temptation, is falsely accused by her, and cast in prison. 21 God is with him there.

AND Joseph was brought down to Egypt; [a]and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmeelites, which had brought him down thither.

2 And [b]the LORD was with Joseph,[7] and he was a prosperous man; and he was [c]in the house of his master the Egyptian.

3 And his master[8] saw[d] that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD [e]made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

4 And Joseph [f]found grace in his sight, and he served him; and he made him [g]overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass, from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for [h]Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And[i] he[k] left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not ought he had, save the bread which he did eat: and Joseph was a [l]goodly person, and well-favoured.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after these things,[9] that his master's wife [m]cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, Lie [n]with me.

8 But he [o]refused, and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wotteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand;

9 There[p] is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: [q]how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

10 And it came to pass, as [r]she spake to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, [s]to lie by her, or to be with her.

11 And it came to pass about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business; and there was [t]none of the men of the house there within.

12 And she [u]caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: and [x]he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

[2] This continued imprisonment, followed by the deliverance of the butler first, and finally of Joseph, indicates a high degree of legal civilization amongst the Egyptians at this period. For a despotic government rarely would all have perished at the first ebullition of anger.—C.

[3] The character of Joseph stands out as one of the purest in the whole compass of sacred history. No temptation could overcome his high-toned integrity, no calamity could shake his implicit faith in God. Adversity in its bitterest form did not unduly depress him, and neither did the goodliest height of prosperity generate unseemly pride. In his father's house, pampered and fondled; in slavery, wantonly and falsely accused; in the palace, wielding unlimited power, he was always the same humble, pious, just, self-possessed, God-fearing man. P.

[4] This is the second instance of Joseph's extraordinary success, or as the world would call it, good fortune. The Scripture traces his progress to a higher source. 'The Lord was with him, showed him mercy, gave him favour.' The character of Joseph from his youth was one of extreme transparency, if we may so speak; because one of unmingled honesty towards and unfeigned piety towards God. Tempered success God may deny to his dearest child, He, 12 6. Yet still piety towards God is the surest way to permanent favour and prosperity. C.

19 And it came to pass, when his master [b]heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that [c]his wrath was kindled.

20 And Joseph's master took him, and [d]put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound:[2] and he was there in the prison.[3]

21 ¶ But the LORD was [e]with Joseph,[4] and showed him mercy, and [f]gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

22 And the keeper of the prison [g]committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

23 The keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand; because the LORD was with him, [h]and that which he did, the LORD made it to prosper.

inconceivable honour, and everlasting life, by Jesus Christ our Lord!

CHAPTER XXXIX. REFLECTIONS.—What need we have of humble hearts—for who knows how low and debased God may make our lot on earth! But the advantage of God's presence and favour is in every condition chiefly to be desired. If he be with us we shall be well wherever we are. His blessing makes rich and honoured; and without it all our labours are in vain. Godly and faithful servants are an inestimable treasure; and such as are wise will not fail to esteem and prefer them. Providential smiles are often but inlets to fearful and strong temptations, or to grievous and lasting distresses. But to what horrid lengths, in the most shameful wickedness, will such go as have once broken through the natural restraints of common modesty!—abandoned themselves, they can use the most shameless endeavours to draw others into sin. A fiery furnace is less to be feared than a beautiful abandoned woman. Flight is the only preservative from violent temptations to uncleanness: and surely it is better to hazard our life than to wound our conscience. But in such most ensnaring temptations, a deep sense of the evil of sin, as offensive to God and injurious to man, is the only thing that will effectually prevent compliance. But how hard to obtain protection from a lying tongue! The best of men have been accused of the most atrocious crimes. And there is a great readiness in men to believe an evil report, especially against the professors of religion. Here the most improbable story gains easy credit. How often guilt is honoured, and innocence oppressed and punished! Yet let me not be weary in well-doing, or in resisting unto blood, striving against sin; for the bitterest sufferings, with a good conscience, are to be preferred to all the pleasures of sin. Though persecutors should be deaf to my plea, there is one, JEHOVAH, who seeth and judgeth. In his time he will vindicate my character and plead my cause. No prison can exclude his presence. He will certainly give me my reward in heaven, and perhaps part of it in a prison, where I shall the captain of the guard, into the [d]prison, the place where Joseph was[4] bound.

4 And the [e]captain of the guard charged Joseph with them, and he served them; and they continued a season in ward.

5 ¶ And they [f]dreamed a dream[5] both of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream, the butler and the baker of the king of Egypt, which were bound in the prison.

6 And Joseph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, and, behold, they were [g]sad.

7 And he asked Pharaoh's officers, that were with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, Wherefore[h] look ye so sadly to-day?

8 And they said unto him, We have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it. And Joseph said unto them, Do not interpretations belong[i] to God?[6] tell me them, I pray you.

9 And the chief butler told his dream to Joseph, and said unto him, In my dream, behold, a [k]vine[7] was before me;

10 And in the vine were three branches: and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes.

11 And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand: and I took the grapes, and [8]pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand.

12 And Joseph said unto him, This is the interpretation of it: The three branches [l]are three days.

13 Yet [m]within three days shall Pharaoh lift[n] up thine head, and restore thee unto thy place: and thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner when thou wast his butler.

14 But [o]think on me when it shall be well with thee, and show kindness, I pray thee, unto me, and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house:

15 For indeed I was [p]stolen away out of [q]the land of the Hebrews; and here also have [r]I done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon.

16 When the chief baker saw that the interpretation was good, he said unto Joseph, I also was in my dream, and, behold, I had three white[9] baskets on my head:

17 And in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of bake-meats for Pharaoh; and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head.

18 And Joseph answered and said, This is the interpretation thereof: The three baskets are three days.

19 Yet within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thy head from off thee,[1] and shall [s]hang thee on a tree; and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.

20 ¶ And it came to pass [t]the third day, which was Pharaoh's [u]birth-day,[2] that he made a feast unto all his servants: and he [x]lifted up the head of the chief butler and of the chief baker among his servants.

21 And he restored the chief butler unto his butlership again; and he gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand:

22 But he hanged the chief baker; [y]as Joseph had interpreted to them.

23 ¶ Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but [z]forgat him.

[2] That we take no note of time, but from its easy, is a just and striking observation. A birth day attained is really the loss of a unit from the sum of our years. Then how comes such a loss to be an occasion of congratulation and of feasting? Chiefly because worldly-minded men seldom retrace the 'time past' of their lives, 1 Pe. 4.3, or anticipate that portion of the future when they must give 'account to him who is' Pe. 4.5) is ready to judge the quick and the dead;' but rather think it 'strange' (1 Pe. 4. 4) if Christian converts 'run not with them to the same excess of riot.' But how may a Christian observe a birth-day? Pharaoh furnishes a useful lesson. 1. He employed his birth-day in reviewing the affaires of his household; one servant, found innocent, he restored; another, found guilty, he condemned. So, a duty neglected, should by the Christian be zealously resumed, a sin discovered, be unreservedly mortified. 2. A year lost from the amount of a Christian's natural days, should be so much gained to his experience of the grace of God. 3. The loss of the past should lead him to 'walk circumspectly, redeeming,' improving, putting to the highest price, 'the time, because the days are evil.' Ep. 5. 16. 4. Let the anniversary of our natural birth remind us that 'unless we be born again,' we can neither see, nor enter into the 'kingdom of God.' Jn. 3.3, 5.—C.

be more out of the reach of temptation, and on the nearest way to my eternal, if not also my temporal, preferment. If God be with me, who can be against me? Meanwhile, let me, in Joseph, behold how Jesus was debased and exalted! How he was in all points tempted by devils and men like as we are, yet without sin! How he was persecuted without a cause! And how upheld of God, as the man in whom his soul delighted, till, for the sufferings of death, exalted at his own right hand in glory!

REFLECTIONS.—Mark, my soul, in what slippery places great men stand; and how sudden may be their fall into destruction; their removal from a palace to a prison, nay, to a gibbet! It is much safer, as well as sweeter, to be the servants of Christ than of the loftiest monarchs on earth. Strangely, but in wisdom, are the links of Providence connected. God can easily wound the stoutest spirits, and make their imagination subservient to the ends of his glory and the advancement of his people. But distresses are often in the hearts of sinners, which themselves only know: and in his wisdom God sometimes renders his people more clear, with respect to the future lot of others on earth, than with respect to their own. It is a mercy, even in a prison, to have one to compassionate our case: and communication of our griefs to godly men is a ready way to obtain solution of our doubts, and recover comfort in our afflictions. It is prudent to conceal the infirmity of our friends, even while we plead our own innocence: and in exculpating ourselves, we cannot be too careful to avoid reflecting upon those who have injured us. What great events are often connected with the transaction of a moment: and often the enlargement of the wicked is at hand when that of the choicest saints lies at a great distance. Worldly advancements render men strangely thoughtless. No favour or even gratitude of men, especially of great ones, can be safely depended on. Let me therefore always trust in the Lord, and be in his fear all the day long. But turn aside, my soul. Behold the man who is God's Fellow, in prison and in judgment, on account of his persevering integrity and holiness! Behold how the imaginations of Caiaphas the high-priest, the stiffness of Pilate the Roman governor with respect to the inscription on the cross, and even the dream of his wife, concur to promote his honour! Behold him on the cross moved with deep compassion towards even his enemies, and crowning one of his fellow-sufferers with eternal life, while the unbelief of the other brings death! But, O JEHOVAH, forbid that I should ever forget the love and compassion of this adorable Jesus, but record his mercies in my heart for eternal remembrance.

CHAPTER XLI. [Ver. 1. The fertility and the very existence of Egypt depend upon the Nile. No rain falls in the country, but the want is supplied by the periodical rise and fall of the river. Having its source amid the mountains of Central Africa, it is affected by the tropical rains. It begins to rise about the middle of June. Two months afterwards the water overflows the banks and inundates the country. It attains its greatest height about the autumnal equinox; did eat up the seven well-favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

5 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank[4] and good.

6 And, behold, seven thin ears, and blasted with the [c]east wind, sprung up after them.

7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pharaoh awoke, and, behold, it was a dream.

8 And it came to pass in the morning that his[d] spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all the [e]magicians of Egypt, and all the wise men thereof: and Pharaoh told them his dreams; but there was [f]none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my [g]faults this day:

10 Pharaoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward [h]in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:

11 And we [i]dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

12 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and [k]he interpreted to us our dreams: to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

13 And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was; [l]me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.[5]

14 ¶ Then[m] Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they brought him [n]hastily out of the dungeon: and he shaved[6] himself, and [o]changed his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: and I have heard say of thee, that thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.[7]

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, It[p] is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer[8] of [q]peace.[9]

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fat-fleshed and well-favoured; and they fed in a meadow:

19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor, and very ill-favoured, and lean-fleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness.

20 And the lean and the ill-favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine.

21 And when they had eaten them up,[1] it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill-favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

23 And, behold, seven ears, withered,[2] thin, and blasted with the east wind,[3] sprung up after them.

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears. And I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

25 ¶ And Joseph said unto Pharaoh, The dream of Pharaoh is one:[4] God hath showed Pharaoh [r]what he is about to do.[5]

26 The seven good kine [s]are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven years: the dream is one.

27 And[t] the seven thin and ill-favoured kine that came up after them are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be seven years of famine.

28 This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh: what God is about to do he showeth unto Pharaoh.

29 Behold, [u]there come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt:

30 And there shall arise after them [v]seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten[6] in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land;

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very grievous.[7]

32 And for that the dream was [w]doubled unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the thing is established[8] by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

33 Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint [x]officers over the land, and [y]take up the fifth part[9] of the land of Egypt in the seven plenteous years.

35 And let them gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under

5 We may observe here that Joseph still speaks Pharaoh as one acting to God, as the author of all these events; and that not in an ordinary but extraordinary manner; since such a famine could not proceed from mere natural causes, but from an overruling providence, which makes the river Nile swallow up, as it were, so large a tract of seven years together, and so reclaim a great plenty; and then for the next seven years overflow very little, if at all, and so produce a very sore and long famine. Nor can it be objected to Joseph, that he was guilty of presumption or boldness, in giving his advice to Pharaoh concerning the provision that was to be made against the ensuing scarceness, since he was conscious to himself that he was best able to give such advice; and would have been guilty of the sin of omission had he neglected to do it, in so great and so general a concern.—Patrick.

REFLECTIONS.—Certain, though slow, is the execution of God's purposes of favour to his people; and by the most insignificant, or even extravagant, means he often accomplishes them. But when patience hath had her perfect work, God can easily furnish the means of his people's deliverance: and when his time of delivering his people comes, he causes men to remember and to do their duty towards them; and wisely to accomplish his purpose. How amiable and excellent, when great gifts and great graces are adorned with the deepest humility, referring all the glory to God, and behaving modestly towards men! But changeable and perishing are all earthly enjoyments, especially desirable ones. Let me then use them with caution, and lay up in heaven a better and enduring substance; for it is infinitely necessary to provide without delay against future, against everlasting wants. In the meanwhile we must esteem it an undeserved mercy, that God hath set prosperity and adversity, plenty and famine, debasement and glory, the one against the other. How glorious the character in which extensive knowledge, firm friendship, active diligence, unshaken fidelity, forgetfulness of injuries received, and hearty acknowledgment of God in all things, are remarkably connected! Happy the nation the management of which is intrusted to such persons! But chiefly rejoice, my soul, that Jesus was taken from prison and from judgment, and hath all power given to him in heaven and on earth, in order to bestow the [b]hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

36 And that food shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land perish not[1] through the famine.

37 And the thing was [c]good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

38 ¶ And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man [d]in whom the Spirit of God is?[2]

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath showed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art:

40 Thou[e] shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, [f]I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.

42 And Pharaoh took off his [g]ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen,[3] and put a gold[h] chain about his neck;[4]

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow[5] the knee: and he made him ruler over all the land of Egypt.

44 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh,[6] and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnath-paaneah;[7] and he gave him to wife Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah [i]priest of On.[8] And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

46 ¶ (And Joseph was [k]thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt.) And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

47 And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

48 And he [l]gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

49 And Joseph gathered corn [m]as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

50 ¶ And[n] unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came, which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest[9] of On, bare unto him.

51 And Joseph called the name of the firstborn [o]Manasseh:[1] For God, said he, hath made me [p]forget all my toil, and all my father's house.[2]

52 And the name of the second called he [q]Ephraim:[3] For God[4] hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction.

53 ¶ And the seven years of plenteousness that was in the land of Egypt were ended.[5]

54 And[r] the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

55 And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people [s]cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, [t]Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

56 And the famine was over all the face of the earth.[6] And Joseph opened all the storehouses,[7] and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 And all [u]countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Jacob sendeth his ten sons to buy corn in Egypt. 6 They are imprisoned by Joseph for spies, but set at liberty on condition to bring Benjamin. 21 They have remorse for Joseph. 24 Simeon is kept for a pledge. 25 They return with corn, and their money. 29 Their relation to Jacob. 35 He is afraid, and refuseth to send Benjamin.

NOW when Jacob[a] saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another?

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt; get you [b]down thither, and buy for us from thence, that we may [c]live, and not die.

3 And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But [d]Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren: for he said, [e]Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was [f]in the land of Canaan.

6 ¶ And Joseph was the [g]governor over the land, and he it was[8] that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and [h]bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly[9] unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

9 And Joseph [i]remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, [k]Ye are spies;[1] to see the [l]nakedness of the land ye are come.

2 Pharaoh and his servants were evidently believers in the true God. This faith, if not derived from some earlier and unreconciled source, may be traced to the visit and sojourning of Abram, and the miraculous testimony, Ge.12.19, which Jehovah then exhibited in the protection of Sarah, and which Pharaoh implicitly acknowledged in his remonstrance with Abram. This will account for the readiness with which Pharaoh listens to Joseph, and his servants acquiesce in his advancement to power. They received him as a prophet of the true God.—C.

2 How shall we excuse Joseph for his neglect of communicating with his father? Up till the beginning of the last seven years he was been a bondslave or a prisoner, so could not communicate. Now, during seven years, the affairs of a palace and of a whole kingdom overwhelm him. But business is not his apology, prudence is his defence. Shall he communicate with brothers who hated and sold him, and thus doubly embitter the old age of his father, by embroiling him with his whole family? Other reasons may have originated, but these are sufficient to explain and excuse his silence. That his heart was with them, his future conduct will declare.—C.

3 Next to his piety, Joseph's application to business forms the most remarkable trait in his character. 'He it was that sold to all the people.' He does nothing by proxy. The peculiar form of Egypt, two narrow plains lying on the two sides of a river, a river forming, as it were, the only highway of the kingdom—will sufficiently account for the possibility of his personal superintendence by rotation, at the various places of sale, closing for a time at one, and then proceeding to another.—C.

1 That Joseph, from his knowledge of his brethren's character, may have believed them capable of becoming spies, is within the limits of possibility. If he did so, and intended to detect them from any dangerous combinations and projects, his course was open and his intentions kind. But as it is said in ver. 7 that he spake roughly to them, we rather conclude he was feigning: and though his design was good, we may not excuse one word of dissimulation by which it was to be accomplished. Joseph is one of the most lovely and amiable of Scripture characters, but one alone was perfect, who 'knew no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth.'—C.

blessings on perishing sinners! Rejoice that God hath made him to forget his labour, and made him fruitful in the land of his affliction! He seeth his seed, the travail of his soul, and is satisfied. And what a mercy is it that all nations have access to him, not to buy with money, but to receive all the blessings of time and eternity from him without money and without price.

CHAPTER XLII. Ver. 7. Joseph dealt thus harshly with them, (1) That he might hereby procure a full account of the present state of his father's family: (2) That they might be the more thoroughly convinced of, and humbled for, their former sins, particularly their hatred, intended murder, and actual selling of himself: (3) To enhance their joy when he should discover himself: (4) To render the fulfilment of his own dreams the more conspicuous.

GRAIN BOATS ON THE NILE SHOWING HOW CORN HAS ALWAYS BEEN BROUGHT DOWN FROM UPPER EGYPT. [GENESIS, xli:49.]- "And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number." These grain boats we see on the Nile bring down from Upper Egypt every year the same kind of corn that Joseph gathered together during the seven years of plenty, against the seven years of famine. In our country this is called wheat. In the Bible it is called corn. The wheat is loaded in these boats without being sacked, poured into the frame work or body of them, and after the boats reach their destination at Cairo, the wheat is sacked and carried upon the shore, whence it is shipped to different countries. The place where these boats land is about a mile above Cairo, near the island of Rhoda, and near the Nilometer. Standing here we are very near the reputed place where Moses was discovered in the Nile by the daughter of Pharaoh.

WATER DRAWING IN EGYPT--CHARACTERISTIC METHOD IN ALL AGES. [GENESIS, xli: 57.]—"And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn, because that the famine was so sore in all lands." It is very appropriate, therefore, that the accompanying picture represents a scene near the village of Matariych where Joseph lived. Here came Abraham with his wife Sarah at the very dawn of Hebrew history. Here many centuries later Joseph and the Virgin Mother found rest and shelter, and here after the crucifixion and resurrection came the messengers of the Gospel to preach peace on earth. This is a water-drawing scene characteristic of Egypt in all ages, helping us to see how from the Nile people have been able to irrigate their soil and thus secure abundant crops while famines came often to other lands.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord; but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons;[g] we are true men thy servants are no spies.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness[1] of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, Thy servants are [m]twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one [n]is not.

14 And Joseph said unto them, [o]That is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies:

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: [p]By the life of Pharaoh[2] ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be kept[3] in prison, that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else, by the life of Pharaoh, surely ye are spies.

17 And he put[4] them all together [q]into ward three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; for [r]I fear God.

19 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your prison: go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses:

20 But [s]bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so.[5]

21 ¶ And [t]they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; [u]therefore is this distress come upon us.

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, Spake[x] I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore, behold, also his blood is [y]required.

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for he spake unto them by an interpreter.[6]

24 And he turned himself about from them, and [z]wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them [a]Simeon,[7] and bound him before their eyes.

25 ¶ Then Joseph commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's money into his sack, and to give them provision for the way: and [b]thus did he unto them.

26 And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.[8]

27 And as one of them opened his sack to give his ass provender in the inn, he espied his money; for, behold, it was in his sack's mouth.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack: and their [c]heart [d]failed[1] them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

29 ¶ And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them,[2] saying,

30 The[e] man, who is the lord of the land, spake roughly to us,[3] and took us for spies of the country.

31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies.

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father: one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

33 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, Hereby shall I know that ye are true men: leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone;

34 And bring your youngest brother unto me: then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver you your brother, and ye shall traffic in the land.

35 ¶ And it came to pass, as they emptied their sacks, that, behold, every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid.

36 And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away. All these things [f]are against me.

37 And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, Slay my [g]two sons, if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again.

38 And he said, [h]My son shall not go down with you; for [i]his brother is dead, and he is left alone:[5] if mischief befall him by the way

These were sad tidings indeed; and what made their poor afflicted father break out into this melancholy complaint: 'That one way or other, him they had deprived of his children; that Joseph was dead, Simeon was left in Egypt, and now they were going to take Benjamin from him likewise, which were things too heavy for him to bear.'—Stackhouse.

REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy it is to be assured that in the Canaan above there is no scarcity, no want! And here on earth one country can ordinarily supply the wants of another. But is it not strange that the accursed descendants of Ham should have plenty, when God's faithful people, the seed of Abraham, are in want! Yet even this is evidently to bring about his purposes for his people, and to show us that all the mysteries of his providence shall display his power and wisdom, and in the issue bring greater benefits to his redeemed; and, in God's time, the most malignant opposers of his designs are made willingly to submit thereto, and accomplish the same. But while trusting in the Lord, parents and masters ought to provide, with great care, for the external subsistence, and how much more for the religious edification, of their families. What harsh measures are sometimes necessary to awaken, and thoroughly convince, such consciences as have been long asleep and hardened in sin! but the fear of God, prevalent in the heart, effectually determines men to equity and benevolence, and restrains from tyrannical cruelty and injustice. Trying providences often recall sin to men's remembrance, and render that bitter which was formerly sweet. And it is indeed a needful stroke that awakens the conscience to a serious remembrance of former sins. When we share with others in their calamity, it is no small comfort to know ourselves clear of their guilt. How often God writes men's sins on their troubles! These Hebrews had sold their brother for money, and now his money fills them with dread; guilty consciences being subject to perpetual alarms. There is need of constant preparation for trials, as we often meet with them when and where they were least expected. But mournful is the case of families when mutual trust in one another is weakened. Surely there is great need of a holy disengagement from all creatures; for in proportion to our love to them, will be our fears of losing them, and our distress in parting from them. Very often the best of saints distress themselves with needless fears that all things are against them, when they are really, nay remarkably, working for their good. And no wonder, when the very children from whom distinguished comforts are justly expected, so often, by their wickedness, bring their aged parents with sorrow to the grave. But now, my soul, when Jesus deals roughly with me, to convince and humble my proud spirit, or to try my love to himself and his Father, and to my fellow-saints, let me always acknowledge my offences with brokenness of heart; and let me bless him who hath so planned, and so executes his schemes in the which ye go, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs [h]with sorrow to the grave.

CHAPTER XLIII.

1 Jacob is hardly persuaded to send Benjamin. 15 Joseph entaineth his brethren. 26 He maketh them a feast.

AND the famine was [a]sore in the land.

2 And it came to pass, when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, Go again, buy us [b]a little food.

3 And Judah spake unto him, saying, [c]The man did solemnly protest[7] unto us, saying, Ye shall not see [d]my face, except your brother be with you.

4 If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food:

5 But if thou wilt not send him, [e]we will not go down:[8] for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

6 And Israel said, Wherefore dealt ye so ill with me, as to tell the man whether ye had yet a brother?

7 And they said, The man asked us straitly of our state, and of our kindred, saying, Is your father yet alive? have ye another brother? and we told him according to the tenor of these words.[9] Could we certainly know[1] that he would say, Bring your brother down?

8 And Judah said unto Israel his father, Send the [f]lad with me, and we will arise and go; that we may live, and not die, both we, and thou, and also our little ones.

9 I will [g]be surety for him; of my hand shalt thou require him: if I bring him not unto thee, and set him before thee, then let me bear the blame for ever:

10 For except we had lingered, surely now we had returned this second time.[2]

11 And their father Israel said unto them, If it must be so now, do this; [h]Take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and carry down the man a present, a little balm, and a little honey, spices and myrrh, nuts and almonds:[3]

12 And [i]take double money in your hand; and the money that was brought again in the mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight:

13 Take[k] also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man:

14 And [l]God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Benjamin. If I be[4] bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.

15 ¶ And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand, and Benjamin; and rose up, and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph.

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the [m]ruler of his house, Bring these men home,[5] and [n]slay, and make ready; for these men shall dine with me at noon.

17 And the man did as Joseph bade: and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

18 And the men were [o]afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's house:[6] and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time are we brought in; that he may [p]seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

19 ¶ And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house; and they communed with him at the door of the house,

20 And said, O Sir, [q]We came indeed [r]down at the first time to buy food:

21 And it came to pass, when we came to the inn, that [s]we opened our sacks, and, behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight; [t]and we have brought it again in our hand.

22 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put our money in our sacks.

23 And he said, [u]Peace be to you, fear not; your God, and the God of your father,[8] hath given you treasure in your sacks:[9] I had your money.[1] And he brought Simeon out unto them.

24 And the man brought the men into Joseph's house, and [v]gave them water, and they washed their feet: and he gave their asses provender.

25 And they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there.

26 ¶ And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and [w]bowed themselves to him[2] to the earth.

27 And he asked them of their [x]welfare, and said, [y]Is your father well, the old man of whom ye spake? is he yet alive?

28 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive: and they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance.

[3] Balm, or balsam. a general name for many of those resinous substances that flow from certain trees spontaneously or by incision. Josephus says the balsam tree was brought to Judea by the Queen of Sheba: and although we find balm an article of commerce between Gilead and Egypt, ch. 37. 25, yet this no more proves the balm to have been the produce of Gilead, than the other articles, confessedly of Indian origin. Pliny thus characterizes it: "To all other odours the balsam is preferred, produced in no other part than the land of Judea, and even there, in two gardens only; both of them belonging to the king, one no more than twenty acres, and the other still smaller." Justin describes it as gathered to the district of Jericho, and Martin, in 1756, confirms his statement. Honey. Either that collected by the bee from flowers, or the inspissated syrup of dates or grapes. Spices. The Septuagint translates it by a word signifying incense. Bochart thinks it storax, an odoriferous drug. Myrrh. A precious gum having spontaneously or by incision from a tree, was used in precious ointments and perfumes. It constituted part of the present to our Lord. Mat. 2. 11. and in Jn. 19. 39 it is mentioned as one of the articles brought to embalm his body. The myrrh in the text, Celsius concludes to be a different article, the product of the Cistus ladaniferus, and a beautiful and fragrant shrub. Nuts. Probably the pistacia, which is nearly of the size and shape of the common hazel-nut, with a little more angularity. They have a double shell. The kernel is pale green, with an oily agreeable taste, and considered very nutritive. Almonds. The well-known fruit of a tree resembling the peach.—C.

[8] It seems that Joseph had taught his steward and family to know and fear the true God.

[9] Joseph had taught this man to trace events to the providence of God. This was the great leading feature of Joseph's character, and must have been observed by his servant. He did not know why his master acted the part he did. But he had discovered that it was from no ill design to themselves; and he therefore encourages them to have no fear of him, and treated them kindly; and bringing Simeon to them would be the first thing to calm their fears.—L.

of redemption, that I am always obliged to return to himself, as my great supplier, in time of need.

CHAPTER XLIII. Ver. 27. Joseph still retained his tender affection for his father and his brethren; but, in order to fulfil the designs of Providence, he had been restrained of God from inquiring after them, till his brethren came into Egypt.

Ver. 32. The Egyptians detested eating with such as fed upon the animals which they worshipped, or who neglected their manner of dressing their victuals.

Ver. 33. They marvelled that he, who had before used them so roughly, should now use them so kindly.

Ver. 34. Benjamin's large portion might be intended, not only to do him honour, but also to try his temperance, and whether his brethren would envy him on account of his distinguished preferment.

REFLECTIONS.—The trials, the sore trials, of God's faithful people, may often last long, and sink deep, before their deliverance come: but in difficult circumstances, where something dear to us is at stake, it is good to take the advice of others who are less interested. What a mercy is bread, that nothing earthly can supply the want of it! What then can supply the want of Jesus, the bread of life? In the use of every prudent endeavour to avoid danger it is proper to commit our affairs to the Lord, and submit ourselves entirely to his disposal; but men, when their consciences are overcharged with guilt, are apt to fear without ground, even where kindness is intended. In every circumstance honesty is the best policy; and every success in business should be regarded as a treasure given by God to us. What tender passions pos-

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw[g] his brother Benjamin, his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, [a]of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, [b]my son.

30 And Joseph made haste; for his [c]bowels did yearn upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and wept there.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on bread.

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians which did eat with him by themselves: because the Egyptians might not [d]eat bread with the Hebrews; for that is an [e]abomination unto the Egyptians.[9]

33 And they sat before him, the first-born according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at another.

34 And he took and sent [f]messes unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of theirs. And they drank, and [g]were merry with him.

CHAPTER XLIV.

1 Joseph's policy to stay his brethren. 18 Judah's humble supplication to him.

AND he commanded [a]the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food,[b] as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth:

2 And put my [c]cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn-money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

5 Is not this it in which[1] my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth?[2] Ye have done evil in so doing.[3]

6 ¶ And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, [d]Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid [e]that thy servants should do according to this thing.

8 Behold, the money which we found in our sacks' mouths we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

9 With [f]whomsoever of thy servants it be found, both let him die,[4] and we also will be my lord's bondmen.[5]

10 And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: he with whom it is found shall be my servant; and ye shall be blameless.

11 Then they speedily took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack.

12 And he searched, and began at the eldest, and left at the youngest; and the cup was found in Benjamin's sack.

13 Then they [g]rent their clothes, and laded every man his ass, and returned to the city.[6]

14 ¶ And Judah and his brethren came to Joseph's house; (for he was yet there;) and they [h]fell before him on the ground.

15 And[h] Joseph said unto them, [i]What deed is this that ye have done? wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly divine?[7]

16 And [k]Judah said, [l]What shall we say unto my lord? what shall we speak? or how shall we clear ourselves? God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants: behold, [m]we are my lord's servants, both we, and he also with whom the cup is found.

17 And he said, [n]God forbid that I should do so: but the man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant; and as for you, get you up in [o]peace unto your father.

18 ¶ Then [p]Judah came near unto him, and said,[8] Oh my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn against thy servant; for thou art even [q]as Pharaoh.[9]

19 My lord asked his servants, saying, Have ye a father or a brother?

20 And we said unto my lord, We have a father, an old man, and a [r]child of his old age, a little one; and his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, and his father loveth him.

21 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Bring him down unto me, that I may [s]set mine eyes upon him.

22 And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father: for if he should leave his father, his father would die.

23 And thou saidst unto thy servants, [t]Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more.

24 And it came to pass, when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

25 And our father said, [u]Go again, and buy us a little food.

9 It is not likely the objection in eating with the Hebrews arose from their being strangers, but because they were foreigners. The Hebrews were so yet too obscure a people to have excited any peculiar national prejudice. Such distinctions still remain both amongst civilized and barbarous nations. The Hindoo will not eat with the Christian, even one Indian caste will refuse to eat with another; and in the South Sea Islands, before Christianity appeared amongst them, men would, upon no account, have consented to eat in company with a woman. Even in Christian countries, refinement effects nearly as great a separation of ranks, as we find in Egypt, India, or the South Seas, effected by superstition and national antipathies. What a humiliating ordinance is the Lord's table, where believers of all sorts, types, ranks, and sexes, "tarry one for another," whilst at one table, they "being many, are one bread and one body;" and "are all partakers of that one bread," 1 Co. 10. 17.—C.

1 Did you not know that he would make a narrow search for his beloved cup, and would employ all that marvellous skill by which he hath advanced himself in power, to discover it?

2 Or, maketh trial. —Divination, or an attempt to foresee the future by means of certain mysterious arts, was greatly practised by the Egyptians. Their favourite mode was from goblets of a spherical form. Small pieces of gold or silver, with curious devices, were thrown into the vessel, after which certain incantations were pronounced, and the evil genius invoked; the latter was supposed to give the answer by pointing to some of the characters on the precious stones. Sometimes the goblet was filled with pure water, upon which the sun was allowed to play; and the figures which were thus formed were interpreted as the dictates of the desired omen (Antiquities).—P.

3 However good the intention, and kind the feeling of Joseph, we may not approve or justify an artifice accompanied by a false accusation, and, ver. 15, much unnecessary sorrowing of his brethren's feelings. The result, no doubt, established them fully in his confidence, but, as it appears, ch. 50. 15, did not establish their confidence in him.—C.

6 Conscious of their own innocence, astonished at so vile a charge, they feel the matter upon this short notice. That whosoever upon search should be found to have the cup should be given up to suffer death, and themselves become all the lord's bound slaves. So said, so done; the beasts were unloaded, the sacks were searched, and to their great astonishment and surprise, the cup was found in Benjamin's. To no purpose it was for the poor youth to say anything in his own defence, upon such a demonstration none would believe him, and yet, seeing all concerned in the disgrace, they loaded their asses again, and in a manner, in manner returned to the city.—Stark-house.

sess the noblest of souls! Their earnest prayers to God for our welfare are a distinguished kindness. And if persons with whom we deal have whimsical scruples, it is becoming to bear with them in love. But, O my soul, forget not Jesus thy brother! Let all my troubles and wants oblige me to return to him, as my alone Saviour. And though he lift me up, and cast me down again, fear not, only believe, and thou shalt see the glory of God.

CHAPTER XLIV. REFLECTIONS.—The joys of this world are quickly changed into lamentation, mourning, and woe! But amidst all its variety of changes, we cannot but observe that God exactly fulfils his purposes in his own time, and makes the proudest to bow before the righteous at his pleasure. How pleasant it is when brethren's hearts are so united, that one is willing to bear another's burdens, however heavy 26 And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with us, then will we go down; for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.

27 And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that my wife [z]bare me two sons:

28 And the one went out from me, and I said, Surely [y] he is torn in pieces; and I saw him not since:[9]

29 And if ye take this also from me, and mischief befall him, ye shall bring down my gray hairs with [x]sorrow to the grave.

30 Now therefore when I come to thy servant my father, and the lad be not with us; (seeing that [a]his life is bound up in the lad's life;)

31 It shall come to pass, when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die: and thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow to the grave.

32 For thy servant became surety for the lad unto my father, saying, [b]If I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father for ever.

33 Now therefore, I pray thee, let thy servant abide instead of the lad a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.[1]

34 For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see the evil that [c]shall come on my father.[2]

CHAPTER XLV.

1 Joseph maketh himself known to his brethren. 5 He comforteth them in God's providence. 9 He sendeth for his father. 16 Pharaoh confirmeth Joseph's invitation. 21 Joseph furnisheth them for their journey, and exhorteth them to concord. 25 Jacob is revived with the news.

THEN Joseph [d]could not refrain himself before all them that stood by him; and he cried, Cause[3] every man to go out from me. And there stood no man with him while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren.

2 And he [e]wept aloud: and the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard.

3 And Joseph said unto his brethren, [d]I am Joseph: doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him: for they were troubled[f] at his presence.

4 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you. And they came near. And he said, I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt.

5 Now therefore be [g]not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: [h]for God did send me before you to preserve life.[3]

6 For these two years hath the famine been in the land; and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be earing nor harvest.

7 And God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance.

8 So now, it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and he hath made me a [i]father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

9 Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt: come down unto me, tarry not:

10 And thou shalt dwell [k]in the land of Goshen,[4] and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast:

11 And there [l]will I nourish thee, (for yet there are five years of famine,) lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

12 And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin,[5] that it is [m]my mouth that speaketh unto you.

13 And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste, and [n]bring down my father hither.

14 ¶ And [o]he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

15 Moreover, he [p]kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.

16 ¶ And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come. And it pleased Pharaoh well,[6] and his servants.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan,

18 And take your father, and your households, and come unto me; and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the [q]fat of the land.

19 Now thou art commanded, this do ye; Take you [r]waggons[7] out of the land of Egypt

1 From this narrative, and from the apparent apathy of Benjamin himself in the whole affairs which so closely concerned him, the impression is apt to be left that he was a mere lad at the time, who required to be taken charge of by his brothers. This is not like. He was about or nearly thirty years old: and he had besides a large family. When he went down to Egypt, very soon after the scene here described, his family numbered no less than ten sons. It would seem, however, that he was a man of soft and gentle temperament, submissive to the will of others; and his father's tender and over-anxious fancy had not tended to give him vigour or self-reliance.—P.

3 Joseph's brethren sold him out of envy and hatred, how then does Joseph say that God did send me? simply because it was true. God can compel the wickedness and wrath of man to accomplish his purposes, Ps. 76. 10; and while man acts from a wicked motive, God employs his service to accomplish his own gracious purposes. See Ac. 2. 23. But if men's wickedness finally accomplish God's purposes, are they neither to be grieved for nor angry with their sins? this is not Joseph's meaning: he merely advises, "be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves;" such sorrow of the world worketh death, wherefore he immediately turns their attention from themselves to the sovereign providence of God which might through grace produce that "godly sorrow that worketh repentance to salvation," 2 Co. 7. 10.—C.

and grievous! And it is highly becoming when children cannot bear to see the grief and distress of their aged parents, but are using every method to promote their peace. Learn, O my soul, to walk circumspectly! Snares may be laid for me where I least expect them. If I am wronged by false accusations, let me always observe and acknowledge the righteous hand of God therein. If I am overtaken in a fault, let my submission be humble and candid. Let me always give honour to whom honour is due; and be cautious in that which I utter before them. Let me be always faithful to my engagements, tenderly affectioned towards my parents, and ready to lay down my life for the brethren. But may my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, and my right hand forget her cunning, if I forget him whose way is in the sea, and his paths in the mighty waters of darkness and trouble, and who even in these reveals himself to his people: him who searcheth the hearts and trieth the reins of his people; him who ever liveth to make intercession for us: him who is the surety of the better testament; and who, when God had no pleasure in sacrifices and offerings, said, Lo, I come; I delight to do thy will, O my God: thy law is within my heart.

CHAPTER XLV. Ver. 1, 4. He desired to conceal from the Egyptians the fault of his brethren, and the uncommon strength of his affection.

Ver. 5. Be not so immoderately grieved with yourselves as to overlook the hand of God in sending me hither to preserve your life, and the lives of many others in Egypt and the places about.

Ver. 6. Directed by Joseph, the Egyptians did not cultivate nor sow their fields during the famine, as they could expect no crop.

Ver. 8. God made him Pharaoh's chief counsellor and manager of his affairs; and he had the authority, power, and respect of a father with him.

REFLECTIONS.—My soul, let brotherly love continue; let no injuries received, no length of time, extinguish or abate it. Let me be tender-hearted, kindly affectioned, forgiving my injurious, my abusive, breth-for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father, and come.

20 Also [x]regard not your stuff: for the good of all the land of Egypt is yours.

21 ¶ And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them waggons, according to the commandment[t] of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.

22 To all of them he gave each man [u]changes of raiment: but to Benjamin he gave three hundred[7] pieces of silver,[8] and five changes of raiment.

23 And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses laden with[9] the good things of Egypt, and ten she-asses laden with corn and bread, and meat for his father by the way.

24 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, See that ye fall[z] not out by the way.[1]

25 ¶ And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan unto Jacob their father, 26 And told him, saying, Joseph is yet alive, and he is governor over all the land of Egypt. And Jacob's heart [y]fainted, for he believed them not.

27 And they told him all the words of Joseph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the waggons which Joseph had sent to carry him, the spirit of Jacob their father revived.

28 And Israel said, [z]It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die.

1 Jacob is comforted by God at Beer-sheba: 5 He goeth thence with his family into Egypt. 8 The number of those that went with him. 28 Joseph meeteth Jacob. 31 He instructeth his brethren how to answer Pharaoh.

AND Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to [a]Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices unto the [b]God of his father Isaac.[2]

2 And [c]God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob! And he said, Here am I.

3 And he said, I am God, [d]the God of thy father: [e]fear not to go down into Egypt;[3] for I will [f]there make of thee a great nation.

4 I will [g]go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring[4] thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.[5]

5 ¶ And Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba: and the sons of Israel [h]carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, [i]in the waggons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

6 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came [k]into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him:

7 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed, brought he with him into Egypt.

8 ¶ And [l]these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: [m]Reuben, Jacob's first-born.

9 And the sons of Reuben; Hanoch, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

10 And [n]the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

11 And the sons of [o]Levi; Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

12 And the sons of [p]Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: but Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And the sons of Pharez were Hezron and Hamul.

13 And[q] the sons of Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah, and Job,[6] and Shimron.

14 And the [r]sons of Zebulun; Sered, and Elon, and Jahleel.

15 These be the [s]sons of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram, with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

16 And [t]the sons of Gad; Ziphion, and Haggi, Shuni, and Ezbon,[7] Eri, and Arodi, and Areli.

17 And[u] the sons of Ashur; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister. And the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

and his two sons born in Egypt, and the result is seventy, the whole of Jacob's family that settled in Egypt, according to ver. 27. In this statement the wives of Jacob's twelve sons are omitted, and they amounted but to nine. For Judah's wife was dead, ch. 38. 12, Simeon's also appears to have been dead, ch. 46. 10, and Joseph's wife was already in Egypt. Now these nine added to sixty-six give seventy-five, the whole amount of Jacob's kindred that Joseph called into Egypt. C.]

Ver. 34. [Abomination. Deep, inveterate, and almost inconquerable prejudices, against whole nations, and particular professions and employments, have been common in all ages; and have never been eradicated but by Christianity, which teaches, 'in Christ there is neither Jew nor Greek, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free; but Christ is all.' The Egyptian prejudices against shepherds are ascribed to two causes: the one recorded by Josephus, the inroads, conquests, and cruelties of the borderers, called shepherd-kings; the ren, as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven me. Let me carefully conceal their faults from the world; and, to the utmost of my power, render them good for evil. In so doing I shall heap coals of fire on their head; I shall sting, yea, I shall melt their hearts. And let me carefully provide for the support and comfort of my aged parents. Following peace with all men, and keeping death always in my view, let me be such a comfort to them as may contribute to their leaving this world in a cheerful and a Christian like manner. But let me here behold, as in a glass, with what affection Jesus reveals himself, secretly reveals himself, unto his brethren of mankind, who have been his betrayers and murderers!—and how they are confounded, how they are love-melted at his presence! how encouraged by the gracious words, the exceeding great and precious promises, which proceed from his mouth! Let me behold what desire he and his Father have to place them with himself, in due time, in the best of the celestial abodes! how reviving the hopes of being for ever with the Lord, and seeing him as he is, are to the dying saints; and how agreeable the tokens of approaching death are to them on that account.

CHAPTER XLVI. [Ver. 27. Were threescore and ten. The statement of Moses in this verse seems not to agree with that of Stephen, Ac. 7. 14. Moses makes the number that came into Egypt to be only threescore and ten, Stephen makes Joseph call his father and all his kindred threescore and fifteen souls. Now is there here either an error or a contradiction? Neither. Moses first rates the descendants of Jacob who accompanied him to Egypt at sixty and six, who are found thus:—Jacob's own children, eleven sons and one daughter, 12; Reuben's sons, 4; Simeon's sons, 6; Levi's sons, 3; Judah's three sons and two grandsons, 5; Issachar's sons, 4; Zebulon's sons, 3; Gad's sons, 7; Asher's four sons, one daughter, two grandsons, 7; Dan's son, 1; Naphtali's sons, 4; Benjamin's sons, 10; in all, sixty-six. To these add Jacob himself, Joseph Laban gave to Leah his daughter; and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

19 The[y] sons of Rachel, Jacob's wife; Joseph, and Benjamin.

20 And [z]unto Joseph in the land of Egypt were born Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest[8] of On, bare unto him.

21 And[a] the sons of Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, Ehi,[9] and Rosh, Muppim,[1] and Huppim, and Ard.

22 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob: all the souls were fourteen.

23 And [b]the sons of Dan; Hushim.[2]

24 And the [c]sons of Naphtali; Jahzeel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillem.

25 These[d] are the sons of Bilhah, which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter, and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

26 All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his [e]loins, besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six;

27 And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: [f]all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten.[3]

28 ¶ And he sent [g]Judah before him unto Joseph, to direct his face unto Goshen; and they came into the land of Goshen.

29 And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father, to Goshen, and presented himself unto him: and he [h]fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

30 And Israel said unto Joseph, Now [i]let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

31 ¶ And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up and show Pharaoh, and say unto him, [k]My brethren, and my father's house,[4] which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me:

32 And the men are shepherds, for [l]their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have.

33 And[m] it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation?

34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we and also our fathers; that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen:[5] for [n]every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians.[6]

4 With this caution he took five of his brethren along with him, and having informed Pharaoh that his father and family were thus far as Goshen, he presented his brothers to the king, who, for his sake, received them very graciously; and when he asked them what profession they were of, they told him that they were shepherds, as their family for many generations had been; that want of pasture for their cattle, and of sustenance for themselves, had made them leave Canaan; but that since, as they understood, his majesty had been so hospitable as to give them reception in his dominions, they humbly prayed that they might be allowed to settle in Goshen, as a country most convenient for their purpose: which he readily granted, and offered, moreover, to make any one of them whom Joseph should approve, his royal shepherd.—Stackhouse.

6 As a fact this is shown by the monuments of Egypt. In the sculptures shepherds always appear dirty and unshaven; and at Beni-Hassan and the tombs near the pyramids of Gizeh, they are found caricatured as abominated and unseemly race. Within a few years the cause of it is not so clear. The most probable explanation is, that a foreign caste of shepherds had got possession of Egypt, and had held it a long period, and tyrannized over the inhabitants. The Egyptians had thus been taught to hate all shepherds. Joined with this may have been the fact that Egypt was an agricultural and commercial country, high civilized, and that the shepherd tribes were rude and barbarous nomads, and were therefore held in contempt.—P.

8 It is not implied that Goshen was the best province of Egypt in all respects, but only that it was the best adapted for the Israelites, who were shepherds. It was more of a pastoral than an agricultural province. Joseph knew this; he also knew that the province was little valued by the Egyptians, and that consequently there would be the less cause for jealousy should the Israelites be put in possession of it. Goshen lay on the north-eastern border of Egypt, bordering on the desert, and probably embracing nearly the whole of the isthmus of Suez.—P.

1 Joseph presenteth five of his brethren and his father before Pharaoh. 11 He giveth them habitation and maintenance. 13 He getteth all the Egyptians' money, 16 their cattle, 18 their lands for Pharaoh. 22 The priests' land was not bought. 23 He letteth the land to them again for a fifth of the increase. 28 Jacob's age. 29 He sweareth Joseph to bury him with his fathers.

THEN [a]Joseph came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father, and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in [b]the land of Goshen.

2 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, and presented them unto Pharaoh.

3 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, [c]What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we and also our fathers.

4 They said moreover unto Pharaoh, For to sojourn in the land are we come;[7] for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks; for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen.

5 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 The land of Egypt is [d]before thee; in the [e]best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; in the land of Goshen let them [8]dwell: and if thou knowest any [f]men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

7 And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob [g]blessed Pharaoh.

8 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?[9]

9 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, [h]The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: [i]few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the [k]days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage.

10 And Jacob blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

11 ¶ And Joseph [l]placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded.

12 And Joseph [m]nourished his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with bread, according [n]to their families.[1]

13 ¶ And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt, and all the land of Canaan, fainted by reason of the famine.

other mentioned by Tacitus, the sacrifice by the shepherd nations of the bull and the ram—the one representing Apis, the other Jupiter Ammon, two principal deities of Egypt. The first was most probably the sole ground of prejudice in the days of Joseph, as there is no evidence that in his time the Egyptians had sunk into that idolatry, for which, by apostasy from the patriarchal religion of Abraham and Joseph, they became liable to the divine judgment some centuries afterwards in the days of Moses. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Learn, my soul, to begin all thy thanksgivings with the beginnings of thy mercies; and let me worship God as not only my own, but also the God of my fathers. In all the changes of thy lot consult the Lord's direction, and supplicate his presence. It is safe to go anywhere on earth if his everlasting arms be about me, his covenant established with me, and his comforts delighting my soul. God's promises, though they lie long under ground, will spring up, bud, and ripen at last. Let me therefore always take care of my whole family, and live in the firm assurance that on Jesus is the care of all the churches. Let me hope that, though my beginnings be small, they will, in God's time, greatly, and even

SPRING OF THE VIRGIN—WHERE JOSEPH MET JACOB. [GENESIS, xlvi:29, 30.]—"And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel, his father, and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while. And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive." We give the view of the Spring of the Virgin because it is in the neighborhood where Joseph lived and where his father met him. The water in this region is such as has percolated through the soil from the Nile. Eber says that this spring is mentioned in records of the highest antiquity. It was believed for centuries that the balsam shrub could thrive here and nowhere else. This spot has come to be dear to the human race because the holy family sojourned here during their stay in Egypt, and because of its connection with Moses and Joseph.

that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

15 And when money[1] failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, [o]Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

16 And Joseph said, [p]Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their [q]cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses; and he fed them with bread for all their cattle for that year.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second[2] year, and said unto him, We[r] will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle: there is not ought left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies, and our lands.

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh; and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate.

20 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

21 And as for the people, he removed them to cities from one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof.[3]

22 Only the land of the priests[4] bought he not: [s]for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them; wherefore they sold not their lands.

23 ¶ Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day, and your land, for Pharaoh: lo, here is [t]seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

24 And it shall come to pass in the increase, that ye shall give [u]the fifth[5] part unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.

25 And they said, Thou [x]hast saved our lives: let us [y]find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.[6]

26 And Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part; except the land of the priests[7] only, which became not Pharaoh's.

27 ¶ And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the country of Goshen; and they had possessions therein, and grew, and [z]multiplied exceedingly.

28 ¶ And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years: so the whole age[8] of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years.[9]

29 And the time drew nigh that Israel [a]must die; and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, [b]put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, and deal kindly and truly with me; bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt:

30 But I [c]will lie with my fathers; and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying-place.[1] And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

31 And he said, Swear unto me. And he sware unto him. And [d]Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

1 Joseph with his sons visiteth his sick father, who strengtheneth himself to bless them. 3 He repeateth God's promise. 5 He taketh Ephraim and Manasseh as his own. 7 He telleth Joseph of his mother's grave. 8 He blesseth Ephraim and Manasseh. 17 He preferreth the younger before the elder. 21 He prophesieth their return to Canaan.

AND it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.[2]

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel [a]strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

3 ¶ And Jacob said unto Joseph, [b]God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me,

4 And said unto me, Behold, [c]I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make

5 In requiring but a fifth part, he dealt mercifully with them, and faithfully for the king.—From ch. 41. 34, 35 it would appear that the produce collected as a royal rent was but the fifth part of each year's crop, and whether this was, or was not, an increase on the customary amount does not appear; but, at all events, it was a moderate impost, and there appears no symptom of public dissatisfaction or complaint. How far private individuals may have availed themselves of Joseph's interpretation, and laid up in store against the anticipated famine, does not appear. But to estimate Joseph's management aright, Pharaoh must be considered as a mercantile one, chief part, at least, of whose revenue consisted in agricultural produce, and not in direct or indirect pecuniary taxes; an arrangement still common in some eastern nations, and relics of which may still be traced in the seigneurial rents of some parts of Italy and other European nations. It was, therefore, not merely Joseph's right, but his duty, to sell to the best advantage his employer's merchandise. Nor was his employer bound by any principle of even charity, to bestow his goods, while the purchaser was able to buy. Let the infidel scoffers who revile Joseph for his wisdom and fidelity set the example of bestowing their goods to men able to pay for them: and then, but not till then, can they escape from the weight of their own revilings. Had Joseph, indeed, enslaved the people, or had he taken advantage of their necessities to inflict an oversubsisting rack-rent, there might and there would have been ground for accusation; but he did none of these things, but after an admirable exercise of justice and mercy, left the people grateful, contented, and prosperous.—C.]

CHAP. XLVIII.

B.C. 1689.

1 Joseph, who could not be long absent from court, took leave of his father, but not without giving strict charge to some of the family, that upon the very first appearance of danger they should immediately send for him. Accordingly, as soon as word was brought him that his father was dying, he took his two sons Manasseh and Ephraim with him, and went to visit him; who, when he heard that his favourite son was come, summoned all his spirits together, and was so far revived as to be able to sit up in his bed.—Stackhouse.

quickly, increase. Wherever I am, in station or in place, let me attend to its relative duties, giving honour to whom honour is due; and let me never be ashamed of an honest calling, but endeavour therein to abide with God. Be it my care and happiness to live always near the heavenly state, and as little connected with carnal and worldly men as possible; that when it pleases God to call me hence, I may be willing and ready at his bidding.

CHAPTER XLVII. [Ver. 21. Cities. The removal of the people to cities was necessary, for, in a rural distribution of houses, it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to provide them food. It is most probable, however, that Joseph found many of the Egyptians, what they are at this day, an unsettled, a nomadic people. By bringing them into cities during the famine he accustomed them to stationary dwellings and settled habits; and where infidelity has accused him of cruelty, civilization must hail him as one of her chief benefactors. The habits of the wandering tribe called Gipsies in England will abundantly illustrate the evils of an unsettled condition; and the success of at least one minister in Scotland in inducing a village of these wanderers, situate in his parish, to resign their nomadic habits, and come under the permanent inspection of the ministry and regular preaching of the gospel, and afford opportunities for the systematic education of their children, will be cause of gratulation to every Christian philanthropist, and will form the best illustration and defence of the conduct of Joseph in this regulation. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Let me never be ashamed of my relations, however low they be in station, if they be honest; nor let me ever be an idler, an inactive person, either in church or state. Activity and ingenuity in my profession are the way to preferment. What though man's days be shortened, and filled up with troubles, yet my life on earth, whether perplexed or prosperous, is but a pilgrimage to the better country above. In the meanwhile, let me highly esteem, as a blessing, the prayers of such as fear God: and if he put me into power, let my care be to do good to all, especially to those of the household of faith. Let mercy, as well as equity, run through all my conduct. But go where I will, and enjoy what I may, let me keep sight of the promises and of the everlasting abodes: and though, for a while, I content myself with this world as a lodging, let my care, my hope, be to go to the heavenly Canaan at my death, and be with Christ, which is far better. Even here also let me behold him presenting a lost world of his brethren before the great King, the Lord of hosts, and preparing mansions for them:—behold him as giving out of his unbounded stores all the necessary blessings of time and eternity, not for our money, our cattle, our land, our persons, but freely, according to the exceeding riches of his grace; and by his oath concerning the promises of our present peace and everlasting happiness!

CHAPTER XLVIII. [Ver. 8. Beheld. Jacob, who of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession.

5 And now thy [d]two sons Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt, before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine; as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.[e]

6 And thy issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, Rachel[f] died by me in the land of Canaan in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath; the same is Beth-lehem.

8 ¶ And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

9 And Joseph said unto his father, They are my sons, whom [g]God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will [h]bless them.

10 (Now the eyes of Israel were [i]dim for age, so that he could not see.) And he brought them near unto him; and he kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, I [k]had not thought to see thy face; and, lo, God hath showed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed [l]himself with his face to the earth.

13 And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand toward Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand,[3] and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the [m]first-born.

15 And [n]he blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did [o]walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day,

16 The [p]Angel[4] which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my [q]name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them [r]grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it displeased him: and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head.

18 And Joseph said unto his father, Not so, my father; for this is the first-born: put thy right hand upon his head.

19 And his father refused, and said, I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great; but truly his [s]younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, [t]God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh. And he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

21 ¶ And Israel said unto Joseph, [u]Behold, I die; but God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

22 Moreover, I have given [x]to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

Again, in Ho. 12. 4, 5 this same person is called the Angel, even the Lord God of hosts; and by combining these passages with 2 Ti. 4. 18, this glorious person is seen to be the Lord Jesus Christ, who is of 'the seed of David according to the flesh;' but, at the same time, 'God over all, blessed for ever,' Ro. 9. 5. The Angel is also invoked—that Angel of Jehovah who blessed him at Bethel, and saved him at Mahanaim. The construction of the passage shows that the Angel is regarded as equal with God and one with him. The Angel is the second person of the glorious Trinity. —P.

REFLECTIONS.—It is becoming, and highly profitable, for children to visit their godly parents in their dying moments: and while it is necessary for parents to make their last wills with the greatest exactness, that there may be no disputes relative to them after they are dead, it is peculiarly useful and pleasant for them to commemorate at such a time God's former kindnesses to their soul. How encouraging is it to found our prayers for, and our expectations of, the prosperity of our friends upon the promises of God, intimated to ourselves! and how pleasant to think of such deceased friends as we hope to meet in glory! The favours of God often exceed the hopes of his people, and sweetly compel them to the most abundant praise! and what a mercy is redemption through Jesus' blood! It is peculiarly precious in a dying hour, and is sweeter than honey and the honey-comb. Surely it becomes those who have shared it to mention the same, and bear testimony for God for the encouragement of others whom they leave behind. How the compassion of God shines in accepting one person as well as another! But rejoice, my soul, that the Lord hath made us Gentiles fruitful in the land of our affliction. He hath blessed our church with numbers and privileges far superior to those of Israel his first-born. In infinite mercy, when our godly relations forsake us by death, our God remains with us! Nay, united: for in their anger they [m]slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down[4] a wall.

CHAPTER XLIX. [Ver. 2. The patriarchal blessing is embodied in these remarkable words; and the characteristics and future history of each son and tribe are sketched in outline. Like most ancient prophecies the language is poetical and highly figurative; but events are shadowed forth so plainly that the student of history can have little difficulty in recognizing them. P.]

Ver. 4. Whatever power or dignity the Reubenites had at first, they quickly lost it, Nu. 10. 18–21; Jos. 4. 12, 13; xxii. with Ju. 5. 15, 16; 1 Ch. 15. 18–26. They never rendered themselves famous by any noted exploit; nor did any judge, king, or prophet, that we know of, proceed from among them.

Ver. 6. They digged down the walls of the house where Hamor and Shechem secured themselves; or they seized upon oxen and carried them off for a spoil.

Ver. 7. The Simeonites had their inheritance in Canaan out of the lot of Judah, Jos. 19. 1–9; this being too small for them, they had to seize for themselves part of Arabia, 1 Ch. 4. 39–43; and it is said that many of them dispersed themselves among the other tribes, in the character of teachers. The Levites lived scattered among all the other tribes; and were the spiritual instructors of their brethren, and the collectors of the sacred revenues, Jos. xxi.; 1 Ch. vi. xxiii. xxvi.

Ver. 8–12. The tribe of Judah was the most numerous and powerful of all, Nu. 1. 27; 26. 22; 2 Sa. 24. 9; 2 Ch. 14. 8; 17. 14–16. To them their fellow-tribes often submitted themselves, Ju. 1. 2; 3. 9, 10; 20. 18; chiefly under David and Solomon, 1 Ch. xii.; 1 Ki. iv.; many individuals of these adhered to them in the days of Rehoboam, 1 Ki. 12. 17; 2 Ch. 11. 16, 17; Asa, 2 Ch. 15. 9; 16. 6; 17. 2; Hezekiah, 2 Ch. 30. 11; and after their return from Babylon, Ezr. 37. 15–22. The tribe of Benjamin almost always adhered to them. In the march of the tribes, and in their going forth to war, God appointed them the precedence, Nu. 10. 14; Ju. 1. 2; 20. 18. The first of the judges was one of them, Ju. 3. 9, 10. The only kings that ever God in mercy granted to the Hebrew nation were of them, 1 Sa. xvi.; 2 Sa. vii.; Ps. lxxxix. Their conquests and spoils were peculiarly remarkable, Ju. i.; 2 Sa. 3. 1; viii. x. xxi. 2 Ch. xiii. xiv. xx. xxvi.; Is. 33. 4; 37. 36. In Canaan they had the first lot of the country assigned them; it was very extensive and fertile; it abounded with vines and pastures, which rendered wine and milk almost as common as water. But the predictions respecting this tribe have their principal accomplishment in Jesus Christ, who is the Lion of the tribe of Judah, to whom God hath given all power in heaven and in earth, Mat. 28. 18; Ps. lxxii., and whom he hath commanded all men to adore, Jn. 5. 22, 23; Phi. 2. 9–11. He conquers all his and his people's enemies, Col. 2. 14, 15; Ps. cx. He bestows a fulness of grace and glory upon his people, Ps. 68. 12, 13. He is the true vine, who prepares for his people the wine and milk of gospel-truths, ordinances, influences, and blessings, Is. 55. 1; Joel 3. 18. He is called Shiloh, that is, the Author of our peace, prosperity, and salvation, Is. 9. 6, 7; Mi. 5. 5; Ep. 2. 14; Ju. 23. 6; Mat. 1. 21. Till he came in the flesh, Mat. 1.; Lu. xi., the tribe of Judah not only retained its distinct form as a tribe (which none of the rest, no not that of Benjamin, properly did), but retained a governing power in its princes, judges, kings, deputies of the Chaldean, Persian, and Grecian monarchs, Maccabean governors or kings, or in the Sanhedrim or great council of their elders. Scarcely had Jesus appeared in the flesh when Judea was altogether reduced into a Roman province, having no sovereign but the Roman emperor, Ju. 19. 12, 15. No sooner had the gathering of the Gentiles to Shiloh taken place, by the spread of the gospel, than the city and temple of Jerusalem were destroyed, the constitution of their church and state dissolved, and themselves scattered as vagabonds among all nations, to be standing witnesses, for many generations, that he is come. ——[Ver. 8. The birthright which Reuben had sacrificed is here given to Judah. From first to last the tribe of Judah was the most influential among the twelve; and it finally gave a name to the whole nation. Jem. P.——Ver. 10. Feet. In ch. 48. 12, we find Joseph bringing his two sons from between his knees, as a place of parental endearment and protection. By the lawgiver never departing from between Judah's feet, we may accordingly well understand a succession of rulers in the tribe of Judah, till the coming of Christ, the Shiloh, our peace, our peace-maker. C.——This remarkable prophecy has been variously interpreted. It is interesting to know that ancient Jewish rabbins almost unanimously adopted the Messianic interpretation. Thus in the Targum of Onkelos it is rendered, 'Until Messiah comes, whose is the kingdom.' In the Jerusalem Targum, 'Until King Messiah comes, whose is the kingdom.' Rashi, 'Until Shiloh come—King Messiah,' &c. The word Shiloh appears to be derived from a root which signifies 'to rest,' or 'to be secure;' and would therefore mean 'the giver of rest.' Reference is undoubtedly made to a great personal Ruler and Peace-giver, who should spring from the tribe of Judah. P.]

Ver. 16, 17. Though the Danites were the offspring of a concubine, they had as much power as the other tribes sprang of free women. They harassed the Philistines in Samson and others, Ju. xiii.–xvi. But they proved a stumbling-block to the other tribes by their idolatry, Ju. 18. 29–31.

Ver. 18. I pray for, and expect, the promised deliverances to myself and posterity, but especially that spiritual and eternal salvation, to be accomplished by the Son of God in human nature.

Ver. 19. The Gadites were exceedingly exposed to the invasions and ravages of the Ammonites, Arabians, Syrians, Assyrians, &c., Ju. 10. 8; 1 Sa. 11. 1, 2; 2 Ki. 10. 33; 15. 29; 1 Ch. 5. 26.

Ver. 21. [Words. Or on the authority of the Septuagint, Chaldee paraphrase, and Arabic version, a spreading tree, shooting out goodly branches. But as the noun translated words, signifies divergencies, may we not retain the translation, 'a hind let loose,' that giveth forth goodly branches or antlers? The image of freedom, and grace, and fruitfulness, is thus complete. C.——'Naphtali is a hind let loose,' or 'a graceful hind'—timid and distrustful of its own powers, swift of foot to elude its enemies; but when brought to bay fierce and strong to defend its life. 'He giveth goodly words.' The tribe was to be famous for poetic genius; and we have one noble ode ascribed in part to a Naphtalite, Ju. v. P.]

Ver. 22. Joseph's posterity spread themselves far and wide, dwelling on both sides of Jordan, Jos. 12. 6; 13. 7; 16. 17.

Ver. 24. Joseph's graces continued firm; enabling him to withstand temptations, endure injuries, and per-above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the [p]everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was [q]separate from his brethren.[6]

27 ¶ Benjamin shall [r]ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

28 ¶ All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.[7]

29 ¶ And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be [s]gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite;

30 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, [t]which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite, for a possession of a burying-place.

31 (There[u] they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried [x]Leah.)

32 The purchase of the field, and of the cave that is therein, was from the children of Heth.

33 And when Jacob had made an end[8] of commanding his sons, [y]he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people.

6 Ephraim got from Jacob [1] not the birthright blessing, and it was prophetic of the future greatness of the tribe. The territory allotted to it was in the very centre of Palestine. It was naturally as strong as that of Judah; and it possessed those valuable and spacious upland plains, which multiplied much more productive. From the time of the settlement in Palestine Ephraim contended with Judah for the sovereignty, and the struggles of the two contributed mainly to the final rending of the nation.—P.

3 And forty days were fulfilled for him; (for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed;) and the Egyptians [c]mourned for him threescore and ten days.

4 ¶ And when the days of his mourning were past,[9] Joseph [d]spake unto the house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have [e]found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,

5 My[f] father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave which I have [g]digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou [h]bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray [i]thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.

6 And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.

7 ¶ And Joseph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants[2] of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt,

8 And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.

9 And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.

form duties: and his honours were secured to him. He was a shepherd, to direct and provide for the Hebrews in Egypt, and the stone, under God, upon whom their happiness and safety were founded in that country. Joshua, who brought them into Canaan, sprung of him.

Ver. 25. God blessed his posterity with plenteous rains and dews, with fountains of water, and with multitudes of children, richly supplied with every enjoyment.

Ver. 26. Jacob's blessings excelled those of Abraham and Isaac, (1) In their extent, none of his children being excluded, as Ishmael and Esau had been. (2) In their distinct clearness: the land of Canaan, which had been formerly bequeathed in general, was now distributed to Joseph and his brethren. (3) In the apparent nearness of fulfilment; his posterity now increasing fast. Joseph was separated from his brethren when he was sold into Egypt, and afterwards by his distinguished honours there.

Ver. 33. [The phrase gathered to his people occurs also ch. 25. 8, 17; 35. 29, and intimates not that the parties who died were buried, but that they still lived, and were gathered in immortality to the people of the living God. It is the phrase employed by Paul, 2 Th. 2. 1, 'Now, we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How important is the proper work of a death-bed! for dying parents solemnly to pray for, to warn, and to direct their surviving children, is useful and becoming. The sins of parents often entail disgrace and misery upon their posterity; and the blessing of God fixes most remarkably where, for a time, there is the least appearance of it. But the lots of mankind, even in the same family, are greatly diversified. Let me therefore, first of all, and above all, make choice of Jesus, the once promised SHILOH, and now glorified Lord and Christ, and of his salvation, and then be content with such things as I have. Amidst all my work on earth, let me seek and wait for the salvation of God, that when I have finished my course I may be gathered to Jesus and his people above!—But is not the now-departed patriarch a glass to show me my Redeemer? Is not he justly named Jacob and Israel? How long expected, earnestly desired, and supernatural was his birth! Divinely was he chosen to be the Father of many nations of believers, the peculiar people of God. He took the first Adam by the heel, fulfilling the covenant which he had broken; he supplanted and overthrew Satan and his works in the world; and, by his bloody service and suffering, he secured his mediatorial heirship of all things. What inestimable blessings he obtained for men, by offering himself to God in the likeness of sinful flesh! In this his work of love, how exposed to trouble from Jewish brethren, from Satan, the accuser of men, and from JEHOVAH, his loving Father above! How distressful his earthly exile! Hard was his service, numerous his sorrows, unsettled his lot, and remarkable his plainness and integrity. What love he bears to his mother and spouse the church! Faithful was he in his work, prevalent is he in his intercession, and glorious and extensive in his reward; for in the multitude of his redeemed he shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied. Having finished his work, and blessed his disciples, he retired to his rest in the heavenly Canaan—the midst of the throne of God. And innumerable multitudes of spiritual seed spring from his twelve apostles, those dignified patriarchs in the gospel church.

CHAPTER L. Ver. 2. It has been customary with many nations to embalm the dead bodies of persons of rank, taking out the bowels, and so seasoning the body with salt and spices, &c., as to preserve it long from putrefaction. In Egypt they carried this art to such a degree, that bodies embalmed remained uncorrupted for thousands of years: which are now sometimes sold in Europe under the name of mummies.

Ver. 3. It was the custom of the Egyptians to mourn seventy days for their dead, and of the Hebrews to mourn seven, 1 Sa. 31. 13; and just so long the joy of the latter lasted at their solemn weddings, ch. 29. 27; Ju. 14. 17.—[The process of embalming was tedious and expensive. The brain and intestines were first removed, and the head and body filled with spices. The corpse was then steeped in natrum for seventy days, and then washed, wrapped in bandages of linen covered with gum, and placed in a wooden case. The whole body was thus preserved so well that the features remained almost unchanged for centuries. The mummy preserved in its case was carried with the greatest care, and placed in the cave of Machpelah. That cave has been deemed sacred ever since. May it not be, therefore, that the remains of Jacob exist still, and shall one day be brought to light by some enterprising explorer? P.]

Ver. 10. Beyond Jordan, in the books of Moses, denotes the west side of Jordan, as he delivered his writings on the east of it. In other parts of Scripture the phrase denotes the east of Jordan, as the writers lived on the west of it. Some, however, think that of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians: wherefore the name of it was called Abel-mizraim,[4] which is beyond Jordan.

12 And his sons did unto him [m]according as he commanded them:

13 For [n]his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham [o]bought with the field, for a possession of a burying-place, of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14 ¶ And Joseph returned into Egypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶ And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead,[5] they said, [p]Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

16 And they sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying,

17 So shall ye say unto Joseph, [q]Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the [r]servants of the God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.

18 And his brethren also went and [s]fell down before his face; and they said, Behold, we be thy servants.

19 And Joseph said unto them, [t]Fear not; for am [u]I in the place of God?[6]

20 But as for you, [x]ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

21 Now therefore fear ye not: [y]I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake kindly unto them.

22 ¶ And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his father's house: and Joseph lived an [7]hundred and ten years.[8]

23 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children of the third generation: [z]the children also of Machir, the son of Manasseh, were brought up upon Joseph's knees.[9]

24 ¶ And Joseph said unto his brethren, [a]I die: and [b]God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land, unto the land which he [c]sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

25 And [d]Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

26 ¶ So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they embalmed him; and he was put in a coffin in Egypt.

5 As soon as their father was buried, Joseph's brethren began to reflect on the wrongs they had formerly done him, and were not a little apprehensive that as he had the power, he might have it in his intention, to avenge himself of them: and therefore they consulted together and framed this message:—That it was their father's earnest request that he should forget all past injuries, and continue them under his protection as formerly. This, when Joseph heard, such was his compassionate temper, that he could not refrain from weeping, and therefore to remove their fears, he sent immediately for them, and receiving them with the same kind affection as when their father was alive, excused the actions committed against him in such an obliging manner, and gave them such assurances of his future love and adherence to them upon all occasions, as made them return to their families full of joy and satisfaction.—Stackhouse.

the Hebrew word signifies either beyond or on this side. —[The route of the funeral-procession was no doubt the direct one from Egypt across the desert to Gaza and Hebron. The 'thrashing-floor of Atad' was probably somewhere to the south-west of Hebron. The expression 'beyond Jordan' does not always mean east of that river. Its meaning must depend on the point of view of the writer or speaker. Here it must evidently signify west. P.]

Ver. 11. [Mourning for the dead is both lawful and salutary for believers; provided it be not accompanied with murmuring against God, and be mingled with the blessed hope of the immortality of the spirit, 2 Co. 5. 8, or the resurrection of the body, 2 Th. 4. 13. C.]

Ver. 16. [Thy father did command before he died. There is no reason to infer, because this command is not previously mentioned, that therefore it is a fiction of Joseph's brethren. Joseph's employment about the court, and his brethren's residence in Goshen, allowed but little time for intimacy, and that full restoration of confidence which is best confirmed by habitual intercourse. Their recollection of their offence against Joseph makes them anxious for a renewed confirmation of his forgiveness.—Note, How should the recollection of our offences against Christ, our brother (He. 2. 11), lead us, with Peter, to 'weep bitterly' at the 'throne of grace, that we may both obtain mercy, and find grace to help us in time of need,' He. 4. 16. C.]

Ver. 17. Joseph wept, pitying their perplexity, and grieved at their jealousy of his good-will.

REFLECTIONS.—With tender affection ought children and others to take their last farewell of dying friends; and with due care should they be decently interred. Yea, in every case it is kind and dutiful, by partaking, to alleviate the sorrows of the afflicted. It is proper that servants have their master's permission to attend work of their own, be it ever so necessary; nor should that permission be withheld upon a reasonable request. What a loss to a country, what an alarming call to preparation for eternity, is the death of one of God's true children! But it is comely to have an amicable correspondence settled between friends on the occasion of the death of their common relations. And it is altogether unlike a Christian to make the death of friends, especially parents, a mean of commencing strife and debate, on account of some carnal bequeathments. Difficult is the work of quieting a guilty conscience, if thoroughly awakened: but it were hard-hearted, indeed, to refuse forgiveness of injuries, especially when requested by such as are at once our brethren and the servants of the God of our fathers. And when penitential confessions of injury done meet with a ready forgiveness from the receiver, it is highly ornamental and becoming; at the same time it is necessary for offenders principally to deal with God himself, through the blood of his Son. But to finish a religious life in the vigorous exercises of faith on God's promises, and in high friendship with his people, must be the summit of the true Christian's desire. Meanwhile, amidst the deaths of useful relations, that our God cannot die, cannot leave us, and can and will deliver us out of all our distresses, is a source of unfailing comfort and abiding consolation.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED

E X O D U S,

Contains a history of one hundred and forty-five years, and therein exhibits the fulfilment of God's promises to the patriarchs, in the multiplication of their seed, and their deliverance from bondage in Egypt; and represents the establishment of those laws and ordinances which God required them to observe as memorials of his favours. We have here particularly represented the tyranny of Pharaoh king of Egypt; the cruel bondage and marvellous increase of the Israelites; the birth, education, and exile of Moses; his and his brother Aaron's divine mission to deliver their brethren; the ten plagues inflicted on the Egyptians for refusing to let the Israelites leave their country, and their destruction in the Red Sea; the Hebrews' celebration of the passover, departure from Egypt, and safe passage through the Red Sea; God's sustenance of them by sweetened water, or water from a flinty rock, and by quails and bread from heaven; his laws relative to the passover, feast of unleavened bread, firstlings, manna, &c.; his solemn publication of his moral law from Mount Sinai; his directions relative to their civil and religious conduct; his entrance into covenant with them, ch. i.–xxiv.; his directions concerning the tabernacle and its furniture, and concerning the apparel and consecration of his priests; the Hebrews' idolatrous making and worshipping the golden calf; Moses' intercession for them, and God's gracious reconcilement by means of it; their voluntary contribution for, and actual making and erecting, the tabernacle and its whole furniture, ch. xxv.–xl. There are, perhaps, more types of Christ in this than in any other book in the Bible.

CHAPTER I.

1 The children of Israel, after Joseph's death, multiply greatly. 8 The more they are oppressed by a new king, the more they multiply. 15 The piety of the midwives, in saving the men-children alive, is rewarded by God. 22 Pharaoh commandeth the male-children to be cast into the river.

NOW [a]these are the names of the children of Israel which came into Egypt; every man and his household came with Jacob.

2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,

3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,

4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the loins[1] of Jacob were [b]seventy souls: for Joseph was in Egypt already.[2]

6 And [c]Joseph died,[3] and all his brethren, and all that generation.

7 And[d] the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

8 ¶ Now there arose up a [e]new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.

9 And he said unto his people, [f]Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we:

10 Come[g] on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get[h] them up out of the land.

11 Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to [i]afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure-cities, Pithom and Raamses.[4]

The same number is given in De.10.22. It is remarkable that the Septuagint version of Genesis and Exodus makes the number 75, of whom nine are said to be children of Joseph. In Ac. 7. 14 Stephen says, 'Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls.' Stephen may either have followed the Septuagint version, which was then commonly used in Palestine; or, which is more probable, he may have included the living wives of the patriarchs, making up the number thus — sons and grandsons 66, wives 9.—P.

12 But the more they afflicted them, [k]the more they multiplied and grew. And they were [l]grieved because of the children of Israel.

13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with [m]rigour:

14 And they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigour.

15 ¶ And the king of Egypt[5] spake to the Hebrew midwives; (of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah;)[6]

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall [n]kill him;[7] but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

17 But the midwives [o]feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men-children alive.

18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, [p]Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men-children alive?

19 And [q]the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

20 Therefore [r]God dealt well with the midwives: and [s]the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 8. Perhaps this king pertained to a new family, which obtained the throne about a hundred years after the Hebrews went down to Egypt. —[It is known that a number of dynasties, different in race and character, ruled over Egypt. It is probable that we have here an indication of the rise of a new dynasty—strangers to the country, and ignorant of its history. If not entirely ignorant of history, the new king was at least so opposed to the policy of his predecessors, that he ignored the claims and services of the Israelites. P.]

Ver. 10. The Israelites about this time began their compliance with the Egyptian idolatry, for which God justly punished them by the hand of the Egyptians, Jos. 24. 14; Eze. 20. 7, 8; 23. 8; Ps. 105. 25.

Ver. 11. Perhaps these cities were not only intended for depositing the stores of the country, but also for protecting it from the Arabs, Philistines, and others on the north-east, or for retaining the Hebrews in their bondage.

Ver. 19. Probably, by virtue of the special assistance of God, it was really so with many of the Hebrew women.

Ver. 21. While God exceedingly multiplied the Hebrews, he increased the families and happiness of the midwives.

REFLECTIONS.—One generation quickly passes

ROAD TO THE PYRAMIDS. [Exodus, I.8.]—"Now there arose up a new king over Egypt which knew not Joseph." We give a beautiful picture above illustrating a scene in Egypt just across the River Nile at the turn of the road, as we pass from Cairo to the Pyramids. One meets here in the early morning market folk coming from the country with donkeys laden with all kinds of vegetables; camels bearing fresh loads of clover, and expecting from the sale of these to take back in the afternoon such necessaries from the stores as they need. This is a macadamized road lined on either side by acacia trees. This picture was taken by our artist instantaneously, hence the people appear to be in motion. This scene is about a mile out from Cairo and about eight miles from the Pyramids, though the Pyramids were in sight even at this point.

THE NILOMETER, WHERE MOSES WAS FOUND IN THE BULRUSHES. [EXODUS ii; 5.]—"And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side; and when she saw the ark among the flags she sent her maid to fetch it. And when she had opened it, she saw the child." According to tradition, Moses was hid in the rushes near the scene which we give above. The Nilometer measures the annual rise of the river. It is situated at the southern extremity of the Island of Rhoda opposite old Cairo. Egypt is often called the gift of the Nile, and hence this river is held in almost sacred reverence by the natives. The inundation of the Nile begins about the end of June and reaches its highest point at the end of September. It then gradually subsides until by the end of January the country begins to dry up again.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he [d]made them houses.[4]

22 ¶ And Pharaoh [e]charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

CHAPTER II.

1 Moses is born, and laid in an ark cast among the flags. 5 He is found, and brought up by Pharaoh's daughter. 11 He slayeth an Egyptian. 13 He reproveth an Hebrew. 15 He fleeth into Midian. 21 He marrieth Zipporah. 22 Gershom is born. 23 God respecteth the cry of the Israelites.

AND there went [a]a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi.

2 And the woman conceived, and bare a son:[5] and when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she [b]hid him three months.

3 And when she [c]could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes,[6] and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

4 And his [d]sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

5 ¶ And [e]the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river side: and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

6 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. [f]And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children.

7 Then said his [g]sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.[h]

9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it.

10 And the child grew,[7] and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her [i]son. And she called his name Moses:[8] and she said, Because I drew him out of the water.

11 ¶ And it came to pass in those[9] days, when Moses was [k]grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he [l]spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

12 And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

13 And[m] when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

14 And he said, Who made thee a [n]prince and a judge over us? Intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses [o]feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now, when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses [p]fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of [q]Midian:[1] and he sat down [r]by a well.

16 ¶ Now the [s]priest of Midian had seven [t]daughters: and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses [u]stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.[2]

18 And[3] when they came to Reuel their [x]father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day?

19 And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? [y]call him, that he may eat bread.

Midian was the son of Abraham by Keturah; and the tribe which sprang from him became the dominant people in Arabia. They were nomads roaming over a wide region, but they had a permanent residence, or home, on the eastern border of Edom. Their pastures grounds extended as far as Gilead and Bashan on the north, and along both shores of the Elanitic Gulf on the south. Hence Horeb was said to be in the land of Midian, ch. 3:1, while it is said that Jethro left the camp of Israel at Horeb 'and went his way to his own land,' that is to the chief seat of his tribe on the east of Edom. P.

away, and another comes. Those who wax great or numerous should therefore remember their original meanness. Remarkable is the birth of God's promise when its full time comes. In two hundred and fifteen years Abraham's promised seed had increased to seventy persons: in as many more they are increased to about three millions. Services done to men are soon forgotten, but those done to God are had in everlasting remembrance. At the same time, God's kindness often sharpens men's cruelty. And to what horrid and savage barbarity their selfish designs often push them! But it is vain for devils or men to contend with the Lord. Their best-laid attempts against his designs will but promote their accomplishment: and God's church often thrives best in the fiery furnace of troubles, continued one after another. Let me therefore always depend on God; always obey God rather than man. Never let such as are barbarous themselves make me an instrument of their cruelty; for if I hide or help God's outcasts in the day of their distress, he is not unfaithful to forget my labour of love, and may perhaps repay me in kind.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. The man's name was Amram, of the family of Kohath, Levi's second son. The woman was Jochebed, of the same family. Miriam and Aaron, the brother and sister of Moses, were born before Pharaoh's cruel law was enacted. P.]

Ver. 2. She had born Miriam about ten and Aaron about four years before.

Ver. 6. Pharaoh's daughter knew this from her father's cruel edict, or from the beauty and circumcision of the babe.

Ver. 11. Being forty years old, Ac. 7. 23, and instructed by his parents and his God concerning his real kindred, he resolved to abandon the honours of the court, join himself to the oppressed people of God, and exert himself for their deliverance, He. 11. 24-26.

Ver. 14. Perhaps the contempt which the Hebrews now showed to Moses provoked God to defer their deliverance forty years, Ac. 7. 25.

Ver. 15. Pharaoh was enraged at Moses taking part with the Hebrews, and afraid of his heading them in a rebellion.

Ver. 14. [The act of Moses must be judged in the light of the times in which he lived, and the circumstances of his people. It cannot be fully justified, and it cannot be entirely condemned. Moses was trained in the court of a despot. He still retained the strongest feelings of love for his brethren. He saw one of them on the point of being murdered by the hand of a cruel Egyptian taskmaster. Moved by a generous impulse to save a brother, and roused to madness by a sense of wrong, he took the law into his own hand, as those occupying high places in the East are apt to do. Had Moses been the real, as he was the adopted, son of Pharaoh's daughter, he would have had nothing to fear; but being an Israelite, and acting beyond the bounds of justice on behalf of an Israelite, his own life was imperilled. P.]

Ver. 16. Reuel was a prince or priest of the true God among the Midianites, who dwelt along the coast of the east branch of the Red Sea; as Melchizedek was among the Canaanites, Ge. 14. 18: but whether he was the same with Jethro, and Hobab was his son, or whether Reuel was Jethro's father, and Jethro the same as Hobab, is not very evident, compare ch. 3. 1 with 18. 1, 27; Nu. 10. 29.

REFLECTIONS.—While wicked men exert themselves for the ruin of God's church, he is often preparing matters for her deliverance, though frequently his great works and his greatest instruments are apparently almost stifled in their birth. When God calls to it, it is becoming, with cheerfulness and confidence, to venture everything which concerns us on his providence. But strong faith in God ought always to be attended with the use of the most proper means which are in our power. It is easy for God to raise up friends to his distressed children among his principal enemies; or to find out methods for qualifying beforehand such as he intends for great work. And it is honourable for the greatest to observe and sympathize with the meanest in their adversities, and to be made the instrument of their relief: and where faith in and love to God duly 21 And Moses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses [z]Zipporah his daughter.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name [a]Gershom:[2] for he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

23 ¶ And it came to pass [b]in process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel [c]sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried; and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

24 And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his [d]covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

25 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God [e]had respect unto them.

3 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this [e]great sight, why the bush is not burned.

4 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, [f]Moses, Moses! And he said, Here am I.

6 Moreover he said, [i]I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses [k]hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

4 In the East the shoes are always taken off on entering mosque, church, or other sacred building; and even on entering rooms. Where a gentleman would take off his hat in England, an Eastern, whether male or female, would take off the shoes. To facilitate this operation loose over shoes are worn by the higher classes.—P. —— The eastern shoe, or sandal, was so constructed as to be easily removed, like the European slipper. In eastern countries, to take off the shoe, both in ancient and modern times, closely corresponds with the European custom of taking off the hat. 5 The impartiality of the sacred historian in recording his own infirmities, errors, and transgressions as this and the several succeeding verses peculiarly observes our attention. Moses narrates the various objections which he labored made to the divine call, and his presumption and obstinacy in adhering to them notwithstanding all that God understanded to say in reply. This openness and impartiality seems to be peculiar to the inspired writers, of which we have many examples, such as Samuel recording his own mistakes to the chosen of God in the family of Jesse, and the reproofs he received from God on that account; and, likewise, John the Divine states the great danger he was in of falling into idolatry by worshipping an angel, and the check he received from the heavenly messenger, as many others, which will occur to the mind of the attentive reader.

8 And I am [m]come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto [n]a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

9 Now therefore, behold, the [o]cry of the children of Israel is come unto me; and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

10 Come now therefore, and I will [p]send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And Moses said unto God, [q]Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?[5]

12 And he said, Certainly [r]I will be with thee: and this shall be a [s]token unto thee that I have sent thee; When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, [t]ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

13 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?

14 And God said unto Moses, [u]I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

15 ¶ And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, [v]The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my [w]memorial unto all generations.

prevail in the heart, no carnal consideration will deter such an one from joining himself to God's church and people. The sincerest kindness and friendship is frequently requited with abuse and contempt, and the strongest carnal affection quickly turned into murderous rage. But God regards even the affectionate design, and graciously provides a place of refuge for his persecuted friends and servants, where they may be safe and useful. No change of lot, no change of country, can make us lose the enjoyment of our God; nor deprive us of him as our reconciled God in Christ, to sympathize with us in, and bring us safely through, our most grievous afflictions.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. Horeb or Sinai was called the mount of God, as he at this time appeared on it, and soon after proclaimed his laws from it, ch. xix. xx. —[Horeb. Sinai and Horeb were the names of two eminences of the same mountain range. C.]

Ver. 2. This flame represented the awful majesty, perfect purity, and infinite power of God. The bush burning and not consumed, denotes the church of God, and particularly the Israelites, in their state debased, exposed, persecuted, and afflicted; but preserved by the presence and power of God, Jn. 16. 33; Ac. 14. 22; Ps. 46. 1–5. But perhaps it chiefly prefigured the Godhead as dwelling in the manhood of Christ; and the terrible execution of divine justice upon him, while he was preserved by his Godhead, and his Father's residence in him, Jn. 1. 14; Col. 2. 9; 1 Ti. 3. 16; Is. l. liii.; 2 Co. 5. 19, 21.· ]The Angel of the Lord. That God is essentially 'invisible' is the revealed doctrine of Scripture, 1 Ti. 1. 17, and, when his infinity is considered, must be the deduction of reason. Yet to deny God the power of rendering himself visible were to limit both his omnipotence and his wisdom. Nay, it were to deny to God the capacity that he has actually bestowed upon the spirit of man; which, though invisible to the eye, makes its presence, its will, and its excellence visible by spirit and action in a body. On this occasion God renders himself visible by a flame of fire, by speech, promise, and command; and this appearance is called 'the Angel of the Lord,' ver. 2; 'JEHOVAH,' and 'God,' ver. 4; and the 'God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,' and 'God,' ver. 6. Now, it is declared, Jn. 1. 18, 'No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared (educed) him.' Therefore, this manifestation of the invisible God was 'the WORD that was with God, and was God.' C.]

Ver. 5. The pulling off his shoes marked with what holiness, humility, and reverence we ought to approach unto God.—The ground was holy, was occasionally consecrated by the special manifestation of God thereon.

Ver. 6. God was the God of Abraham, &c. He was engaged to them by manifold promises, which he was now come to perform.

Ver. 7. I have seen, &c. I have kindly observed, mercifully regarded, and pitied their misery.

Ver. 8. I am about to manifest my infinite power and condescension in their deliverance.—A land flowing with milk and honey, is one abounding with necessary and agreeable productions.

Ver. 12. In the view of this solemn fellowship with me, encourage yourself to promote this deliverance.

Ver. 13. Which of these names should I use, that they may be most encouraged to expect the deliverance?· ]The names by which God revealed himself to his people in primeval times were descriptive of the attributes—of power, mercy, &c.—which he was about specially to manifest. At creation he was Elohim, the 'God of power;' to Abraham in a strange land he was El-Shaddai, 'God Almighty;' to Melchizedek he was El-Elyon, 'The Most High,' far above all other gods.

CHEOPS FROM THE MENA HOUSE—A TOMB STANDING WHEN THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL WERE IN EGYPT. [Exodus, ii:23.]—"And it came to pass, in process of time, that the king of Egypt died; and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God, by reason of the bondage." Cheops is the tomb of an Egyptian king by this name. This was not the king represented in the twenty-third verse of the second chapter of Exodus as dying, but Cheops was the second king of the fourth dynasty, and lived B. C. 3733. His name was found written in red ink upon the blocks of stone inside the pyramid. The four sides measure about 755 feet each. The height of the pyramid is now 451 feet, but it is said to have been originally 481 feet. This pyramid had been standing 2202 years when Moses was sent to deliver Israel. This is according to the calculation of Wallis Budge.

18 And they shall [c]hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath [d]met with us; and now let us go, we beseech thee, three[e] days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.[6]

19 ¶ And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, [f]no, not by a mighty hand.

20 And I will stretch out my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and [g]after that he will let you go.

21 And I will give this people [h]favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

22 But[i] every woman shall borrow[7] of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall [k]spoil the Egyptians.

8 Miracles were from the first the palpable evidences of a divine commission. Man had no means of directly testing the communication of the commission of prophet or apostle. He could not be expected to conduct it without satisfactory evidence. Hence God, in gracious condescension to human weakness, gave to his servants divine power, the exercise of which was to be the visible evidence of their divine commission.—P.

9 The faith of Moses is tried and exemplified in this first act of obedience. To grasp the serpent by the tail would have been the dictate of human experience and wisdom, as even the wiser animals that destroy serpents practise this method. But Moses obeys God without gainsaying and though he fled on his own impulse, he fearlessly seizes it by the tail on God's authority.—Note. We are not to combat sin and Satan by our own wisdom and plan, but by God's revealed command.—L.

4 And the Lord said unto Moses, [d]Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail.[9] And he put forth his hand and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand:

5 That [e]they may believe that the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

Moses now asked for a name that would represent the aspect in which God was about to appear to Israel. P.]

Ver. 14. I am that I am, I am the Fountain of being, eternally and unchangeably existing in, of, from, and by myself.—[Moses having asked God by what name he would declare him to the Israelites, God gives the name EHYEH, 'I am.' It signifies the self-existent, eternal, and immutable God. It signifies immutability exhibited especially in the fulfilment of promises after a long and almost hopeless interval. This was the character God was now about to manifest to the Israelites. Hence he said to Moses, 'EHYEH is what I am,' that is, 'EHYEH is my name:' —'Thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, EHYEH hath sent me unto you.' The translation in the English version of what is in reality a proper name obscures the sense. P.]

Ver. 15. This is my character, whereby I will be remembered, owned, and served by my people, and distinguished from all others.

Ver. 19. Notwithstanding manifold plagues inflicted on his kingdom, he will not let you go but by mere constraint.

Ver. 22. The word here rendered borrow signifies merely to ask: it was no sin thus to ask the Egyptians' property. God, the original and supreme proprietor of all things, commanded it. The Egyptians had forfeited their right by their wickedness, with respect to him. Hereby, too, he, as a righteous Judge, ordered payment of their wages to the Hebrews, who had been defrauded.—[Borrow. This statement has often become the butt of the infidel's arrow, on the ignorant supposition that the God of the Hebrews meditated, planned, and approved robbery, under pretence of borrowing. The passage obtains a triumphant defence upon two principles. 1. The word translated borrow, simply signifies to ask. 2. Let the objector reflect how long Israel had served Egypt, in a state of cruel and unremunerated slavery; and then say, were all the treasures of Egypt sufficient to pay them reasonable wages? He that buys a slave has some pretence (and but a pretence) to use him as his property, and render him nothing beyond food and raiment; but he that makes a freeman a slave, as Pharaoh did, has not even that pretence. Let it be farther remembered, that the Hebrews were, at this period, not merely field-labourers, but practical architects (ch. 5. 14), and accomplished artisans (ch. 31. 3–6; 35. 30–35); and the amount of wages due will be still farther increased, and the 'spoiling of the Egyptians' such an act of common justice as an upright judge, in modern times, would inflict upon any one refusing to pay his servant's wages. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—However long God seem to neglect, he will visit me at last. Let me therefore attend to my lawful calling, however mean, expecting his countenance in the way of my duty. If I desire solemn fellowship with him, let me retire from the world, and inquire into what he hath revealed. Let me always approach his presence with strong faith, holy awe, clean hands, and a pure heart. Let me, with joy and wonder, behold him as in Christ crucified, and as present in his church, to preserve her in her hottest troubles. Let me trust in him as my own and my father's God, and rejoice in the firmness and perpetuity of his new-covenant relations to us. Let me admire his mercy and wisdom in appearing for the salvation of his people, when they have given over looking for him; and let me firmly hope, that, whatever be the unworthiness of the object, the weakness of the instrument, or the wickedness or power of the opposer, the Lord will exactly fulfil the promises of his grace. O may I have this great I AM to do all for me, give all to me, and be ALL IN ALL unto me! May I in everything study to have his call cleared up and certified to me! May I receive my directions from him, what I shall say or do! May I labour after faithfulness in my work; and then, leaving it to the Lord, he will succeed my endeavours, and graciously reward me on their account; and the wrongs done to me in this world will be all rectified at last!

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 3, 4. This change of his rod signified that his ministry and miracles would be destructive as serpents to the Egyptians, but helpful and directive to the Hebrews. In like manner, his laws are to unbelievers a killing letter, a ministration of death, 2 Co. 2. 15, 16; 3. 6; but to believers a means of life, Gal. 3. 24.

Ver. 6, 7. This signified, that God, with the utmost ease and despatch, can change the form of our lot; and that it was by the power of God, not his own, that he wrought his miracles.

Ver. 9. This signified, that if the Hebrews should

EAST FROM THE PYRAMIDS OF GIZEH—A SCENE IN THE LAND WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL SPENT 430 YEARS. [Exodus, iv:19.]—"And the Lord said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life." To understand men we must study the land in which they grew up. The relation of Moses to the children of Israel, to the Exodus, and the civilization which the Hebrew people developed, was such that we cannot do better than consider him through Egypt, in which he spent the first forty years of his life. The fortunes of Israel were committed to the keeping almost wholly of Moses. Hence we shall illustrate his career by pictures of Egypt. Standing at the pyramids and looking east, we see the direction the children of Israel took when they left the land in which they had sojourned four hundred and thirty years. We see the back of the Sphinx, and in the distance in dim outline, trees which skirt the banks of the Nile.

or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? [f]have not I the LORD?

12 Now therefore go, and [m]I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

13 And he said, O my Lord, [n]send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt[3] send.

14 And the [o]anger of the LORD was kindled against Moses, and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can [p]speak well. And also, behold, he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

15 And thou shalt [q]speak unto him, and put words in his mouth: and I will be [r]with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do.

16 And he shall be thy [s]spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him [t]instead of God.

17 And thou shalt take this [u]rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

18 ¶ And Moses went and returned to Jethro his father-in-law, and said unto him; [x]Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, [y]Go in peace.

19 And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go,[z] return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life.

20 And Moses [a]took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt. And Moses took the [b]rod of God in his hand.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put in thine [c]hand: but I will [d]harden his heart,[4] that he shall not let the people go.

22 And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, [e]Thus saith the LORD, Israel is [f]my son, even my first-born:

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, I will [g]slay thy son, even thy first-born.

24 ¶ And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the LORD [h]met him, and sought to kill him.

25 Then Zipporah took a [i]sharp stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.[5]

26 So he let him go: then she said, A bloody husband thou art, because of the [k]circumcision.

27 ¶ And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the [l]mount of God, and [l]kissed him.[7]

28 And Moses [m]told Aaron all the words of the LORD, who had sent him, and all the signs which he had commanded him.

29 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the [n]elders of the children of Israel.

30 And Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and [o]did the signs in the sight of the people.

31 And the people [p]believed: and when they heard that the LORD had [q]visited the children of Israel, and that he had looked upon their affliction, then they [r]bowed their heads and worshipped.

CHAPTER V.

1 Pharaoh chideth Moses and Aaron for their message. 6 He increaseth the Israelites' task. 15 He checketh their complaints. 19 They cry out upon Moses and Aaron. 22 Moses complaineth to God.

AND afterward Moses and Aaron went in and [a]told Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Let my people go, that they may hold a [b]feast unto me in the wilderness.

2 And Pharaoh said, [c]Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go.[8]

3 And they said, [d]The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he [e]fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

[4] God's hardening of Pharaoh's heart has been a subject of much difficulty to some and of reproach to others. There is no room for either. The creditor who demands his own from a dishonest debtor can punctually explain the meaning of the phrase. So long as he makes no demand the debtor seldom thinks of him; when he makes the first demand he thinks of him with aversion—an aversion increased by every rejection of his claim, and when that claim is enforced by the strong arm of the law, the heart of the unjust debtor is often hardened into determined hatred. But is this hardening any crime in the creditor? None. Who then shall charge Jehovah with being the author of sin when the hardening of Pharaoh's heart arose from the just determination that he would let his people go?—C.

He knew it came from God, and he knew its cause. Zipporah also knew it; and probably because of what was on account of her objections that the rite had not been previously performed, she now on performing it uses the words here recorded. The word translated 'inn' signifies merely a resting or stopping place for the night. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Learn, my soul, never to be discouraged from present duty by former disappointments. God's promise is sufficient to balance all opposition. Let me accept of miracles recorded in God's word as the most convincing external proofs of a divine mission; and let me admire the kindness of God in so abundantly confirming the intimations of his will to mankind. Never should I excuse myself from the work to which God calls me, from any wickedness about others, or weakness in myself. God can make mountains his way, and qualify me as is necessary. Let me cheerfully connect the exercise of the gifts or graces which God hath given me in whatever order of precedence or subordination he pleaseth, employing them in the service he commands. But let no intended service of God render me undutiful to my relations; and, on the contrary, never let me fear men when I have a clear call from God to my work, and a promise of his presence to be with me in it. Meanwhile, let no distance from the public ordinances of God, and the fellowship of saints, cool my zeal for his worship. Never let fond indulgence of my earthly relations make me to neglect any part of God's institutions, or of my religious duty towards them; if I do so God will make me to smart for it in his time. Nay, it is better to part with relations for a time, than to have them an incumbrance to us in the service of God. Whatever knowledge, gifts, or grace God bestows upon me, it becomes me to improve them for the benefit of others, particularly of my fellow-labourers in the Lord; that with one mind, and one mouth, we may glorify God. But let my hopes never be too sanguine on the first promising appearances; for if grace do not really touch the heart, miracles themselves can produce but a temporary faith, a transient flash of religious affection.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—Let me here

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, Wherefore[f] do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get you unto your burdens.

5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

6 ¶ And Pharaoh commanded the same day the [g]taskmasters[7] of the people, and their [h]officers, saying,

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw[8] to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

8 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 Let there more work be laid upon the men,[9] that they may labour therein; and let them not regard [i]vain words.

10 ¶ And [j]the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

11 Go ye, get you straw where ye can find it:[1] yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw.

13 And the taskmasters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks,[2] as when there was straw.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's taskmasters had set over them, were beaten,[3] and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and to-day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore[k] dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

17 But he said, Ye are idle, ye are idle; therefore ye say, Let us go and do sacrifice to the LORD.

8 The brick pyramids at Dashoor and Faioum still contain straw that is not even yet discoloured. Such bricks were never burned in the fire, but merely dried in the sun; and, in a country where rain never falls, as is the case in some parts of Egypt, have endured unchanged for centuries.—C.

1 This cruel and oppressive mandate will not be rightly understood without alluding to the fact, that not only the stubble and the dry remains of grassy plants, which formed a substitute for straw, were frequently burnt up and entirely destroyed by hot winds, but that the grain with its straw was likewise consumed ere it was completely ripe for the sickle, and thus a scarcity prevailed to a greater or less extent almost every year.

2 Heb. a matter of a day in his day.

3 The task-masters were Egyptians, the officers Hebrews, as may be seen by comparing this account with ver. 16, 17, 21. Such beating of men in office is still common in China and Persia, and is not unfrequently applied even to the highest officers of state. It once did, and probably still does, prevail in some provinces of Russia.—Note, How great are the blessings of a government founded in Christianity, and not in force! C.—This is quite oriental. We need only allude to China, which has been aptly said to be governed by the stick. In Persia, also, the stick is in continual action. Men of all ranks and ages are continually liable to be beaten. It is by no means a rare occurrence for the highest and most trusted persons in the state, in a moment of displeasure or caprice in their royal master, to be handed over to the beaters of carpets, who beat them with their sticks as if they were rugs. The same practice descends through all ranks; and it has often made the writer's heart ache to see respectable and even venerable white-bearded men chastised by the menials and messengers of great persons, &c.—*Pict. 5 We read (Ge. 12. 8) that Abram called upon the name of JEHOVAH, that (Ge. 13. 4) Abram stirred, JEHOVAH ELOHIM: but, still more expressly to the point, we read, Ge. 15. 7, 'I am JEHOVAH that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees.' How, then, are we to reconcile these statements with the assertion in the text? Some translate the word 'know' by appropriate, but this will not solve the difficulty, for Abram did appropriate God by faith. Some translate the sentence interrogatively, and it will bear this form: but, by this change, no explanation is gained. Let us then seek the meaning of the passage in the word JEHOVAH itself. JEHOVAH means, he that IS, that always is, the unchangeable one. Now, the name 'Almighty God,' in which (Ge. 17. 1) Abram was called and encouraged, refers to power to protect—the attribute which Abram's defenceless condition most required him to seek for the support of his faith: but the name JEHOVAH—the unchangeable—refers to time, and therefore requires promise, and long experience of faithfulness, to illustrate and establish its evidence. Thus Abram had abundant evidence that God was almighty to defend and protect: but though his faith did not doubt, time did not allow him to test his unchangeableness: whereas now, when centuries of changing time, and of God's apparent 'slackness concerning his promise,' 2 Pe. 3. 9, had passed away, JEHOVAH, as the unchangeable, is made known to his people, and an attribute that time alone could develop, is that upon which God rests his chief claim to confidence and obedience.—C.

18 Go therefore now and work: for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in [l]evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not minish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

20 ¶ And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

22 ¶ And Moses [o]returned unto the LORD, and said, Lord, wherefore hast thou so evil-entreated this people? why is it that thou hast sent me?

23 For [p]since I came to Pharaoh to speak [q]in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; [r]neither hast thou delivered[4] thy people at all.

remark, that however poor and despicable the people of God may be on earth, he will acknowledge them, and in his own way plead their cause. The most presumptuous rebellion against God's will is founded in ignorance of him; and, while persecutors obstinately cleave to their wickedness, God's people ought to be peculiarly careful of offending him. It is no new thing for carnal men to look on religious worship as useless or hurtful, and to improve God's demands upon his people as a spur to their own cruelty: and cruel princes never want cruel agents to promote their barbarous purposes. In evil times God's ministers may expect a double share of abuse at all hands; and be blamed as the causes of distress, when they are but the innocent and dutiful occasions of it. But what a mercy is it that they have a God to go to with their complaints! Surely there is need to believe in hope against hope, since the heaviest trials may happen when we expect, and are even at the daybreak of, remarkable deliverances. Meanwhile, let me think of the bondage of heathenish and antichristian superstition, idolatry, oppression, and persecution, from which God hath delivered, and will deliver, his gospel-church. But how much more oppressive is the bondage of our natural and unregenerated state!—the bondage to a broken law, which demands the perfect performance of every duty, and yet denies all strength for that effect!—the bondage to divers lusts, which lade men with guilt, drown them in perdition, and pierce them through with many sorrows!—the bondage to this world, in minding nothing but carnal things!—the bondage of the fears of death and hell, which often render life a burden!—and the bondage to Satan, who goeth about seeking whom he may devour! Blessed for ever be the Lord, who hath sent a Saviour and a great One to deliver us! Dare not, my soul, to murmur against him, though fires should go before him, and it should be very tempestuous round about him. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.

8 The Septuagint and Syriac both read uncle's daughter.

9 Moses has here recorded the marriage of his father Amram with Jochebed and his own advent, and it appears from Nu. 26. 59, but it must be taken strictly for his father's own sister, at least by the half blood. The marriage was afterward forbidden as incestuous, Lev. 18. 12, which might be looked upon as a blot upon his family, though it took place before that law; and that Moses does not conceal it, for he sought not his own praise, but wrote with a sincere regard to truth, whether it smiled or frowned upon him.

1 Aaron is here mentioned first as he was older than Moses. It is, however, usual in Scripture, as in the case of Shem, Abraham, and others, to name a younger brother first when there is any peculiarly excellent trait in his character; and thus we find Moses is generally mentioned before Aaron.

3 There is abundant evidence in Scripture that whenever God had a great work to accomplish in his church or in the world, he selected a great agent to do it. In sublimity of genius, legislative wisdom, and administrative skill, Moses has never been surpassed. He had besides a very special training for the work to which he was specially called. He had forty years' training in the court and in the schools of Egypt, then the most enlightened nation in the world. Afterwards he had another forty years' training to nomad life in the wilderness of Sinai; and he there became intimately acquainted with the habits of those whose home was the desert, and with every fountain and pasture ground throughout that wide region where the Israelites wandered so long.—P.

patriarchs by this his name Jehovah, which denotes his self-existence, necessary existence, self-sufficiency, independency; and his being not only Being itself, but also the effectual and eminent giver of being to his promises and creatures; nor had he given actual being to his promises in the remarkable fulfilment thereof.—[The name by which God specially and personally announced himself to the patriarchs was El-Shaddai, 'God Almighty;' and by that name were expressed the peculiar development and visible evidence of his presence. Hence it is said, 'I appeared unto Abraham, &c., by God Almighty.' Then it is added, 'but by my name JEHOVAH was I not called to them;' that is, 'I did not announce to them that as my name.' It is not said they did not know it; it is not said they had never heard it; it is simply affirmed that JEHOVAH was not the name by which God declared himself orally to the patriarchs; nor was it by the peculiar mode of development expressed by that name he manifested himself. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—In our greatest extremity, God often interposes for our relief; and the hardest work is easily effected when he puts his hand to it. If his mighty arm of mercy or judgment be stretched out, when he begins he will make an end. Certain is that deliverance for which the character, the covenant, the pity, the purpose, and the power of God are all engaged; and yet the objects thereof, through anguish of spirit, or through his delay of performance, put his

FROM THE ANCIENT EMPIRE MUSEUM—CONTAINING ANTIQUITIES OLDER THAN THE TIME OF ABRAHAM. [Exodus, vi: 27.] "These are they which spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt." The Ancient Empire of Egypt includes the first eleven dynasties. It closed B. C. 2533. The children of Israel were in Egypt during the Middle Empire, which lasted from B. C. 2533, when Se ĕneh-ka-Rā was king, to B. C. 1300, when Seti was king. This last king of Egypt is thought to have been the Pharaoh of the Exodus. In the Gizeh Museum the statues and antiquities are arranged in different rooms under empires. The empire to which this illustration belongs antedates that of Moses by many centuries. But in the study of the ancient land of Egypt we must remember that its history is a connected whole, and that the Ancient Empire made possible the Middle Empire. The parties who secured the pictures illustrating this Bible were shown great courtesy by E. Bengsch Bey, and were permitted to take photographs of anything found in the Gizeh Museum.

the LORD, when I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them.

6 And Moses and Aaron did [t]as the LORD commanded them, so did they.[5]

7 And Moses was [k]fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

9 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, Show a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, Take thy [l]rod, and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

10 And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so [m]as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

11 Then Pharaoh also called the [n]wise men and the sorcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they[o] also did in like manner with their[p] enchantments:[7]

12 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents:[8] but [p]Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

13 And he [q]hardened Pharaoh's heart,[9] that he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh's heart is hardened, he refuseth to let the people go.

15 Get thee unto Pharaoh in the [r]morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water; and thou shalt stand by the river's brink against he come; and the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, [s]the LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in the wilderness; and, behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this thou shalt [t]know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, and they shall be turned to [u]blood.

18 And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the Egyptians shall [v]loathe to drink of the water of the river.

19 [w] And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, [x]Take thy rod, and stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all their [y]pools of water, that they may become blood; and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.[1]

20 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all [z]the waters that were in the river were turned to blood.[2]

21 And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink of the water of the river; and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

22 And[b] the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; as the LORD had said.

23 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, neither did he set his [c]heart to this [3]also.

24 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river.

25 And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.[4] strong consolations from them. The frowardness of gospel-hearers makes ministers despair of success with others, and repeat the excuses which God hath already answered, till he charge them, on their peril, to obey his appointments. O the perverseness of the human heart, and its enmity against God! Before he calls, what numbers run unsent! When he calls to his service, what averseness to comply!—Whatever my pedigree be, whether honourable or ignominious, let me reckon it my chief honour to be God's child, and to be made useful in doing good to souls.—Let me, without gainsaying, obey his voice, and provoke him not; and though my work be difficult or dangerous, as my days are, so shall my strength be.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1. Moses was a god to Pharaoh: he dealt with him in the name and authority of God, and punished his disobedience with plagues which none but God could inflict.

Ver. 6. They manifested the noblest courage in speaking to or dealing with proud Pharaoh, and the most exact fidelity in the execution of all God's commands.

Ver. 12–22. Whether the magicians imposed upon the sight of the spectators by artfully conveying away the rods, and putting serpents in their places; or whether Satan actuated the rods, and made them appear as serpents; or whether, for the hardening of Pharaoh, God himself effected this change, is hard to determine. It was more easy to impose upon spectators in turning the water into blood, or in bringing up frogs. But it is manifest, that all which the magicians did increased the plagues, but could not remove them; and that the swallowing up of their rods by Aaron's, and their inability to produce lice, proved that Moses' miracles were effected by a power infinitely superior to what they had in command.

REFLECTIONS.—How great is the condescension of God, in putting some of his honour upon sinful men, and in speaking to us by them, that his dread may not make us afraid! But, amidst trials and discouragements, ministers have need to be fully satisfied that, whatever contradiction they meet with, God will do right by their work, both in them that are saved and in them that perish. Happy those who know the Lord to be God by his fulfilment of promises to them: but miserable indeed are they who know him to be God by the execution of his justice upon them! The contest between Almighty God and the strongest worms of mankind is greatly unequal: let the potsherds strive with the potsherds of the earth; for, if men will not bow before the sceptre of his grace, they must break beneath the rod of his judgment. But, in mercy, God often warns before he punishes them. Sinners frequently desire to see miracles, not for their conviction, but to strengthen their unbelief. And readily is Satan permitted to harden such in their sin by his lying wonders. Through his influence men harden themselves against warnings, against judgments and deliverances; and whatever other shifts they try for relief, they will not so much as cry to God when he bindeth them. But the cause of God and truth shall prevail at last, and reign without contradiction: and dreadful shall be the just miseries of them who oppressed his people and contemned his admonition!

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—How terrible an enemy is God, who, even by frogs, flies, and lice, can subdue the most proud and potent of his

2 And if thou refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with frogs:

3 And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up, and come into thine house, and into thy bed-chamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy kneading-troughs:[3]

4 And the frogs shall come up both on [b]thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.[4]

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and the [c]frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt.

7 And[d] the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

8 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, [e]Entreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I [f]will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, Glory[5] over me:[6] when shall I entreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, to destroy[7] the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

10 And he said, To-morrow.[8] And he said, Be it according to thy word; that thou [g]mayest know that there is none like unto the LORD our God.

11 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

12 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses [h]cried unto the LORD because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

13 And the LORD did [i]according to the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land [k]stank.

15 But when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he [l]hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become [m]lice[9] throughout all the land of Egypt.

17 And they did so; for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and it became lice in man and in beast; all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

18 And the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they [n]could not: so there were lice upon man and upon beast.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is the [o]finger of God. And Pharaoh's heart was [p]hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, (lo, he cometh forth to the water,) and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, [q]Let my people go, that they may serve me:

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send [r]swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses; and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms[1] of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

22 And I will [s]sever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou [t]mayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth.

23 And I will put a division[2] between my people and thy people: to-morrow[3] shall this sign be.

24 And the LORD did so: and [u]there came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt; the land was corrupted[4] by reason of the swarm of flies.

25 ¶ And Pharaoh called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

26 And Moses said, [x]It is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice the [y]abomination[5] of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

27 We will go three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as [z]he shall command us.

28 And Pharaoh said, [a]I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: [b]entreat for me.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will entreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: but let not Pharaoh [c]deal deceitfully any more, in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

4 Had not God commanded Moses to threaten Pharaoh and the Egyptians with the plague of frogs before its infliction, the unusual increase of this unpitying reptile would doubtless have been attributed to some other cause. It is not absolutely certain whether the frog were an object of worship or of abhorrence in Egypt, possibly of both; as in other instances where religious ablutions was offered from sentiments of terror; and if so, they were punished as well by what they venerated as by what they abominated.

9 The Septuagint, Origen, and Jerome translate the word muscam canem, an insect which from its habits is known to be insufferably galling. Josephus, supported by the Jewish rabbis, renders the word lice, a species of vermin, of which the Egyptians, from their singular attention to cleanliness, were peculiarly abhorrent. Others think it was the Avarus sanguisugus, or greedy bloodsucker, a small tick which buries itself in the flesh of both man and beast, and this is countenanced by the phraseology of ver. 17. The Egyptian impostors could not imitate this miracle, because the plague was on themselves already, and therefore they are obliged to have been caused by the finger of God alone; and Pharaoh, aware of their former chicanery in so often attempting to deceive him, refuses to believe them, looking upon the miracle as a mere temporary triumph of Jehovah. It is farther to be observed that this plague, unlike the former two, was inflicted without any previous warning, so that James and Jannes could make no preparation, and being taken unawares, acknowledged the finger of God, not because they honoured him, but to hide their own defeat. That this was the real state of the case is rendered still more probable from their continued attempt to "stand before Moses," recorded in ch. 9. 11.—C.

5 That is, not what the Egyptians abominated, but what Moses, as a worshipper of the true God, called an abomination, because idolatrously worshipped by the Egyptians. But why does Moses employ such an offensive term to Pharaoh? Because if Pharaoh was an idolater, it was the duty of Moses to bear testimony against idolatry. The bull and the cow are the animals chiefly meant, both of which a Hebrew would have sacrificed, and an Egyptian most abjectly worshipped. That the Egyptians would have stoned the Hebrews, as Moses affirms, had they sacrificed a cow, is well illustrated by the fact, that, in after years, they put a Roman citizen of rank to death for killing a cat another of their gods—though they exceedingly dreaded the power of Rome, and anxiously courted her favour.—C.

human opposers;—can force them to their prayers, and to feigned compliances with his will! Great indeed is his power who can, at his pleasure, restrain Satan and his agents; and marvellous his kindness to his people, in distinguishing them from their fellow-sinners of mankind, and hiding them from common calamities under the shadow of his wings. But, alas! how quickly unrenewed hearts return to their wickedness; and reigning lusts break through every bond, and render men

RAMESÉS II., OR RAMESES THE GREAT—THE KING WHO OPPRESSED THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL. [EXODUS, IX: 1.]—"Then the Lord said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saveth the Lord God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me." We give a photograph of this Pharaoh, who oppressed the Children of Israel. He was the king of Egypt who led to the exodus under the leadership of Moses. His mummy was discovered at Thebes in 1881. Rameses II. was a great warrior, builder of treasure cities on which the Israelites worked, as we are taught in Exodus i:2, and was "a new king, who knew not Joseph." He built temples, obelisks and cities. His body now lies embalmed as we see it along with the kings of Egypt, in the Gizeh Museum. How wonderful that to-day we can behold the features of a very king whose name carried such terror to the people 3500 years ago! Besides this mummy of Rameses II., there are many statues of him still in Egypt.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and entreated the LORD.

31 And[d] the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people: there remained not one.

32 And Pharaoh [e]hardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.[4]

CHAPTER IX.

1 The murrain of beasts. 8 The plague of boils and blains. 13 His message about the hail. 22 The plague of hail. 27 Pharaoh sueth to Moses. 35 but is still hardened.

THEN the LORD said unto [a]Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

2 For if [b]thou refuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still,

3 Behold, the [c]hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels,[5] upon the oxen, and upon the sheep: there shall be a very grievous murrain.

4 And the LORD shall [d]sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed a set [e]time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and [f]all[6] the cattle of Egypt died; but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

7 And Pharaoh sent, and, behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And the[g] heart of Pharaoh was hardened,[7] and he did not let the people go.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, [h]Take to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven[8] in the sight of Pharaoh;

9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be a [i]boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

10 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil[9] breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast.

11 And the magicians [k]could not stand before Moses because of the boil: for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.[1]

[4] The only request before Pharaoh now was permission to go three days' journey to sacrifice. Moses tacitly yielded to Pharaoh's injunction not to go very far away. After giving a solemn promise the king recklessly, and without excuse, violated the promise. His guilt was thus aggravated.—P.

[5] Camels were in ancient times very numerous in Judea, and over all the East. Job had at first three thousand camels, and after the days of his adversity had passed away, six thousand camels; and it appears from Ge. 12. 16, that camels were among the presents of Pharaoh to Abraham.

[6] If all the cattle died, how are the cattle threatened in ver. 19? Is this a contradiction? No. The answer is plain. The interval between the two miracles is not mentioned; and as the cattle of the Hebrews were preserved in the former plague, the Egyptians, in the meantime, had, by purchase, possessed themselves of a new stock.—C.

Hence, not only the presiding deity, but the elements themselves, were adored; consequently the present judgment was a formidable attack upon their vain and pernicious confidence.

[6] Here we have a picture of the awful devastation and ruin this storm of hail produced: notice is however taken of the land of Goshen being preserved from receiving any damage by the plague. God directs the clouds, and causes rain or hail on one city and not on another, either in mercy or judgment. The effect is said on Pharaoh is marked and striking. The haughty monarch humbled himself to Moses in the language of a penitent. No man could have indeed spoken better. He owns his wrongs, and the equity of God's proceedings against him, and yet, as was seen in the sequel, his heart remained hardened all the while; for those who grow no better under mercies and enlargements frequently get worse.

12 And the LORD [l]hardened[2] the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

13 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up [m]early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

14 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon [n]thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou [o]mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.

15 For now I will stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be [p]cut off from the earth.

16 And in very deed for [q]this cause have I raised thee up,[3] for to show in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

17 As yet [r]exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

18 Behold, to-morrow about this time, I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail,[4] such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

19 Send[s] therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field: for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

20 He that [t]feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

21 And he that [u]regarded not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven,[5] that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt, [v]upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent [w]thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt [x]since it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.[6] impudently presumptuous and scandalously perfidious! Let me, with Moses and Aaron, be bold and faithful in every point in the service of God! neither fearing the wrath of kings nor the opposition of devils: and let me always be ready to pray for mine enemies when I have any encouragement to it, any hopes of their change of heart, or of a blessing from the Lord upon them.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 6. The Hebrew word rendered 'all' does not in every case and necessarily signify all absolutely. It is frequently used just as the word all is now used in common conversation—to express the idea of a very great number, or a very large proportion. In interpreting both written and spoken language regard must be had to the usus loquendi. P.]

Ver. 24. [The description shows that it was a terrific thunderstorm, accompanied by a heavy fall of hail. In other countries such a storm might have been natural; in Egypt it was miraculous. Besides, it was predicted: and this of itself would show it to have been a miracle. P.]

REFLECTIONS. — God can execute the most numerous, diversified, and extensive judgments upon such as hate him. He can easily make what we have idolized, whether our cattle, our bodies, or our fields, the immediate objects of our punishment; and how severe is the punishment which he hath laid up in store for such as have been most instrumental in deceiving and hardening others! Satan can delude men into sin, but he cannot preserve them from suffering. And in absolute wisdom, God overrules the devices of wicked men, and often their works are made to redound

26 Only[a] in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

27 ¶ And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, [b]I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

28 Entreat[c] the LORD, (for it is enough,) that there be no more [d]mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I [e]will spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that [f]thou mayest know how that the [g]earth is the LORD's.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will [h]not yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax and the barley was smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was boiled.

32 But the wheat and the rye[6] were not smitten: for they were [7]not grown up.[8]

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail [i]ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And [k]when Pharaoh saw that the rain, and the hail, and the thunders, were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken [l]by Moses.

9 Not fewer than ten different names are given to the locust in the sacred volume; every one of which, after the manner of the Hebrew nouns marks some distinctive character or peculiar effect. It is called arbe or arbeh, from its extraordinary fecundity; gob or gobee, from the circumstance of their young once ceasing from the ground; yarom, from the root garar, to cut off or spoil; and more destructive and insatiable spoilers were never let loose on the surface of the earth.

4 The locust is a creature akin to the cricket and grasshopper. The great brown locust is about three inches in length, has two antennæ or feelers of almost an inch long, projecting from the head, and two pair of wings. When they migrate from the place of their birth in the great African and Asiatic deserts, they always follow a leader, and appear in such immense flocks as to darken the air. In whatever country they settle, they devour all the produce of the earth; and though 'the land be before them as the garden of Eden, behind them it is a desolate wilderness.' Bochart enumerates ten species, differing in size and habits, but all agreeing in voracity. Their irruptions are frequent into many countries of Africa and Asia, and are not unusual in the southern parts of Europe, especially in Spain. When the locust-clouds appear, the consternation of the inhabitants of agricultural districts is extreme; and loud noises, fires, and even artillery, are employed to keep them on the wing, for when they once descend hope of deliverance is over.—Note, How weak is a mighty monarch, and a mighty nation, when they contend with God, seeing they are unable to conquer an insect!—C.

5 Heb. hastened to call.

5 And they shall cover the face[1] of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and they shall eat the [g]residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field.

6 And they shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; [h]which neither thy fathers nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

7 ¶ And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be a [i]snare unto us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God. Knowest thou not yet that Egypt is [k]destroyed?

8 And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God; but who are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, [l]We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go: for we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you,[2] as I will let you go, and your little ones: [m]look to it; for evil is before you.

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. [n]And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

13 And Moses stretched forth his rod[3] over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an [o]east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night; and, when it was morning, the east wind brought the [p]locusts.

14 And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were they; before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

15 For[q] they covered the face of the whole earth,[4] so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

16 ¶ Then Pharaoh called[5] for Moses and to the praise of the glory of his justice. Though men may sport with his judgments, the justice of the Almighty will most certainly overtake them, and fall most heavily on those who remain under the power of a proud hell-hardened heart; which neither warnings, however express, nor judgments, however terrible, can impress. But happy are they who have God for their friend and refuge! Effectual fervent prayer to him is the most powerful antidote against trouble, and under it the surest help and consolation.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 15. This description of the advent and ravages of the locusts is exceedingly graphic. I had an opportunity of witnessing one terrible invasion of locusts. They first appeared like a yellowish mist dimming the brightness of the sun; gradually the mist grew thicker until the sun was completely obscured. Then a whirring sound was heard, and became so deep Aaron in haste; and he said, [r]I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

17 Now therefore [s]forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and entreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me this death[t] only.

18 And he went out from Pharaoh, and [u]entreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and cast them into the [v]Red sea; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

20 But [w]the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be [x]darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt.[5]

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days:

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place, for three days:[6] but[a] all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

24 ¶ And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only [b]let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your little ones also go with you.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give us also sacrifices and burnt-offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

26 Our[c] cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind: for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and we[d] know not with what we must serve the LORD, until we come thither.

27 ¶ But the LORD [e]hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, [f]Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more: for in that day thou seest my face thou shalt die.

29 And Moses [g]said, Thou hast spoken well; I will see thy face again no more.

CHAPTER XI.

1 God's message to the Israelites to borrow jewels of their neighbours. 4 Moses threateneth Pharaoh with the death of the first-born. 9 Pharaoh is still hardened.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: when he shall let you go, he shall surely [a]thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man [b]borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 And the LORD [c]gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover, the man Moses was [d]very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.[7]

4 ¶ And Moses said, [e]Thus saith the LORD, [f]About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt:

5 And all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the first-born of the maid-servant that is [g]behind the mill; and all the first-born of beasts.

6 And there shall be a [h]great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 But against any of the children of Israel [i]shall not a dog[8] move his tongue, against man or beast; that ye may know [k]how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

8 And all these [l]thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me,

[a] Some have rendered this 'darkness which cannot to feel,' but the correction as it stands is sufficiently intelligible, and although it is difficult, perhaps impossible, to account for the partial Egyptian darkness, it was the will of God in this instance it should be so drawn as to make a distinction between the Egyptians and the Israelites.

[b] Lightfoot, in his comments on the latter clause of Ps. 105. 28, 'and they rebelled not against his word,' conceives the language to allude to Israel, who in this plague of darkness performed some special act of obedience, and that upon inquiry will be found to have been the undergoing circumcision, and that there was a general circumcision in Egypt, appears from Jos. 5. 2–9. It would appear, therefore, that God closed up Egypt in three days' darkness, and in horror, that they might not take an opportunity of injuring the children of Israel while suffering under this rate.

[7] The meaning and force of this verse ought to be noted. It assigns two reasons for the profound liberality of the Egyptians to the Hebrews: 1. God gave his people favour; and 2. The power of Moses was seen and acknowledged to be paramount. Nothing was beyond his reach. By a word he could destroy in a moment the fruits of the field, the cattle, the industry, and even the life of man. The Egyptians fearing his power were willing to propitiate him with any sacrifices however costly.—P.

Yet the dog was a god with the Egyptians. Anubis, the dog god, was worshipped, and had temples and priests, and Cynopolis, the modern Minieh, was built to his honour. The announcement of Moses, that 'not a dog shall move his tongue against man or beast,' was therefore an expression of righteous contempt for the Egyptian idolatry, as well as a prophetic assertion of the uninterrupted exodus of Israel.—Note. When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him. and penetrating that the whole air and earth seemed to tremble, and a sense of fear instinctively crept over one. Soon afterwards the locusts began to alight, and in a few hours the ground was covered with them. For three days the cloud swept over Damascus, and then they lay on the earth in some places to the depth of five and six inches. Every green thing was eaten up—grass, grain, flowers, foliage, and even the tender bark of trees. The houses, courts, and streets of the city were filled with them. It was impossible to keep them off the person: they crawled over back and head, and face and hands. In walking through the streets, and even in the rooms of the houses, one crushed several at every step. P.]

Ver. 19. The sea which runs along the east of Egypt is called the Red Sea, either from the colour of the weeds in it; or, rather, because it anciently belonged to the Edomites, Ge. 25. 30, for Edom signifies red.

REFLECTIONS.—Let me, with holy awe, observe, that God intends the judgments which he executes as standing memorials of his supreme power and authority over all creatures, and of his victorious power over the kingdom of Satan, in restraining the malice and chastising the insolence of his and his people's enemies. But there is nothing for which God more readily quarrels with men than for their pride. Whole nations are often ruined through the pride and obstinacy of their governors: and when Satan has got sinners to the brink of ruin, he exerts all his might in pushing them down headlong. The early engagement of children in the service of God is exceedingly contrary to the inclinations and interests of Satan and his agents. But the proudest contemners of God's messengers will be obliged to stoop to them at last. Professions of repentance, extorted by punishment, are but hypocritical, and quickly issue in more obstinate relapses into wickedness: but such as baffle manifold convictions may expect to be given up to such hardness of heart, that nothing but the power of hell will impress or awaken their conscience. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much: it often, for a time, diverts the just rewards of God from his insolent enemies. The wicked need not therefore hasten the godly from among them; for if once a full separation be made, the former will be irrecoverably and inexpressibly miserable, and the just judgment of God will no longer tarry.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 3. Moses was very great; was much honoured, as one who could bring upon them fearful judgments, and remove them at his pleasure.

Ver. 4. I will go out; manifest my powerful and just purpose in an eminent and extensive manner.

Ver. 7. They shall not meet with the smallest opposition or disturbance in their departure from Egypt.

Ver. 8. Moses' great anger manifested his detestation of Pharaoh's incurable obstinacy, and represented the terrible displeasure of God against him.

Ver. 10. [Out of his land. The refusal of liberty to emigrate is one of those infringements of natural rights that will be clearly comprehended by the inhabitants of free states; and when it is recollected that Moses was instructed merely to ask time and liberty for the worship of God—that is, liberty of conscience—the picture of Egyptian bondage is complete. Yet is not the history of Pharaoh's oppression an accurate emblem of that more cruel tyranny which sin exercises over unconverted men? 'Whosoever committeth sin is the servant (bond-slave) of sin.' Lord, let the Son make us free, then we shall be free indeed! C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How extensive is the justice of God! When life is over the consequences of our saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow[m] thee; and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in [n]a great anger.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [o]Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you; that my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh: and the LORD [p]hardened Pharaoh's heart,[7] so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

1 The beginning of the year is changed. 3 The passover is instituted. 11 The rite of the passover. 15 The days of unleavened bread. 29 The first-born are slain. 31 The Israelites are driven out of the land. 37 They come to Succoth. 43 The ordinance of the passover.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying,

2 This [a]month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you.[8]

3 ¶ Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall [b]take to them every man [c]a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house:[9]

4 And if the household be [d]too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it, according to the number of the souls; every man according to his eating shall make your count for the lamb.

5 Your lamb shall be [e]without blemish, a male[f] of[g] the first year; ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats.

6 And ye shall [h]keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the [i]whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it [k]in the evening.

7 And they shall [l]take of the blood, and strike it on the two side-posts, and on the upper door-post, of the houses wherein they shall eat it.

8 And they shall [m]eat the flesh in that night roast[n] with fire, and [o]unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but roast with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

10 And ye shall let [p]nothing of it remain until the morning; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.

11 ¶ And thus shall ye eat it; [q]with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste: it is the [r]LORD's passover.

12 For[s] I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the [t]gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the LORD.

13 And [u]the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.

14 And this day shall be unto you for a [z]memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD throughout your generations: ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever.

15 ¶ Seven[y] days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, [z]that soul shall be cut off from Israel.

16 And in the first day there shall be an [a]holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you; no [b]manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done of you.

17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for in this self-same day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance [c]for ever.

18 In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.[1]

19 Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, even that soul shall be [d]cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened: in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.[2]

[a] ch.13.4. De.16.1.

[8] The time of their deliverance from Egypt became to the Israelites the commencement of a new era in a double sense: —1. The month Abib was constituted the first month of their sacred year, by which all religious festivals were regulated. 2. The year of the exodus was made the first of an epoch from which years were afterwards counted, as may be seen in Ex.16.1. Nu.1. 1,33.38. 1 Ki.6.1.—P.

The 'house of father's,' or rather 'father's house,' was, as has been stated, ch. 6. 14, not what we would understand by a family, but a subdivision of a tribe or clan — an ancestral house, in fact, in the modern acceptation. —P.

[1] The passover was celebrated in the confusion of the fourteenth day of this month, just before the beginning of the fifteenth day. For the Israelites, when the morning, when the Israelites, immediately after they had eaten the lamb, were hastened out of Egypt, was not part of the fourteenth day, but of the fifteenth; as we read, Nu. 32. 3. —P.

[d] See ver.15.

[2] It would seem from the whole current of the narrative that these general instructions were given by Moses to the Israelites at the beginning — probably on the very first day—of the month. They had therefore full time not only to prepare for the festival, but also to prepare for the exodus. The people were organized. The orders were carried speedily to every tribe and house; and the chiefs of each section saw them carried out.—P.

deeds come upon us in exact proportion to their sinfulness. Of this the guilty sinner has now warning; may the goodness of God lead him to repentance; lest his righteousness be manifested in his awful judgment! Meanwhile, by increasing his strokes of wrath, he can force men to fulfil his gracious purposes and kind promises to his people, if they refuse to do it willingly; and will make his children perfectly safe, even in the midst of their enemies. Nay, he will effectually redress the grievances and repay the wages of his people in his own time and manner, and maintain the honour of his faithful servants, in despite of whatever hell and earth can do to oppose them! But what a bitter grief to the ministers of Christ is the hardness and obstinacy of sinners against the Lord and his Christ! And when sin is the object of our indignation, we may be angry and sin not.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 2. The month Abib, which nearly corresponds to our March, was the seventh of the common year among the Egyptians and others, all along, I suppose, from the creation; but was made the first of the Jewish sacred year now established by God, according to which the ceremonial festivals were to be regulated: but they continued to reckon by the ancient year in their civil matters; and even the years of jubilee and release began, in the ancient manner, about September, as then the crop was entirely off the ground.

Ver. 3. The taking of the lamb four days before the time prevented their neglect, and stirred them up to the consideration of, and faith in, their approaching deliverance.

Ver. 4. Every family of these, so joined together, paid their respective share of the lamb's price.

Ver. 6. The lamb was killed between three o'clock in the afternoon and sunset.

Ver. 8. The bitter herbs were endive, succory, wild lettuce, thyme, or the like.

Ver. 9. The word rendered raw signifies not thoroughly roasted. It was to be roasted all in one piece.

Ver. 10. They were to leave none of it, lest the Egyptians should abuse it, or themselves make a superstitious use of it.

Ver. 11. These circumstances imported their holding themselves in readiness to leave the country, and march off as the Lord's freemen; but these, as well as the taking of the lamb on the tenth day of the month, seem to have been required only with respect to the first celebration.

Ver. 14. This feast was to be a joyful commemoration of their deliverance, observed every year, and during the whole period of the ceremonial dispensation, until the death of Christ, thereby prefigured.

Ver. 15–21. The feast of unleavened bread immediately succeeded the passover. The holy convocation, on the fifteenth day of the month, commemorated their departure from Egypt; and that on the twenty-first commemorated their passage through the Red Sea, by which their wonderful deliverance was completed. —— [Ver. 15. Let it be recollected that the passover furnishes 21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the [a]elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out, and take you a lamb, according to your families, and kill the passover.

22 And[f] ye shall take a bunch of hyssop,[2] and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side-posts with the blood that is in the bason; and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

23 For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel and on the two side-posts, the LORD will [g]pass over the door, and will not suffer the [h]destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons [i]for ever.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land [k]which the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that [l]ye shall keep this service.

26 And[m] it shall come[3] to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service?

27 That ye shall say, It is the [n]sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people [o]bowed the head, and worshipped.

28 And the children of Israel went away, and [p]did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

29 ¶ And[q] it came to pass, that at midnight the LORD [r]smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne, unto the first-born of the captive that was in the dungeon; and all the first-born of cattle.

30 And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was a [s]great cry in Egypt: for there was not a house where there was not one dead.[3]

[3] Only those who have had opportunities of witnessing the wild exhibitions of intense grief in the East, consequent on sudden bereavement, can fully realize the statement 'there was a great cry in Egypt.' The moment a death occurs in a household the female members, and all females who may be present, sprinkle themselves with water, and then throw dust or ashes over their persons; immediately after which they raise in concert a shrill cry or shriek which is heard over the whole neighbourhood. This is often continued for an hour or more—shriek after shriek filling the air. Imagine these shrieks raised in every house of every city, village, and hamlet in the country, and then some conception may be formed of that 'great cry.'—P.

[8] The apparent contradiction between this verse and Ge. 15. 13, where the period of predicted affliction in a strange land is said to be 400 years, will evanish by the following comparison:—From Abram's entrance into Canaan to the birth of Isaac, 25 years; Isaac at the birth of Jacob was 60, Jacob at going down to Egypt was 130, making 215 years—then Jacob's children remained in Egypt 215 years more, thus making up the statement given, viz. 430 years. Again, Abram immediately after entering Canaan, rested at Shechem, only for a very short period, whence he removed to Bethel, and thence 'journeyed, going on still towards the south,' till, probably in the very first year after his call, famine compelled him to go down into Egypt, to sojourn there. Now, as Abram would personally be called an Israelite, he would, in this sense, be called also one of the children of Israel, whose sojourning in Egypt, commencing with his going down, and closing with their bringing up, gives us the complete period of 430 years. The prediction in Ge. 15. 13 is 400 years, i.e. a period not less than that.—C.

32 Also [u]take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone, and [x]bless me also.

33 And the Egyptians were [y]urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, We be all dead men.[4]

34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their kneading-troughs[5] being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

35 And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; and [z]they borrowed[6] of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment.

36 And the LORD [a]gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they [7]lent unto them such things as they required: and they spoiled the Egyptians.

38 And [c]a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because they were [d]thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

one of the most glorious titles of Christ, as it is written, 1 Co. 5. 7, 'Christ our PASSOVER is sacrificed for us,' and then we will be prepared to see, in this history, an accurate type of many things concerning him. A few of the most remarkable we shall notice. (1) Egypt, ver. 1, the land of bondage, is the emblem of that slavery and oppression of sin in which Christ finds every man whom he delivers. (2) The new commencement of the sacred year sets forth (ver. 2) that 'newness of life' to which the believer is called, and in which he walks. (3) The Lamb without blemish (ver. 3, 5) furnishes another of Christ's titles, Jn. 1. 29; 1 Pe. 1. 10; Re. 5. 6-8, 12, 13, &c. The Lamb, as the first sacrifice, Ge. 4. 4, aptly sets forth him who, in the purpose of God, and in types and prophecies, is the 'Lamb slain from the foundation of the world,' Re. 13. 8. (4) The blood (ver. 7, 23), sprinkled on the posts of the lintel, but not on the threshold of the door, portrays that blood which is not to be 'trodden under foot,' He. 10. 29. (5) The unleavened bread, ver. 8 (bread uncombined with any yeast or barm), is the emblem of that 'sincerity and truth' with which Christ must be served, 1 Co. 5. 8. (6) Bitter herbs, ver. 8 (as medicinal beyond what are sweet), set forth the renewing and healing power of Christ, while they remind us of that bitterness of repentant recollection with which the believer contemplates his past sin. Thus 'Peter went out and wept bitterly,' Mat. 26. 75. (7) The loins girded, ver. 11, that is, the tucking up of every loose and flowing robe under the girdle, removing its obstruction to movement, sets forth the necessity of 'laying aside,' in the Christian life, the 'sin that doth most easily beset (or entangle) us,' He. 12. 1. (8) The shoes on the feet, contrary to the custom in the East, where the feet at table were bare (see Lu. 7. 38; Jn. 13. 5), indicate the necessity of every spiritual defence against the asperities of the way in which the believer must walk. (9) The staff in the hand—a living hand grasping, and a living man borrowing, support from a dead material, aptly sets forth the aid which a living faith receives from lifeless ordinances; whilst the haste of eating forcibly reminds us, that in all concerns of the soul, we must 'haste and delay not to keep God's commandments,' Ps. 119. 60. C.]

Ver. 27. As offered to God, and attended with the shedding and sprinkling of blood, the passover was a sacrifice; but as received and eaten by men, it was also a sacrament.—The Israelites bowed their heads in token of their thankful acknowledgment of God's favours, and cheerful submission to his laws and ordinances.

Ver. 38. [It is not said that the whole people were first assembled, with their children, flocks, herds, and goods, at Rameses; and that they set out from thence in a regular and dense column. The whole current of the narrative is opposed to any such theory. There was a large council or assembly of representative men with Moses at the capital; but the vast body of the people were in their houses throughout Goshen, or in their tents with their cattle on the adjoining desert; and there they ate the passover, and from thence they set out directly. P.]

Ver. 40. These four hundred and thirty years are to be reckoned from the call of Abraham to leave his native country, Ge. 11. 31; 12. 1–5; during the first half of which he and his promised seed sojourned in Canaan, and the other half they dwelt in the land of Egypt, Ge. 15. 13; xlvi.—[I prefer to take the statement in its plain and literal sense, that the Israelites observed of all the children of Israel in their generations.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover; There [a]shall no stranger eat thereof:

44 But every man's servant [b]that is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof.

45 A [c]foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof.

46 In [m]one house shall it be eaten: thou shalt not carry forth ought of the flesh abroad out of the house; [n]neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

47 All[o] the congregation of Israel shall keep it.

48 And when [p]a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his [q]males be circumcised, and then[9] let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

49 One [r]law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you.[1]

50 [s]Thus did all the children of Israel; [t]as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

51 And it came to pass [u]the self-same day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their [v]armies.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 The first-born are sanctified to God. 3 The memorial of the passover is commanded. 11 The firstlings of man and beast are set apart to God. 17 The Israelites go out of Egypt, and carry Joseph's bones with them. 20 They come to Etham. 21 God guideth them by a pillar of a cloud, and a pillar of fire.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Sanctify[a] unto me all the first-born, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast;[2] it is mine.

3 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, [b]Remember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of bondage; for by [c]strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place: there shall no [d]leavened bread be eaten.

4 This[e] day came ye out, in the month Abib.

5 And it shall be, when the LORD [f]shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, that [g]thou shalt keep this service in this month.

6 Seven[h] days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD.

7 Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee; neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.

8 And [i]thou shalt show thy son[3] in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt.

9 And it shall be for a [k]sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the LORD's law may be in thy mouth: for with a [l]strong hand hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt.

10 [m]Thou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in his season from year to year.

11 ¶ And it shall be, when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, as he sware unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee,

12 That[n] thou shalt set apart[4] unto the LORD

2 In remembrance of the destruction of the first-born of Egypt, both man and beast; and of the preservation of Israel and their deliverance out of bondage by means of that judgment, the first-born males of the Israelites must be solemnly presented and dedicated to the Lord, and a price was appointed to be paid for their redemption. actually remained in Egypt 430 years. The difficulties that beset this view, especially in regard to the recorded genealogical table of the tribe of Levi, may be overcome by supposing that all the individuals are not mentioned, but only such as were men of note. REFLECTIONS.—Come near, my soul, and behold what the Lord hath wrought for Israel! He had multiplied them amidst cruel bondage and murder; he had protected them amidst ruinous plagues: and now, after a solemn feast, he brings them forth with wealth, with honour, in health, in peace, in order, and in due time! Behold what things he who sitteth on the throne makes new! A new year; new festivals; new liberties; a new nation to himself! Behold how their enemies push them into liberty; how they enrich them; and what a mixed multitude take part with them in their journey! Behold the care with which God distinguishes his people from the rest of the world! But chiefly behold God's great work of the redemption of mankind, through the blood of his Son! O the strong hand! the stretched-out arm! the grace! the mercy! the compassion! the wisdom! the justice! the exact fidelity to his promise, which appears in this! How are violated commandments, enraged devils, and mighty lusts made to let the ransomed of the Lord depart into liberty! With what spiritual wealth, what spoils of principalities and powers, nay, unsearchable riches, and righteousness, they come forth! In what high honour, spiritual soundness, peace, and order, they are brought from heathenism or Popery; nay, from their natural state of bondage and death in trespasses and sins; and all in the precise time of love, the day of espousals, the hour of grace, appointed of the Father! And how marvellously JEHOVAH here makes all things new. A new thing is created on the earth—a virgin brings forth a child whose name is IMMANUEL, God with us! A new testament is ratified in his blood! a new covenant is confirmed with many! a new gospel period, a year of God's redeemed, is introduced! new festivals on the flesh and blood of his Son! new liberties! freedom indeed, for those who are made heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ! a new church of Jews and Gentiles, purified by his oblation, a peculiar people to himself zealous of good works! But what a mixed multitude of empty professors attend and plague the church in every reformation on earth! What a multitude of remaining lusts and infirmities attend the choicest saints till they get to the Canaan above! In this passover-feast, let me behold how Jesus, the all-excellent, the mighty, the unblemished Son of God, who was set up from everlasting, and promised and typified four thousand years, in the fulness of time assumes our nature, partakes of flesh and blood, obeys the law, and suffers the most exact and tremendous justice of God, without being crushed, broken, or ruined;—and all this that he might be our all-sufficient and everlasting covert from the wrath of God;—might be the means of destruction to sin, Satan, and death, for us;—and might, with unfeigned faith, sincere love, and bitter grief for sin, be fed upon by us, in holy fellowship, as the sweet, the heart-cheering, supporting, and strengthening food of our soul, by which we are enabled to go up from this evil world towards our everlasting inheritance in the Canaan above! And, blessed be the Lord, we, strangers and foreigners, sinners of the Gentiles, are admitted to feast on him, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of God, while the Jewish children of the kingdom reject him! In their feast of unleavened bread may I not discern Jesus' state of debasement on earth? his week fulfilled in holiness, in sorrows, and in sufferings, on the first day of which he assumed his holy manhood, was gathered with sinners, but without sin; and on the last of which he made his life a ransom for all? May I not discern the pure but afflicted state of the gospel-church in her apostolical and millennial periods, noted for holy vocations of men to the Lord? May I not discern the festival-week of the Christian life, spent in purity and pressures, and noted for its first day of conversion to Christ, and its last of departure, to be with him for evermore? Let me in it feed upon him as the incorrupted nourishment of my soul, carefully avoiding and detesting the leaven of malice, hypocrisy, error, or corrupt practices! Let me in it improve Jesus, as the blessed first-fruit unto God which sanctifieth all my enjoyments, the cause and token of my deliverance into the glorious liberty of the gospel!

TOMB OF JOSEPH—NEAR WHERE CHRIST TALKED WITH THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA. [Exodus xiii:19.]—"And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him; for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you." So we have pointed out to us to-day the tomb of Joseph about a mile and a half south of Shechem, on the parcel of ground purchased by Jacob. It stands at the eastern entrance to the valley between Mount Gerizin and Mount Ebal. Jews, Samaritans, Christians and Mohammedans agree on the identity of this sacred place. The tomb is about six feet long, four feet high, covered with ordinary plaster, as are the Moslem graves of the country. It is about a mile from Jacob's well. It is well to remember that the Mohammedans respect Old Testament characters as do the Christians.

all that openeth the matrix, and every firstling that cometh of a beast which thou hast; the males shall be the LORD's.

13 And[p] every firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb;[3] and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and all[p] the first-born of man among thy children shalt thou redeem.

14 And it shall be, when thy [q]son asketh thee in time to come,[4] saying, What is this? that thou shalt say unto him, By [r]strength of hand the LORD brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage:

15 And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would hardly[s] let us go, that the LORD slew all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both the first-born of man and the first-born of beast: therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the first-born of my children I redeem.

16 And it shall be for a [t]token upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes: for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, [u]Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they [x]return to Egypt:

18 But God [y]led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red sea. And the children of Israel went up [z]harnessed[5] out of the land of Egypt.

19 And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, [a]God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you.

20 ¶ And [b]they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness.[6]

[5] The word may be rendered harnessed, in array, or by fives. We accept the last translation. Against it it has been alleged that the Hebrews formed into a column of five in breadth, would have required a line of march of 20 miles. But why should they march in one single column? Why not rather in twelve columns, requiring a line of barely four miles? Our reasons for preferring the translation by fives to harnessed is simply this;—five is the ordinary average of a family; and though some are fewer, more more, yet the arrangement into columns of five in breadth would finally keep families of cognates together. The importance of this arrangement to the oversight, protection, and morals of children must at once be apparent.—C.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 God instructeth the Israelites in their journey. 5 Pharaoh pursueth after them. 10 The Israelites murmur. 13 Moses comforteth them. 15 God instructeth Moses. 19 The cloud removeth behind the camp. 21 The Israelites pass through the Red Sea, 23 which drowneth the Egyptians.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that they [a]turn and encamp before [b]Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.[7]

3 For Pharaoh will [c]say of the children of Israel, They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And I [d]will harden Pharaoh's heart,[8] that he shall follow after them; and I will be [e]honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; [f]that the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

5 ¶ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and [g]the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him.

7 And he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 And [h] the LORD hardened[9] the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and the children of Israel went out [i]with an high hand.

9 But the Egyptians [k]pursued after them, (all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and tion of the Hebrews' first-born, when he destroyed those of the Egyptians, gave him a peculiar right to them.

Ver. 9, 16. Their exact observation of these feasts, and the dedication of their firstlings, together with the repeated explication of the meaning thereof to their children, would make their deliverance from Egypt as fresh and evident to them and their seed as a thing hung or written in their foreheads.

Ver. 13. Unclean firstlings were either to be redeemed, or else killed, that they might not be put to any other use than for the Lord. [From Nu. 18. 15 we learn that 'the firstlings of unclean beasts' were to be redeemed; but in this passage we find an alternative, viz. breaking the neck in the case of the ass. By referring to the fourth commandment we find that the ox and the ass are alone enumerated as the representatives of the clean and unclean beasts; and hence we may infer, that as the firstling of the ass might either be redeemed with a lamb or destroyed, so a like rule of redemption or destruction might be applied to the firstlings of all other unclean animals.—Note, (1) Infidels have cavilled against this law, as an alleged instance of cruelty. But will these infidels refuse to put an animal to death to satisfy the demand of their natural appetite? They will not refuse. How then dare they to accuse God, when he orders an animal to die, to teach avarice to sacrifice its property to him that bestows it all? (2) This law of redemption or destruction is expressively symbolic of the state of the unclean sinner: he must be redeemed by the 'blood of the Lamb,' or he must be destroyed with 'everlasting destruction.' C.]

Ver. 17. The Philistines, who had originated from Lower Egypt, Ge. 10. 13, 14; and dwelt in the south-west corner of Canaan, were a numerous, valiant, and fierce nation, whom the Hebrews, unarmed, and quite dispirited by their long bondage, durst not have encountered.—['The way of the land of the Philistines' was the route direct along the coast of the Mediterranean from El-Arish to Gaza. There the Israelites would have been exposed during the second or third day's march to an attack from the whole forces of the Philistines, then the most powerful nation of Canaan. P.]

Ver. 18. [The Hebrew word hamushim, here translated 'harnessed,' occurs only four times in the Bible, and its real meaning is uncertain. It would seem however that in this place it signifies 'marshalled,' or 'ranged in order.' Reference is of course made to the leading men assembled at Rameses, and who went out under Moses. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Never forget, O my soul, the great things which God has done for his church, or for thyself, in his common or special providence! Let me carefully observe every mean of keeping them fresh on my mind; and let me teach them diligently unto my children, that they may hear and fear the Lord for their good. What the Lord marvellously brings to me, or preserves for me, let me cheerfully surrender to his service, at his call. The life he rescues from imminent danger is doubly obliged to be devoted to his service; and they who truly love God will readily serve him with the best they have. But if troubles and difficulties attend my path, conscious of my weakness and folly, let me trust in him who proportions his people's trials to their strength, and look up to him for direction in all my ways. In this pillar of cloud and fire I discern God's special care and protection of his people. Even while clouds and darkness are round about him, justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne, and mercy and truth go before his face. Do I not behold Jesus likewise given to be an ever-attending light and leader, as well as protector and glory, to his people in this wilderness world? Let me always follow his direction and example; so shall I, in due time, arrive safe at the promised Canaan which is above. And, though the way in which he leads me be very contrary to the will and wisdom of the flesh, let me rest assured that it is a right one to the fulfilment of all his glorious promises of grace and glory.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 15. '[9]speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward.' The miserable his horsemen, and his army,) and overtook them encamping[1] by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

10 ¶ And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were [m]sore afraid: and the children of Israel cried out unto the LORD.

11 And [n]they said unto Moses, Because there were no graves[8] in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?[9]

12 Is[o] not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? for it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, [p]Fear ye not; stand still, and see the salvation [q]of the LORD, which he will show to you to-day: for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to-day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 The LORD shall [r]fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace.

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Wherefore [s]criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel,[1] that they go forward:

16 But [t]lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it; and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

17 And I, behold, I will harden[2] the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the Egyptians shall [u]know that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 ¶ And the [v]angel of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed, and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them:

20 And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was a [w]cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

21 ¶ And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to [x]go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

22 And [y]the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.[3]

23 ¶ And the Egyptians [z]pursued, and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

24 And it came to pass, that in the [a]morning-watch the LORD [b]looked unto the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled[4] the host of the Egyptians,

25 And[5] took off their chariot-wheels,[6] that they drave them heavily: so that the Egyptians said, Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD [c]fighteth for them against the Egyptians.

26 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [d]Stretch out thine hand over the sea, that the waters may [e]come again upon the Egyptians, upon their chariots, and upon their horsemen.

27 And Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the [f]sea returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it: and the LORD [g]overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.

28 And the waters [h]returned, and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them: there remained not so much as [i]one of them.

29 But the children of Israel [m]walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

30 Thus the LORD saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel [n]saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea-shore.

31 And Israel saw that great work[7] which the LORD did upon the Egyptians: and the people [o]feared the LORD, and believed the LORD, and his servant Moses.

depression of the Israelites will be best understood by recollecting that, though more numerous than the Egyptians, they had submitted to have their male children drowned. Had such a people been led directly into Palestine, a march of but a few days, the warlike inhabitants, unless prevented by a sweeping miracle, would immediately have attempted to extirpate or enslave them; and to avoid either, the Hebrews, in desponding cowardice, would have returned to Egypt. God mercifully leads them to a distance from their enemies, and, by that distance, prevents any sudden occasion to return.—Note, God seldom or never leads the young convert into immediate trial of his faith, hope, love, or patience. There is often also a wonderful estrangement between a new convert and his former acquaintances. He is led away from them, lest in weakness he should return to them. It is not until 'prepared to endure hardness,' the soldier of the cross is called to 'fight the good fight of faith.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God frequently musters up difficulties in the way of his people, that his glory may appear in subduing and helping over them. Often he turns the pride and malice of his enemies and their prosperity, to the advancement of his cause; while, with blind infatuation, they quickly repent of their best deeds, and rush forward, in their hatred of God and his people, till they find no place for repentance of their wickedness! What necessity there is to set out in the Lord's way with much strong faith, assured hope, and holy courage, as in it we may lay our account with many and great perplexities and troubles! Such as escape out of a sinful world may expect a hot pursuit from the devil and his servants: but he that brings us out with a high hand can bear us up with everlasting strength. In straits let me therefore never dare to chide my deliverer, or to think of returning to my bondage, but in patience possess my soul, hoping for his salvation. What he does I know not now, but I shall know hereafter. Sedateness in danger is the most likely mean to extricate myself out of it; and to encourage my heart in God is the way, not only to remove my fears, but to surmount my difficulties. However dangerous and dark the path may be, if I go forward God will take care of the event; and while the darkness of sin leads down to the darkness of eternal death, the light of grace will conduct me to eternal life and light in glory. What a present help is God in trouble! But how tremendous a foe! who can stand before him if once he be angry! Certain is their fall at last who are found fighting against God. If the Lord has delivered me from so great a death,

TOMBS OF THE CALIPHS—DESCENDANTS OF THE ANCIENT PHARAOHS. [Exodus, xiv:23.]—Here we have a view of the Tombs of the Caliphs, built in the time of the Mameluke princes. These tombs extend along the east side of the city of Cairo. Each formerly had an endowment and a staff of sheiks and attendants who lived near them. About the beginning of the present century the properties belonging to these tombs were confiscated, while the families who made their means of subsistence attending to them were left without employment. This picture helps us to see the tombs, as they look in modern times, of the Caliphs, who, in the respect that they were rulers in Egypt for a time, were the descendants of the ancient Pharaohs. These tombs are now falling into decay, and the attendants who once kept them continue to live among their ruins and beg travelers for backsheesh.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Moses' song. 20 Miriam and the women join in it. 22 The people want water. 23 The waters at Marah are bitter; a tree sweeteneth them. 27 They remove to Elim.

THEN sang [a]Moses and the children of Israel this song[6] unto the LORD, and spake, saying, I will sing unto the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

2 The LORD is [b]my strength and song, and he is become my [c]salvation: he is [d]my God, and I will prepare him an [e]habitation; my father's God, and I will [f]exalt him.

3 The LORD is [g]a man of war: the [h]LORD is his name.

4 Pharaoh's[i] chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea; his chosen captains also are drowned in the Red sea.

5 The depths have covered them: they sank into the bottom as [k]a stone.

6 Thy[l] right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath dashed in pieces the enemy.

7 And in the [m]greatness of thine excellency thou hast overthrown them that rose up against thee:[n] thou sentest forth thy wrath, which consumed them [o]as stubble.

8 And with the [p]blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together, the floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

9 The enemy said, [q]I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them: I will draw my sword; my hand shall destroy[7] them.

10 Thou didst [r]blow with thy wind, the sea covered them: they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 Who[s] is like unto thee, O LORD, among the gods?[8] who is like thee, [t]glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?

12 Thou stretchedst out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

13 Thou in thy mercy hast [u]led forth the people which thou hast redeemed; thou hast guided them in thy strength unto [w]thy holy habitation.

[i] The evidence for the exodus and passage of the Red Sea is most complete. 1. The institution of the passover in commemoration of the exodus can be assigned to no other period. 2. The Divine inspiration of Moses proved by his miracles, and the abundant fulfilment of his prophecies. 3. The continued murmuring and rebellion of the people: had Moses exaggerated or falsified in this, the imposition must immediately have been detected. 4. Though the narrative of Moses rests its credibility on his own character and activities, yet human evidence is abundantly, though unintentionally, furnished. Justin, a heathen historian, distinctly notices the exodus; and Diodorus Siculus, another heathen, relates a very old tradition of the miraculous dividing of the Red Sea, leaving its bottom for some time dry, and then returning to its usual bed.—C.

[1] Near the spot where the Israelites passed through the sea, on the Asiatic side, are a few brackish fountains, still called Ayun Mûsa, 'Fountains of Moses.' Two days' march from them towards Sinai is another fountain called Howdra'a, 'Destruction,' the water of which is intensely bitter. This is doubtless Marah.—P.

14 The[v] people shall hear, and be afraid: sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.

15 Then the [z]dukes of Edom shall be amazed; the mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them: all the inhabitants of Canaan shall [a]melt away.

16 Fear and dread shall fall upon them: by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still as a stone, till [b]thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt [c]bring them in, and plant them in [d]the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in, in the sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

18 The LORD shall [e]reign for ever and ever.

19 For the [f]horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and the LORD brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 ¶ And Miriam the [g]prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a [h]timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.

21 And Miriam [i]answered them, Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

22 ¶ So Moses brought Israel from the Red sea;[9] and they went out into [k]the wilderness of Shur: and they went [l]three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

23 ¶ And when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called [m]Marah.[1]

24 And the people [n]murmured against Moses, saying, [o]What shall we drink?

let my heart, not for a while only, but for ever, be kindly impressed with his mercy; and rejoice that Jesus has delivered, and will deliver, his church in spite of all her enemies.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1. Several of the verbs in this song, relating to their past deliverance, are of the future tense in the original Hebrew, to intimate that it was but an earnest of many similar ones to the Jewish nation, and especially to the gospel-church and her true members, Jos. vi.–xxi.; Ju. 3. 10, 30; 4. 16; vii. viii.; 11. 33; 1 Sa. 7. 10–13; 11. 11; 14. 13–23; 17. 51, 52; 2 Sa. v. viii. x.; 2 Ch. xiv. xx.; Ezr. i. ii.; Es. viii. ix.; Ac. ii.–xix.; Re. 6. 13–17; xv.–xix.

Ver. 2. God is, and gives to his people, strength, and matter of joy and praise.—Moses foresaw that God would have a peculiar dwelling among the Jews in his tabernacle or temple.

Ver. 3. God is a man of war, as he powerfully protects his people, and executes judgment upon their enemies.

Ver. 7. By manifold, glorious, and marvellous works, God manifested his own infinite perfections.—He consumed the Egyptians as stubble, easily, suddenly, utterly.

Ver. 8. The strong wind which God raised made the waters to stand as still, on either side of the passage, as if they had been mountains of ice.

Ver. 11. Holiness is, as it were, the beauty, comeliness, and glory of the Godhead, and every particular excellency of it; and the very perfections and works for which God is to be praised are awful, and to be revered.

Ver. 13, 17. Canaan was a mountainous country, and is called God's inheritance, sanctuary, and holy habitation; because, for one thousand five hundred years of the typical dispensation God chose it for the special residence of his worship and service.

Ver. 14–16. All the nations about heard of God's delivering his people, and destroying the Egyptians; and then, but especially afterwards, when the Israelites approached their territories, they were filled with terror and dread.

Ver. 20, 21. Perhaps Miriam is here called the sister of Aaron, rather than of Moses, because she lived mostly with Aaron. She and her companions seem to have repeated the whole song after Moses and his brethren.

Ver. 24. To murmur against God is to conceive unworthy and hard thoughts of his nature, word, or works; or to utter them with our tongue.

Ver. 25. God there proved their faith and obedience, and published his statutes, promising them future favours on condition of their obedience.—[The waters were made sweet. The bitter well of Howara is said to answer geographically to the position of Marah. And were we certain of their identity of themselves, and were we acquainted with the composition of the water, we might be enabled to judge whether the infusion of any wood might chemically effect a precipitation of the bitter ingredients. But if the 'sweetening' of the

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The Israelites come to Sin, and murmur for want of bread. 4 God promiseth them bread and flesh from heaven. 13 Quails and manna are sent. 16 The ordering of the manna. 27 It was not to be found on the sabbath. 32 An omer of it is preserved.

AND they [a]took their journey from Elim; and all the congregation of the children of Israel came unto the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt.

2 And the [b]whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness:

3 And the children of Israel said unto them, Would[c] to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the [d]flesh-pots, and when we did eat bread to the full! for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with [e]hunger.[2]

4 ¶ Then said the LORD unto Moses, [f]Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather [g]a certain rate every day, that I may [h]prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.

5 And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall [i]prepare that which they bring in; and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily.

6 And Moses and Aaron said unto all the children of Israel, At even, then ye shall know that [k]the LORD hath brought you out from the land of Egypt.

7 And[l] in the morning, then ye shall see the [m]glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD:[3] and what are we, that ye murmur against us?

8 And Moses said, This shall be, when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and what are we? your murmurings are not [n]against us, but against the LORD.

9 And Moses spake unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, Come near [o]before the LORD: for he hath [p]heard your murmurings.

10 And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD [q]appeared in the cloud.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 I[r] have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel; speak unto them, saying, [s]At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and [t]ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, that at even [u]the quails[4] came up, and covered the camp; and in the morning the [v]dew lay round about the host.

14 And when the [w]dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoar-frost on the ground.

15 And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, [x]It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, [y]This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat.

16 ¶ This is the thing which the LORD hath

2 A whole month was spent between Rameses and Sin, though only eight stations are named, and only ten days' actual march recorded. The encampment 'by the sea,' mentioned in Nu. 33. 11, is omitted here. The 'wilderness of Sin' is a dreary desert plain, covered with gravel and flint, lying along the eastern shore of the Red Sea. Its desolate aspect naturally had a depressing influence on the minds of the Israelites; and besides, the stock of provisions which they had brought with them from Egypt was now in all probability exhausted. Hence their bitter complaint and murmurs.—P.

4 The quail is a migratory bird of the gallinaceous kind. That commonly known in Europe is about the size of a lark; but there is a much larger kind, well known in Arabia and the adjoining countries. That the word translated quails does not mean locusts, as some have supposed, but some species of birds, is evident from Ps. 78. 27, where they are called feathered fowls. The season of this event was the spring, at which time these birds migrate from Asia to Europe; yet was not the miracle the less, for the miraculous lay not in the event itself, which might have been what is called accidental, but in the prophecy announcing it, which none but one inspired of God could possibly have foreseen.—C.

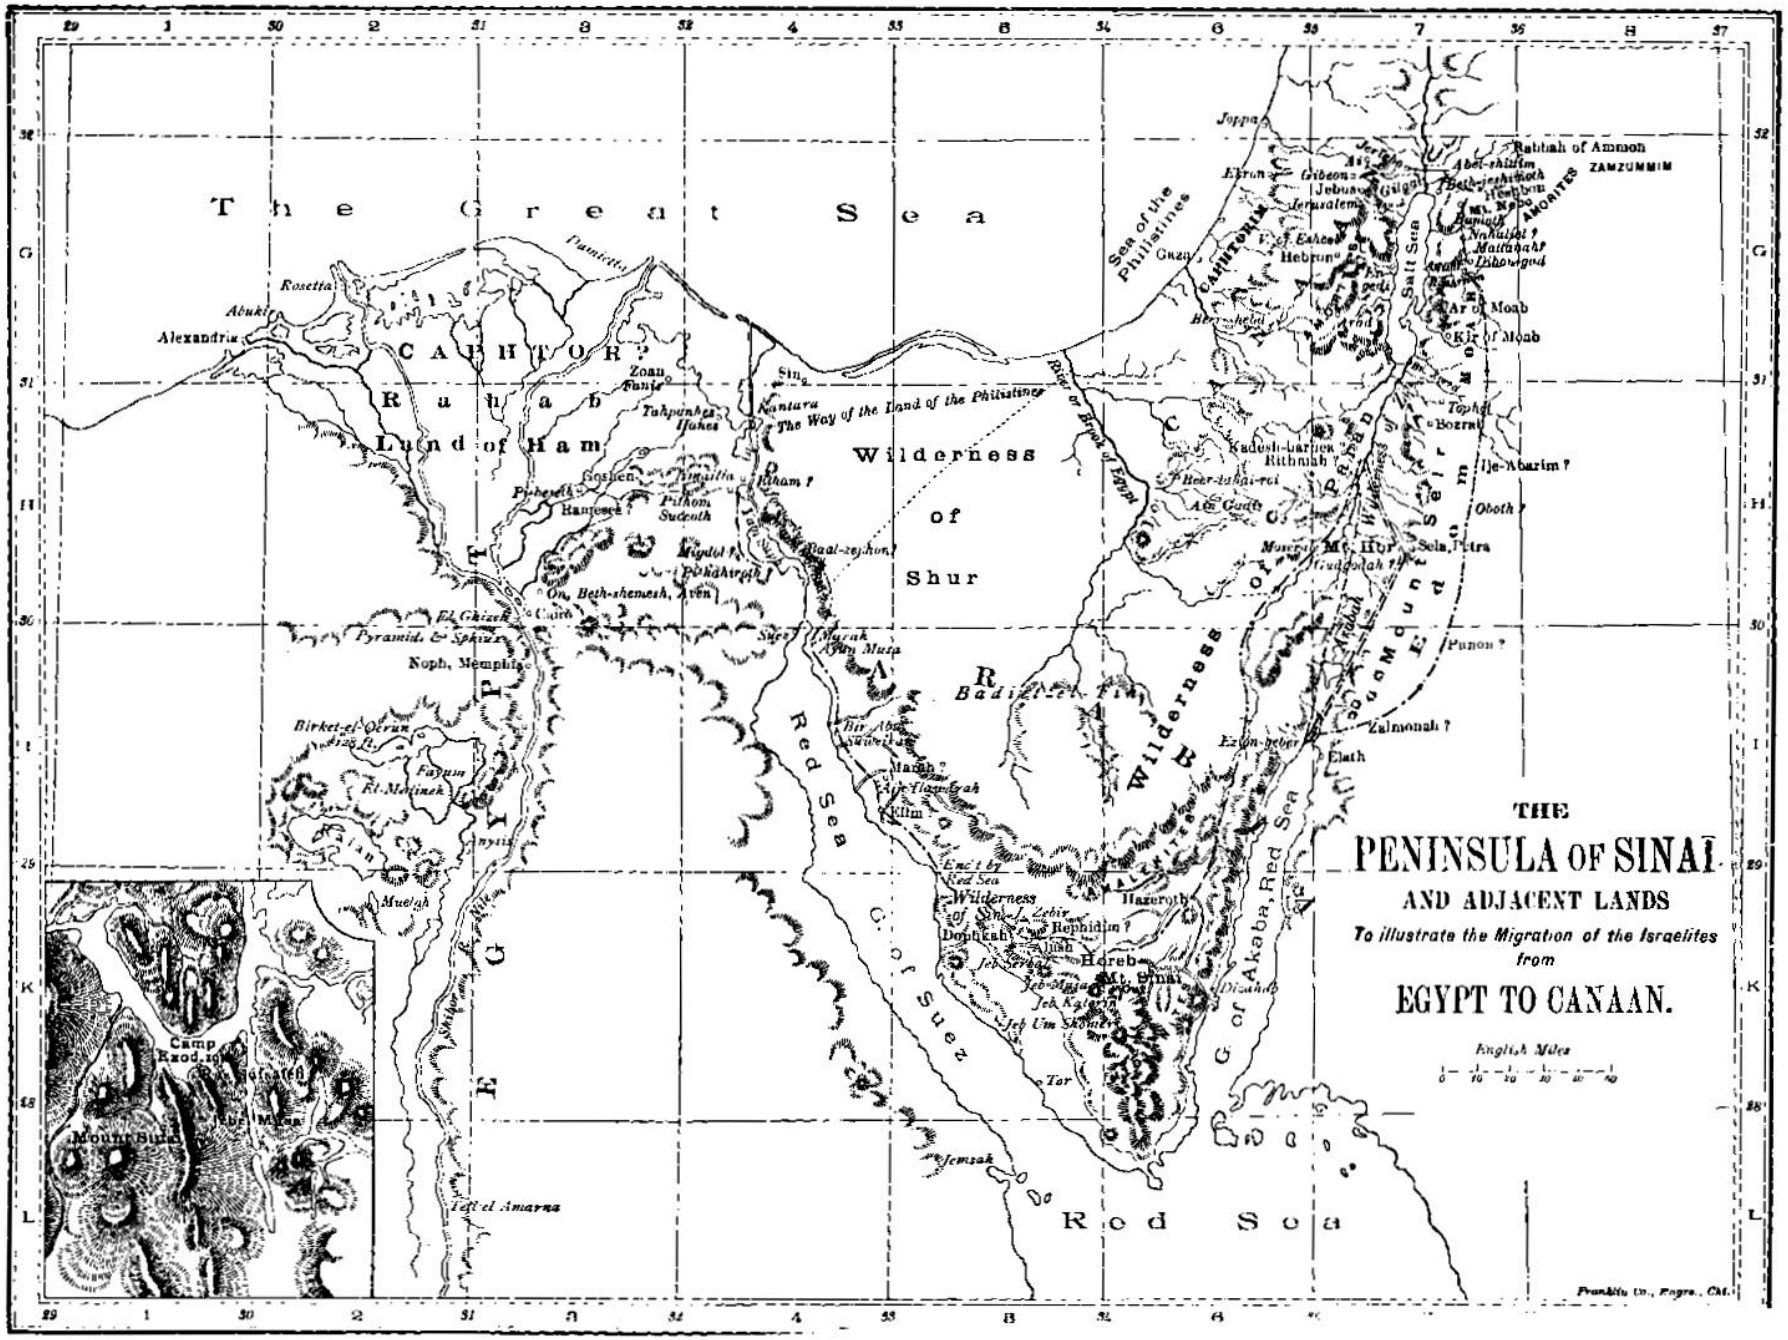
waters were purely a chemical result, the miracle was not lessened; for God showed Moses the tree in answer to earnest prayer. From comparing, however, the passage with 2 Ki. 2. 20, where a similar permanent 'healing of the waters' was miraculously effected by the infusion of a little salt, we must rather consider the 'sweetening' at Marah to be wholly miraculous, and the infusion of the wood a mere sign that the miracle was wrought in compliance with divine direction.—Note, Israel was proved by thirst and bitter water—they murmured against Moses, but cried not, as Moses did, to God. In some such way God still proves his people; but let them not murmur against the world, but appeal to him who is able to help and relieve. The bitterest water of affliction is made sweet to him who commingles with it the knowledge of Christ, 'the power of his resurrection,' and the 'fellowship of his sufferings.' C.]

Ver. 26. God heals, and helps, in every case respecting either soul or body, and delivers from all evils, felt or feared, whether spiritual, temporal, or eternal.



REFLECTIONS.—Admire, my soul, the displayed perfections, the transacted works, the fulfilled promises, the endearing relations of the Most High! How his feeble followers are encouraged and helped! How his proud opposers fall under him! Awake, awake, and utter this song of Moses and of the Lamb! Since the Lord hath brought me through fire and water to a goodly heritage, since he hath brought me out of a fearful pit, and out of the miry clay, let me believe his mighty works, and sing his praise. Let there be a new song in my heart, and in my mouth, even praises to our God. Let my meditation of him be sweet: and let my soul, which he hath redeemed, rejoice in God, my only Lord. With sweet astonishment, with heart-burning affection, and with enrapturing joy, let me sing what JEHOVAH, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, have done, and will do for me; what they have given, and will give to MEN—to ME; what they are, and for ever will be to men to ME! And while I go up, through this wilderness-world, to my Canaan above, let me kindly accept the mixture of crosses and comforts which God allots to me. If parching thirst, if bitter gall, succeed my noted deliverances, let me never once doubt of his love; never once fear that all things are against me. If I am dear to God, it is proper that he make me smart for my sin. If he love me, let him not spare his rod of correction, which drives folly from my heart. If Jesus' presence sweeten my bitter draughts, it is enough. The cup which my Father giveth me, shall I not drink it? If JEHOVAH be my God that healeth me, let him make me wounds all over, that I may feel his word, his blood, his Spirit applied, and his hands binding up and making me whole. If I get Elim refreshments here, let me adore his sovereign kindness. But let my last march be to the river of life, clear as crystal; to the living fountains of waters, where God himself shall wipe all tears from mine eyes. Meanwhile, let me not be unaffected with the great deliverances which God hath wrought, and shall work, for his gospel-church; with his destruction of her heathenish and antichristian enemies; while exercised herself with a vicissitude of embarrassing troubles and joyful deliverances.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 4. The manna fell from heaven in the manner of rain or dew; and by it God proved the Israelites; tried whether miraculous favours would induce them to an exact observation of his laws.

Ver. 5. It was the sixth day of the week on which the double portion of manna was gathered, but whether it was the sixth after the Hebrews murmured, or sixth of the fall of the manna, is not certain.

Ver. 10. While the cloud marched before them into the wilderness, an extraordinary brightness appeared in it.

Ver. 16. Every man had about five English pints of it allotted him for his daily provision.

commanded, Gather of it every man according to his eating, an [b]omer [c]for every man, according to the number of your persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

17 And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less.

18 And when they did mete it with an omer, [d]he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating.

19 And Moses said, Let no man [e]leave of it till the morning.

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it [f]bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them.

21 And they gathered it [g]every morning,[5] every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered [h]twice as much bread, two omers for one man: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

23 And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To-morrow is the rest[i] of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: [k]bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning.

24 And they [l]laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein.

25 And Moses said, [m]Eat that to-day; for to-day is a sabbath unto the LORD: to-day ye shall not find it in the field.

26 Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, [n]in it there shall be none.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, that there [o]went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Moses, [p]How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws?

29 See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days: [q]abide ye every man in his place; let no man go out of his place on the seventh day.

30 So the people [r]rested on the seventh day.

31 And the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna; and it was [s]like coriander-seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

32 ¶ And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD [t]commandeth, Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt.

33 And Moses said unto Aaron, [u]Take a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.

34 As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the [v]Testimony, to be kept.[6]

35 And the children of Israel [w]did eat manna forty years, until they came to a land[7] inhabited; they did eat manna until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan.

36 Now an omer is the tenth part of an [x]ephah.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The people murmur for water at Rephidim. 5 God sendeth them for water to the rock in Horeb. 8 Amalek is overcome by the holding up of Moses' hands. 15 Moses buildeth the altar JEHOVAH-nissi.

AND all the congregation of the children of Israel [a]journeyed from the wilderness of Sin,[8] after their journeys, according to the commandment of the LORD, and pitched in Rephidim: and there was [b]no water for the people to drink.

2 Wherefore the people did [c]chide with Moses, and said, Give us water, that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? wherefore do ye [d]tempt the LORD?

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, [e]Wherefore is this that thou hast brought h The miracle of the manna is the most extraordinary in the Old Testament. The evidences of it are—1. The establishment inspiration of Moses. 2. His books were written and published at the time of the event recorded. 3. The rebellions of the people against him in the wilderness were so frequent and inveterate, that there is no probability of collusion. 4. The people's loathing of this gift of God. 5. The present value of a specimen, ver. 32, 33, and its remarkable historical union with the services of the Jewish law.—Note, The manna furnishes a beautiful type of Christ, that bread of God that cometh down from heaven, Jn. 6. 33, sent without our asking, continued notwithstanding our ingratitude, – ousted by the stubborn, sweet to the believer, and given in daily portions through our weary pilgrimage, till we "hunger no more" and "rest from our labours."—C.

Ex. 6. 7 with De. 34. 7), at which period the Israelites were actually on the borders of Canaan, and not yet in it, when the manna finally ceased, Jos. 5. 12, a year or two before the death of Moses.—C.

8 The wilderness of Sin, now the plain of Kaa, lies along the shore between the mountains of Sinai and the Gulf of Suez. On leaving it the Israelites must have entered the wild mountain defiles on their route to Sinai. At least two stations – Dophkah and Alush, Nu. 33. 13—intervened between Sin and Rephidim. The site of Rephidim is most probably at the mouth of Sheikh Saleh, in Wady esh-Sheikh, about three hours march from Mount Sinai.—A.

Ver. 18. The provision for a family was put into a common stock, and the master measured out to each his share.

Ver. 19. To prevent a superstitious keeping of it, and to cause them always to trust in God for more, none of it was to be kept over the night.

Ver. 22. The rulers told Moses; observant of God's kindness, and that they might receive directions how to dispose of this double portion.

Ver. 23. They might not dress manna on the Sabbath, as it required a great deal of labour to grind and bake it, Nu. 11. 8.

Ver. 29. On the Sabbath no one was allowed to travel, except to the public worship of God, or about works of necessity and mercy.

Ver. 34. It was not till about ten months after that this pot of manna was laid up before the tables of the law, on the foreside of the ark.

REFLECTIONS.—Our comfortable glances of prosperity on earth soon change and pass away; while fresh difficulties produce fresh murmurings; and discontent vilifies what it has, and magnifies what it loseth or desires. But how criminal to distrust God's goodness and power, to despair of mercy and life, whenever we are brought into straits! and to murmur desperately, after God hath wrought wonders for our relief! Observe, all abuse of his servants strikes against God himself; and noted displays of his glory shall effectually check the murmurs of presumptuous sinners, and vindicate the faithful messengers of Christ! But for the children of God to disquiet their minds about temporal necessaries, when their heavenly Father can with a word supply them with everything useful, is both foolish and highly offensive. Bread shall be given them, and their water shall be sure. So transcendent is his kindness, that he bestows on wicked murmurers not only necessaries, but even delicacies. Amidst prudent care and diligent activity to make provision for myself, it becomes me to beware of covetousness or sinful distrust; to live alway contented with bare necessaries for the time, and depend upon God for what may be needful hereafter. Never let any earthly gain prevent my sanctification of the Sabbath. If, from regard to its honour, I deny myself, the Lord of it will assuredly make up my loss, and be my exceeding great reward. But if the Lord hath showed me his great kindness, let me treasure it up in my heart for grateful remembrance through all my life.—In this manna I contemplate Jesus the true bread—Jesus the bread of life. He is the free gift of God to murmuring and rebellious sinners, starving to eternal death. In the camp of the visible church he comes down from heaven in the dewy ordinances and offers of the gospel, early, daily, and plentifully. Small, and contemned by many, and unknown to most, he is the divinely prepared, the mysterious, the pure, the sweet, the wholesome, the all-sufficient, and all-suitable nourishment of our souls; which God liberally and constantly distributes to us, and which we ought early, earnestly, and daily to receive, each for ourselves; and the more so as we approach towards the eternal state, in which we shall have no further offers of his grace. And as he was bruised in the mortar and mill of his Father's justice, and baked in the oven of his love, let me receive him into a wounded conscience and a broken heart, as the grand restorative and nourisher to eternal life.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 2. The Israelites abused Moses with provoking and reproachful language.—Men us up out of Egypt to kill us, and our children, and our cattle, with thirst?

4 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, What[f] shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to [g]stone me.

5 And the LORD said unto Moses, [h]Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders[i] of Israel; and thy rod, [k]wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go.

6 Behold,[l] I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

7 And he called the name of the place Massah,[7] and Meribah,[8] because[m] of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?

8 ¶ Then[n] came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim.[9]

9 And Moses said unto [o]Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: tomorrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the [p]rod of God in mine hand.

10 So [q]Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur, went up to the top of the hill.

11 And it came to pass, when Moses [r]held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

5 No mention is made in Ex. iv. of Moses sending back his wife and sons to Jethro. tempt the Lord, (1) By sinning wilfully, and thus putting him to the trial, whether he be omniscient, just, powerful, &c., Ac. 5. 3. (2) By unnecessary rushing on visible dangers without any lawful call, Mat. 4. 6, 7. (3) By a presumptuous demanding of miracles, to try whether God can work them, Mat. 16. 1; Lu. 11. 16. (4) By presumptuously prescribing to him when and how he should accomplish his promises or threatenings as the token of his presence with them, Ps. 78. 41.

Ver. 5. The elders of the people were to witness Moses' bringing forth water from the rock, and to report it to the people.

Ver. 6. God stood above the rock in the pillar of cloud, the token of his presence, to show that it was his powerful influence, not Moses' stroke, that brought forth the water.—This rock, it is reported, remains visible to this day as a kind of large stone, with twelve or twenty-four openings, in the valley of Rephidim.

Ver. 8. Whether these Amalekites were in league with the Egyptians, or were Canaanites or Edomites, or whether they attacked them merely for the sake of the riches they had brought out of Egypt, we know not.

Ver. 9. Moses stood on the top of the hill, in view of the Israelites, with his wonder-working rod lifted up as their banner, and as a token of the Lord's presence with and assistance of them.

Ver. 11. This different success, answerable to Moses' elevation of his hands and rod, marked the power and efficacy of prayer; and that they could do nothing but as God encouraged and strengthened them.

Ver. 12. This marked the human weakness of Moses; and that Christ, by his presence and Spirit, must help our infirmities in prayer.

Ver. 14. Joshua was to hear it, as he and his successors, who commanded the armies of Israel, were to watch every opportunity of destroying the Amalekites. —[From under heaven. This is one of those judgments of God against a nation, which infidels have most frequently assailed, as indicative of implacability, and therefore, as they assert, unworthy of God. The answer is plain. (1) If God be holy, he must be implacable against sin; and if against sin, he must also be implacable against impenitent sinners. (2) It is to be presumed that every shepherd holds it right to be implacable against the wolf—the cruel and insatiable destroyer of his defenceless flock. Such was the crime of Amalek, De. 25. 17. Cruel and cowardly, he attacked the defenceless rear of the Israelites' line, when 'feeble, faint, and weary.' (3) Has any philanthropist denounced the punishment of pirates, robbers, and murderers? Have the merchants of the Mediterranean wept over the fall of Algiers, or the travellers of India protested against the extirpation of the Thugs? No. How then dare infidels accuse God for a sentence which all men pronounce righteous, when they judge in another case? Out of their own mouths, and on their own principles, will they be condemned, and God will be 'justified when he speaks, and clear when he judges,' Ps. 51. 4. (4) Besides, the remembrance of Amalek, which God determined utterly to put out, implied, not the extirpation of individual, but of national life, an occurrence of which history affords many striking examples. Do men ever, in such cases, accuse Providence for what is actually done? No. How then dare they accuse God for denouncing the same judgment he intended to inflict? C.]

Ver. 15. The design of this altar was to commemorate the victory divinely bestowed, and to offer sacrifices of thanksgiving thereupon.

REFLECTIONS.—The straits of the people of God frequently recur upon them; and how commonly do they afford occasion for repeated unbelief, and a sinful rage of spirit, under them, while the greatest kindnesses are forgotten or ill-requited. Humble prayer is most effectual to compose the spirit under such injurious treatment. Did we then but recollect the circumstances of our sins, it would tend rather to our humiliation; and did we but wait with humble patience, we should soon discover that God can open the most abundant supplies in our greatest distresses. How heartily wicked men hate the saints, and take all opportunities to distress them! But terrible is the justice that awaits them on account of it. The prayers of the saints and the word of JEHOVAH are sure to bring victory. Let me then never murmur against, never distrust, my God of infinite power and grace! Let me, in every case, cry to him who can turn flinty rocks into water springs! If I receive mercies amidst my provocations, I may expect new trials. But let me depend upon God in all my warfare, and praise him for all my victories.—But in this smitten rock I behold Jesus, the firm, the unchangeable God and Mediator of his people, who, for our danger of hell and despair, appeared in our nature!—Jesus, the stone smitten by Moses' fiery law before the rulers and people of Israel, that streams of atoning blood and sanctifying virtue might issue forth and run in this wilderness of our world, for the purification and refreshment of sinful men. In this warfare I behold Jesus, MY ALL IN ALL, as the Captain of salvation directing the Lord's host.—Jesus, the rod, the branch, lifted up as an ensign to the Gentiles!—Jesus, as my unwearied intercessor at the right hand of the Majesty on high!—Jesus, through whom I am more than a conqueror; and who hath sworn that he will have war with the enemies of his people, from generation to generation, till they be utterly defeated.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 1. [Jethro was a believer in Jehovah, and a patriarchal though not a Levitical priest; that priesthood being not yet instituted, and Moses, Aaron, and the elders, enter into church fellowship with him (see ver. 7–12). The domestic part of the scene described presents a lively example to Christian families. (1) Moses' care to send his wife and children to a place of safety (ver. 2) during his dangerous negotiation with Pharaoh. (2) Jethro's affectionate restoration of them (ver. 6) when the danger was past. (3) The religious character of their entire intercourse, truly worthy of priesthood, prophets of the most high God. The political part of the narrative may afford the noblest lesson to all statesmen. Jethro speaks in the name of God, and no doubt by his inspiration (ver. 19, 23), when he draws the true character of rulers (ver. 21), viz. 'able men,' in modern language, men of talent, such as fear God, men of heart-religion, 'men of truth,' who abhor the temporary aid of falsehood, 'hating covetousness,' who endure the toils of state, not for the advantage it may bring to the GARDEN OF GIZEH MUSEUM, CAIRO—A SCENE AROUND THE PALACE OF A MODERN PHARAOH. [EXODUS, [illegible] 10 ]—"And Jethro said, Blessed be the Lord, who hath delivered you out of the hands of the Egyptians, and out of the hands of Pharaoh; who hath delivered the people from under the hands of the Egyptians." We give a picture here of a scene in the garden of the Gizeh Museum. This museum was originally built by Isma 'il Pasha for his harem. He was made Khedive in 1867. The Suez Canal was opened during his reign. Owing to the enormous debt he fastened upon the Egyptian government, Isma 'il Pasha was dethroned in 1879. This harem, in which the Egyptian antiquities are now housed, was built at an expense of five million pounds sterling. After the great Pasha was dethroned, this, among the rest of his property, was confiscated and turned over to the government. In love of pleasure and magnificence of fancy he fitly represents in modern times the luxurious Pharaohs who reigned in Egypt during the sojourn of the 4 And the name of the other was [g]Eliezer; (for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh.)

5 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, came with his sons and his wife unto Moses into the wilderness, where he encamped at the [h]mount of God:

6 And he said[4] unto Moses, I thy father-in-law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her.

7 ¶ And Moses went out to [i]meet his father-in-law, and did obeisance, and kissed him; and they asked each other of their [k]welfare: and they came into the tent.

8 And Moses [l]told his father-in-law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had [m]come upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them.

9 ¶ And Jethro [n]rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.

10 And Jethro said, [o]Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

11 Now I [p]know that the [q]LORD is greater than all gods: [r]for in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them.[5]

12 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took a[s] burnt-offering and sacrifices[6] for God: and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to [t]eat bread with Moses' father-in-law before God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses [u]sat to judge the people; and the people stood by Moses from the morning unto the evening.

14 And when Moses' father-in-law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even?

15 And Moses said unto his father-in-law, Because the people come unto me to [x]inquire of God:

16 When they have a matter, they come unto me; and I judge between one and another;[7] and I do make them know the statutes of God, and his laws.

17 And Moses' father-in-law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good.

18 Thou[y] wilt surely wear away, both thou and this people that is with thee:[8] for this thing is too heavy for thee; [z]thou art not able to perform it thyself alone.

19 Hearken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and [a]God shall be with thee: Be thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the [b]causes unto God:

20 And thou shalt [c]teach them ordinances and laws, and shalt show them the way wherein they must walk, and the [d]work that they must do.

21 Moreover, thou shalt [e]provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens:

22 And [f]let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee.

23 If thou shalt do this thing, and God [g]command thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, and all this people shall also go to their place in peace.[9]

24 So Moses [h]hearkened to the voice of his father-in-law, and [i]did all that he had said.

25 And Moses [k]chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

26 And they judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

27 ¶ And[l] Moses let his father-in-law depart; and he went his way into his own [l]land.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 The people come to Sinai. 3 God's message by Moses unto the people out of the mount. 7 The people's answer returned again. 10 The people are ordered to be prepared against the third day. 12 The mountain must not be touched. 16 The fearful presence of God upon the mount.

IN the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they into the wilderness of Sinai.[2]

2 For they were [a]departed from Rephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel camped before the mount.[3]

3 ¶ And [b]Moses went up unto God, and the LORD called unto him out of the mountain,

CHAP. XIX.

2 Mount Sinai, which the Arabians call Tor, or the mountain (a word of most extensive diffusion), and Gebel Musa, or the mount or rock of Moses, is situate between the two northern arms of the Red Sea, which thus formed a natural defence to the Israelites on the east, the south, and the west, while the mountains of El Tih defended them to the north. Sinai and Horeb are often used promiscuously by the sacred writers: Horeb being probably the general name of the region, Sinai of a particular mountain. —C.

3 The site of the camp was unquestionably the plain now called Rahah, 'rest.' Rahah is 2 miles long by half a mile wide, with branches shooting out from it on every side among the wild mountains. At one end of it rises precipitously the rugged peak now called Jebel Sufsafeh, 'the mountain of the willow,' but anciently Sinai, or the mount of the Lord. Its summit is visible from every part of the plain; and its rugged base is so distinctly marked that the people could touch it. The whole topography of the spot corresponds in every respect to the Scripture narrative. F.

Ver. 11. Even in the Egyptians' haughty and insolent detaining of his people Israel, imagining it impossible for their God to deliver them, he showed himself infinitely their superior in wisdom and might.

Ver. 12. They feasted before God, near to the symbol of his presence in the cloud, or on the mount, and in holy awe of him, and as in his sight.

Ver. 17, 18. What thou dost is not convenient either for thyself or the people. This tedious attendance will destroy thine own health and theirs.

Ver. 19. I make no doubt but God will bless thee in following the course to which I advise.

Ver. 20. Thou shalt deliver and explain to them God's laws, which they may apply to their particular cases and occasions.

Ver. 21. Men of understanding, courage, piety, candour, faithfulness, and honesty, and who will discourage every wicked thing.

REFLECTIONS.—It is highly becoming that professed saints should mark every turn of providence that befalls them; and in a dependence on God as their help, reckon themselves strangers on earth; and that saying, [c]Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel;

4 Ye[d] have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles'[2] wings, and brought you [e]unto myself.

5 Now [f]therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a [g]peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for [h]all the earth is mine.

6 And ye shall be unto me a [i]kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.

7 ¶ And Moses came, and called for the elders[k] of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the LORD commanded him.

8 And [l]all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do.[3] And Moses returned the words of the people unto the LORD.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee in [m]a thick cloud,[4] that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee for ever.[5] And Moses told the words of the people unto the LORD.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go unto the people, and [n]sanctify them to-day and to-morrow, and let them wash their clothes, 11 And be ready against the third day: for the [o]third day the LORD will [p]come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai.

12 And thou shalt [q]set bounds unto the people round about, saying, Take heed to yourselves, that ye go not up into the mount, or touch the border of it: whosoever toucheth the mount shall be surely put to death.

13 There shall not an [r]hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned, or shot through; whether it be beast or man, it shall not live:

God is never yet clearly revealed in nature, providence, or even redemption. In all 'we see as through a glass darkly.' [7] When God had already said to Moses, 'Away, get thee down, charge the people, lest they break through,' why did Moses hesitate, and why does the Lord require to reiterate the order? Simply because Moses, relying upon the ready promise of obedience in ver. 8, does not think it possible the people could ever violate their pledge. God, who knew what was in man, reorders Moses to go down to prevent their sin.—Note, Preventing grace, though little, or perhaps not at all, observable by ignorant and self-confident man, is yet the most common and the most important of the mercies of God. This preventing grace of God is frequently put forth in the faithful admonitions and warnings of religious friends, God putting it into their hearts to speak in warning, as Moses did, or in reproof of sin committed, or encouragement to neglected duty.—C.

when the [s]trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

14 ¶ And Moses went down from the mount unto the people, and sanctified the people; and they washed their clothes.

15 And he said unto the people, [t]Be ready against the third day: [u]come not at your wives.

16 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there [v]were thunders, and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp trembled.

17 And Moses brought forth the people out of the camp [w]to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mount.

18 And mount Sinai was altogether [x]on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire; and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount [y]quaked greatly.

19 And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, [z]Moses spake, and God answered him by a voice.

20 And the LORD came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the LORD called Moses up to the top of the mount; and Moses went up.

21 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go down, charge[6] the people, lest they [a]break through unto the LORD to gaze, and many of them perish.

22 And let the [b]priests also, which come near to the LORD, sanctify themselves, lest the LORD break forth upon them.

they should inquire after, and rejoice in, one another's welfare. It is necessary that, if married persons part for a time, they should meet again with the first convenience, that they may share in one another's honours and comforts, as well as in their troubles; and that children should be, as much as possible, under the immediate inspection of religious parents. When great honours from God are attended with due humility towards men; and when such as have seen much of the Lord's goodness readily communicate their experiences to their friends, especially when meeting together they chiefly converse concerning the things of God, and sanctify their mutual friendship with joint prayer and praise, it is both pleasing and instructive. Those in office should always execute the same with fidelity and condescension even to such as have deserved their disregard; and prefer public business to private civilities. But how profitable is wisdom to direct in everything, that we may not overdo even in well-doing! Good counsel is helpful even to the wisest, and proper assistance to the ablest in office; and it will be readily embraced by such as are wise and prudent. With great care and conscience should persons be chosen to offices of government, either in church or state, that none may be admitted but such as are able men, men of truth, fearing God, and hating covetousness. And dreadful is their guilt who help or hold in ignorant and profane persons, to the dishonour of God and the hurt of his people.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 3. Moses went up to the presence of God, where the cloud rested on Sinai, nine or ten different times, ver. 7, 8, 10, 14, 20, 21, 25; ch. xx. xxi.; 24. 3, 12, 13, 15, 18; 32. 7, 15, 30; 33. 6, 7, 21; 34. 2, 29, 34.

Ver. 4. This speech was to prepare them to receive God's covenant now to be proposed unto them. A like one is used at the renovation of the covenant, De. 29. 2. To be borne on eagles' wings, is to be borne above all difficulties, and in spite of all opposition.

Ver. 5. [Now. This is God's second national promise since the exodus. The first, ch. 15. 26, included merely exemption from the diseases of Egypt; the second appropriates the nation as a precious treasure, and exalts them to a royal priesthood and holiness. An apt illustration of the progress of grace in the heart. The guilty sinner, galled by the yoke of bondage, is drawn first to God by the promise of pardon and deliverance; and anon, as the glories of the covenant of grace open upon his view, he finds himself 'made accepted in the Beloved,'—'a king and a priest to God, even the Father,' while Jesus is made to him of God, 'wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.' C.]

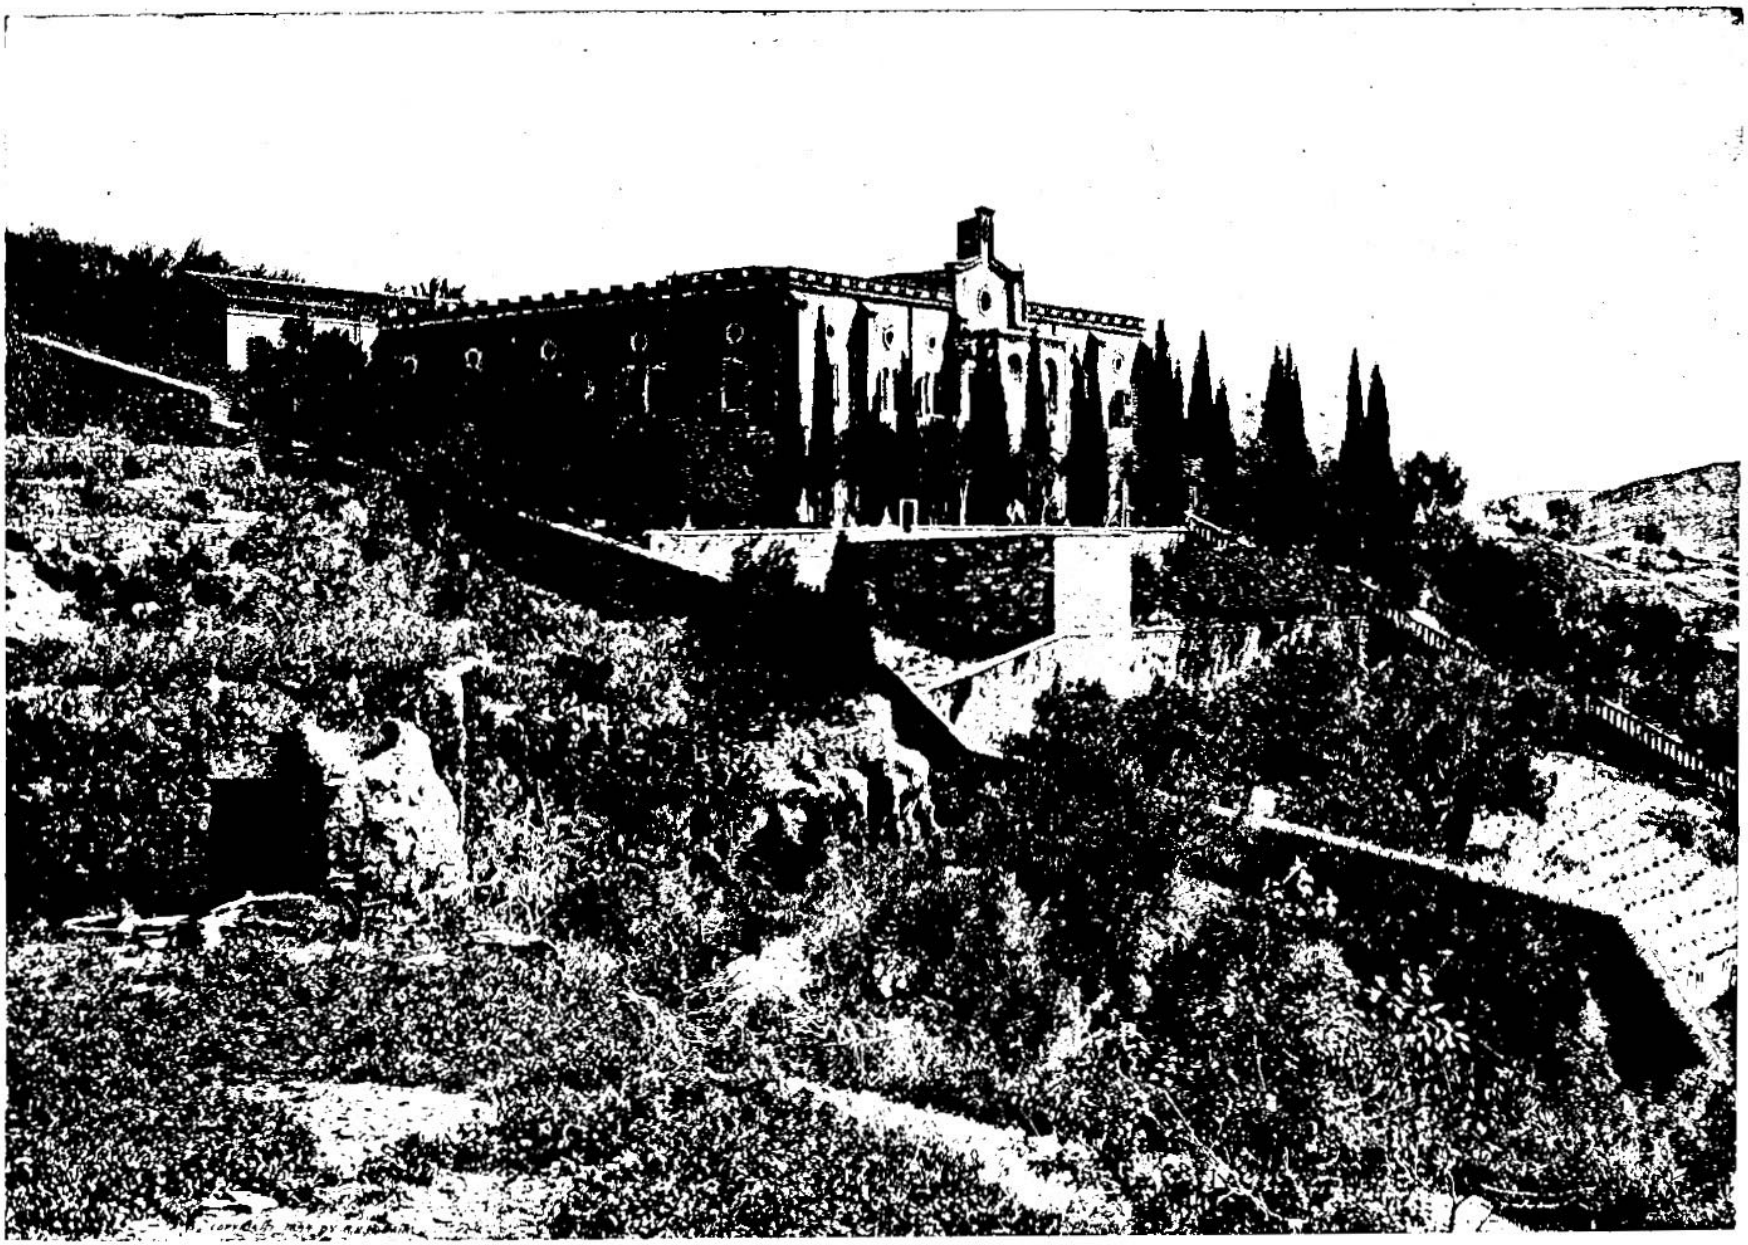
Ver. 6. They were priests, separated to God's worship and service, and warranted to come near unto his presence. They were an holy nation by profession, covenant, and separation to God's service.

Ver. 8. This they promised too rashly, not considering the extent, spirituality, and strictness of the holy law, or their own weakness; and hence, when the law was published, they fled away for terror.



Ver. 8, 9. Moses, being a typical mediator between God and the people, reported the words of the one to the other.

Ver. 10–12. They were to prepare themselves by inwardly laying aside carnal affections and worldly cares, and by keeping their hearts in a holy frame; and outwardly by washing their clothes. The design of this was to render them sensible of their vileness and weakness, and their need of a mediator, Ga. 3. 19.

Ver. 13. By the ministration of angels a trumpet, in the manner of thunder, was sounded in the air; and whenever it gave a long continued sound the Hebrews were to approach as near to the mount as they durst, in order to hear the law proclaimed.—[Examining closely the words of the original, and taking them in connection with the statement in ver. 17, the meaning seems to be, 'they shall come up (out of their tents) towards the mount.' They were not to ascend it, or even to touch it; but to stand before it. P.]

Ver. 15. All carnal cares and affections were to be laid aside, that their minds might be wholly intent on hearing the law.

Ver. 16. The thunders, lightnings, fire, and smoke were intended to awaken their attention in hearing the law, to promote their careful observance of it, and to manifest how dangerous it was to be under it as a cove-

ENGLISH ORPHANAGE, NAZARETH—AN INSTITUTION EXPRESSING CHRIST'S SPIRIT STANDING IN THE TOWN WHERE CHRIST GREW UP. [EXODUS, xx.]—The twentieth chapter of Exodus contains the ten commandments. We put this picture of the English Orphanage at Nazareth to illustrate it, because in Christ the whole law was summed up and fulfilled, and the beautiful view we give above was taken in the city where Christ grew up. The English Orphanage at Nazareth is a school under the direction of the Established Church of England. It is conducted by consecrated women, and has been the means of accomplishing a great deal of good for the poor orphans in Palestine. No institution could more fittingly stand as a concrete illustration of what Christ has done and is doing for childhood. This school is an embodiment of His own love as expressed through the words: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

1 The ten commandments. 3 The first table. 12 The second table. 18 The people are afraid. 20 Moses comforteth them. 22 Idolatry is forbidden. 24 Of what sort the altar should be.

AND God [a]spake all these words, saying,

2 I[b] am the LORD thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

3 ¶ Thou[c] shalt have no other gods before me

4 Thou[d] shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.

5 Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a [h]jealous God,[i] visiting[j] the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;[k]

6 And [l]showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

7 Thou[m] shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

8 Remember[n] the sabbath-day, to keep it holy.

9 Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

10 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:

11 For [k]in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath-day, and hallowed it.

12 ¶ Honour[l] thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

13 Thou[m] shalt not kill.

14 Thou[n] shalt not commit adultery.

15 Thou[o] shalt not steal.

16 Thou[p] shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

17 Thou[q] shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

18 ¶ And[r] all the people saw[s] the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off.

19 And they said unto Moses, [t]Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

20 And Moses said unto the people, [u]Fear not: for God is come to [v]prove you, and that his [w]fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

21 And the [x]people stood afar off; and Moses drew near[y] unto the thick darkness where God was.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have [z]talked with you from heaven.

23 Ye[a] shall not make with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold.

24 ¶ An [b]altar of earth thou shalt [2]make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt-offerings, and thy peace-offerings, thy sheep,

1 Infidels and Neologists have represented Moses as taking advantage of an earthquake and volcanic eruption, see ch. 19. 18-20, to persuade an ignorant people that God spake to him, that thus he might induce them to accept his laws. His drawing nigh unto the thick darkness, and afterwards, ch.24.18, going into the midst of the cloud—independently of Moses' miracles, prophecies, and character for veracity—afford a sufficient exposure of this impious imagination; as the sulphurous vapours of a volcano would have instantly destroyed life.—C.

nant. The thick cloud signified the invisible, awful, and incomprehensible nature of God, and the obscurity of the legal dispensation of the covenant of grace.

Ver. 18. God's descent meant his manifesting the signs of his glorious presence.

Ver. 19. God answered Moses by a voice distinct, plain, and audible, which all the people might hear.

Ver. 21, 23. Vain curiosity is forbidden, that we may learn to live by faith and not by sight, and to be humble. Their dulness and hardness of heart made repeated warnings necessary; and they were commanded to hold the very mountain sacred because of God's presence. This might also signify that the law rather excludes men from God, on account of their sins, than justifies or gives them life.

Ver. 22. Some think these priests were the first-born, but there is no evidence that birthright invested with any such office; they were persons, probably the most excellent, chosen by Moses for offering sacrifices, till God should assign that work to Aaron and his sons.

fully exhibited in the various evangelical theological systems, with the various expositions thereof, it is kind his care of his people, and great the honour he bestows upon them. His condescension is most astonishing in admitting them into covenant with himself; his requirements most reasonable; and surely his distinguishing kindness ought to promote our cheerful obedience. But how apt are men to be hasty in promising obedience, and backward in performing it! Serious preparation for solemn intercourse with God is necessary and becoming; and a careful respect to every disposition and deportment of body, soul, and spirit. Never, O my soul, presumptuously intrude into those secrets over which God hath cast a vail! Never hazard thy life by pushing over the bounds which he hath set for thy good. Let me have nothing to do with his fiery law, but as it is fulfilled by Christ as a covenant, and issued forth by him as a rule. Let me always approach unto his presence with reverence and godly fear; and never let vain curiosity, but humble faith and holy love, attend me in all my concerns with him.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 1–17. Concerning this law it is evident, (1) That it was immediately published by God himself in the hearing of all Israel. (2) That every command is delivered in the singular number, that every one may take it home to himself: (3) And to mark that God's grant of himself to men, as their God and Redeemer, is the foundation of all gospel-obedience: it is frequently repeated, ver. 7, 10, 12, 25; and in Le. xviii. xix. it is connected with almost every particular command. The rules for the right understanding of these commandments, and the particular duties required and sins forbidden in each, being so

REFLECTIONS.—Infinitely gracious and tender are the favours of God to men. But peculiarly sufficient to refer to these.——[Ver. 17. It has been well said by Kalisch that these verses 'contain the primary basis of revelation, and the fundamental laws of the whole Mosaic legislation. They have, therefore, become the starting-point of all religious systems and of all true civilization, and from their promulgation only dates the diffusion of a genuine monotheism, a purely internal morality, and a sound enlightenment. They form a decisive epoch in the history of the human race, and are therefore perhaps the greatest and most important event in universal history. In a simple and condensed, yet extremely emphatical form, equally impressive for every degree and manner of intellectual culture, a complete system of duties is comprised, which man owes to his Creator and his fellowman; and so comprehensive is the purport of these words, that from the earliest times the whole sum of the divine precepts has been considered to be included in them as in embryo.' P.]

Ver. 20. Let not slavish fear make you neglect your duty, for God is come to prove whether you be sincere or hypocritical.

Ver. 24, 25. These altars of turf and stone were only to be used for the present, before that of brass was made, or on extraordinary occasions; and were always to be most simple, and unlike to those of the heathens.

REFLECTIONS.—Now, my soul, let my religious principles, and my whole practice, follow the order of this divine sermon. Let the leading articles of my knowledge and belief be, that God, as in Christ, giveth and thine oxen. In all places where I [c]record my name I will come unto thee, and I will bless[d] thee.

25 And [e]if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up [f]thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.[3]

26 Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that [g]thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Laws for men-servants. 5 For the servant whose ear is bored. 7 For maid-servants. 12 For man-slaughter. 16 For stealers of men. 17 For cursers of parents. 18 For smiters. 22 For a hurt by chance. 28 For an ox that goreth. 33 For him that is an occasion of harm.

NOW these are the judgments[4] which thou shalt [a]set before them.

2 If[b] thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve, and in the seventh he shall go out [c]free for nothing.

3 If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself; if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

4 If his master have given him [d]a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's,[5] and he shall go out by himself.

5 And if [e]the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children, I will not go out free:

6 Then his master shall bring him unto [f]the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door-post; and his master shall [g]bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him [h]for ever.

7 ¶ And if a man [i]sell his daughter to be a maid-servant, she shall [k]not go out as the men-servants do.[6]

8 If she please not[7] her master, who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he have betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the [l]manner of daughters.

10 If he take him another wife, her food, her raiment, and her [m]duty of marriage, shall he not diminish.

11 And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out [n]free without money.

12 ¶ He that [o]smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

13 And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver him into his hand;[8] then [p]I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

14 But if a man come [q]presumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die.

15 ¶ And he that [r]smiteth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death.

16 ¶ And he that [s]stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

17 ¶ And [t]he that curseth[9] his father or his mother shall surely be put to death.

18 ¶ And if men strive together, and one smite another with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed;

19 If he rise again, and walk abroad [u]upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit: only he shall pay for [x]the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

20 ¶ And if a man smite his [y]servant, or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall be surely punished.[1]

21 Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished:[2] for he is his money.[3]

22 ¶ If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet [z]no mischief follow: he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine.

23 And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life,

24 Eye [a]for eye,[4] tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,

6 The law has been represented by some as relaxed in favour of female servants, De. 15. 12; but the idea of relaxation seems not consistent with the divine origin of a law. But in point of fact the law in Exod. and the law in Deut. are on two different subjects. That in Exod. relates to a maid-servant not only purchased, but betrothed to her master or his son; that in Deut. to a maid-servant merely purchased. Both are glorious specimens of the justice and mercy of the divine legislator.—C.

himself to me, in the gospel-promise, for my God, my Redeemer, and my ALL IN ALL: and let my leading exercise be to receive him as such. Let his being JEHOVAH, my God and Redeemer, be the foundation, the great reason and motive, of all that I do. Influenced by this, let me renounce and detest every idol which robs him of his honour, or me of my enjoyment of him. Let me embrace every instituted ordinance as coming from my God, and observe it in the nearest fellowship with him. Having received JEHOVAH as my God, let me have grace from him to serve him with reverence and godly fear. Copying after his pattern, and desiring the enjoyment of him as my chief good, let me observe the appointed seasons of intercourse with him. Let me regard relations and property among men as the constitutions of my God: and in all my dealings with them, let me act as a possessor of God, that needs nothing in an unlawful manner, and as a cordial imitator of God, who is gracious and merciful, long-suffering, and abundant in holiness, righteousness, goodness, and truth. But having tasted the terrors of a broken law and an angry God, let me rejoice that, without my request, I have one Mediator between God and me, the man Christ Jesus. Detesting every species of false worship, let me rejoice that Jesus, the fruit of the earth, Jesus, the chosen stone, is my all-sanctifying altar, on which I must present all my services before God; and my unfailing security for the presence of God in ordinances: and God forbid that I should disgrace him with any light, licentious, or injurious behaviour.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 2. (1) A Hebrew might sell himself or his children in extreme poverty, De. 15. 12; Le. 25. 39; Ne. 5. 5. (2) Magistrates might sell a person for theft, ch. 22. 3. (3) He might be sold by his creditors for debt, 2 Ki. 4. 1; Mat. 18. 25. To such bond-servants masters often gave heathen maid-slaves as a kind of wives or concubines, to beget other slaves.—[No Hebrew could be sold unless a debtor or malefactor. When a man got into debt and was unable to pay, he was sold to, or he became the property of, the creditor for a period not exceeding six years, so that by his labour he might in some degree satisfy the just demands of the man he had wronged, Le. 25. 39, 40. In case of theft the thief was compelled to restore double, or four-fold, or five-fold, according to the nature of the crime. If he had not the means of making full restitution, then he was sold, i.e. he became the property of the man he had robbed until by his labour he had made legal compensation. These were the only ways in which a Hebrew could become a bondman. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How just, gracious, and condescending must God, the giver of these laws, be! How mindful of the welfare of mankind! How profitable to be his voluntary servants! His providence extends even to that which appears accidental; and he exercises the most exact care to preserve the innocent, and at the same time punish the guilty. Let me therefore take heed that neither I, nor what pertains to me, prove hurtful to my neighbour or to his property! Suppose no laws of men can punish me, the justice of God can overtake me. Let me rather, as a faithful man, put on bowels of mercy and long-suffering, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. Meanwhile, in those voluntary bond-servants I may behold Jesus, the only begotten Son of God, from love to his Father, from love to all the world, solemnly sur-

28 ¶ If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then [c]the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; [d]the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death.

4 The lex talionis, or law of like for like, in case of injuries of the person, has prevailed amongst all civilized nations. Into the code of Solon, the Athenian legislator, and into the famous twelve tables of the Romans, it most probably made its way from this judgment in the law in Moses. And that it would operate more powerfully in the prevention of crime than all the modern European system of fine, imprisonment, hard labour, banishment, or even death, we need not hesitate to affirm. God knew the evil that was in the heart of man, and best knew how to restrain it. And did legislators follow his wisdom more, and their own expedients less, we might with calculable certainty depend upon the diminution of these crimes, which many severe human enactments are calculated to provoke and perpetuate. It is not improbable, from considering the commutation of the extreme punishment of death to fine, permitted in ver. 30, that a similar commutation, as Josephus affirms, was permissible in any of these cases, at the option of the person injured.—Note. Between the law and our Saviour's expression, Mat. 5. 38. there is no contradiction. Moses directs the judge in the prevention and punishment of crime; our Saviour addresses private individuals, forbidding revenge, and inculcating forbearance and forgiveness.—I.

3 The reason of the distinction in this law is that, in the night, the robbery might be considered an assault upon the life as well as on the property; and as the terror and confusion of the night life was more endangered. In both cases the case of human life is remarkable, and fully justifying the principle now very generally introduced into our laws, that only crimes implying the taking away of life are punishable with death.—I.

5 ¶ If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.

7 ¶ If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; if the thief be found, let him pay double.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 22, 23. To those who have had little actual experience of human life, the multiplicity, the minuteness, and the impressive sanctions of the laws on behalf of widows and orphans, may appear almost superfluous. But by those who have carefully observed how these defenceless parties are sometimes treated, the benevolence of these laws, and the deep practical acquaintance with human life on which they are founded, will be readily perceived, and gratefully acknowledged. C.]

Ver. 26. [Raiment. The raiment of the poor modern Arab of the desert is, most probably, near akin to that of the poor Jew supposed to be given in pledge. It is generally woollen, nearly square, reaching from the shoulders to the calf of the leg or the ankles. Two slits admit the arms, and it is joined at the neck, so as to form a hole, through which the head passes. It is open before from top to bottom; and is wrapped round the body, or let loose, at the pleasure of the wearer. This, with an under shirt, forms all the poor Arab's dress. It is generally both his bed and covering at 20 ¶ He[t] that sacrificeth unto any god, save unto the LORD only, he shall be utterly destroyed.

21 ¶ Thou[u] shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.[9]

22 ¶ Ye[x] shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child.

23 If thou afflict them in any wise, and they cry at all unto me, I [y]will surely hear their cry;

24 And my wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and [z]your wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless.

25 ¶ If[a] thou lend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as an usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury.[1]

26 ¶ If thou [b]at all take thy neighbour's raiment to pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down:

27 For that is his covering only; it is his raiment for his skin: wherein shall he sleep? and it shall come to pass, [c]when he crieth unto me, that I will hear; for I am gracious.

28 ¶ Thou[d] shalt not revile the [e]gods, nor curse the ruler of thy people.

29 ¶ Thou [f]shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits,[2] and of thy[3] liquors: [g]the first-born of thy sons shalt thou give unto me.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Of slander and false witness. 4 Of charitableness. 6 Of justice. 10 Of the year of rest. 12 Of the sabbath. 13 Of idolatry. 14 Of the three feasts. 18 Of the blood and the fat of the sacrifice. 20 An Angel is promised for a guide, with a blessing, in case they obey him.

THOU [a]shalt not raise[5] a false report: [b]put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness.

2 ¶ Thou [c]shalt not follow a multitude to do evil;[6] neither shalt thou speak in a cause to decline after many to wrest judgment.

3 Neither shalt thou [d]countenance a poor man in his cause.

4 ¶ If thou [e]meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.

5 If[f] thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and wouldest forbear to help him;[7] thou shalt surely help with him.

6 ¶ Thou shalt not [g]wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

7 Keep[h] thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay thou not:[8] for [i]I will not justify the wicked.

8 ¶ And [k]thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise,[9] and perverteth the words of the righteous.

9 ¶ Also [l]thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ye know the heart[1] of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

10 ¶ And [m]six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof:

11 But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy olive-yard.[2]

12 ¶ Six[n] days thou shalt do thy work, and night; and a mat, or carpet, if it can be obtained, is all he requires to constitute perfect luxury. If nearly such was the raiment of the poor Jew, and there is good reason to believe it was, the law that restored it in the evening, when pledged through the day, indicates the Lord's intimate and benevolent regard to the health and comfort of his creatures. C.]

Ver. 28. [The Hebrew word is elohim, the usual meaning and translation of which is 'God.' The same word is rightly rendered 'judges' in ver. 8 and 9; but there it has the article, while here it has not. The meaning given to it in the Authorized Version is opposed alike to the common use of the word, and to the spirit of the Mosaic laws. The true meaning is, 'Thou shalt not blaspheme God.' P.]

Ver. 29. The proportion of the first-fruits was between the fortieth and sixtieth part of the increase. By giving this, they acknowledged themselves the Lord's tenants; and thus their crop was sanctified. These first-fruits also typified Jesus Christ and his people, who are dedicated to God, and bring blessings on mankind.—[Literally, 'Thou shalt not delay (to offer) from thy fulness (of corn), and thy tear (of the vine).' 'The tear of the vine' is a common metaphor in wine-growing countries. It signifies the best or choicest produce of the grape. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold how the righteous Lord loveth righteousness, and beholdeth the upright with a pleasant countenance! Let, therefore, the grace revealed in the gospel teach me to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, rendering unto God and men their respective dues. If God be my portion, all covetousness, injustice, and infidelity should be far from my heart and hand. If God be my pleasure, never should I wallow in fleshly lusts, or render others disgraced and miserable by any means. If God be my blessed Husband and Lord, I should, as under the sweetest and strongest obligation, resist the devil, and detest his influence. Let me therefore honour JEHOVAH with due worship, and with the first-fruits of all my increase; and regard magistrates as his deputies on earth, who are bound in the most exact manner to punish crimes against God or men. If God be my pattern, let me prepare of my goodness for the poor. It is more blessed to give than to receive. While I have gracious provision, let my soul never live on that which is corrupt, or can be torn from me; but, despising the blessings of earth, show myself fully satisfied with the rich provisions of divine grace.

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 1. They were neither to invent a slander, nor to receive or report it, but to discourage and reprove every spreader of it.—[The full meaning is 'Thou shalt neither raise nor propagate an unfounded report.' In giving testimony each man is here bound to state only what he knows to be true, and to avoid countenancing anything that is false. P.]

Ver. 2. Neither the counsel nor example of multitudes in evil is to be followed; nor must either parties, friends, judges, witnesses, or vulgar opinions move us to lessen great faults, aggravate small ones, vindicate offenders, accuse the innocent, or misrepresent anything to procure an unjust sentence.

Ver. 3. In judgment none must be favoured either for their poverty or their wealth.—[Countenance a poor man in his cause. The foregoing law forbids to follow, the succeeding forbids to court the multitude. A high profession of sympathy with the poor, loud and pretended boasted efforts to alleviate their sufferings, and redress wrongs, have ever distinguished the traffickers in popularity; from Absalom, who rebelled against his king and his father (2 Sa. 15. 2-6), to Judas, who, for thirty pieces of silver, betrayed and sold his Lord (Jn. 12. 5, 6).—Note, The believer must follow Christ, and seek no praise but that which cometh of God, Jn. 12. 23; Ro. 2. 29., C.——When justice is at stake neither the wealth nor the poverty of the party is to be taken into consideration. No favour must be shown even to the poor. Strict and impartial justice must be done to all. P.]

Ver. 8. Bribes corrupt the minds of judges, and make them, though sensible and ordinarily upright, to judge unjustly.

Ver. 11. The design of this rest of their land was to teach them that they and their land were the Lord's: this year of release, as well as their weekly Sabbaths on the seventh day thou shalt rest; that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid and the stranger may be refreshed.

13 ¶ And in all things that I have said unto you be [o]circumspect: and [p]make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

14 ¶ Three[q] times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year.

15 Thou[r] shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread: (thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee, in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt; [s]and none shall appear before me empty:)

16 And the [t]feast of harvest,[3] the first-fruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in the field; and [u]the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field.[4]

17 Three times in the year all [x]thy males shall appear before the LORD God.

18 ¶ Thou [y]shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice[5] remain[z] until the morning.

19 The[a] first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. [b]Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

20 ¶ Behold,[c] I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the [d]place which I have prepared.

21 Beware[e] of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not [f]pardon your transgressions: for my [g]name[6] is in him.

A.M. 2513. B.C. 1491.

22 But if thou shalt indeed [h]obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then [i]I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries.[7]

23 For[k] mine Angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I will cut them off.

24 Thou[l] shalt not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do after their works; [m]but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and quite break down their images.

25 And [n]ye shall serve the LORD your God, and he shall bless thy bread and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

26 There[o] shall nothing cast their young, nor be barren, in thy land; [p]the number of thy days I will fulfil.

27 I will send my [q]fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come; and I will make all thine enemies turn their [r]backs unto thee.

28 And [s]I will send hornets before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee.

29 I will [t]not drive them out from before thee in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee.

30 By little and [u]little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

31 And [v]I will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and and other jubilees, were typical of the gospel—the new covenant—and the eternal rest.

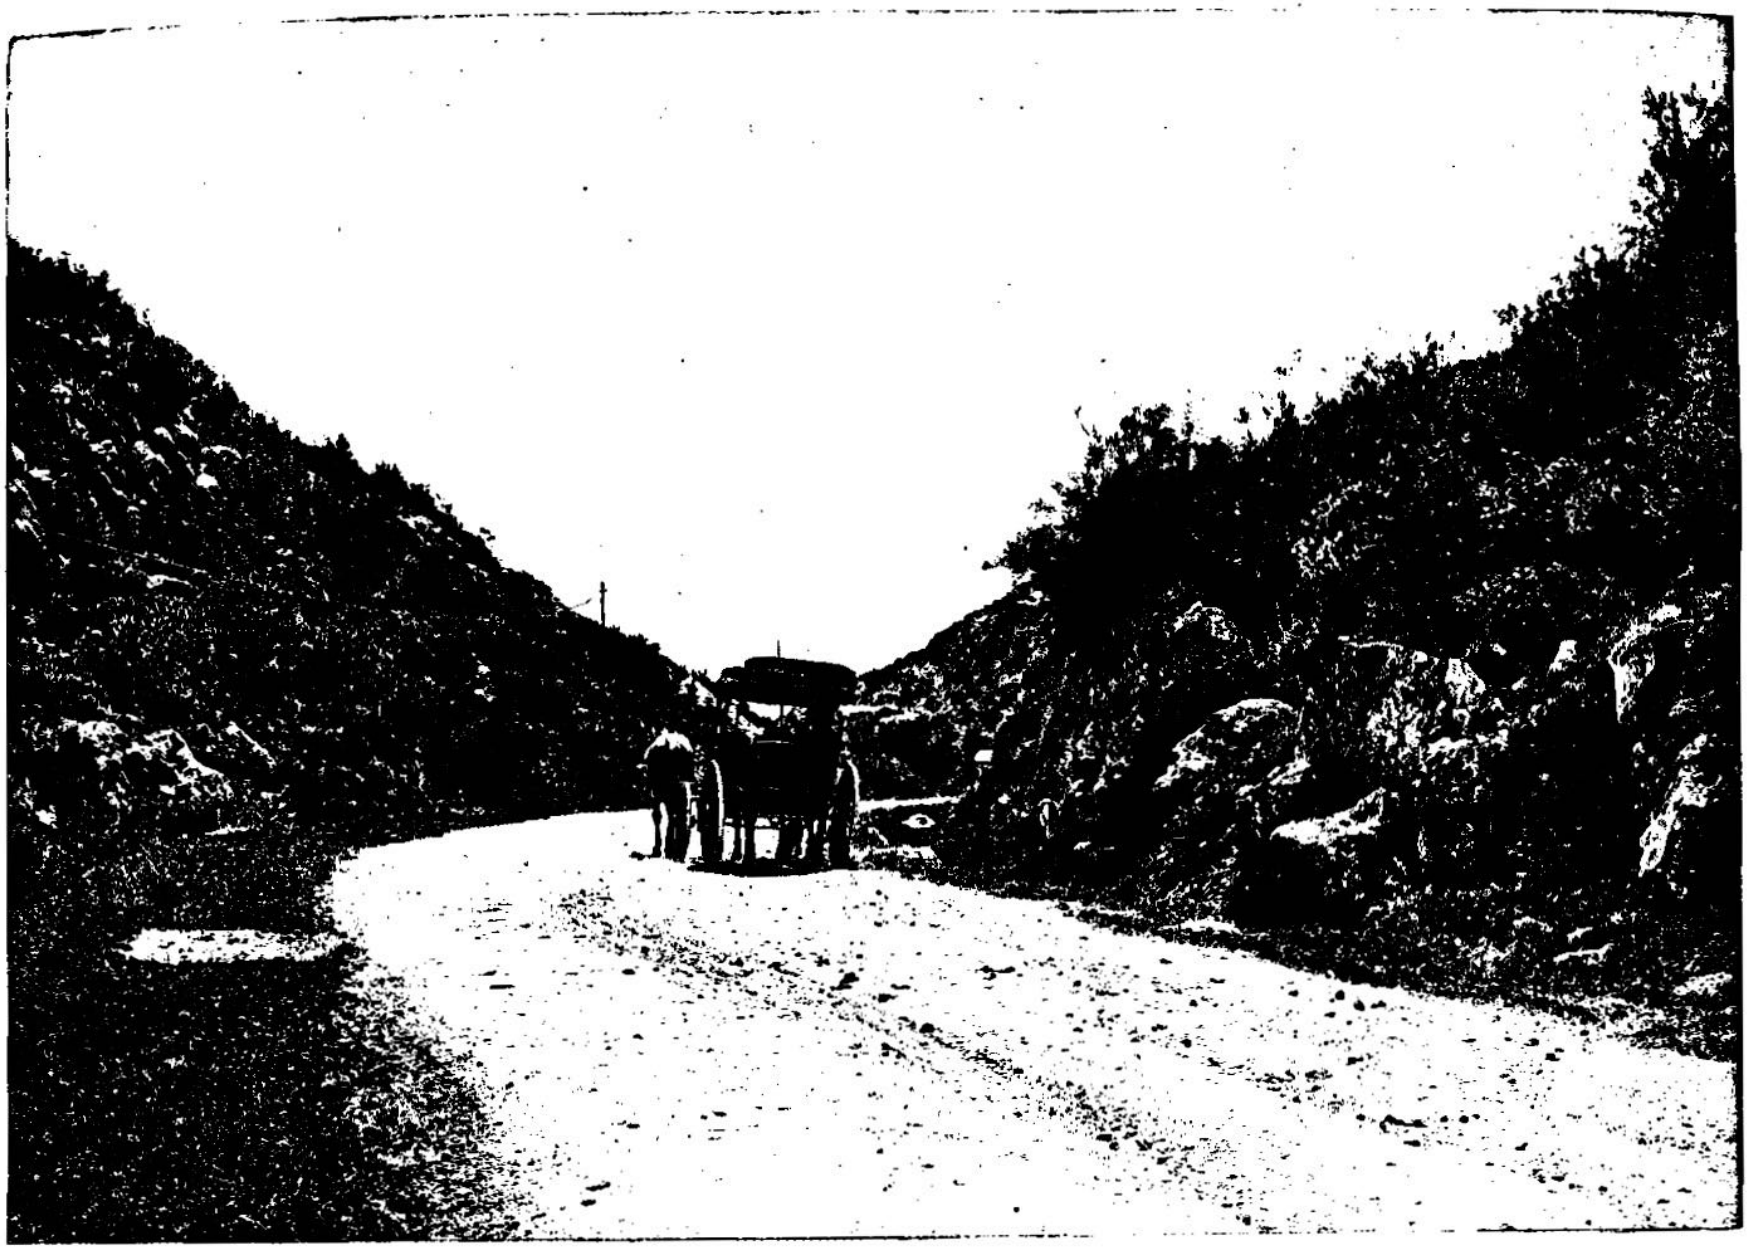
Ver. 15, 16. The feast of unleavened bread was in March; the feast of harvest, weeks, or pentecost, at Whitsunday; the feast of in-gathering, or tabernacles, in September.—[Ver. 15. The passover is here called 'the feast of unleavened bread.' It was the first and greatest of the feasts. The last clause of the verse, 'None shall appear before me empty,' applies not to the passover exclusively, as might be inferred from the English version, but to all the feasts. No man was to appear at any of them without suitable offerings. P.]

Ver. 17. Women were not required, but they might attend their solemn feasts if they pleased.



Ver. 19. This taught them to detest cruelty, and any imitation of idolatrous rites.—[Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk. Whatever be the meaning of this prohibition, there can be no doubt of its importance, as it is thrice enforced in the same words. It is here the last of the judgments delivered to Moses during his first interview with God on the mount, ch. 20. 21, 22; 21. 1; 24. 34. On the renewal of the broken tables, ch. 34. 1, and solemn enunciation of the covenant, ch. 34. 10, the same words are repeated in ver. 26; and lastly, in De. 14. 21, holiness to the Lord, as exhibited in abstaining from forbidden food, immediately precedes. Maimonides, a Jewish expositor, considers it merely a precept against an unwholesome food. Philo, another Jew, considers it a precept against cruelty; and a Cairite Jew, quoted by Cudworth, represents it as a reference to a heathen custom of boiling a kid in its mother's milk, and sprinkling it on fields and trees, with the superstitious idea of rendering them fruitful; and in either the first or last of these opinions, there is a general concurrence of Christian expositors. It is with much diffidence we would venture to present another view. To prepare our way, two facts in Scripture history require to be considered—(1) That the Jews, and the Jewish priesthood, even 'from the days of their fathers, have gone away from God's ordinances, and have not kept them,' Mal. 3. 7, and have 'transgressed, and rendered of none effect the commandments of God by their traditions,' Mat. 15. 3, 6. (2) That one of the sins that did most early and most easily beset or entangle the nation, was the appetite for flesh. Hear the proof from their own lips, Ex. 10. 3, 'Would to God we had died in Egypt, when we sat by the flesh-pots.' See it in their fretful and angry tears, Nu. 11. 3, when they 'wept, and said, Who shall give us flesh to eat?' To a people and priesthood so disposed, it became therefore necessary to give 'precept upon precept' against epicurism in food, and especially against its introduction in their religious festivals. It is remarkable that this prohibition is twice connected with the offering of first-fruits, a festival peculiarly privileged as an occasion of domestic and national joy, De. 26. 11. But on no solemn occasion of thanksgiving has the disposition to indulgence been more observable than in the celebration of the harvest-home—the very festival, in modern language, to which the prohibition is appended. Of this festival, amongst the Jews, a kid constituted an essential part, being appointed for a sin-offering and atonement, Le. 23. 19; Nu. 28. 30. This being observed, two questions present themselves. (1) Why prohibit no other young animal but a kid? According to the manner of Scripture, when ever avoids prolixity in its laws, one of the sacrifices, animals stands for them all. This abbreviation may be exemplified, Ex. 20. 7, where 'the name of the Lord' stands, by irresistible inference, for his 'names, titles, attributes, ordinances, words, and works, or anything whereby he maketh himself known.' (2) Can the reference be to seething this kid, seeing it was a sacrifice? It will appear from examining Le. 23. 19; 4. 23; 3. 13-15 that the chief parts of the sin-offering, Le. 6. 25, 29, were to be 'eaten in the holy place by all the males among the priests.' (3) A third question still remains, Why specially prohibit seething in the mother's milk? From Zec. 14. 21 it appears that seething was the common mode of preparing the feast of the sacrifices. But amongst God's ordinances for sacrifice, we find the following: Le. 22. 27, 'When a bullock, or goat, or sheep, is brought forth, then it shall be seven days under the dam, and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the Lord.' Now it is during these seven reserved and prohibited days that the kid is said to be in or on its mother's milk; and as during that period it could not be sacrificed to the honour of God, so, during a like period, it should not be devoted either to the sustenance or epicurism of man. The prohibition was therefore a special memorial to the priests, for a strict adherence to the ritual of divine service, and a solemn caveat against any infringement, through temptation of appetite—a restraint, which, if the priests faithfully imposed upon themselves, there was every reason to expect would extend its self-denying influence to the people. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Think, O my soul, have I taken heed to my ways, that I might not sin with my tongue? Have I always acted with conscience and impartiality in all my conduct? Have I always spoken only the truth, and that in due season and with a good intent? Have I been a hater of bribery and all perverting of

WADY 'ALI—IN THE LAND PROMISED TO THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL. [Exodus, xxiii:23.]—"For mine angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites." Wady 'Ali is a view of the country on the way between Jaffa and Jerusalem. We left Ramleh at six o'clock, and started for Jerusalem, and came to the Wady 'Ali, which is the valley of entrance to the mountains of Judea, about nine o'clock. This picture was taken as we started up the mountains. This part of the country was embraced in the promise early made to the children of Israel if they would obey the voice of God and provoke Him not to anger. There is something of sublimity combined with delicate beauty about this part of the Judean mountains. Rocks and cliffs broken into large or small fragments are piled in successive layers to form these hills, while between and above and around are wild flowers of all colors.

32 Thou[x] shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods.

33 They[y] shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, it will surely be a snare[8] unto thee.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Moses is called up into the mountain. 3 The people promise obedience. 4 Moses buildeth an altar, and twelve pillars. 6 He sprinkleth the blood of the covenant. 9 The glory of God appeareth. 14 Aaron and Hur have the charge of the people. 15 Moses goeth into the mount, where he continueth forty days and forty nights.

AND he said unto Moses, [a]Come up unto the LORD, thou, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and [b]seventy of the elders of Israel; and worship ye afar off.

2 And [c]Moses alone shall come near the LORD: but they shall not come nigh; neither shall the people go up with him.

3 ¶ And Moses came and told the people all[d] the words of the LORD, and all the judgments: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, [e]All the words which the LORD hath said will we do.

4 ¶ And Moses [f]wrote all the words of the LORD, and [g]rose up early in the morning, and builded[h] an altar under the hill, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.

5 And he sent [i]young men of the children of Israel, which offered [k]burnt-offerings, and sacrificed peace-offerings of oxen unto the LORD.

6 And Moses [l]took half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled [m]on the altar.

7 And he took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, [n]All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.

8 And Moses took the [o]blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold [p]the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

9 ¶ Then[q] went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy[9] of the elders of Israel;

10 And they saw the [r]God of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of a sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in his clearness.

11 And upon the [s]nobles[1] of the children of Israel he [t]laid not his hand: also [u]they saw God, and [v]did eat and drink.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there; and I [w]will give thee tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them.

13 And Moses rose up, and his [x]minister Joshua; and Moses went up into the mount of God.

14 And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and Hur are with you; if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

15 ¶ And Moses went up into the mount, and [y]a cloud covered the mount.

16 And the [z]glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and [a]the seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud.

17 And the sight of the glory of the LORD was like [b]devouring fire on the top of the mount, in the eyes of the children of Israel.

18 And Moses went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and [c]Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.[2]

[7] The country here promised to the Israelites was 500 miles long by 100 broad, and contained 50,000 square miles. The Israelites numbered about two millions, and were therefore nearly equal to the present population of Syria and Palestine. At this moment three-fourths of the country is desolate. Some of the richest plains are uninhabited; and wild beasts —bears, leopards, hyenas, jackals, wild boars, &c.—commit great ravages. God's promise, therefore, recorded above in ver. 29, was wise and good.—P.

[1] The nobles of Israel were the fittest witnesses of the evidences of the divine mission of Moses, as, from their rank, they were least under his influence, and from their education, the most competent judges. God laid not his hand upon them now, though, had they so much as touched the mount formerly, ch. 19. 12, they must have been put to death. But now they are safe, for now they have been called. The nobles are the typical representatives of those who are truly regenerated by being called to be "sons of God." Such a noble may be the poorest, who is yet rich in faith, and an heir of the kingdom of Jesus. And such a poor man may be the noblest who has learned, like the elders in the vision, Re. 4. 10, to cast their crowns at the feet of the Lamb, and worship not the world, but him that liveth for ever and ever.—C.

justice? Have I entertained strangers, done good to mine enemies, and prayed for them that despitefully use me? Do I in all things acknowledge God, the giver of my mercies? Am I careful to keep his Sabbaths, and to observe every instituted opportunity of fellowship with him? Are even his most circumstantial laws hidden in my heart?—While I thus seriously examine myself, endeavour to conform myself to his will, and lament my infirmities and failings, let me rejoice that Jesus, the angel of the covenant, will safely lead me through this wilderness-world to the promised Canaan above, where no accursed inhabitant shall ever molest me, nor idols deceive me. Meanwhile, let him put out my inward corruptions, and the enemies of his people, by little and little; and let me keep myself from idols, and from voluntary intimacy with wicked men, cheerfully obeying his gracious voice, that I may not feel the rod of his chastisement, but in all my ways rejoice in his presence, blessing, and protection.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 4. The altar represented God the chief party in the covenant, and the twelve stony pillars the tribes of Israel, as having hard and stony hearts.

Ver. 6–8. The sprinkling of the blood on the altar, the book, the young men, the elders, and the pillars which represented the people, denoted the satisfaction of God's perfections, the fulfilment of the broken law, and the purification of men's consciences by the blood of Jesus. Hence, in ver. 9, 10, God, perhaps in human shape, appears as smiling on them; and they, with comfort and safety, feast in his presence.

Ver. 10. [Body of heaven in his clearness. It is only in the unclouded skies of the countries within or approaching the tropics, that the power of this expression can be fully appreciated. C.]

Ver. 12. [The ten commandments had already been spoken by the voice of Jehovah from Sinai; but no authentic copy of them had yet been given to Moses. It was for the purpose of giving him an authentic copy that the Lord now summoned Moses to the mount. P.]

Ver. 16. In these six days Moses is prepared to receive new commandments, as the people were in three days prepared for hearing the law.

REFLECTIONS.—One instance of fellowship with God insures and prepares for another more remarkable, while believers are allowed to come even to his seat—for this purpose his oracles are revealed and his ordinances dispensed to us. But how many rashly consent to God's word, and resolve on duty, who in the issue prove very unsteadfast! Let me then bless the Lord that our testament is made with all the true, however unworthy in themselves; and that it is a new testament in Christ's blood. His finished atonement hath glorified his Father's compassion to the highest; hath magnified the law; and pacifies and purges our conscience from dead works. By these means I am determined to receive his words into my heart as indeed the word of God, since I am allowed the clear and amiable displays of a reconciled God, while in his presence I feast on the flesh and blood of his Son. But behold, likewise, how my Redeemer, having fulfilled the law, and by himself purged away our sins, ascends into the hill of God, sits down on the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens, and thence, in due time, he will return without sin unto salvation.

CHAPTER XXV. Ver. 1. These and other ceremonial institutes are minutely described, because they flowed from the holy will of God. They were significant of great and important things; and were to be 23 ¶ Thou[b] shalt also make a table of shittim-wood: two cubits shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

24 And thou shalt overlay it with [c]pure gold, and make thereto a [d]crown of gold round about.

25 And thou shalt make unto it [e]a border of an hand-breadth round about; and thou shalt make a golden crown to the border thereof round about.

26 And thou shalt make for it four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof.

27 Over against the border shall the rings be, for places of the staves to [f]bear the table.

28 And thou shalt make the [g]staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold, that the table may be borne with them.

29 And[h] thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and spoons thereof, and covers thereof, and bowls thereof, to cover withal:[7] of[i] pure gold shalt thou make them.[8] strictly observed in the adoration of a God, jealous with respect to his own worship.

Ver. 5. [Shittim-wood. The particular wood called shittim, sittinus, and sittah, is merely matter of conjecture. The Septuagint translate it incorruptible-wood—a name that, in some degree, may apply to many species. Jerome says it grows in Arabia, and resembles the white-thorn in colour and leaves; and is so large as to yield long planks, which are hard, tough, smooth, and extremely beautiful. It is thought that the wood described by Jerome is the black acacia. It is abundant in the mountains of Sinai and the surrounding desert. In Is. 41. 19 the shittim is joined with the myrtle and other fragrant shrubs; and as the flowers of the acacia furnish, according to Dr. Shaw, an excellent perfume, we have here an additional evidence of its identity with the sittah. C.]

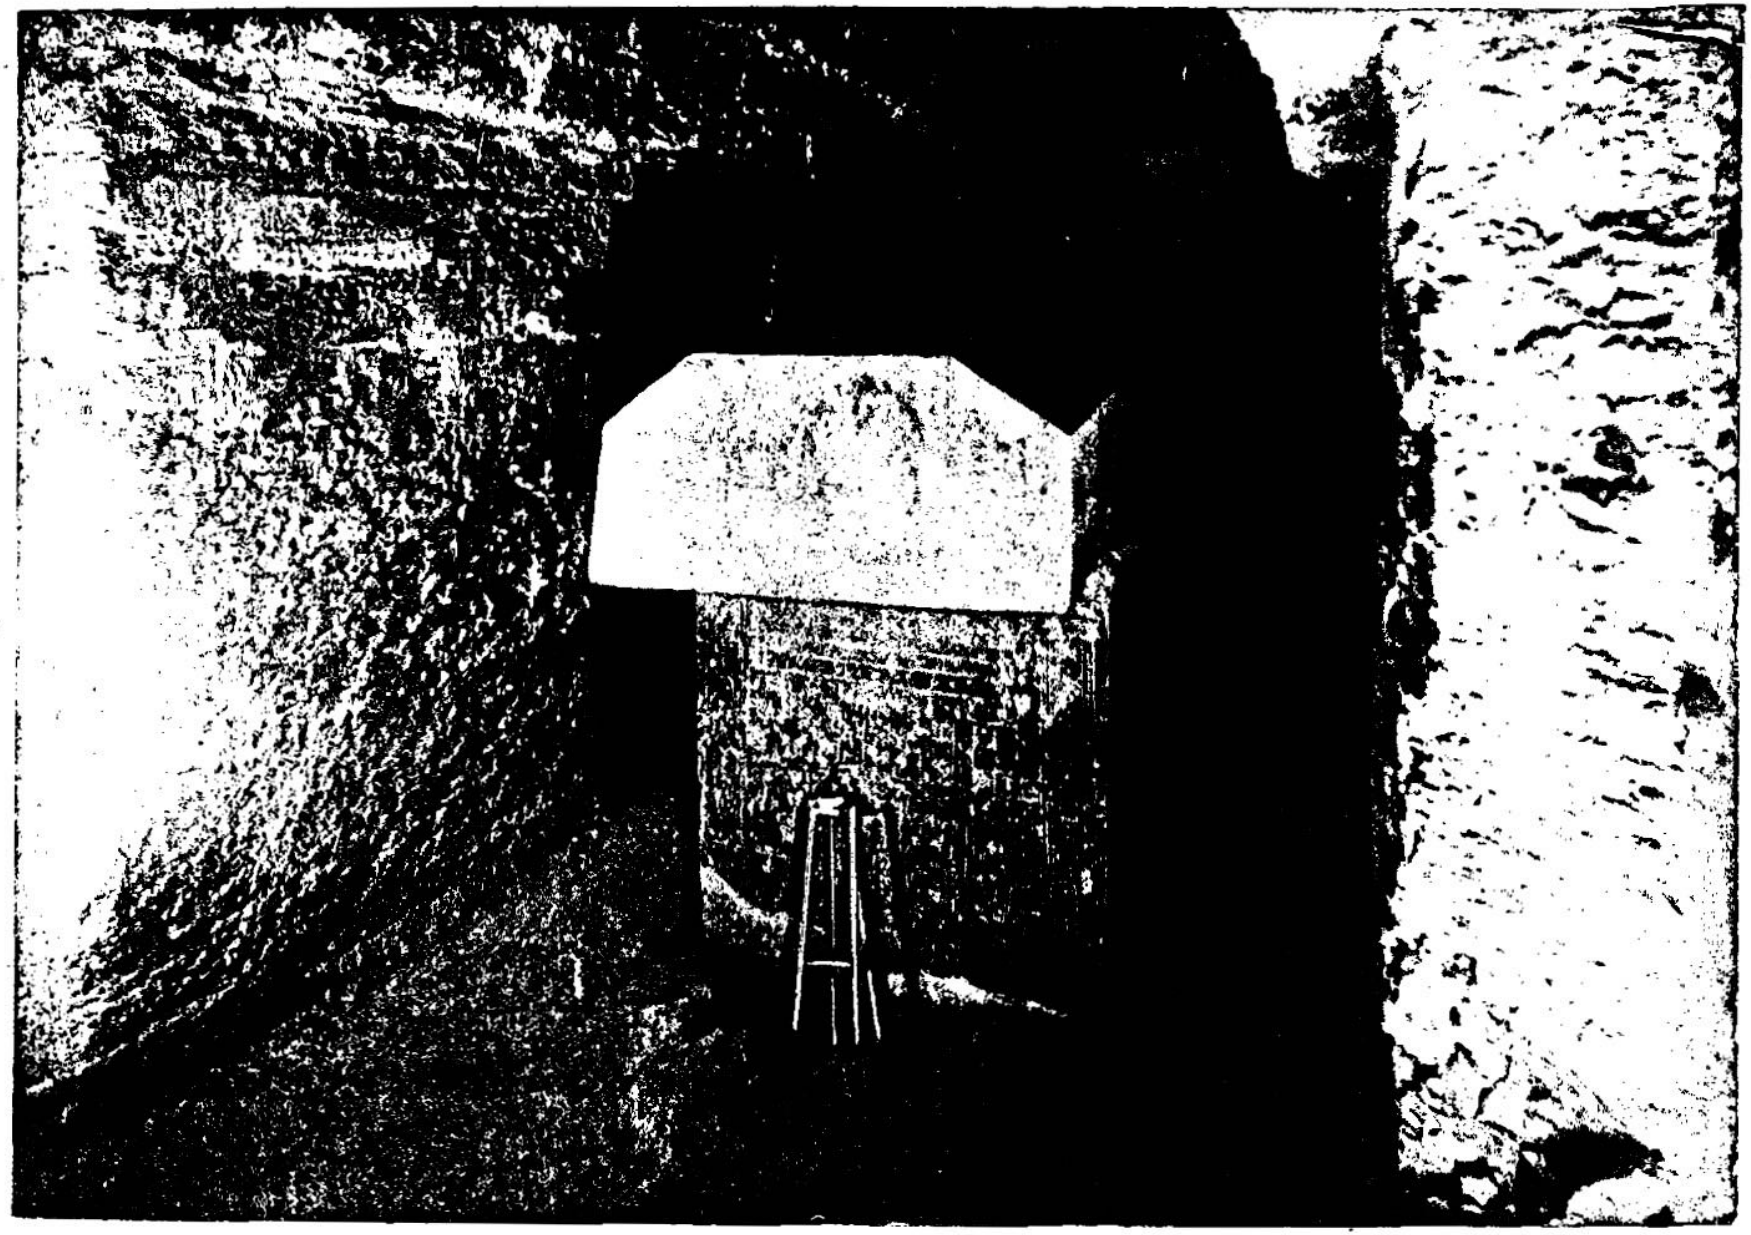
Ver. 8. While this tabernacle was a sign of God's presence with and protection of his people, it was a type (1) of Christ's person, He. 8. 2; (2) of the gospel-church, the habitation of God by the Spirit, 2 Co. 6. 16; (3) of every Christian in whose heart God dwells, 1 Cor. 3.16;6.19; (4) of the new blessed and heavenly state, Is. 66. 1; and according to these different significations may the furniture thereof be understood in different views.

Ver. 10. The ark was the chief of all the sacred furniture which peculiarly sanctified the tabernacle, and for which it was principally made.

Ver. 16. The two tables of stone upon which the law was written are called the testimony, because they witnessed the covenant between God and the people; testified what God required of them; and testified against them if they observed it not.



Ver. 17. The lid, or mercy-seat, placed between the tables of the law and the Shekinah, or cloudy symbol of the divine presence, denoted Jesus' atonement; which answers to all the demands of the law, and interposes between us and Jehovah, that he may deal mercifully with us in Christ.

Ver. 18. The cherubims signified angels, as prying into the mysteries of redemption, and ministering to Christ and his people; or ministers, as founded on Christ, admiring his work, and attending on God and his service.

Ver. 23. This table typified Christ as having all fulness in him, and supporting and sacrificing before God for the people; and also the gospel-church and the ordinances of it.

Ver. 31. This candlestick typified Christ himself, or his gospel-church and ordinances thereof.

Ver. 39. [With all these vessels. The talent of gold is estimated from £5250 to £7013. This is the first time the word talent occurs in Scripture. May not the first use of it illustrate the impressive parable of the talents? Mat. 25. 14. One talent formed the candlestick, with all its necessary and ornamental parts; yet the candlestick itself gave no light; for that were required the oil and the fire. And such is the man who, with knowledge unsanctified by the Spirit, and affections unlighted by the love of Christ, 'holds,' rather bridles in the truth in unrighteousness; who, knowing God, glorifies him not as God; who changes his truth into a lie, and worships and serves the creature more than the Creator; who does not like to retain God in his knowledge; and who, knowing the judgment of death against sin, not only commits sin himself, but derives his pleasure from his companions in guiltiness, Ro. 1. 18, 21, 25, 28, 32. C.]

SARCOPHAGUS OF APIS BULL, MEMPHIS—SHOWING WHERE THE ISRAELITES GOT THE IDEA OF THE GOLDEN CALF. [EXODUS, XXV: 22.]—"And there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel." It is impossible to imagine a contrast greater than that found between the elements of worship among the Egyptians and such as were introduced among the Hebrews by Moses. The great difference in the civilizations developed by the Egyptians and the Israelites may be accounted for by considering the infinite distance between their religious. In this twenty-second verse we have reference made to the mercy seat between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, and in this picture we have a view of an immense sarcophagus of an Apis Bull in the Serapeum near Memphis. The Apis Bull was the sacred animal of Ptah. No wonder the Egyptians were a degraded people, and that the Israelites through a pure form of worship came to the highest civilization of ancient times.

31 ¶ And[1] thou shalt make a candlestick of pure gold; of beaten work shall the candlestick[8] be made: his shaft, and his branches, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, shall be of the same.

32 And [m]six branches shall come out of the sides of it; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side:

33 Three bowls made like unto almonds, with a knop and a flower in one branch; and three bowls made like almonds in the other branch, with a knop and a flower: so in the six branches that come out of the candlestick.

34 And in the candlestick shall be four bowls made like unto almonds, with their knops and their flowers.

35 And there shall be a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches that proceed out of the candlestick.

36 Their knops and their branches shall be of the same: all of it shall be one beaten work of pure gold.

37 And thou shalt make the seven lamps thereof: and they shall light[9] the lamps thereof, that they may give light [n]over against it.[2]

38 And [o]the tongs thereof, and the snuff-dishes thereof, shall be of pure gold.

39 Of a talent of pure gold shall he make it, with all these vessels.

40 And [p]look that thou make them after their pattern, which was showed thee[2] in the mount.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 The ten curtains of the tabernacle. 7 The eleven curtains of goats' hair. 14 The covering of rams' skins. 15 The boards of the tabernacle, with their sockets and bars. 31 The vail for the ark. 36 The hanging for the door.

MOREOVER, thou shalt make the [a]tabernacle with ten curtains of [b]fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims[c] of cunning work[3] shalt thou make them.

2 The length of one curtain shall be eight and twenty cubits, and[4] the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and every one of the curtains shall have one measure.

3 The five curtains shall be [d]coupled together one to another; and other five curtains shall be coupled one to another.

4 And thou shalt make [e]loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain, from the selvedge in the coupling; and likewise shalt thou make in the uttermost edge of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

5 Fifty [f]loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second, that the loops may take hold one of another.

6 And thou shalt make fifty [g]taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches: and it shall be one tabernacle.

7 ¶ And[r] thou shalt make curtains of goats' hair,[5] to be a covering upon the tabernacle; eleven curtains shalt thou make.

8 The length of one curtain[6] shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure.

9 And thou shalt couple five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tabernacle.

10 And thou shalt make fifty [h]loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling, and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

11 And thou shalt make [i]fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the tent[7] together, that it may be one.

12 And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half-curtain that remaineth, shall hang over the backside of the tabernacle.

13 And a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side, of that which remaineth[8] in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side and on that side, to cover it.

14 ¶ And thou shalt make [k]a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a [l]covering above of badgers' skins.[1]

15 ¶ And thou shalt make [t]boards for the tabernacle of shittim-wood, standing up.

16 Ten cubits shall be the length of a board, and a cubit and a half shall be the breadth of one board.

17 Two [m]tenons shall there be in one board, set in order one against another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

18 And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards on the south side southward.

19 And thou shalt make forty sockets of

Upon the top of the shaft and extremities of the branches were seven lamps, fed with pure olive-oil, and lighted every evening by the priests in their courses. It was situated in the holy place, and gave light to the altar of incense and table of show-bread, which stood in the same apartment. 1 In the coverings of the tents the orientals regard both the stuff and the colour; the requirement was to be distinguished in both particulars. The outer tent which lay under the beams was the most beautiful and the most costly. On the linen inner stuff were embroidered cherubims of dark blue, purple, and scarlet. Over the inner curtain a covering of goats' hair was spread, and to prevent the covering from injury by the dust, two others made of skins were laid over them. 'The whole represents the person and doctrine of Christ, his true church, and all heavenly things, which are not seen by, and to the carnal eye, mean; but are inwardly, and in the sight of God, exceedingly glorious and precious. The secure protection which he prepares for those who are precious in his sight may also be denoted, and the unity of the whole, formed of so many pieces, and of such different materials, into one covering of the sanctuary, represents the spiritual temple, formed of persons of different nations, dispositions, abilities, and attainments, compacted together by the Spirit of love.' REFLECTIONS.—Since, in deep compassion to human poverty, JEHOVAH hath freely taken upon himself the immensity of the work of redemption; the infinite duty of raising up a Saviour, erecting a church, and preparing a new life and a heavenly state, as means of his residence amongst us; since he has made Jesus an ARK for holding and fulfilling his law; a propitiatory or MERCY-SEAT, whence, to the everlasting astonishment of angels and men, and by their ministration, he may declare his oracles, promises, and laws; a TABLE to feed his people, and on which the tribes of the redeemed are, in their successive generations, safely and honourably to come before God; and a LIGHT to his church, by his word and Spirit;—may I, may thousands more, be the willing members of his church! Let us surrender ourselves, and all that we have, whether more or less valuable, to the service of Christ! Following with care the prescriptions of Heaven, let us come boldly to the throne of his grace, and commune with our God! Let us feast from day to day, especially from one Sabbath to another, upon Jesus, the bread indeed—Jesus, the finest of the wheat; that we may be to God a sweet savour of Christ! And even in this earthly tabernacle and militant church let us walk in the light of the Lord; so shall we shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life!

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS.—How graciously God suits the tokens of his favour to our circumstances, as he formed a movable residence and furniture for himself to the wandering condition of believing people. But herein may I contemplate Jesus; mean and debased in the view of carnal beholders, but 22 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward thou shalt make six boards.

23 And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

24 And they shall be [t]coupled together beneath, and they shall be coupled together above the head of it unto one ring: thus shall it be for them both; they shall be for the two corners.

25 And they shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets: two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

26 ¶ And thou shalt make [u]bars of shittim-wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, 27 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the two sides westward.

28 And the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall reach from end to end.

29 And thou shalt overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold.

30 And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle,[8] according[v] to the fashion thereof which was showed thee in the mount.

33 And thou shalt hang up [x]the vail under the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither within the vail the [y]ark of the testimony: and the vail shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy.

34 And thou shalt [z]put the mercy-seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place.

35 And thou shalt set the table [a]without the vail, and the candlestick over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle toward the south: and thou shalt put the table on the north side.

36 ¶ And thou shalt make [b]an hanging for the door of the tent of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needle-work.

37 And thou shalt make for the hanging five pillars of shittim-wood, and [c]overlay them with gold; and their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt cast five sockets of brass for them.

AND thou shalt make an [d]altar[9] of shittim-wood, five cubits long,[1] and five cubits broad; the altar shall be four-square: and the height thereof shall be three cubits.

3 And thou shalt make his pans to receive his ashes, and his [g]shovels, and his basons, and his flesh-hooks, and his fire-pans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of brass.

4 And thou shalt make for it a [h]grate of net-work of brass; and upon the net shalt thou make four brazen rings in the four corners thereof.

5 And thou shalt put it under the compass of the altar beneath, that the net may be even to the midst of the altar.

6 And thou shalt make staves for the altar, staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with brass.

7 And the staves shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be upon the two sides of the altar, to [i]bear it.

8 Hollow with boards shalt thou make it: [j]as it was showed[3] thee in the mount, so shall they make it.

9 ¶ And thou shalt make the [k]court of the tabernacle: for the south side southward there shall be hangings for the court of fine twined linen, of an hundred cubits[4] long, for one side.

10 And the twenty pillars thereof, and their twenty sockets, shall be of brass: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver.

inwardly decked with all the golden glories of Godhead and the pure graces of manhood! I see how everything about him, as Mediator, is founded and fixed in, erected and joined together, according to the love and by the infinite wisdom and power of God. Let me behold, likewise, the Christian church, outwardly despicable in the view of a carnal world, but inwardly decked, established, and knit together by every precious ordinance, spiritual grace, faithful minister, or true saint! Let my entrance into her be by Jesus Christ, the door, the way, the truth, and the life: and amidst all my outward infirmities, let me be all-glorious within, a meet habitation of God through the Spirit! Thus shall I have access with boldness, by the blood of Jesus, into the sanctuary of fellowship with God on earth, and in due time into the heavenly state, the holiest of all.

CHAPTER XXVII. REFLECTIONS.—Since I have the once debased the all-atoning, all-perfect, powerful, and all-accessible Jesus for my altar;—since I have his church and ordinances for a court and place of worship, divinely bounded and protected;—the oracles, gifts, and graces of his Spirit, for my all-illuminating oil;—let me, conscious of crimes unnumbered, flee to him as my refuge, and by faith lay hold on his horns of saving power and authority. Let me give up myself, and all that I have, to God through him; that MUMMIES OF PRIESTS—THE BODIES OF PRIESTS EMBALMED BEFORE AARON AND HIS SONS WERE APPOINTED TO THE PRIESTHOOD IN ISRAEL. [EXODUS, xxviii: 1.]—"And take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office." The difference between the functions of the priests in Egypt and the priests in Israel were as great as the difference between the Apis Bull, the god of the Egyptians, and the Holy Law of God. The priests of Egypt had a work to do which kept the people degraded. The priests of Israel performed a work that gradually elevated and ennobled the people. The view we give above is a picture taken in the Gizeh Museum. By the special request of E. Brugsch Bey, the doors of this book-case-like framework in which the priests were placed one upon another were opened so that our artist had the opportunity of direct access to the priests by his camera. There were a great many in the same room, of which the above picture gives us a fair sample. They are well preserved mummies, and illustrate for us how thoroughly the ancient Egyptians understood the art of embalming.

13 And the breadth of the court on the east side eastward shall be fifty cubits.

14 The hangings of one side of the gate shall be fifteen[5] cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And on the other side shall be hangings, fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 And for the gate of the court shall be an hanging of [t]twenty cubits, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needle-work: and their pillars shall be four, and their sockets four.

17 All the pillars round about the court shall be filleted with silver: their hooks shall be of silver, and their sockets of brass.

18 ¶ The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth fifty[6] everywhere, and the height five cubits of fine twined linen, and their sockets of brass.

19 All the vessels of the tabernacle in all the service thereof, and all the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court, shall be of brass.

20 ¶ And thou shalt command the children of Israel, that they bring thee [k]pure oil-olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamp to burn[7] always.[8]

21 In the tabernacle of the congregation[9] without the vail, which is before the [l]testimony, Aaron and his sons shall [m]order it from evening to morning before the LORD. It shall be a statute for ever unto their generations on the behalf of the children of Israel.

AND [a]take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, even [b]Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's sons.

2 ¶ And thou shalt make [c]holy garments for Aaron thy brother, for glory and for beauty.

3 And thou shalt speak unto all that are wise-hearted,[d] whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom, that they may make Aaron's garments to consecrate him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

4 And these are the garments[1] which they shall make; [e]a breastplate, and an ephod, and a robe, and a broidered coat, a mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

5 And they shall take [f]gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen.

6 ¶ And[g] they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of purple, of scarlet, and fine twined linen, with cunning work.

7 It shall have the two shoulder-pieces thereof joined at the two edges thereof; and so it shall be joined together.

8 And the [h]curious girdle of the ephod, which is upon it, shall be of the same, according to the work thereof; even of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 And[i] thou shalt take two onyx-stones, and grave on them the names of the children of Israel.

10 Six of their names on one stone, and the other six names of the rest on the other stone, [k]according to their birth.

11 With the work of an engraver in stone, like the engravings of a signet, shalt thou engrave the two stones with the names of the children of Israel: thou shalt make them to be set in ouches of gold.

12 And thou shalt [l]put the two stones upon the shoulders of the ephod, for stones of memorial unto the children of Israel: and Aaron shall bear[2] their names before the LORD upon his two shoulders for a memorial.

13 And thou shalt make ouches of gold;

14 And two chains of pure gold at the ends: of wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make the [m]breastplate of judgment with cunning work; after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it: of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen, thou shalt make it.

16 Four-square it shall be, being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof.

17 And thou shalt set in it settings of [3]stones, even [n]four rows of stones; the first row shall be a sardius,[4] a topaz, and a carbuncle: this shall be the first row.

18 And the second row shall be an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

19 And the third row a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst.

The hanging that separated these apartments was called the vail: and hence the expressions within and without the vail. The people were never admitted to either of these apartments. The priests alone went into the outer, and the high-priest once a year into the inner. The most holy place contained only the ark and its contents: the holy place contained the altar of incense, table of show-bread, and candlestick. The open court in front of the tabernacle contained the brazen altar and laver.—C.—The inner or most holy place was a perfect cube, measuring ten cubits each way: the outer or holy place was double the size, being twenty cubits long by ten wide and ten high.—P.

[1] The high priest's dress was common to the other priests, the two shoulder-piece, the breastplate, the Urim and Thummim, the robe of the ephod, the mitre, the coat of fine linen, the bonnets, and the linen breeches. The ephod was a close embroidered robe, reaching from the shoulders to the knee, confined there by the girdle. On each shoulder-piece was a socket of gold, containing an onyx stone, with the names of the tribes graven on it. The breast-plate were twelve gems, also having the names of the tribes. The typical bearing of these is very significant. Is. 49. 1 Pe. 2. 5, 9. Re. 1. 6. 5. 10. 19. 9. He. 9. 24. The Urim and Thummim, or "lights and perfections," were identical with the gems in the breastplate, compare ver. 29 with ver. 30; ch. 39. 8 with Le. 8. 8. As responses were anciently obtained by them, so will it be still. Our High-priest has all men constantly upon his heart, and is continually making intercession for them. The robe of the ephod was a long, blue linen gown, reaching to the ankles, and decorated with pomegranates and bells. Christ's robe of right eousness covers the whole man. The mitre was a turban of fine linen, having a plate of gold, which the ministers wanted. The believer's diadem will be a crown of glory that fadeth not away. The linen breeches reached from the loins to a little below the knee, and were made tight by being strongly drawn close like a purse.—C.

CHAPTER XXVIII. REFLECTIONS.—Come, my soul, is not the smell of my Redeemer's garments, his unspotted manhood, his mediatorial office, and his everlasting righteousness, as of a field which the Lord hath blessed! Are not these for glory and for beauty to himself and to his people! Is he not everyway fitted to attract the admiration of angels and of men! everyway qualified to atone for, to remember all men, and present them before God! Are not even the appearances and actions of his debased state calculated to promote his own and his Father's honour and our everlasting happiness! Let me then behold and receive him as the great High-priest of my profession; behold how, in his manhood, in his mediatorial office, and finished righteousness, he bears the names of all people in all their diversified conditions, and supports and presents them before God! What sweet fruits and joyful sounds of gospel grace issue from his incarnation, righteousness, and intercession! In what a dignified manner hath he put away our sins that we

INTERIOR LATIN CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, NAZARETH—STANDING OVER THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY IN WHICH CHRIST GREW UP. [EXODUS, xxviii: 36.]—"And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD." All the rites and ceremonies, and types and shadows, and burnt offerings and sin offerings and peace offerings that were used by divine appointment among the children of Israel tended to teach two great truths: first, that the Lord God is holy, and second, that he demands holiness on the part of his people. For two thousand years God was preparing the children of Israel through the appointments of the Jewish church for the coming of His own Son. The Church of the Annunciation in Nazareth stands as a memorial of what the angel said to Mary: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, and therefore, also, that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." This church is situated within the walls of the Latin monastery in Nazareth and is generally the first place visited by travelers to this city of our Savior's boyhood.

20 And the fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper; they shall be set in gold in their enclosings.[4]

21 And the stones shall be [c]with the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet; every one with his name shall they be [f]according to the twelve tribes.

22 And[g] thou shalt make upon the breastplate chains at the ends of wreathen work of pure gold.

23 And thou shalt make upon the breastplate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate.

24 And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breastplate.

25 And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt fasten[5] in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulder-pieces of the ephod before it.

26 And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breastplate, in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward.

27 And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the fore-part thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

28 And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod.

29 And Aaron shall [r]bear the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgment upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the LORD continually.[6]

30 ¶ And thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgment the [t]Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make [u]the robe of the ephod all of blue.

33 And beneath upon the hem[8] of it, thou shalt make [x]pomegranates of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the hem thereof; and [y]bells of gold between them round about:

34 A golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the hem of the robe round about.

35 And it shall be upon Aaron to minister: and his [z]sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the LORD, and when he cometh out, that he die not.

36 ¶ And thou shalt make a [a]plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

37 And thou shalt put it on a blue lace,[9] that it may be upon the mitre;[1] upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be.

38 And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may [b]bear the iniquity[2] of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the LORD.

39 ¶ And thou shalt embroider the [c]coat of fine linen, and thou shalt make the [d]mitre of fine linen, and thou shalt make the [e]girdle of needle-work.

40 ¶ And [f]for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and bonnets shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty.

41 And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him; and shalt [g]anoint them, and consecrate them,[3] and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office.

42 And thou shalt make them linen [h]breeches to cover their[4] nakedness; from the loins even [i]unto the thighs they shall reach.[5]

43 And they shall be upon Aaron, and upon his sons, when they come in unto the tabernacle of the congregation, or when they come near unto the altar to minister in the holy place; that they [k]bear not iniquity, and die. It shall be a statute [l]for ever unto him, and his seed after him.

6 'The breastplate of judgment' was so called, because the high-priest wore it whenever he consulted the Lord about the concerns of religion and government, in order to deliver the judgment of God to the rulers in the congregation. It was a piece of fine linen cloth, woven, dyed, and embroidered, like the golden ephod, and being doubled it was a span square. Upon it were fixed twelve precious stones, set in sockets, or sockets of gold; and on each of them was engraven the name of one of the sons of Israel; these being considered as the representatives of the twelve tribes. It is doubted whether the name of Levi was engraven, as that tribe might be sufficiently represented by the high-priest himself, or whether Manasseh and Ephraim had each a separate stone as forming two tribes; but the text seems to imply that the names of all Jacob's sons were engraven and no other. —Scott.

die not! And, though in all things he must have the pre-eminence, let me, and all his children, be arrayed in the priestly robes of righteousness imparted, grace implanted, and of a holy conversation; and let me ever remember that it is death, eternal death, to all, but chiefly to ministers, if they attempt to serve God without putting on the Lord Jesus, as made of God to them righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.

CHAPTER XXIX. Ver. 1. Their oblations signified that they and their services should be holy, gracious, and excellent. Their washing signified justification and regeneration by the blood and Spirit of Christ.—[The priest's office.] The priestly office, being not only an eminent type of Christ, but likewise of all believers, who are 'a royal priesthood,' 1 Pe. 2. 9, the work of consecration demands our special notice. (1) In the three animals for sacrifice we have the surrender

3 And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams.

4 And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring unto[c] the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt [d]wash them with water.

5 And thou shalt take the [e]garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breastplate, and gird him with the curious girdle of the ephod;

6 And thou shalt [f]put the mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown upon the mitre.

7 Then shalt thou take the [g]anointing oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him.

8 And[h] thou shalt bring his sons, and put coats upon them.

9 And thou shalt gird them with girdles, (Aaron and his sons,) and put[i] the bonnets on them; and the priest's office shall be theirs for a perpetual statute: and thou shalt [k]consecrate Aaron and his sons.[5]

10 And thou shalt cause a [l]bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation; and [l]Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock.[6]

11 And thou shalt [m]kill the bullock before the LORD, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

12 And thou shalt [n]take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon the [o]horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.

13 And [p]thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul[7] that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar.

14 But[q] the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin-offering.

15 Thou[r] shalt also take one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

16 And [s]thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.

17 And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and [t]wash the inwards of him and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and unto[8] his head.

18 And thou shalt burn [u]the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt-offering[9] unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

19 And thou shalt take the [x]other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall [y]put their hands upon the head of the ram.

20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and [z]take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of [a]the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be [b]hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.[1]

22 Also[c] thou shalt take of the ram the fat, and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration;

23 And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD:

24 And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons, and shalt [d]wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

of life to God. (2) In the three forms of bread the surrender of the means of life. (3) In the consecration, we may remark the washing of Aaron and his sons. In this we have set forth, in emblem, the introduction of believers, 'by the washing of regeneration,' and renewing of the Holy Ghost, Tit. 3. 5; in the clothing we have their justification by 'the righteousness which is of God through faith,' Phi. 3. 9; in the crowning we have that honour to which the Father raises all who serve the Son, Jn. 12. 26; in the anointing we have that outpouring of the Spirit by which believers are endowed, instructed, and qualified for the holy offices and duties to which they are called, 1 Jn. 2. 20, 27; while in the girding of the garments we have that firm determination with which true believers maintain their principles and protect their graces. Farther, in the laying of their hands on the head of the sacrifice, Le. 16. 23, we have Christ confessing, not his own sins (for he knew no sin), but our sins which he bore, 1 Pe. 12. 24; and we have believers repeating daily in the Lord's prayer, 'forgive us our trespasses.' In the killing of the sacrifices we have the mortification of sin as an indweller, and the death to sin as a ruler, Ro. 8. 13; 6. 18. In the commencement of the sacrifice with the inwards, especially with the fat, as the emblem of abundance, health, ease, we have that purification as by fire of the inner man, which God specially desires, Ps. 51. 6, while in the final and total burning of the outwards, and more worthless inwards, we have the final and total deliverance of believers from the body of sin and death, Ro. 7. 24, 25. The ear of Aaron and his sons was first touched with the blood, for 'faith cometh by hearing,' and nothing to a sinner is worth the hearing but the 'blood that cleanseth from all sin,' 1 Jn. 1. 7. The thumb, the chief instrument of holding, and the thumb of the right hand, as the emblem of active power, was next touched; then the great toe of the right foot, the chief supporter of speedy and equable movement in walking or running, the Spirit signifying the need of pardon to the active powers of the whole man. Next the blood was sprinkled round about the altar, to remind believers of the sinfulness of their holy things. Finally the blood, the emblem of redemption; the oil, the emblem of the Spirit, were conjointly sprinkled upon Aaron and his sons, and their garments, thus reminding us that it is the Spirit that 'applies to us the redemption purchased by Christ, provoking faith and thereby uniting us to Christ in our spiritual life.' Aaron and his sons thus consecrated, appear to give a wave-offering, which moved by their hands, as a branch moves in every wind, and to every quarter of the earth, acknowledged the Lord, who, 'as far as the east is from the west, removes our transgressions,' Ps. 103. 12. He likewise offered a heave-offering; that is, heaving upwards the sacrifice, as an emblematic address to 'our Father who is in heaven,' and 'who, as the heaven is high above the earth, hath love so great to them that fear him,' Ps. 103. 11. The high-priest's garments were hereditary, ver. 28, so is the righteousness of God, upon the High-priest of our profession, Christ Jesus, He. 3. 1, 'unto all and upon all that do believe,' Ro. 3. 22. Aaron and his sons did eat in the holy place; even so, 'whether we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do, (should be) all to the glory of God,' 1 Co. 10. 3. They were consecrated seven days, which represent all time; one week being a repetition of another, and denote the perpetual service which the eternal One requires. C.]

Ver. 7. The common priests were, at least at first, anointed by sprinkling; but the high-priest had oil poured out plentifully upon his head, Ps. 133. 3.

Ver. 12. The brazen altar was thus solemnly sanctified, that it might sanctify the offerings of the people.

Ver. 19. This was a kind of peace-offering, to thank God for calling them to the office, and to solicit his assistance in the discharge of it.

REFLECTIONS.—Through these dark shadows of good things to come, these washings, arrayings, oblations, and unctions, I look to Jesus and his ransomed offspring. I see his solemn call to his work, and theirs to their station. The infinite purity of his Godhead, the perfect holiness of his manhood; the complete humanity which he assumed; the extensive office which he undertook; the humble obedience which he fulfilled; the unbounded influences of the Holy Ghost which he received—fully qualified him to offer himself in his death, and to make continual intercession for us.

25 And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and [r]burn them upon the altar for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD; it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and [s]wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.

27 And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave-offering, and the shoulder of the [t]heave-offering which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons.

28 And[h] it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by a statute for ever from the children of Israel; for it is an heave-offering: and it shall be an heave-offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace-offerings, even their heave-offering unto the LORD.

29 And [u]the holy garments of Aaron shall be his son's after him, to be [k]anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.

30 And that son[l] that is priest in his stead shall put them on [v]seven days,[9] when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation, to minister in the holy place.

31 And thou [m]shalt take the ram of the consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place.[1]

32 And Aaron and his sons shall [n]eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

33 And they shall eat those things wherewith the atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but a [o]stranger shall not eat thereof, because they are holy.

34 And [p]if ought of the flesh of the consecrations, or of the bread, remain unto the morning, then thou shalt burn the remainder with fire: it shall not be eaten, because it is holy.

35 And thus shalt thou do unto Aaron, and to his sons, according to all things which I have commanded thee: [q]seven days shalt thou consecrate them.

36 And thou shalt [r]offer every day[2] a bullock for a sin-offering for atonement: and thou shalt cleanse the altar, when thou hast made an atonement for it, and thou shalt [s]anoint it, to sanctify it.

37 Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar, and sanctify it; and it shall be an altar [t]most holy: whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.[3]

38 ¶ Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; [u]two lambs of the first year, day by day, continually.[4]

39 The one lamb thou shalt offer in the morning, and the other lamb thou shalt offer [v]at even:

40 And with[5] the one lamb a [w]tenth-deal[6] of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil; and the fourth part of an hin[7] of wine for [x]a drink-offering.[8]

41 And the other lamb thou shalt offer at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meat-offering of the morning, and according to the drink-offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

42 This shall be a [y]continual burnt-offering throughout your generations at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; [b]where I will meet you, to speak there unto thee.

43 ¶ And there I will meet with the children of Israel, and the tabernacle[9] shall be sanctified [c]by my glory.

44 And [d]I will sanctify the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar; I will sanctify also both Aaron and his sons, to minister to me in the priest's office.

45 And[e] I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God.

46 And[f] they shall know that I am the LORD their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I may dwell among them: [g]I am the LORD their God.

Promised before the foundation of the world, promised and typified at the fall, and manifested in the evening and end of the world, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, he is the daily, the continued salvation, provision, and comfort of our souls; and as reconciled in him, God dwells with and blesses us with all spiritual blessings.—Let none then approach to the sacred ministry without being washed in Jesus' blood, regenerated by his Spirit, endowed with his gifts and graces, and, at the same time, using due care and deliberation to prepare for their awful work. In the exercise of that ministry, let them daily exhibit Jesus as the atonement, food, and consolation of sinners; so shall God be present in his ordinances and bless the attenders.—Let every Christian likewise, as a redeemed priest unto God, always improve Jesus, as made of God unto him wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption; that being purged in his atoning blood, clothed with his blessed righteousness, and endowed with his Spirit, he may daily live by faith on the Son of God, and offer up the spiritual sacrifices of prayer, praise, and good works; nay, his whole self, as acceptable to God through him; and let him constantly hold fellowship with a sanctifying God as his God, and his ALL IN ALL.

CHAPTER XXX. [Ver. 6. The altar of incense thus stood directly in front of the priest as he entered the tabernacle, between him and the veil which covered the mercy-seat in the holy of holies. In offering incense the face of the priest was necessarily directed toward the mercy-seat, though he could not see the glory of God which rested there. This indicates that make it: and they shall be for places for the staves to [f]bear it withal.

5 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold.

6 And thou shalt put it [h]before the vail that is by the ark of the testimony, before [i]the mercy-seat that is over the testimony, where I will meet with thee.

7 And Aaron shall burn thereon [k]sweet incense every morning: when he [l]dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it.

8 And when Aaron lighteth[5] the lamps at even, he shall burn incense upon it; [m]a perpetual incense[6] before the LORD, throughout your generations.

9 Ye shall offer [n]no strange incense thereon, nor burnt-sacrifice, nor meat-offering; neither shall ye pour drink-offering thereon.

10 And Aaron shall [o]make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin-offering of atonements; once in the year shall he make atonement upon it throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 When[p] thou takest the sum of the children of Israel, after their number,[7] then shall they give every man a [q]ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there be no plague among [r]them when thou numberest them.

13 This they shall give, every one that passeth among them that are [s]numbered, half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary: (a shekel[8] is twenty gerahs:[9]) an half shekel shall be the offering of the LORD.

14 Every one that passeth among them that are numbered, from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the LORD.

15 The[t] rich shall not give more,[1] and the poor shall not give less,[2] than half a shekel, when they give an offering unto the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.[3]

16 And thou shalt take the atonement-money of the children of Israel, and shalt appoint it for the[u] service of the tabernacle of the congregation; that it may be a [x]memorial unto the children of Israel before the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Thou shalt also make [y]a laver of brass,[4] and his foot also of brass, to wash withal: and thou shalt put it between the tabernacle of the congregation and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein:

19 For Aaron and his sons shall [z]wash their hands and their feet thereat.

20 When[a] they go into the tabernacle of the congregation, they shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the LORD:

21 So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not; and it shall be a statute [b]for ever to them, even to him and to his seed, throughout their generations.

22 ¶ Moreover, the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Take thou also unto thee [c]principal spices, of pure myrrh five hundred shekels,[5] and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty shekels,

24 And of cassia five hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of oil-olive an [d]hin.

25 And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the [e]apothecary: it shall be an [f]holy anointing oil.

26 And thou shalt [g]anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony,

27 And the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense,

28 And the altar of burnt-offering with all his vessels, and the laver and his foot.

29 And thou shalt sanctify them, that they may be most holy: [h]whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy.

30 And thou shalt [i]anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office.

31 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, This shall be an holy anointing oil unto me throughout your generations.

32 Upon man's [k]flesh shall it not be poured; [l]neither shall ye make any other like it, after the composition of it: it is holy, and it shall be holy unto you.

33 Whosoever compoundeth any like it, or whosoever putteth any of it upon a [m]stranger, [n]shall even be cut off from his people.[6]

Oil was poured, at their inauguration, upon priests, priests and kings or judges. It represents the Spirit of God, which alone qualifies for the effectual discharge of any duty. REFLECTIONS.—In this golden altar surely I discern Jesus, the God-man, crowned with glory and honour, and set down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, as the great intercessor for his people, and the mean of the acceptance of all their prayers, praises, and religious services! In this ransom-money was not Jesus prefigured as giving himself equally for every one of the race, his own brethren, that no plague may be found among them? In this laver was not Jesus typified as the fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness, in which all the people and ministers ought to wash their conscience and heart before and after every approach to God! In this sacred oil I behold the Holy Ghost in his precious and manifold, but well-connected, gifts and graces, with which Jesus, his people, and all who believe in Christ, are anointed of God! In this sacred incense I discern the precious and acceptable intercessions of my Redeemer, together with the cordial prayers, praises, and services of his people! Let me then, by faith, depend on his advo-

HALL OF GODS, MUSEUM, CAIRO—ILLUSTRATING THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE GODS THE EGYPTIANS WORSHIPED AND THE ONE GOD THE ISRAELITES WORSHIPED. [Exodus, xxx.10.]—"And Aaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonement: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it, throughout your generations; it is most holy unto the Lord." We give another illustration of a view taken in the Hall of the Gods in the Egyptain Museum, which enables us to see again what a vast contrast there was between the gods of wood and stone worshiped by the Egyptians and the God of the whole earth worshiped by the Israelites. The horns of the altar upon which Aaron was to make an atonement were by the ark of the testimony, directly in front of the mercy seat and very close to the Divine presence. The truth taught by this was that prayer brings us into the presence of God. The heart, instead of being fixed upon idols of stone, is to be drawn upward and fixed in worship and adoration upon its Creator and Redeemer.

34 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte, and onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices, with pure frankincense; of each shall there be a like weight.

35 And thou shalt make it a [a]perfume, a confection after the art of the apothecary, tempered[b] together, pure and holy.

36 And thou shalt [c]beat some of it very small, and put of it [d]before the testimony in the tabernacle of the congregation, where [e]I will meet with thee: it shall be unto you most holy.

37 And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, [f]ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof: it shall be unto thee holy for the LORD.

38 Whosoever shall make like unto that, to smell thereto, shall even [g]be cut off from his people.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Bezaleel and Aholiab are called, and qualified for the work of the tabernacle. 12 The observation of the sabbath is again commanded. 18 Moses receiveth the two tables.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 See, I have [a]called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah;

3 And I have [b]filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom,[3] and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship,

4 To [c]devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

5 And in [d]cutting of stones to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship.

6 And I, behold, I have given [e]with him Aholiab the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan; and in the hearts of all that are [f]wise-hearted I have put wisdom,[4] that they may make all[g] that I have commanded thee;

7 The [h]tabernacle of the congregation, and the ark of the testimony, and the mercy-seat that is thereupon, and all the furniture[7] of the tabernacle,

8 And the [i]table and his furniture, and the pure candlestick with all his furniture, and the altar of incense;

9 And the [k]altar of burnt-offering with all his furniture; and the laver and his foot;

10 And the [l]clothes of service, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office;

11 And [m]the anointing oil, and sweet incense for the holy place: according to all that I have commanded thee shall they do.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

13 Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily [n]my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you.

14 Ye[o] shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be [p]cut off from among his people.

15 Six[q] days may work be done; but in the seventh is the sabbath of rest, [r]holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath-day, he shall surely be put to death.

16 Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for [s]a perpetual covenant.

17 It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for [t]in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was [u]refreshed.[8]

18 ¶ And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an [x]end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, [y]two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the [z]finger of God.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 The people, in the absence of Moses, cause Aaron to make a calf. 7 God is angered thereby. 11 At the entreaty of Moses he is appeased. 15 Moses cometh down with the tables. 19 He breaketh them. 20 He destroyeth the calf. 21 Aaron's excuse for himself. 25 Moses causeth the idolaters to be slain. 30 He prayeth for the people.

AND when the [a]people saw that Moses [b]delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, [c]Up, make us gods which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

2 And Aaron said unto them, Break off [d]the golden ear-rings which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

The reason seems to be lest the people should imagine that when they offered up sacrifices and oblations every day the special sanctification of the Sabbath was no longer necessary; or lest they should think that as the tabernacle and its furniture were intended for sacred purposes, the work at them might be continued on the Sabbath. The universality and perpetuity of the obligation to observe the Sabbath are here strongly enjoined.—P.

cacy, since he presents his infinite merits before God, answerable to the circumstances of every man who believes in Christ! Let all the Israel of God rest and rejoice in him as the one dying to save from sin, while we daily wash in the fountain of his blood and Spirit, till we be without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing: and let the genuine Spirit and grace of Christ dwell in us, and not the counterfeit appearance; for dreadful is the hazard of turning his grace into licentiousness, pretending the possession of the Spirit, or counterfeiting the work of God!

CHAPTER XXXI. Ver. 15. Notwithstanding the work of the tabernacle was holy, and to be speedily and diligently done, yet nothing of it must be done on the Sabbath-day. The Sabbath was a sign of God's acknowledging them for his people; and their observation of it was a sign of their acknowledging him for their God, Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier.

Ver. 18. The stony matter of these tables marked the perpetual obligation of the moral law and the hardness of men's hearts, in which the Spirit of God alone can write it.

REFLECTIONS.—Nothing, even of natural excellency, but cometh from God. How easily and completely he can furnish his instruments for whatever service he calls them to; and therefore with courage and comfort may such as have once his call, venture on the hardest work! But commonly we may observe, for the honour of Christ, who needed no assistant, and especially for the comfort of his servants, God sends forth his noted agents by twos! Great is the danger of Sabbath-profanation: and yet how much are men disposed to it, especially if they can pretend the sacredness or the necessity of their work as an excuse! What exalted account God makes of Jesus Christ and his church. He, who spent but six days in creating a world, spends forty in prescribing a typical representation of those. But the most remarkable visits of God to men upon earth quickly come to an end; though he wisely frames everything about his ordinances so as that it may be instructive and comforting. In these typical architects I may therefore behold Jesus, called of God to finish a work of redemption, and rear up a gospel-church—Jesus, qualified of God, by the unmeasured unction of the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, to fulfil the arduous task, and actually completing his design, of his own heart and the salvation of the people.

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 9. Stiff-necked signi-

THE STEP PYRAMID, SAKKARAH, NEAR MEMPHIS—IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE MOSES IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE GROWN UP.

[Exodus, xxxii.4.] "And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf: and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." We have in this thirty-second chapter of Exodus the account of Aaron's molten calf, which was made of the earrings of the women of Israel while Moses delayed on the mount. The children of Israel got their idea of the worship of a calf from the Egyptians. The Serapeum, where the Apis Bulls were buried, is not far from the Step Pyramid, a picture of which we give above. The Step Pyramid is generally thought to have been built by the fourth king of the first dynasty. It is therefore regarded as older than the Pyramids of Gizeh. The door which led into it was inscribed with the name of a king called Ra-neb. The steps of the pyramid are six in number, and are respectively 38, 36, 34½, 33, 31 and 29½ feet in height.

A.M. 2513. B.C. 1491.

3 And [a]all the people brake off the golden ear-rings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.

4 And[f] he received them at their hand; and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf:[7] and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.[8]

5 And when Aaron saw it, [g]he built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, [h]To-morrow is a feast to the LORD.[9]

6 And [i]they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt-offerings, and brought peace-offerings; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [k]Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves:

8 They[l] have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, [m]I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people:

10 Now therefore [n]let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation.

11 ¶ And[o] Moses besought the LORD[1] his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 Wherefore[p] should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and [q]repent of this evil against thy people.

13 Remember[r] Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, [s]and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

14 And the LORD [t]repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.[2]

A.M. 2513. B.C. 1491.

15 ¶ And Moses turned, and [u]went down from the mount, and the two tables of [x]the testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

16 And the [y]tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables.

17 And when [z]Joshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of war in the camp.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome;[3] but the [a]noise of them that sing do I hear.[4]

19 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that [b]he saw the calf, and the dancing; and Moses' [c]anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount.[5]

20 And[d] he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire,[6] and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it.

21 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: thou knowest the people, that they [e]are set on mischief.

23 For[f] they said unto me, Make us gods which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off. So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and [g]there came out this calf.[7]

25 ¶ And when Moses saw that the people were [h]naked, (for Aaron had made them naked unto their [i]shame among their[8] enemies,)[9]

26 Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, [k]Who is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And [l]all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man [m]his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

7 The calf was intended not as a deity, but as a representation of JEHOVAH

8 The Israelites did not intend to break the first commandment. They still believed in, and sought to worship, Jehovah. But they had been long taught to look for a visible manifestation of God—some person or thing embodying, or representing, to embody, his glory and power. Moses was such to them hitherto. He was gone. They desired something in his place. The Hebrew word translated 'gods' in the first and fourth verses is Elohim, the usual name of 'God,' and was used by the Israelites in that sense. Their meaning was, 'Make us God,' i.e. something which will represent and embody God. And Aaron said, 'This is thy God, O Israel, which brought thee up,' i.e. it is intended to represent him. This was a flagrant breach of the second commandment, though not of the first.—F.

Moses, faithful to his office of mediator, does not 'let God alone,' but intercedes for them, as Christ does for sinners. God therefore 'repented' of the evil which he thought to do, that is, changed not his mind, for God is not a man that he should change. 1 Sa 15. 29. but changed his revelatory decision, his decision without a mediator, to his decision having a mediator.—C.

6 How Moses could burn gold, has been a chemical question, puzzling to common tutors. The most probable solution is, that the calf, like the contents of the tabernacle, was wood, overlaid with gold. The wood was therefore burned, and the gold plates ground to powder; which, commingled with the charcoal, was strewed on the water which the people were required to drink. What a rebuke to idolatry!—C.

Ver. 30. [Moses acted with extraordinary courage, determination, and wisdom. He divided the people into two sections—those who declared for Jehovah, and those who persevered in rebellion. Among the latter he sent the armed Levites with orders to kill, not all absolutely, but all the ringleaders, and all who would not submit to God's authority. They were to spare neither friend nor relative. F.]

Moses does not here wish that he might be reprobated, accursed, or damned, rather than his people should perish; but refuses to survive them, or to have his seed raised up in their stead.

REFLECTIONS.—It is highly necessary that magistrates and ministers should attend to their charges closely, lest their absence occasion mischief: for those who reckon God's counsels slow, readily rush headlong into ruin by their own; and most men are much readier to serve the devil than God, and to sacrifice one lust, pride itself not excepted, for the promotion of another

START OF THE PROCESSION OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE MAH'MAL. [Exodus, xxxii:23, 24.]—We see in the 23d and 24th verses of the 32d chapter of Exodus how the children of Israel had imbibed the ideas of idolatry in vogue among the Egyptians. In the view above we have a scene representing idolatry among the Egyptians of to-day. While the Mohammedans are said to worship the one God, yet they attach a sacredness and divine significance to things which make of them as complete idols as were held in adoration by their ancient ancestors. This festival of the Mah'Mal is annually observed in Cairo. It is popularly called the procession of the Holy Carpet. It has reference to the pilgrimage that is made every year to Mecca by devout Mohammedans. The Mah'Mal is a litter made of wood in the form of a pyramid, in which the carpet is placed to be carried to Mecca. This carpet for the mosque at Mecca is manufactured in Constantinople and sent to Cairo at the expense of the Sultan.

28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand [v]men.

29 For Moses had [g]said, [h]Consecrate[1] yourselves to-day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

30 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will [i]go up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin.

31 And Moses [k]returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh this people have sinned [l]a great sin, and have made them gods of gold!

32 Yet [m]now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, [n]blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written.[2]

33 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [o]Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book.

34 Therefore now [z]go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee. Behold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless, in the day when I visit, I will [p]visit their sin upon them.

35 And the LORD plagued the people, because they [q]made the calf, which Aaron made.[3]

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 The Lord refuseth to go with the people. 4 The people mourn thereat. 7 The tabernacle is removed out of the camp. 9 The Lord talketh familiarly with Moses out of the cloudy pillar. 12 Moses desireth to see the glory of God.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Depart, and go up hence, thou, and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land which I [b]sware unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, Unto thy seed will I give it;

2 And[c] I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite;

3 Unto a [d]land flowing with milk and honey: for I will [e]not go up in the midst of thee;[4] for thou art a stiff-necked people, lest I consume thee in the way.

4 ¶ And when the people heard these evil tidings, they [f]mourned; and no man did put on him his ornaments.

5 For the LORD had said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, Ye are a [g]stiff-necked people; I will come up into the midst of thee in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now [h]put off thy ornaments[5] from thee, that I may [i]know what to do unto thee.

6 And the children of Israel [k]stripped themselves of their ornaments by the mount Horeb.

7 ¶ And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, [l]afar off from the camp, and [m]called it, The Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.[6]

8 And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, and [n]stood every man at his tent-door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the [o]cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD talked with Moses.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle-door: and all the people [p]rose up and worshipped, every man in his tent-door.

11 And the LORD [q]spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: but his [r]servant Joshua the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

12 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, See, thou sayest unto me, [s]Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me: yet thou hast said, I [t]know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

13 Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, show me now [u]thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight; and consider that this nation is [v]thy people.

14 And he said, My [w]presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.

15 And he said unto him, If [x]thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence.

16 For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? is it not in that thou goest with us? so shall we still more sottish and absurd. Yea, even after the most solemn transactions with God, men quickly and fearfully stumble into sin; and the choicest saints are too apt to follow a multitude to do evil. But surely it is highly shameful when professed Christians imitate these idolaters in their mad revelling and mirth! All our wickedness is obvious and odious before God. And let professors of the true religion beware how they so corrupt themselves, lest God be ashamed to acknowledge them as his people! What a mercy is it for a guilty nation when they have powerful intercessors at the throne of grace! They have to do with a gracious God, who takes pleasure to repent himself of the evil. Holy zeal for God, when prudently manifested on proper occasions, is highly becoming: but backsliders in heart shall be filled with their own ways, and have their idols broken before their eyes. And O, what misery and shame do good men bring on nations by joining them in their wickedness! The best excuse which they can make for their conduct is pitiful and absurd; and therefore it deeply concerns all men, in an evil day, to know whether they be on the Lord's side or on that of his enemies. It is both necessary, honourable, and useful, to employ the strictest impartiality in the matters of God, and to use the most earnest intercessions with God to avert, even for a time, his exact justice from falling upon a nation which is ripened for destruction. And we have here the greatest encouragement to expect a gracious answer to our prayers.

CHAPTER XXXIII. Ver. 5. That I may try whether thou wilt repent of or persist in thy sin, and act towards thee accordingly.

Ver. 7. This tabernacle was a tent, erected by Moses for the worship of God till the appointed one should be finished; and the removal of it from the camp intimated the Lord's displeasure with them, and departure from them.

Ver. 9, 11. God's familiar talking with Moses was a public approbation of what he had done against the calf, and the worshippers thereof.

be [a]separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

17 And the LORD said unto Moses, [b]I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.

18 ¶ And he said, I [c]beseech thee, show me thy glory.

19 And he said, I will make all my [d]goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; [e]and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will show mercy on whom I will show mercy.[7]

20 And he said, [f]Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live.

21 And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock:

22 And it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee [g]in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by:

23 And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my [h]back parts; but my face shall not be seen.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 The tables are renewed. 4 The name of the LORD proclaimed. 8 Moses entreateth God to go with the people. 10 God maketh a covenant with them, repeating certain duties of the first table. 27 Moses after forty days in the mount cometh down with the tables. 29 His face shineth, and he covereth it with a vail.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first; and I will write upon these tables the [b]words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest:

2 And be ready in the morning, and [c]come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me in the top of the mount:

3 And no man shall [d]come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.[8]

4 ¶ And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first: and Moses rose up [e]early in the morning, and [f]went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.

5 And the LORD [g]descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed the name of the LORD.[9]

[e] This is the first mention of the flocks and herds since the departure from Egypt. Nothing is said of them at the passage of the Red Sea, nor at the fountain of Marah, nor in the wilderness of Sin, nor at Rephidim, where there was no water. The Israelites travelled like an Arab tribe. The leading men followed a somewhat direct course, making short stages, and often halting for days at a favoured spot; but the flocks roamed over a vast extent of country, taking the best pastures, and passing by the best fountains. Now when the people had established a settlement at the mount of God, and when they had such remarkable manifestations of God's power, the shepherds and flocks were naturally concentrated round Sinai.—F.

To Abraham unproclaimed, he calls himself GOD ALMIGHTY; to Moses, after revelations of unfulfilled promise, I AM; and now, when he is surrounded by the thousands of Israel, he proclaims a new name, with an attribute suited to their every circumstance.—C.

1 The words 'the guilty,' are in italics to show they are not in the original, but are supplied by the translators. As they stand, they would seem to contradict Ro. 4. 5, where God is said to 'justify the ungodly.' If we substitute the word remittent, the difficulty is removed; and the meaning will be, that God, in the very overflowing of his grace, retains and exercises judgment against sin and sinners. So true is the expression 'a God all mercy is a God unjust.'—Note. Newman translates the passage 'But he will not let (them) go wholly unpunished.'—C.

Ver. 18. The highest manifestation of thy glory that I am capable of bearing.

Ver. 19. God reckons the display of his goodness his distinguished glory.

Ver. 20. God's face here denotes the brightness of majesty and glory which attended the external shape he now assumed.

Ver. 23. [No portion of Scripture is more remarkable or more mysterious than this. We observe, 1. The request of Moses. It could not have been prompted by curiosity. It must have arisen from the natural aspiration of an exalted genius and a loving spirit, to know and see and fully comprehend that glorious Being with whom he had such close converse; and to comprehend the fountain of that mingled power, justice, and mercy which had been so signally exhibited, and which required to be continued to Israel. 2. God's reply. He did not grant all that was asked. It could not be. Man's weak nature could not bear it. The manifestation of the full glory of God is incompatible with man's present condition. God did grant, however, all that it was possible for Moses to endure — his goodness passed before him. How this was done we know not. But there must have been some wondrous display of divine goodness, love, and mercy. May it not have been some clear insight, some glorious vision, of the atoning work of Him who is 'the brightness of God's glory, and the express image of his person?' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Fearful is the danger and woe that attend apostasy from God, and the worshipping of idols in his room! His eye beholds the inward hardness and obstinacy of our hearts. And painful indeed are the convictions of an awakened conscience, when God displays his terrors and appears as an enemy! There is need of uncommon humiliation and prayer when God's wrath is once kindled against a people, and he has begun to remove his ordinances from them. But when a gracious God, and a multitude of groaning hearts, meet together at the throne of grace, it is a token of his merciful designs; for he is ready to return to his praying people, and indulge them with the most astonishing familiarity. Their desire of fellowship and boldness of faith increases in his presence: and he will not refuse them anything they ask, though it were to the whole of his kingdom. What blessing of direction,

2 Six[b] days shall work be done; but on the seventh day there shall be to you an holy [2]day, a sabbath of rest to the LORD: whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death.

3 Ye shall [c]kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath-day.

4 ¶ And Moses spake unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD commanded, saying,

5 Take[d] ye from among you an offering unto the LORD: [e]whosoever is of a willing heart let him bring it, an offering of the LORD; gold, and silver, and brass, presence, or spiritual manifestation, can he deny us, who have Jesus our advocate within the vail! Come then, my soul, be no more a trifler in prayer, but make intercession with groans which cannot be uttered. Whatever I ask, believing, for myself, or my family, or the church, God will give it. Let me, adoring the universality of his grace, press after clearer and clearer displays of his glory, his goodness, till at last I see him as he is! Awake, ye prayerless wasters of time!—Base and unprofitable are your fellowships with men, if compared to this of Moses with his God!

CHAPTER XXXIV. Ver. 1. Thus God left a mark of their rebellion on the tables in their not being hewn by himself; yet nevertheless he made his law to retain the same force; and manifested, that it is not graciously inscribed in our hearts, till once they be hewn and broken by Moses' covenant form of it.

Ver. 7. It is a part of goodness to hate and punish evil.

Ver. 13. For privacy and solemnity, to prevent interruption, and perhaps in imitation of the patriarchs, the heathens planted groves, in which they worshipped their idols.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a great mercy to have God's law manifested to us; but especially written on our hearts, when hewn by convictions of sin; and the necessity of reconciliation with God, through Christ, discovered thereby. Ministers must labour to hew men's hearts: but it is only God who can write divine truths in them. The most ready and believing despatch is necessary in making up the breaches between God and our soul. But pleasant and transporting indeed are remarkable discoveries of the glory and grace of God! His new-covenant name is exactly suited to our sinful and destitute condition! Clear and distinct views thereof produce the boldest pleadings of faith at his throne of grace, and we cannot sufficiently admire that God should so often repeat his promises, warnings, and laws to us, who are so ignorant, heedless, and forgetful. How great is their safety who live in close fellowship with him! He takes pleasure to honour such as honour him; and clear views of the glory of God beget in his people the most glorious conformity to him, and elevate above all the fears or hopes of nature.—But it is very becoming when those who are most distinguished with gifts and graces are, through lowliness of mind, scarcely conscious of their own excellences! when others are more sensible of our spiritual beauty than we ourselves are! and when ministers, who have the deepest insight into divine things, accommodate their instructions to their people's capacity!—In the whole of this breach and reconcilement between God and Israel, let me behold how the law entered that the offence might abound: but where sin abounded, grace did much more abound; that, as sin had reigned unto death, grace might reign, through righteousness, unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord!

CHAPTER XXXV. REFLECTIONS.—As this and the following chapters generally relate no more but the execution of what was directed in chapters xxv.–

7 And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim-wood,

8 And [h] oil for the light, and [i] spices for anointing oil, and for the sweet incense,

9 And [k] onyx-stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate.

10 And every [l] wise-hearted among you shall come, and make [m] all that the LORD hath commanded;

11 The [n] tabernacle, his tent, and his covering, his taches, and his boards, his bars, his pillars, and his sockets;

12 The [o] ark, and the staves thereof, with the mercy-seat, and the vail of the covering;

13 The [p] table, and his staves, and all his vessels, and the show-bread;

14 The candlestick also for the light, and his furniture, and his lamps, with the oil for the light;

15 And [q] the incense-altar, and his staves, and the anointing oil, and the sweet incense, and [r] the hanging for the door at the entering in of the tabernacle;

16 The [s] altar of burnt-offering, with his brazen grate, his staves, and all his vessels; the laver and his foot;

17 The [t] hangings of the court, his pillars, and their sockets, and the hanging for the door of the court;

18 The pins of the tabernacle, and the pins of the court, and their cords;[1]

19 The [u] clothes of service, to do service in the holy place; the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office.

20 ¶ And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses.[2]

21 And they came, every one whose [x] heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the LORD's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments.

22 And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing-hearted, and brought bracelets,[y] and ear-rings, and rings, and tablets, all jewels of gold: and every man that offered, offered an offering of gold unto the LORD.

23 And every man with whom [z] was found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, brought them.

24 Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought[3] the LORD's offering: and every man with whom was found shittim-wood, for any work of the service, brought it.

25 And all the [a] women that were wise-hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen.

26 And all the women, whose heart stirred them up in wisdom, spun goats' hair.

27 And [b] the rulers brought onyx-stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate;

28 And spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense.

29 The children of Israel brought a [c] willing offering unto the LORD, every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all manner of work, [d] which the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.

30 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, [e] the LORD hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah;

31 And he hath filled him with the spirit of God, [f] in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship;

32 And to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

33 And in the cutting of stones to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work.

34 And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and Aholiab the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan.

35 Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work of the engraver, and of the [g] cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise [h] cunning work.[5]

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 The offerings are delivered to the workmen. 5 The liberality of the people is restrained. 8 The curtains with cherubims. 14 The covering of goats' hair. 19 The covering of skins. 20 The boards with their sockets. 31 The bars. 35 The vail. 37 The hanging for the door.

THEN wrought [a] Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, in whom the [b] LORD put wisdom and understanding, to know how to work all manner of work for the service of the sanctuary, [b] according to all that the LORD had commanded.

2 And Moses [c] called Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one whose

How many neglect the regular reading of the Scriptures, stated prayer in the closet or family, how many absent themselves from the Lord's table, and think they are Christians! When tempted to these fatal neglects, let them remember Moses, who 'was faithful,' not in a part, but in 'all his house.'—C.

[2] When Moses had delivered his message to the people, they departed to their tents, to fetch their several oblations; and on this occasion a peculiar influence was felt, enlarging their hearts to liberality. Nothing but ear-rings seem to have been given to make the golden calf; but various other golden ornaments were offered on this occasion, principally of the spoils of Egypt; both men and women being willing to part with their newly acquired adornings, to beautify the sanctuary of God. A mere trifle! But besides these articles of manufactured gold, some of the people presented such as was unwrought, and used as money: for this is thought to be meant by the words rendered, 'Every man that offered offered an offering of gold unto the Lord.'—I.

[3] The narrative of Moses has been questioned, on the allegation that the Israelites in the wilderness could not have had so much property. But in Egypt, though enslaved, they still had flocks and herds, and from their produce and sale must have had money. They also had houses and furniture, the valuable metallic parts of which they would naturally carry off in their baggage. Then they obtained large donations from the Egyptians, and probably many spoils from the host of Pharaoh, all of which will sufficiently account for their means of such liberal contributions to the tabernacle.—C.

[5] God can effect his work by any means, yet he usually chooses those bestowed by his own Spirit. Of this Moses and Paul are a striking proof: and, in the case before us, Bezaleel and Aholiab, by the divine tuition, are trained to execute all his pleasure. They may very properly be styled men of universal genius. They were complete masters of the work assigned them, and supernaturally qualified to instruct others. What an honour does sanctified genius confer upon its possessor! Unsanctified, what a curse!—C.

xxviii. xxx. xxxi. the notes and reflections there found are referred to. Only let me observe, that the glory of God, the happiness of men, are deeply interested in the exact observation of the Sabbath; and that God will either have voluntary service, or will not accept of it at all. Sincere repentance always issues in hearty dedications to God: and it is comely when professors, according to their respective abilities, concur in promoting the honour and service of God. In such a work he graciously accepts, not according to what they have not, but according to what they have, if there be first a willing mind. And since God liberally furnishes such as he calls to public offices in his church, the greater our gifts or grace, or the higher our station, the more earnest ought to be our labour in the service of Christ and in helpfulness to our fellow-members.

CHAPTER XXXVI. REFLECTIONS.—How honourable is it when agents in the church are men faithful and to be trusted!—when private members are so liberal that they need to be restrained, and when heart stirred him up, to come unto the work to do it.

3 And they received of Moses all the offering which the children of Israel [d]had brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And they brought yet unto him free-offerings every [e]morning.

4 And all the [f]wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, came every man from his work which they made;

5 And they spake unto Moses, saying, The people bring [g]much more than enough for the service of the work which the LORD commanded to make.

6 And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from bringing.

7 For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.[4]

8 ¶ And[h] every wise-hearted man, among them that wrought the work of the tabernacle, made ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with [i]cherubims[5] of cunning work[6] made he them.

9 The length of one curtain was twenty and eight cubits,[7] and the breadth of one curtain four cubits:[8] the curtains were all of one size.

10 And he [k]coupled the five curtains one unto another; and the other five curtains he coupled one unto another.

11 And he made loops of blue on the edge of one curtain, from the selvedge in the coupling: likewise he made in the uttermost side of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

12 Fifty loops made he in one curtain, and fifty loops made he in the edge of the curtain which was in the coupling of the second: the loops held one curtain to another.

13 And he made fifty taches of gold, and coupled the curtains one unto another with the taches. So it became one tabernacle.[9]

14 ¶ And he made curtains of goats' hair for the tent over the tabernacle: eleven curtains he made them.

15 The length of one curtain was thirty cubits,[1] and four cubits was the breadth of one curtain: the eleven curtains were of one size.

16 And he coupled five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves.

17 And he made fifty loops upon the uttermost edge of the curtain in the coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

4 It is seldom, when the cause of God is concerned, that people exceed in liberality. And it has frequently happened, and happens every day, that the reverse is the case. It is not that superstition is more deliberate than true piety. But the one springs from love to God, the other from love to ourselves.—J.

5 What cherubim represented, we cannot determine. Josephus says they were flying animals like none of those seen by man, but such as Moses saw about the throne of God. According to Ezekiel, they were creatures with four heads and one body, compounded from animals the noblest of their kind, the lion, the bull, the eagle, and man, so that they might be, says Dr. Priestley, the representatives of all nature.—A.

6 This probably means a sort of diaper, in which the figures appear equally perfect on both sides: this was probably formed in the loom. Another and of curious work is mentioned, ver. 37, which we term needle-work. This was probably similar to our embroidery, tapestry, or cloth of Arras. It has been thought unlikely that these works were all manufactured in the wilderness; what was done in the loom they might have brought with them from Egypt; what could be done by hand, without the use of complex machinery, the Israelitish women could readily perform with their needles during their stay in the wilderness. But still it seems probable that they brought even their looms with them. The whole of this account shows that not only necessary but ornamental arts had been carried to a considerable degree of perfection both among the Israelites and Egyptians.—Dr. Clarke.

3 The fine covering signified the internal glory of Christ and his church; and the coarse covering signified their meanness in the view of carnal men.

3 The Hebrew word, translated badger is of uncertain meaning. But it is clear that it signifies some known animal. Why then is it the uppermost covering of the tabernacle? Because it is significant of the world, in which the church is still environed, and from which it is to be called out and gathered; and of which our Lord says, Jn. 17. 15, "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world." Thus covering is likewise significant of that protection which the world, though at heart a persecutor of Christ, dare never, when they can, afford to the church. Thus Pharaoh enriched and protected Abram in Egypt, Ge. 12. 16, 20. Thus Abimelech protected Isaac, Ge. 26. 12. Thus the townclerk protected Paul at Ephesus, Ac. 19. 40. the chief-captain at Jerusalem, Ac. 21. 31, 32. His Roman citizenship shielded him from scourging, Ac. 22. 25, 26. Claudius Lysias delivered him from assassination, Ac. 23. 27; and when venal sanhedrim would have returned him to the bandied murderers, "I appeal unto Cæsar," resolved him from their daggers, and sent him to Rome, where "his bonds were manifest in all the palace of the emperor, and he continued two whole years in his own hired house, preaching the kingdom of God—no man forbidding him," Ac. 28. 30, 31. C.

8 Morier, in his Travels in Persia, describes the tent of a Tartar chief thus: "It was composed of a wooden frame of circular lattis, which was fixed on the ground, and then covered with large felts that were fastened down by a cord ornamented with tassels of various colours. A curtain, curiously worked by the women with coarse needle-work of various colours." These hangings are not confined to tents, but are seen for the doors of mosques and sitting-rooms of palaces and private houses.—J.

18 And he made fifty taches of brass to couple the tent together, that it might be one.

19 ¶ And he made a covering[2] for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of badgers' skins above that.[3]

20 ¶ And he made boards for the tabernacle of [l]shittim-wood, standing up.

21 The length of a board was ten cubits,[4] and the breadth of a board one cubit and a half.[5]

22 One board had two tenons, equally distant one from another: thus did he make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

23 And he made boards for the tabernacle: twenty boards for the south side southward;

24 And forty sockets of silver he made under the twenty boards: two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

25 And for the other side of the tabernacle, which is toward the north corner, he made twenty boards,

26 And their forty sockets of silver: two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

27 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward he made six boards.

28 And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

29 And they were [m]coupled beneath, and coupled together at the head thereof, to one ring: thus he did to both of them in both the corners.

30 And there were eight boards, and their sockets were sixteen sockets of silver, under every board two sockets.[6]

33 And he made the middle bar to shoot through the boards from the one end to the other.

34 And he overlaid the boards with [7]gold, and made their rings of gold to be places for the bars, and overlaid the bars with gold.

35 ¶ And he made [o]a vail of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: with cherubims made he it of cunning work.

CHAPTER XXXVII. REFLECTIONS.—How unbounded is the excellency and usefulness of Christ, that so many things are necessary to represent him! Pleasant is the work of ministers and Christians, where he is ALL and IN ALL, the FIRST and the LAST! and it becomes them regularly to proceed from the inward to the outward concerns thereof. May I embrace Jesus as my propitiation; feed on him as my provision; walk in him as my light; depend on him as my interceding advocate; and, being anointed with his Spirit, offer up my supplications, intercessions, and thanksgivings, kindled by the holy fire of his love shed abroad in my heart.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

1 The ark. 6 The mercy-seat with cherubims. 10 The table with his vessels. 17 The candlestick with his lamps and instruments. 25 The altar of incense. 29 The anointing oil and sweet incense.

AND Bezaleel made [a]the ark of shittim-wood: two cubits and a half was the length of it, and a cubit and a half the breadth of it, and a cubit and a half the height of it.

2 And he [b]overlaid[7] it with pure gold within and without, and made a crown of gold to it round about.

3 And he cast for it four rings of gold, to be set by the four corners of it; even two rings upon the one side of it, and two rings upon the other side of it.

4 And he made [c]staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with gold.

5 And he put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, to bear the ark.

6 ¶ And he made the [d]mercy-seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half was the length thereof, and one cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

7 And he made two [e]cherubims of gold, beaten out of one piece made he them, on the two ends of the mercy-seat:

8 One cherub on[8] the end on this side, and another cherub on[9] the other end on that side: out of the mercy-seat made he the cherubims on the two ends thereof.[1]

9 And the [f]cherubims spread out their wings on high, and covered with their wings over the mercy-seat, with their faces one to another; even to the mercy-seat-ward were the faces of the cherubims.

10 ¶ And [g]he made the table of shittim-wood: two cubits was the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

11 And he overlaid it with pure gold, and made thereunto a crown[2] of gold round about.

12 Also he made thereunto a border of an handbreadth round about; and made a crown of gold for the border thereof round about.

13 And he cast for it four rings of gold, and put the rings upon the four corners that were in the four feet thereof.

14 Over against the border were the rings, the places for the staves to bear the table.

15 And he made the staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with gold, to bear the table.

16 And he made the vessels which were upon the table, his dishes, and his spoons, and his bowls, and his covers to cover withal,[3] of pure gold.

17 ¶ And he made the [h]candlestick of pure gold: of beaten work made he the [i]candlestick; his shaft, and his branch, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, were of the same:

22 Their knops and their branches were of the same: all of it was one [k]beaten work of pure gold.

23 And he made his seven[5] lamps, and his snuffers, and his snuff-dishes, of pure gold.

24 Of a talent of pure gold made he it, and all the vessels thereof.

26 And he overlaid it with pure gold, both the top of it, and the sides thereof round about, and the horns of it: also he made unto it a crown of gold round about.

27 And he made two rings of gold for it under the crown thereof, by the two corners of it, upon the two sides thereof, to be places for the staves to bear it withal.

28 And he made the staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with gold.

29 ¶ And he made [m]the holy anointing oil, and the [n]pure incense of sweet spices, according to the work of the apothecary.

They look also down upon the mercy-seat, beneath which are laid the tables of the covenant. And the mystery on which these spirits comment in common with the spirits of men, is the wondrous and blessed union sin, one throne of the law that condemns and kills, and the mercy seat that pardons and saves.—C.

[4] God's manifestations of himself, in this world, are but candle-light compared with the day-light of the future state. The Bible is a golden candlestick. It is of pure gold, Ps. 19. 10. From it light is diffused to every part of God's tabernacle, that by it his spiritual priests may see to minister to the Lord, and to do the service of his sanctuary. This candlestick has not only its bowls for necessary use, but its knops and flowers for ornament; there are many things which God saw fit to beautify his word with, which we can no more give a reason for than for these knops and flowers, and yet we are sure they were added for good purposes.—J.

CHAPTER XXXVIII. REFLECTIONS.—The work still proceeds pleasantly from that which is most inward and important. And let us observe, that Jesus' atonement for sin, and the purification of our conscience from dead works, are closely linked together; that fervent devotion disposes persons to part with that which others most admire, for the service of Christ. And it is necessary to examine ourselves in the glass of God's law when we go to the laver of Jesus' blood for

4 And he made for the altar a brazen grate of net-work, under the compass thereof, beneath unto the midst of it.

5 And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grate of brass, to be places for the staves.

6 And he made the staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with brass.

7 And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to [c]bear it withal: he made the altar hollow with boards.

7 There is considerable difference of opinion about the correct translation of this passage. Luther, Matthews, and others, render it, 'and he made the laver under the inspection of the women who ministered at the door.' It is true that the word rendered looking-glasses, is elsewhere in Scripture rendered sight. Still the idea of inspection seems inconsistent with the description of the qualifications of Bezaleel for all manner of work. We prefer the authorized translation, and consider it as conveying an important lesson. That the ancient mirrors were generally polished brass or silver is admitted. That the women were accustomed to carry them to public worship is also acknowledged. But, that beauty may not merely be pleasing to the beholder, but intoxicating to the possessor, is a melancholy fact in female history. Now, the minister of that beauty, presiding in its creature—the friend that so often exhibits it to flatter and to fascinate the heart—is required for the service of God, and must be sacrificed, and freely these 'holy women who trusted in God' did render up the last second relics, evidencing by this act of self-denial, that to all 'outward adorning of gold or putting on of apparel,' they preferred 'that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.' 1 Pe. 3. 3, 5.—Note. Genuine Christianity has alone raised woman to her proper place in society, and largely has woman repaid the boon. Since Hannah presented Samuel to the Lord, 1 Sa. 1. 26, since the faith of Lois and Eunice was transferred to Timothy, 2 Ti. 1. 5; the instruction and prayers of godly and devoting mothers and sisters, in the family and the school, have conferred blessings on the church that eternity alone can reveal.—C.

8 Heb. a poll.

9 By comparing the census now given with that in ch. 12. 37, we find the increase of six months to be 3550, who in that period had attained their twentieth year. And if we take into account those who fell by the hand of public justice for the sin of idolatrous rebellion against God, ch. 32. 28, we will have a still larger increase, amounting to about 6550. If this increase appear to any improbable, let them recollect that according to one of the best statistical authorities (Richmond, in the introduction to the Population Returns) the number of males above twenty averages one half the entire number of males. The whole male population would thus be, at the exodus, 1,200,000. Now, taking the number of males under twenty at the exodus to be 600,000, and making the largest deduction for those who ordinarily die before attaining twenty, a number will remain still more than sufficient to supply the increase recorded in the text, with all the casualties besides to which the people might be exposed, as well as for the further deduction of 23,000 Levites, excluded from the census by the command of God, Nu.1.49.—C.

[3] Every object endangered merits, and should receive, protection proportioned to its value, consequently the heart, as a chief organ of life, is naturally defended as by a fortress of many bones and muscles, in addition to which the eye and the arms are appointed as auxiliaries. But besides these natural defences, artificial aid is called in, and the soldier is covered with the cuirass or the breast-plate. So, the hidden man of the heart, 1 Pe. 3. 4. requires to be kept with all diligence, Pr. 4. 23. and that of every representative, as was the high-priest, who required to keep it, first, in his own account, and secondly, on account of the people. Hence his typical breast plate was double, because the seal of the covenant was double, "that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to the hope set before us." Heb. 6. 18.—Note, The assurance of believers reposes under the double protection of Christ's brotherhood with them, Heb. 2. 17. 18. and his equality with the Father, Phi. 2. 6. Jn. 10. 15.—C.

[5] The art of engraving on stone and metal is of remote antiquity. We read in Gen. 38. 18 of Judah's "signet," and the engraving on the gems of the high-priest's dress are always said to have been executed "like the engravings of a signet." It is remarkable that beautiful engraved signets have been found in some of the most ancient monuments of Chaldea, Assyria, and Egypt. Some of these are probably as old as the time of Abraham.—P.

It covered the neck and breast, was very light, and resisted the stroke of a sword. Sometimes it went over the whole head as well as over the breast. This kind of defensive armour was used among the Asiatics, particularly the ancient Persians, among whom it is still worn. It seems to have been borrowed from the Asiatics by the Norman Crusaders.—Clarke.

Not meaning that the work of saving sinners was yet finished (for that was not till he died and rose again, Ro. 4. 25. but the work of glorifying the Father on earth as the angels do in heaven. 32 ¶ Thus was [n]all the work of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation [7]finished: and the children of Israel did [o]according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

33 And they brought the tabernacle unto try our whole work after it is finished, as well as while it is carrying forward; so shall our labour not be in vain in the Lord.

CHAPTER XL. Ver. 1—33. The form of the tabernacle when erected was as follows: the court was sixty-one yards long, and half as much in breadth. It was inclosed by a linen hanging of about nine feet in height, suspended by silver hooks, on fifty-six brazen pillars, filleted with silver, and fixed in large sockets of brass.

TEMPLE OF THE SPHINX—BUILT BEFORE JOSEPH CAME TO EGYPT. [EXODUS, xl: 2.]—Moses commanded the children of Israel on the first day of the month to set up the tabernacle of the congregation and to put therein the ark of the testimony and cover the ark with the veil. We give a view here of the temple of the Sphinx, the place of worship among the Egyptians which had been often seen by the Israelites. Yet it is remarkable that though they had been in Egypt 430 years and had for a part of that time been in the midst of absolute slavery, that upon leaving Egypt they were found to have so few of the heathen ideas of worship characteristic of the Egyptians. This can only be accounted for upon the hypothesis that the Jews from generation to generation handed down to their children their peculiar national ideas of religion. The worship of the temple of the Sphinx was a long way from the worship of the tabernacle.

Moses, the [p]tent and all his furniture, his taches, his boards, his bars, and his pillars, and his sockets;

34 And the covering of rams' skins dyed red, and the covering of badgers' skins, and the vail of the covering;

35 The ark of the testimony, and the staves thereof, and the mercy-seat;

36 The table, and all the vessels thereof, and the show-bread;

37 The pure candlestick, with the lamps thereof, even with the lamps to be set in order, and all the vessels thereof, and the oil for light;

38 And the golden altar, and the anointing oil, and the sweet incense,[7] and the hanging for the tabernacle-door;

39 The brazen altar and his grate of brass, his staves, and all his vessels; the laver and his foot;

40 The hangings of the court, his pillars, and his sockets, and the hanging for the court-gate, his cords and his pins, and all the vessels of the service of the tabernacle, for the tent of the congregation;

41 The clothes of service, to do service in the holy place; and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and his sons' garments, to minister in the priest's office.

42 According[q] to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel made all the work.

43 And Moses did [r]look upon all the work, and, behold, they had done it; as the LORD had commanded even so had they done it: and Moses [s]blessed them.[8]

CHAPTER XL.

1 The tabernacle is commanded to be reared, 9 and anointed. 12 Aaron and his sons to be sanctified. 16, 17, 20, 22, 24, 28, 30, 33 Moses performeth all things accordingly. 34 A cloud covereth the tabernacle.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 On the first day of the [a]first month shalt thou set up the [b]tabernacle of the tent of the congregation;[9]

3 And thou [c]shalt put therein the ark of the testimony, and cover the ark with the vail.

4 And [d]thou shalt bring in the table, and set in order[1] the things that are to be set in order upon it;[2] and thou shalt bring in the candlestick, and light the lamps thereof.

5 And thou shalt set the [e]altar of gold for the incense before the ark of the testimony, and put the hanging of the door to the tabernacle.

6 And[f] thou shalt set the altar of the burnt-offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

During that time they had received the law, and had completed the construction of the tabernacle and all its costly and gorgeous furniture.—S.

In all man's 'labour under the sun,' whether regarding the church or in civil life, similar order should ever prevail. 9 ¶ And thou shalt [i]take the anointing oil, and anoint the tabernacle, and all that is therein, and shalt hallow it, and all the vessels thereof; and it shall be holy.

12 ¶ And thou shalt [m]bring Aaron and his sons unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and wash them with water.

16 Thus did Moses: [p]according to all that the LORD commanded him, so did he.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, in the first month, in the second year,[4] on the first day of the month, that the [q]tabernacle was reared up.

18 And Moses [r]reared up the tabernacle, and fastened his sockets, and set up the boards thereof, and put in the bars thereof, and reared up his pillars.

19 And he [s]spread abroad the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses.

20 ¶ And he took and put the [t]testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the [u]mercy-seat above upon the ark.

21 And he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and [x]set up the vail of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And he [y]put the table in the tent of the congregation, upon the side of the tabernacle northward, without the vail.

23 And he set the bread in order upon it before the LORD; as the LORD had commanded Moses.

---

The only entrance, from the east, was twelve yards wide, and hung over with a fine veil of embroidered linen, suspended on four pillars. Here, under the open sky, stood the brazen altar and laver; and hither every clean Hebrew or proselyte might come with his oblations. At the west end of this court stood the tabernacle itself; a close tent, in the form of a house, standing with its end towards the east. It was about eighteen and one-fourth yards long, six and one-twelfth broad, and as much in height. It was reared with forty-eight boards of shittim-wood, overlaid with gold, and fixed at bottom in ninety-six large sockets of silver, and bound together with five cross-bars of the same materials. On this frame was suspended a fourfold covering. The innermost consisted of ten embroidered linen curtains, each about seventeen yards in length, and about two and one-half yards in breadth, coupled with taches or buttons of gold. Over this was a cover-

24 ¶ And he put the [x]candlestick in the tent of the congregation, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward.

25 And he lighted the lamps before the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

26 ¶ And [a]he put the golden altar in the tent of the congregation before the vail.

27 And he burnt sweet incense thereon; as the LORD commanded Moses.

28 ¶ And he set up the [b]hanging at the door of the tabernacle.

29 And he [c]put the altar of burnt-offering by the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation, and offered upon it the burnt-offering, and the meat-offering; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 ¶ And he set [d]the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and put water there, to wash withal.

31 And Moses, and Aaron, and his sons, washed[e] their hands and their feet thereat.[1]

32 When they went into the tent of the congregation, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; as the LORD commanded Moses.

33 ¶ And he [f]reared up the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the [g]hanging of the court-gate: so Moses finished the work.

34 ¶ Then[h] a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

35 And Moses was [i]not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

36 And [k]when the cloud was taken up from[j] over the tabernacle, the children of Israel [2]went onward in all their journeys:

37 But if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up.

38 For the cloud of the LORD was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys.[3]

But after Aaron and his sons were fully established in their office, it does not appear that Moses performed any of the services to which they were especially appointed. As, however, he went into the tabernacle to inquire of the Lord, it may be supposed that on these occasions he washed his hands and feet at the laver, as Aaron and his sons did in their daily ministrations.—Scott.

3 All Israel saw what Moses described. They saw it, not as a meteor that dazzles for a moment, but through many years; they saw it not occasionally, but permanently; and they moved or rested by its symbolic guidance; and their national institutions were so interwoven with the record, that we cannot account for the origin of institutions which we see to be historic records, existing realities, without admitting the truth of the miracles under the divine influence of which these institutions were originally organized.—C.

ing of eleven curtains of goats' hair, coupled with taches of brass; the next was of rams' skins dyed red: the uppermost was of a strong leather, called badgers' skins. The whole east end was an entrance, and hung over with a fine veil of embroidered linen, suspended on five pillars or boards by golden hooks; and just before it, in the court, stood the brazen altar and laver. This tent was distinguished into two apartments. The first, or holy place, was in length twelve yards and six inches; into which only the clean priests might enter. At the inner or west end of it, stood the golden candlestick, altar of incense, and table of show-bread. The second, or most holy place, or oracle, was at the west end of the former, and separated from it by a fine veil of embroidered linen, suspended on four pillars, fixed erect in large sockets of silver. It was a square of ninety-six yards and three inches. Here, amidst gross darkness, at the west end, was set the ark covered by the mercy-seat, and over-shadowed by the golden cherubims; between which hovered the Shekinah, or cloud of the divine presence. The tables of the law were put into the ark. The golden pot of manna, Aaron's rod that budded, and a copy of the law of Moses, were afterwards reposited at the east or foreside of the ark. Into this apartment the high-priest alone entered, and he only upon the fast of general expiation, and perhaps four times that day.

REFLECTIONS.—It is comely when new years are commenced with remarkable transactions for God, and when everything is performed and placed in due order; for God is ready to meet such as are occupied in his service, and remember him in all their ways. Desolate and dreary are ordinances if without the presence of God; but if the Spirit of God and of glory rest upon us, we may be well comforted, for God is with us and for us; and who then can be against us! But was not this reared tabernacle a type of our once apparently mean but truly glorious Redeemer, in his manhood and mediatorial office; devised of God, and reared up with infinite skill; consecrated by the oil of the Holy Ghost and his own bloody sufferings! In him dwells all the fulness of the Godhead. He is the mean of all our fellowship with God; and the treasury of all that atonement, purification, light, food, intercession, and acceptance, which is necessary for our souls. In his debased state he was made the atonement, the laver of purification; in his exalted state he is the eternal rest of JEHOVAH, and the enlightener, advocate, and feeder of his people. Was it not likewise a figure of the gospel-church, planned by the wisdom of God, and reared up by inspired ministers of Christ! Outwardly mean, but inwardly glorious, she is the residence of God in Christ; and in her he is worshipped in an acceptable manner. In her a fulness of atonement, purification, spiritual light, and provision, of acceptable prayers, praises, and services, are to be found. Was it not a figure of heaven itself, where all its emblems are realized, and in which Jesus, JEHOVAH, and everything substantial, are to be found in the most eminent degree!

THE THIRD BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED

LEVITICUS.

This book, so called from its connection with the Levitical tribe, contains the laws which God intimated to Moses from off the mercy-seat, during the first month after the tabernacle was erected; viz. (1) Laws relative to sacred oblations, burnt-offerings, meat-offerings, peace-offerings, sin-offerings, trespass-offerings, i.–vii. (2) The history of the consecration of Aaron and his sons, and the death of the two eldest; laws concerning priests' mourning and abstinence from liquor, viii.–x. (3) Laws of purifications from ceremonial uncleanness, contracted by means of unclean beasts, childbirth, leprosy, running issues, public and national sins, xi.–xvi. (4) Miscellaneous laws, prohibiting the eating of blood, sacrificing to devils, alliance with Canaanites, imitation of heathenish superstition and idolatry, theft, perjury, incest, sodomy, bestiality; or requiring abstinence from fruit of trees newly planted; leaving of gleanings to the poor; regulating the priests' mournings and marriages; marking the blemishes which disqualified them for their work, and partaking of the more sacred victuals, or which rendered animals unfit for sacrifice, xvii.–xxii. (5) Laws directing the observation of their sacred solemnities; sabbath, passover, pentecost, feast of trumpets, feast of expiation, feast of tabernacles, release, jubilee; intermixed with some regulations relative to the lighting of the lamps, show-bread, punishment of blasphemy, murder, &c., lending to or buying of poor Hebrews, xxiii.–xxv. (6) After promises of great favour to the obedient and penitent, and threatenings of manifold punishments to the disobedient, are subjoined laws regulating the dedication of things to the Lord, and redeeming them back, xxvi. xxvii.

Whatever this book, or some parts thereof, may appear to an ignorant and carnal mind,—to such as are truly sensible, and evangelical, it is a rich, though obscure mine of the gospel of Christ, typically exhibiting him as the great high-priest, sent and prepared of God for his work; exhibiting his sacrifice in its nature and form; and its influence disclosing the love of God, showing the curse of sin, procuring peace to the mind, quieting the guilty conscience, nourishing the soul, and purifying the heart; exhibiting the gospel-method of cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh or spirit, inherent or contracted, by due applications of his blood and Spirit: and, in fine, exhibiting the necessity of abstaining from sin in all its forms, appearances, and temptations; of exact attendance on instituted means of grace, and of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

[The Moral Law, though in itself 'holy and just,' and 'the commandment good,' Ro. 7. 12, brings yet no gift to the sinner beyond 'the knowledge of sin;' while by that knowledge 'every mouth is stopped' from either palliation or denial of its sinfulness, and 'all the world stands guilty before God,' Ro. 3. 19, 20. Now this law was delivered on the mount, 'amidst blackness, and darkness, and tempest,' He. 12. 18. But the Ceremonial Law, as it has been called, which is partly delivered in Exodus, and partly in Deuteronomy, and is spread out at large in Leviticus, was delivered 'out of the tabernacle,' where God appeared in all the mild effulgence of the Shekinah, and spoke from the mercy-seat, 'God in Christ,' preparing the way for the 'word of reconciliation,' 2 Co. 5. 19. This book may accordingly be described as THE PICTORIAL GOSPEL;—the gospel for the eye as well as for the ear; the gospel to the sense, that it may conduct to faith.

Taking the Epistle to the Hebrews as the key to this book, we discover that the gospel was presented by it in types, figures, emblems, or shadows, He. 10. 1. A type is something shown as being more or less like another, and which it is intended to represent. The chief types of Christ are, (1) persons, as Adam, Noah, Moses, Joshua, David; (2) offices, as the priestly, prophetical, and kingly; (3) places, as Jerusalem, Zion; (4) times, as the jubilee; (5) laws, as of the Sabbath, of the first-born; (6) feasts, as of tabernacles; (7) special food, as of unleavened bread; (8) things made, or buildings erected, according to God's direction, as the golden candlestick, the tabernacle, the temple; (9) offerings and sacrifices of various kinds. Now these, with many other things, are severally called types of Christ, in so far as, by any inferior excellence, they contain and exhibit some correspondent but far more exceeding excellence in Christ. But whilst one great end of the Levitical institutions was to exhibit Christ to the eye and the understanding, another great end was—to gain him, as the promised seed and Saviour, a place in the heart. But when Christ enters, idolatry must be cast out. The Levitical institutions were therefore God's great antidote to idolatry. Now one of the most universal and besetting forms of idolatry is 'covetousness,' Col. 3. 5. To rebuke, to check, to condemn, and to mortify covetousness, will accordingly be found one great spiritual end of all the ceremonial enactments. Hence, at every approach of the sinner, God demands his heart, through a claim upon his hand, thus testing the sincerity of the worship offered, through the cheerfulness of the surrender made. But another of the most general objects of idolatry is the appetite. So general and so melancholy is this fact, that Paul records it 'weeping,' and so general, that he affirms that there are 'many whose god is their belly,' Phi. 3. 19. Now a large portion of the most stringent directions and interdicts of the Levitical institutions is dedicated to the subject of food; and in this department, no doubt, their primary reference was to him who is 'the bread of God which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world,' Jn. 6. 33. But another object was by every feeling of appetite which it was forbidden to gratify, unless with food which God had sanctioned, to impose a daily, habitual, and above all a divine, restraint upon the appetite, and thus to teach the true worshippers of God to 'keep under the body and bring it into subjection' in order to its being presented a 'living sacrifice,' Ro. 12. 1.

These views of the Levitical institutions, intended to condemn, and through the spiritual and mortifying use of the sacrifices utterly to cast out, the idols of covetousness and appetite, and thus to preserve undefiled the temple of the heart 'an habitation of God through the Spirit,' 1 Co. 3. 17; Ep. 2. 22, will serve to illuminate our path as we attempt to trace out their shadowy mysteries, till we discover their connection with the 'body of Christ,' 'the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth,' Ro. 10. 4. C.]

[Every type contained a prophecy. It was designed to foreshadow some greater event in the distant future. That design implied prophetic knowledge; and the embodiment of the design in the type was prophecy in act. All the ceremonies of the Mosaic law were types of Christ and his kingdom, expressly designed of God to prefigure the person or work of the Messiah. The rite of sacrifice embodied the grand truth of a crucified Saviour as the only ground of reconciliation between a guilty world and a holy God. The passover typified the character, sufferings, death, and salvation of Christ. So the sin-offering, the peace-offering, the red heifer, the day of atonement, &c., were all types of Christ in some aspect of his person or work. In a word, the whole Mosaic economy—its ordinances, vessels, observances, down to the minutest particular—was 'a shadow of good things to come;' but 'the body is of Christ.' It is only when the typical character of this book is kept fully before the mind that it becomes to the reader not merely interesting but most instructive. P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 The burnt-offerings, 3 of the herd, 10 of the flocks, 14 of the fowls.

AND the [a]LORD called unto Moses, and spake unto him out of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man of you [b]bring an offering[1] unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

3 ¶ If his offering be a burnt-sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a [c]male without blemish: he shall offer it of his own [d]voluntary will, [e]at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 2–9. The Jewish oblations, in their matter and ceremonies, were not only typical of Christ, but most of them also emblems of the moral duties of Christians, whether ministers or people. The matter of the offerings pointed at qualities in Christ, or in his people and their service. The male sex figured out the excellency of these; the being without blemish their purity; the voluntariness, the willingness and cheerfulness with which God must be served. The presenting at the door of the tabernacle, in ordinary cases (for in extraordinary ones it might be otherwise, 1 Sa. 7. 9; 11. 15; 2 Sa. 24. 18; 1 Ki. 8. 64; 18. 32; Ju. 6. 26), imported the acceptableness to be through the person and mediation of Christ. The laying on of the offerer's hand imported the transferring of guilt on the sacrifice and devoting it to God. The sprinkling of the blood round about the altar imported the divinity of Christ's atonement, and the extensive virtue of it to all the church and ordinances thereof. The washing of the inwards and legs imports the perfect holiness of heart and life in Christ, and which ought to be in his people. The burning of the whole flesh imported that Christ was, and his people ought to be, wholly devoted to God. The holy fire denoted divine justice in Christ, and holy love in him and in his people.—— [Ver. 3. The gospel—and we may rightly so speak—the gospel revealed to Moses begins with an OFFERING, saying, 'If any man (even the chief of sinners) offer an offering, rather, bring near an offering, thus announcing that no one can come near to God but by sacrifice; and that those who were once afar off 'are made nigh by the blood of Christ,' Ep. 2. 13, 'who offered up himself,' He. 7. 27. It must be an offering without BLEMISH, either from malformation, disease, injury, or spot, comp. Mal. 1. 14; Nu. 19. 2, 9, 11, with 28. 3, wherein it is a lively image of him who was offered without 'blemish or spot,' 1 Pe. 1. 19, while it also demands of the offerer that 'holiness without which no man shall see the Lord,' He. 12. 14. It must be a FREE-WILL OFFERING; so Christ testifies, 'I lay down my life—no man taketh it from me—I lay it down of myself,' Jn. 10. 17, 18. It must be offered before the Lord, not within, but at the door of the tabernacle; so Christ was offered up not in heaven, but upon earth, in virtue of which offering he summons the 'everlasting doors to be lifted up' for the entrance of 'the King of glory,' Ps. 24. 7; 1 Co. 2. 8; into which he entered as our forerunner, at once a priest and a sacrifice for ever.—— Ver. 4. The laying of the hands on the head of the sacrifice, directs also to Christ, for 'the Lord laid on him the iniquities of us all,' Is. 53. 6; 1 Pe. 2. 24. The sacrifice was accepted for atonement, that is, as the original implies, for covering the sin, agreeably to Ps. 32. 1; Ro. 4. 6; and so, reconciling God and man by the honouring of the violated law, Ro. 5. 11; Is. 42. 21.—— Ver. 5. The sacrifice must be killed, thus 'it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead,' Lu. 24. 46. Because, 'without shedding of blood there is no remission of sin,' He. 9. 22; and the believer receives this remission, because, in the sight of God and the law, and his own conscience, he is reckoned actually as dead in and with Christ, Ro. 6. 2–11; 1 Pe. 2. 24, and actually risen with him, and sitting with him in heavenly places, Col. 3. 1; Ep. 1. 19, 20; 2. 1, 5, 6, of all which, the Spirit working the life of faith in him is now the evidence and earnest, 2 Co. 5. 5. The blood is sprinkled, to exemplify its extended applicability. 'God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish,' Jn. 3. 16. It is sprinkled round about upon the altar, to exhibit the believer protected, on all sides, against the charge of the broken law; and thus, 'there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus,' Ro. 8. 1.——Ver. 6. The flaying of the sacrifice is the emblem of the grievous external cruelties inflicted on our Lord and his church, Mi. 3. 3. The cutting in pieces portrays the efforts at total extinction, first directed against our Lord and his apostles, and occasionally, in some countries and throughout all ages, against his faithful witnesses, Mat. 27. 20; 1 Co. 4. 9; Re. 6. 9.——Ver. 7. The fire—diffusing the savour, and causing the elementary parts to ascend towards heaven, in new forms, is first the emblem of that baptism, 'with the Holy Ghost, and with fire,' Mat. 3. 11, by which 'the love of God is shed abroad in the heart,' Ro. 5. 5, the desire to 'do good unto all men, and especially to them of the household of faith,' Ga. 6. 10,

4 And he shall [f]put his hand upon the head of the burnt-offering; and it shall be [g]accepted for him, to make atonement for him.

5 And he shall [h]kill the bullock before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and [i]sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.[2]

6 And he shall [k]flay the burnt-offering, and cut it into his pieces.

7 And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put[l] fire upon the altar, and lay the wood in order upon the fire.

8 And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall [m]lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar.

9 But his [n]inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall [o]burn all on the altar, to be a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 ¶ And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the [p]sheep, or of the [q]goats, for a burnt-sacrifice; he shall bring it a male without blemish.

11 And [r]he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.

12 And[s] he shall cut it into his pieces, with his head and his fat: and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar.

13 But[t] he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water; and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire,[3] of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if the burnt-sacrifice for his offering to the LORD be of [u]fowls, then he shall bring his offering of turtle-doves, or of young pigeons.

15 And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, and [x]wring off his head, and burn it on the altar; and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar.

16 And he shall pluck away his crop with [y]his feathers, and cast it beside the altar on the east part, by the [z]place of the ashes.

17 And [a]he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but shall [b]not divide it asunder: and the priest shall burn it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: it is a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, [c]of a sweet savour unto the LORD.[4]

becomes 'an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God,' Phi. 4. 18. Secondly, the fire is the emblem of divine feeling against sin which our Lord endured because he bare our sins, 1 Pe. 2. 24; Ps. 22. 1; comp. He. 10. 5-7 with Ps. 40. 6, then read Ps. 40. 2, 12, 13, as descriptive of the fire of suffering in which our Lord was tried. The wood in order, as necessary to the speedy kindling and maintenance of the fire, sets forth to us the regular observance of those various ordinances whose use is to 'stir up the gift that is in us,' 2 Ti. 1. 6, and cause 'our hearts to burn within us,' Lu. 24. 32, while Jesus 'talks with us by the way,' in the closet, in his word, or at his holy table. The head, the most elevated part of the body, the chief seat of the senses, the natural emblem of dignity and power—the fat of the inwards, the emblem of health, abundance, rest—are first devoted to the sacrifice. Most appropriate pictures of Him who is 'the head over all things to the church,' Ep. 1. 22, who is the 'health of our countenance,' Ps. 42. 11, and who alone to the labouring and heavy laden can secure eternal rest, Mat. 11. 28.——Ver. 9. The inwards as the receptacle of unseen and natural impurity, the legs as exposed to visible and contracted uncleanness, are, before sacrifice, to be washed in water. The washing of the inwards is thus explained by David, 'Thou desirest truth in the inward parts,' Ps. 51. 6; see Ps. 139. 23, 24. Alas! what an unexpected discovery is made when the inwards of an unrenewed heart are laid bare. 'Deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked,' Je. 17. 9, is the fountain, and out of it 'proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false-witness, blasphemies,' Mat. 15. 19, 'the things which defile a man,' the outward man, and demand that 'clean water' of the Spirit, which alone can cleanse the heart and the life from all their filthiness, Eze. 36. 25, of all this the spotless Saviour was the reverse, 'he knew no sin,' neither—when sought by his bitter enemies—'neither was guile found in his mouth,' 2 Co. 5. 21; 1 Pe. 2. 22. To complete the sacrifice, the priest burns all upon the altar. So Christ offered his whole person. Though in co-equal Godhead, he offered himself humbled. Phi. 2. 8; though in sinless manhood, he was numbered with the transgressors, his soul was troubled, and his body crucified, Mat. 15. 28; Jn. 12. 27; 1 Co. 1. 23. And so likewise the believer who draws 'nigh by the blood of Christ,' offers not a divided service, but his 'whole body, soul, and spirit,' to God. C.]

Ver. 11. [The former offering of the bullock, ver. 3, was at the door of the tabernacle which looks to the east, and there it appears to have been killed. The offering of the sheep or of the goats is however to be killed on the side of the altar northward. Why northward? Of Zion it is said, 'Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King,' Ps. 48. 2. Now what excellency of situation is this? Simply, in the northern hemisphere, and beneath a burning sun, the excellence of shade. Now this is one of the Scripture emblems of Christ's protection. 'A man shall be an hiding place from the wind, a covert from the tempest, the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.' 'The Lord is thy keeper, thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night,' Ps. 121. 5. Of a shade from the sun thus speaks the prophet, Is. 4. 6; 25. 1, 4, 'There shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime from the heat.' 'O Lord, thou hast been a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat.' According to these views, the sacrifice northward, being within the shadow of the altar, represents the refuge, protection, and covering, which the sacrifice of Christ affords to the believer, who can well adopt the words of the bride, Ca. 2. 3, 'I sat under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In the oblation of these valuable, social, patient, pure, and peaceful animals, let me behold my all-excellent, social, patient, peaceful, and holy Redeemer, as presented before God in the counsel of peace, brought into this world, and in due time presented at Jerusalem: as bearing our sins in his own blessed body; and as offered by himself a sweet-smelling sacrifice, without spot unto God, to make possible our salvation through the pardon of our sin! How willingly he presented himself! How painful and dolorous were his sufferings, and chiefly those of his soul, while his love to us made him to suffer the most cruel pain bearing our sins. He expired on a cross on the north-west of Jerusalem, and extends the virtue of his death daily to all known parts of the world! For us, poor and destitute criminals, he exerted all his care; suffered his soul and body to be divided asunder; but neither separated from his Godhead! And, after lying in his grave, he put off every mark of mortality and pain, and ascends to his throne on the right hand of God. What precious meat and drink offerings of blessings and comfort to himself and to my soul do attend this oblation!—Let me, therefore, all inflamed with his dying love, cheerfully render to the Lord the best that I have. Acknowledging myself the servant of death, and rejoicing that Jesus has borne my sins and guilt, let me, though unworthy to enter into God's house, offer my whole self, and all that I have, to the Lord, as a holy sacrifice, acceptable through Jesus Christ. Washed in every part, may my whole soul be inflamed with the sacred fire; the love of God shed abroad in my heart by the Holy Ghost! May a holy and prudent zeal for the Lord consume and burn up every selfish care and inward corruption; and influence me earnestly to lay out all my gifts and graces in winning poor sinners to a God in Christ.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. The original word translated 'meat-offering,' applies to any solemn gift either to God or man. Of the meat offerings to God three were congregational. (1) The waved sheaf, Le. 23. 10, 11. (2) Waved loaves, Le. 23. 17. (3) Show-bread, Le. 24. 5. Eight other meat-offerings were personal. (1) The poor man's, Le. 5. 11. (2) Of jealousy, Nu. 5. 15. (3) Of initiation of the priest, Le. 8. 26. (4) Daily offering of the high-priest, Le. 6. 20. (5) Of fine flour. (6) That baked on a plate. (7) That of the frying-pan. (8) That of the oven. The last five are prescribed in this chapter. The offering well represents him who alone could say, 'My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work,' Jn. 4. 34; 'I am the living bread which came down

SECOND AND THIRD PYRAMIDS—STANDING WHEN ABRAHAM WENT TO EGYPT. [LEVITICUS, i.]—We place the picture of the Second and Third Pyramids in connection with the first chapter of Leviticus because that book was written by Moses, and these pyramids are found in the great cemetery of Memphis, where Moses is supposed to have been brought up. The Second Pyramid in the great cemetery of Memphis was built by Chephren, the third king of the fourth dynasty, B. C. 3666. A marble fragment inscribed with the name of Chephren was found near the temple close by this pyramid. This confirms the statements of Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus that Chephren built it. A statue of this king was found in the granite temple close by. The Third Pyramid was built by Men-kau-Ra, the fourth king of the fourth dynasty, B. C. 3633. Herodotus says that Men-kau-Ra was buried in this pyramid, and the sarcophagus and the remains of the inscribed coffin of this king were found in one of its chambers by Howard Vice in 1837. The fragments of this coffin are now in the British Museum.

2 And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons the priests: and he shall take thereout his handful of the flour thereof, and of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof; and the priest shall burn the [c]memorial[2] of it upon the altar, to be an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

3 And [d]the remnant of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing [e]most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

7 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat-offering baken in the frying-pan, it shall be made of fine flour with oil.

8 And thou shalt bring the meat-offering that is made of these things unto the LORD: and when it is presented unto the priest, he shall bring it unto the altar.

9 And the priest shall take from the meat-offering a memorial thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar: it is an [k]offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 And that which is left of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': [l]it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

11 No meat-offering, which ye shall bring unto the LORD, shall be made with leaven: for ye shall burn no [m]leaven, nor any honey,[4] in any offering of the LORD made by fire.

1 The meat-offering had a symbolical signification altogether different from the sacrifice. The latter embodied the idea of sin, and typified a Saviour. The meat-offering, on the other hand, was a grateful acknowledgment that the offerer owed everything to God, dedicated to him all his goods, and there by sought to secure his favour and blessing.—P.

4 The general command in the first clause of the verse, that no bloodless offering should be made fermented, affords a sufficient explanation of the prohibition of leaven and honey. Fermentation is the first stage of corruption; it was consequently a symbol of sin. 1 Co. 5. 8. Both leaven and honey create fermentation, and hence they were forbidden.—P.

6 Salt was the very opposite of leaven. The latter was the emblem of corruption, and therefore of sin; whereas salt was the emblem of purity, permanence, and preservation of life. Salt was also employed in sealing those covenant relations which were intended to be binding and permanent. Hence it is called 'the salt of the covenant;' and any covenant intended to be emphatically enduring is called 'a covenant of salt' Nu. 18. 19; 2 Ch. 13. 5. from heaven: the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world,' Jn. 6. 51. Now, the burnt-offering was an acknowledgment of death deserved, the meat-offering an acknowledgment of life received, a visible enunciation of the prayer, 'Give us this day our daily bread.' This meat-offering must be fine flour, for the same reason that the burnt-sacrifice was without blemish. The oil commingled in the offering, or merely anointing it, represented both the external and internal work of the Spirit; and the odoriferous frankincense, the complete acceptableness of the sacrifice of Christ. Of this offering a memorial handful is burned on the altar, in witness of God's remembrance of the offerer, Ps. 20. 4, and his remembrance of God, Ps. 106. 4, 5; 20. 7. C.]

Ver. 2. This memorial put God, as it were, in mind of his covenant, to accept Christ, and his people's services through him. And it put them in mind that all their store came from God, and ought to be dedicated to his service.

Ver. 3. The most holy provision allotted for the priests was to be eaten by themselves in the sacred courts; but the less holy things, as tithes, first-fruits, &c., might be eaten by them and their families elsewhere in Canaan, Nu. 18. 9, 10; De. 12. 5–7, &c.

Ver. 11. Leaven was forbidden in voluntary meat-offerings: (1) To put them in remembrance of their hasty redemption from Egypt; (2) To teach them to avoid human inventions in the worship of God; (3) To mark the perfect purity of Christ, and the sincerity of his people's services. Honey was prohibited for much the same reason; for it hath a leavening virtue, and may signify carnal pleasures.

Ver. 13. Salt was an emblem of sincerity and soundness in grace; purity, perseverance, and friendship; and of the perpetuity of God's covenant.—[Salt was an essential addition to every offering. Salt, either natural or artificial, may be described as the enemy of corruption in flesh, hence it becomes an expressive emblem of incorruption, not by inherent quality, but by addition of a preserving ingredient. The apostles were, and believers still are, 'the salt of the earth,' Mat. 5. 13. Let them then beware lest they lose their savour, the savour of truth, sincerity, godliness, brotherly-kindness, and charity. Let these commingle with all their offerings as things 'most holy of the offerings of the Lord.' C.]

Ver. 14. [The offering of green ears of corn—is not this for you, 'both young men, and maidens, and children,' Ps. 148. 12, saying, green and flourishing though ye be, as these shall ye be soon cut down, therefore 'remember now your Creator in the days of your youth,' Ec. 12. 1. But these green ears are dried in the fire, by this process they have lost weight but not substance; they possess an artificial and premature ripeness, and are thus prepared to be converted into fine flour. Even so must 'the love of the world' be separated from the youthful heart, 1 Jn. 2. 15; 2 Ti. 2. 22, it may be by ostensible bereavements, by disappointment, or loss, or wasting disease, or pain, or sorrow, still, if the Spirit of God wake by these, they are separating a heart from the world, ripening its fruit for an earlier glory, and presenting its memorial before the Lord, a spiritual offering as made by fire. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in these meat-offerings I contemplate Jesus Christ as the fruit of the earth, prepared by the anointing influence of the Holy Ghost, and by dolorous sufferings to be, as Mediator, the eternal delight of JEHOVAH, and the delicate provision of his ransomed people, in a state of sacerdotal and holy fellowship with him, and the everlasting remembrancer of both, let me, receiving of the Spirit of Christ, with solemn prayer and heart-burning affection, surrender myself to God through him, as a memorial Christ, and their faith.—[The law against eating enjoy God as my ALL and IN ALL! Let me avoid infectious corruptions, carnal pleasures, and human inventions, in the worship of God; and have always my thoughts, my speech, and my practice seasoned with the purifying salt of spiritual grace! And, while I take care to allow the ministers of the Lord their due, let me in an especial manner consecrate the days of my youth, and the first-fruits of all my increase, unto Jesus Christ their Master!

5 And Aaron's sons shall [f]burn it on the altar[g] upon the burnt-sacrifice, which is upon the wood that is on the fire: it is an offering made by fire, [h]of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

6 ¶ And if his offering, for a sacrifice of peace-offering[m] unto the LORD, be of the flock, male or female, he shall offer it [n]without blemish.

7 If he offer a lamb for his offering, then shall he [o]offer it before the LORD.

8 And he shall [p]lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and [q]kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons shall sprinkle[r] the blood thereof round about upon the altar.

9 And he shall offer, of the sacrifice of the peace-offering, an offering made by fire unto the LORD, the [s]fat thereof, and the whole rump,[1] (it shall he take off hard by the back-bone,) and the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

10 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away,

11 And the priest shall [t]burn it upon the altar: it is the food [u]of the offering made by fire unto the LORD.

12 ¶ And if his offering be a [x]goat, then he shall offer it before the LORD.

13 And he shall [y]lay his hand upon the head of it, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and the sons of Aaron shall sprinkle[z] the blood thereof upon the altar round about.

14 And he shall offer thereof his offering, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the [a]fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

15 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

16 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire, for a sweet savour. [b]All the fat is the LORD's.

17 It shall be a perpetual statute for your generations, throughout all your dwellings, that ye [c]eat neither fat nor blood.[2]

CHAPTER IV.

1 The sin-offering of ignorance for the priest, 13 for the congregation, 22 for a ruler, 27 for any of the people.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a soul shall sin [c]through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD, concerning things which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them:

3 If the [b]priest that is anointed do sin according to the sin of the people; then let him bring, for his sin which he hath sinned, a [c]young bullock without blemish unto the LORD for a sin-offering.

4 And he shall [d]bring the bullock unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; and shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, and kill the bullock before the LORD.

5 And the priest that is anointed shall [e]take of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation.

It consists of a mass of rich and delicately flavoured fat, and is highly esteemed as an article of food for mixing with the leaner parts, and as a substitute for butter in cooking. The tail of an ordinary sheep weighs from ten to fifteen pounds. This explains why the tail (unfortunately translated 'rump' in our version) is classed with the fat. —P.

2 The reason why the use of blood was prohibited as food is stated, Ge. 9. 4. It was 'the life' of the animal. No reason is assigned for prohibiting the eating of fat. Indeed all fat is not prohibited; but only those portions where it is accumulated in masses, and which are specified. The reason of the prohibition seems to be this:—The fat of an animal was the sign of its health, vigour, and vitality. As such it was dedicated to the Lord, as an acknowledgment of his being the sustainer of life and health. Fat became, in time, the symbol of wealth, joy, richness, and power.—P.

God for some mercy received. And as they respected the offerer's own advantage, he was allowed to offer either male or female.—[Peace-offering—an offering in payment of vows, and thankful acknowledgment of mercies, Ps. 116. 17, 18, or of prayers for deliverance and peace, Ju. 20. 26; 21. 4; 1 Ch. 21. 26. These offerings were lively emblems of 'the Prince of Peace,' Is. 9. 6, of him 'who is our peace,' Ep. 2. 14. The chief peculiarities in this offering are, (1) That it may be either 'a male or female,' most probably shadowing out the doctrine of that complete spiritual equality of nation, rank, or sex. Paul declares, 'There is neither Greek nor Jew, bond nor free, male nor female,' but all one in Christ Jesus,' Ga. 3. 28. (2) That it is divided to God, the priest, and the offerer, Le. 7. 11, an emblem of that blessed 'fellowship of his Son,' 1 Co. 1. 9, into which God has called believers, in which he 'comes into them and sups with them, and they with him,' Re. 3. 26. C.]

Ver. 3. Here only the fat or tallow was the Lord's portion; the officiating priest had the breast, the right shoulder, the cheeks, and the maw, ch. 7. 30–32; De. 18. 3; and the offerer had the rest to feast upon with his friends, ch. 7. 15, 16.

Ver. 4. [Some suppose the 'caul above the liver,' to mean the great lobe of the liver itself; others, a part of the omentum, a kind of fatty apron that covers the bowels in front; but there is no part of the animal to which the description can correctly apply, except the diaphragm, an internal compound muscle which divides the contents of the breast from the lower bowels, and which is one of the principal agents in the act of breathing. C.]

Ver. 5. It was to be burned upon the burnt-sacrifice, to mark that we are first to be reconciled to God by the death of Christ before any of our services can be accepted.

Ver. 17. They were prohibited to eat fat or blood, (1) To teach them to beware of inhuman cruelties; (2) To exercise them in obedience, self-denial, and mortification of their appetites, (3) To direct them to consider their redemption as obtained only by the blood, and their sanctification effected by the Spirit of that I have accepted Jesus Christ, and shall to eternity blood had three ends in view, (1) To preserve a faithful and reverent regard to the 'blood that maketh atonement,' Le. 17. 11. (2) To preserve from the abominable idolatries of the heathen, of which David speaks, 'Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten after another god, their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer.' (3) As a religious check upon cruelty to the lower animals. The law against fat cannot be explained upon any dietetic principle peculiar to eastern countries; moderately used, it is not unwholesome either in warm or cold climates. But it can justly be accounted for on the principle of the idolatry of the appetite, which made Paul weep when he contemplated its extent and ravages, Phi. 3. 19, and as a principal minister to luxury, the use of the fat of the sacrificial parts is perpetually prohibited to the Israelites 'in all their dwellings.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Still in these peace-offerings I behold Jesus, the Son of God and seed of the woman, making peace for men with God, by the blood of his cross, the travail of his soul, and obtaining eternal redemption for us. Let me learn then to thank God for every mercy received, and seek every blessing which I need, through Jesus' atonement, surrendering my soul wholly to his service and honour, so shall I at once be a sweet savour to my God, the rejoicing of ministers, and a comfort to myself and my friends. But never let me dare to make use of anything relating to the Lord, and exhibiting his Christ as if it were a common thing, or forget the smallest of his injunctions, but receive his truth in love, and diligently observe his precepts.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. To mark the sins of priests and of congregations as greater than those of rulers or of private persons, (1) The offering must be more valuable, a bullock; (2) The blood must be sprinkled on the altar of incense; (3) The whole flesh of the bullock must be burned; whereas a lamb or kid is only required from rulers or private persons; the blood is but sprinkled on the altar of the burnt-offering, and the fat only is burned, and the flesh reserved for the officiating priests.

Ver. 3. [Flattery is an object of God's deepest abhorrence. The Lord 'shall cut off all flattering lips,' Ps. 12. 3. But flattery, whether of self or others, is yet one of the most extensive and destructive diseases in society, Ps. 26. 2; Pr. 26. 28, claimed as a right inherent in certain ranks and offices. Accordingly, all false religions and wicked tyrannies are founded upon it. Priesthoods have been flattered as incapable of error, and kings have been flattered as descendants, not of men, but of gods. This chapter furnishes a wonderful contrast to these blasphemous sacrifices of flattery, and thereby affords us another of these incidental evidences of divine origin with which the Mosaic law abounds. In this law it is taken for granted that the anointed priest may be ignorant, and sin as the people, or rather cause the people to sin by his error or example, and his sacrifice is the most public and exemplary acknowledgment. At the door of the tabernacle he offers. He sprinkles the blood seven times—the emblem of a perfect expiation; and the whole sacrifice—the acknowledgment and evidence of his ignorance and sin—he carries forth without the camp, and publicly burns it with fire. No false religion could ever be founded on such admission of possible imper-

[l] Thus the guilt was typically conveyed away from the whole congregation, who were otherwise liable to suffer for it. Christ, who was made sin or a sin-offering for us, suffered without the gate of Jerusalem, as bearing away the sin of his people; that when it is sought for, it may nowhere be found, He.13.9-14. This was also expressive of the nature of true repentance, which expels sin with abhorrence, drives it to a distance out of the camp, and refuses to have anything more to do with it.—Scott.

[n] Were it not a well-known form of human error, it would scarcely be believed that there is what may be called a private and public conscience, distinct from each other. This arises partly from that sympathetic influence that leads men to surrender their own better judgment, and 'follow a multitude to do evil;' and partly from the facility with which an individual may remove the accusation of guilt from himself, and lay it to the charge of others whom he could not control. The law of Moses provides against this prolific source of public evil, by inducing, as it were, the whole nation at the bar of God, and demanding public acknowledgment of sin, and evidence of repentance.—C.

[z] That power furnishes some license, because it can maintain impunity for sin, and that rank exempts from some religious duties, on the allegation of temporal business, or for the assertion of worldly honour, are errors both notorious and fatal. To guard against these evil principles, there is a striking peculiarity in the law for a ruler; if he sin against any of the commandments of his God, he is guilty. His elevated station, instead of procuring him indulgence for transgression or neglect, is called to a watchfulness against all sin, proportioned to the influence of his example for the good or evil of the people, and for advancing or counteracting the honour and glory of God.—C.

fection in its priesthood, nor subsist when it was discovered or acknowledged. C.]

Ver. 27. [The sin-offering for the priest or for the whole congregation must be a young bullock, without blemish; for a ruler, a kid, a male without blemish; that for one of the common people, a female, whether a lamb or a kid. Why this distinction? The priest was the ruler in matters ecclesiastical; the congregation, in their corporate capacity, were the rulers by virtue of the election they had made, De. 1. 9–15, and the persons so elected were political rulers in virtue of the office they had accepted. Each is therefore required to sacrifice a male, as the leader and ruler of his flock. By this he is reminded of the dignity and duty of the ruler, and of the aggravated guilt he incurs by sin, whilst he is led to remember 'he has a master in heaven,' and to look to the sacrifice of the great ruler, who 'laid down his life for the sheep,' Jn. 10. 15. When one of the common people offers a female, he offers a creature not inferior to the male in nature, but subordinate in office. This distinction holds good amongst Christians, 'the husband is head over the wife, even as Christ is head of the church,' Ep. 5. 23; and on this holy subordination of office, without any unholy assumption of superiority of nature, much of domestic happiness depends. Equally necessary to national happiness is a well-ordered arrangement of privileges, and subordination to authority; and of this the sacrifices of the common people significantly reminded them; while they led their faith to him who was to come, not as a ruler, but as 'made under the law to redeem them that were under the law, that they might receive the adoption of sons,' Ga. 4. 4. Now, as power sometimes sets itself above law, so humble rank sometimes attempts to get below it. The same rule therefore applies to both, and the poor is not tolerated in disobeying any law of his God; while he is permitted to choose his sacrifice, either from the sheep or the goats, according to the nature of his own flock, or his means of purchase. Note, The Saviour who records the widow's mite requires for his service but such things as Providence and grace provide. C.] offering, a [g]kid of the goats, a female without blemish, for his sin which he hath sinned.

29 And he shall [h]lay his hand upon the head of the sin-offering, and slay the sin-offering in the place of the burnt-offering.

30 And the priest shall take of the blood thereof with his finger, and put it [i]upon the horns of the altar of burnt-offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar.

31 And[k] he shall take away all the fat thereof, as the fat is taken away from off the sacrifice of peace-offerings; and the priest shall burn it upon the altar for a [l]sweet savour unto the LORD: and the priest shall make an atonement for him, and it shall be forgiven him.

32 And if he bring a [m]lamb for a sin-offering, he shall bring it a female without blemish.

33 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the sin-offering, and slay it for a sin-offering in the place where they kill the burnt-offering.

34 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin-offering with his finger, and put it [n]upon the horns of the altar of burnt-offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar:

35 And[o] he shall take away all the fat thereof, as the fat of the lamb is taken away from the sacrifice of the peace-offerings; and the priest shall burn them upon the altar, [p]according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: and [q]the priest shall make an atonement for his sin that he hath committed, and it shall be forgiven him.[8]

CHAPTER V.

1 The trespass-offering of one that sinneth in concealing his knowledge, in touching an unclean thing, or in making an oath; from the flock, 7 or of fowls, 11 or of flour. 14 The trespass-offering in sacrilege, 17 and in sins of ignorance.

AND if a [a]soul sin, and [b]hear the voice of swearing, and is a witness, whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall bear [c]his iniquity.[1]

2 Or if a soul [d]touch any unclean thing, whether it be a carcass of an unclean beast, or a carcass of unclean cattle, or the carcass of unclean creeping things, and if it be [e]hidden from him; he also shall be [f]unclean and guilty.[2]

3 Or if he touch the [g]uncleanness of man, whatsoever uncleanness it be that a man shall be defiled withal, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty.

[q] The forgiveness was what may be termed 'ceremonial.' The offender was released from the secular penalty annexed to his sin. The soul was not thereby freed from guilt in the sight of God; but the sinner was directed typically to that one great sacrifice offered up by Christ, and by which 'he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.'—P.

3 Habitual swearing begets such a fatal familiarity with an oath that men actually take God's name in vain without thought or reconsideration; anger also prompts to threats or promises and oaths that pass as totally out of the memory as a storm passes from the sky, leaving no trace; drunkenness produces similar wickedness and oblivion, with frequent circumstances of deep aggravation. These circumstances will account for the oath, and the possibility of its being hid from him by whom it was recklessly pronounced and lightly forgot. The law may, perhaps, also be intended to apply to cases where the execution of the oath is found impossible and it may in that sense be said to be hidden from him.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—In these offerings Jesus is yet represented as the strong and patient fatling; as the Lamb of God, and yet in the likeness of sinful flesh; laden with my awful transgressions, and suffering because thereof in his whole man, but chiefly in his soul, that I through him may obtain forgiveness. While I here discover how sin is aggravated, according to the station or number of the offenders, let me especially reflect how criminal and odious that must be which cannot be remitted without shedding of blood—the blood of God! how tremendous the justice of God that can by no means clear the guilty! Let me, with the priests, never attempt to gain pleasure or profit by my sins, but whenever I find myself guilty of evil, let there be an immediate application to Jesus, as made sin for me, that I might be made the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—How necessary is it to have a particular sight and sense of our sins! It therefore becomes us to keep a universal guard over all the powers of our soul and members of our body; and over none more than our tongue. Grievous is the crime of robbing God and his ministers! And however mortifying, an honest restitution is necessary. Nor have we any reason to believe our crime pardoned while we retain the wages of unrighteousness; for all sin is unsavoury to the truly penitent soul. But bless the Lord, O my soul, that the oblation of Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God—of Jesus, the corn of wheat—suits every trespass which I can be guilty of! Bless him that herein provision is made for the vilest sinner of mankind, and the poorest mortal upon earth; and that poverty is no bar in our way to heaven through him, nor our access to the God of heaven. Meanwhile, let me take heed to my ways that I sin not with my through[d] ignorance[4] in the holy things of the LORD; then he shall bring for his trespass unto the LORD a [e]ram without blemish out of the flocks, [f]with thy estimation by shekels of silver, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for a trespass-offering.

16 And[g] he shall make amends for the harm that he hath done in the holy thing, and shall add the fifth part thereto, and give it unto the priest: and the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass-offering, and it shall be forgiven him.

17 ¶ And[h] if a soul sin, and commit any of these things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the LORD; though he wist[i] it not, yet is he guilty, and shall bear his iniquity.[5]

18 And he shall bring a [k]ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass-offering, unto the priest: and [l]the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his ignorance wherein he erred and wist it not, and it shall be forgiven him.

19 It is a [m]trespass-offering: he hath certainly trespassed against the LORD.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The trespass-offering for sins done wittingly. 8 The law of the burnt-offering, 14 and of the meat-offering. 19 The offering at the consecration of a priest. 24 The law of the sin-offering.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 If a soul [o]sin, and commit a [p]trespass against the LORD, and [q]lie unto his neighbour in that which was delivered him to keep, or in fellowship,[1] or in a thing taken away by violence, or hath deceived his neighbour;

3 Or have found that which was [r]lost, and lieth concerning it, and sweareth falsely; in any of all these that a man doeth, sinning therein;

4 Then[s] it shall be, because he hath sinned, and is guilty, that he shall restore that which he took violently away, or the thing which he hath deceitfully gotten, or that which was delivered him to keep, or the lost thing which he found,

5 Or all that about which he hath sworn falsely; he shall even [t]restore it in the principal, and shall add the fifth part more thereto, and give it unto him to whom it appertaineth, in the day of his [2]trespass-offering.[3]

6 And he shall bring his [2]trespass-offering unto the LORD, a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass-offering, unto the priest.

7 And[k] the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD; and it shall be forgiven him for any thing of all that he hath done in trespassing therein.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

9 Command Aaron and his sons, saying, This is the law of the [e]burnt-offering: It is the burnt-offering, [k]because of the burning upon the altar all night unto the morning, and the fire of the altar shall be burning in it:[4]

10 And the priest shall put on his [l]linen garment, and his linen breeches shall he put upon his flesh, and take up the ashes which the fire hath [m]consumed with the burnt-offering on the altar, and he shall put them beside the altar.

11 And he shall [n]put off his garments, and put on other garments, and carry forth the ashes without the camp unto a clean place.[5]

12 And the [o]fire upon the altar shall be burning in it; it shall not be put out: and the priest shall burn wood on it every morning, and [p]lay the burnt-offering in order upon it; and he [q]shall burn thereon the fat of the peace-offerings.

13 The[r] fire shall ever be burning upon the altar; it shall never go out.[6]

14 ¶ And[s] this is the law of the meat-offering: The sons of Aaron shall offer it before the LORD before the altar.

15 And he shall take of it his handful, of the flour of the meat-offering, and of the oil thereof, and all the frankincense which is upon the meat-offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour, even the memorial of it, unto the LORD.

16 And the [t]remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat: with [u]unleavened bread shall it be eaten [x]in the holy place; in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation they shall eat it.

17 It shall not be [y]baken with leaven: [z]I have given it unto them for their portion of my offerings made by fire; it is [a]most holy, as is the sin-offering, and as the trespass-offering.

18 All the [b]males among the children of Aaron shall eat of it. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations concerning the offerings of the LORD made by fire; [c]every one that toucheth them shall be holy.[7] heart, my hand, or my tongue, since nothing less than the sacrifice of Christ makes possible the pardon of sin.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 28. Jesus, who 'bare our sins in his own body on the tree,' said of himself, 'This is my body which is broken for you;' but while the body was 'broken, being 'crucified through weakness,' 2 Co. 13. 4. the spirit, represented by the strength and durability of the brass, was 'made perfect through suffering,' He. 2. 10, was 'declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead,' Ro. 1. 4. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold the criminal and odious nature of dishonesty in God's sight! No forgiveness thereof, even through the blood of Jesus, is to be expected but in the way of restoring that which hath been unjustly acquired. While, therefore, I take heed to put far away my corruptions, and to put due honour upon the ordinances of God, let love to him perpetually burn in my heart, as the effect of his everlasting love to me; nor let any human invention be ever mixed with my worship of him. The Lord's ministers should be always duly, though not nicely, supported. But let them never expect profit or subsistence by their sins, or attempt to pardon them: let the whole guilt thereof be pardoned by Jesus, who finished transgression and made an end of sin; and let them gratefully serve him as their great High-priest. While I perceive the insufficiency of these legal oblations, which even produced and transmitted uncleanness, I would reverence the blood of my Redeemer, and hope that, when my earthly tabernacle shall be dissolved, by the gracious

THE OBELISK OF HELIOPOLIS—WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED. [LEVITICUS, vi: 1.]—We give here a picture of the obelisk at Heliopolis, because it stands amid the ruins of the ancient city of On, where Moses was educated. This obelisk stood in front of the Temple of the Sun. This was erected about 2400 years before Christ by Usertsen I. It is 62 feet 4 inches high above the level of the ground; 66 feet 8 inches above the pavement. It is built of red rose granite. The inscription on the obelisk of Heliopolis is translated in part as follows: "The horus of the sun. The life for those who are born. The king of the upper and lower land. Kheper-ka-Ra. The lord of the double crown. The life for those who are born. The sun of the Sun God. Ra-Usertsen. The friend of the spirits of On ever living. The garden of Horus. The life for those who are born. The gracious God."

20 This is the offering of Aaron, and of his sons, which they shall offer unto the LORD [c]in the day when he is anointed; the [d]tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for [e]a meat-offering perpetual, half of it in the morning, and half thereof at night.

21 In a [h]pan it shall be made with oil; and when it is baken, thou shalt bring it in: and the baken pieces[7] of the meat-offering shalt thou offer for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

22 And the priest of his sons, that is [k]anointed in his stead, shall offer it: it is a statute for ever unto the LORD; it shall be [l]wholly burnt:

23 For every meat-offering for the priest shall be wholly burnt; it shall not be eaten.[8]

24 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

25 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, saying, [m]This is the law of the sin-offering: In the place where the burnt-offering is killed shall the sin-offering be killed before the LORD: [n]it is most holy.

26 The [o]priest that offereth it for sin shall eat it; [p]in the holy place shall it be eaten, in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation.

27 Whatsoever[q] shall touch the flesh thereof shall be holy; and when there is sprinkled of the blood thereof upon any garment, thou shalt wash[r] that whereon it was sprinkled in the holy place.

28 But[s] the earthen vessel wherein it is sodden shall be broken; and if it be sodden in a brazen pot, it shall be both scoured and rinsed in water.

29 All[t] the males among the priests shall eat thereof: it is most holy.

30 And no [u]sin-offering,[9] whereof any of the blood is brought into the tabernacle of the congregation, to reconcile withal in the holy place, shall be eaten; it shall be burnt in the fire.[1]

CHAPTER VII.

1 The law of the trespass-offering, 11 and of the peace-offering, 12 whether it be for a thanksgiving, 16 or a vow, or a freewill-offering. 22 The fat and the blood are forbidden to be eaten. 28 The priests' portion in the peace-offerings.

LIKEWISE this is the [a]law of the trespass-offering: [b]it is most holy.

2 In the [c]place where they kill the burnt-offering shall they kill the trespass-offering: and the blood thereof shall he [d]sprinkle round about upon the altar.

3 And he shall offer of it [e]all the fat thereof; the rump,[1] and the fat that covereth the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

5 And the priest shall [f]burn them [g]upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a trespass-offering.

6 Every[h] male among the priests shall eat thereof; it shall be eaten in the holy place: [i]it is most holy.

7 As the [k]sin-offering is, so is the trespass-offering; there is one law for them: the priest that maketh atonement therewith shall have it.

8 And the priest that offereth any man's burnt-offering, even the priest shall have to himself the [l]skin of the burnt-offering which he hath offered.

9 And all [m]the meat-offering that is baken in the oven, and all that is dressed in the frying-pan, and in the pan, shall be the priest's that offereth it.

10 And every meat-offering mingled with oil, and dry, shall all the sons of Aaron have, [n]one as much as another.

11 ¶ And this is the [o]law of the sacrifice of peace-offerings, which he shall offer unto the LORD:

12 If he offer it [p]for a thanksgiving,[2] then he shall offer with the sacrifice of thanksgiving [q]unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers anointed with oil, and cakes mingled with oil, of fine flour fried.

13 Besides the cakes, he shall offer for his offering [r]leavened bread with the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace-offerings.[3]

14 And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation for an [s]heave-offering unto the LORD, and it shall [t]be the priest's that sprinkleth the blood of the peace-offerings.

15 And the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings for thanksgiving shall be eaten [u]the same day that it is offered; he shall not leave any of it until the morning.

16 But if the sacrifice of his offering be a [v]vow,[4] or a voluntary offering, it shall be eaten the same day that he offereth his sacrifice; and on the morrow also the remainder of it shall be eaten.

17 But the remainder of the flesh of the sacrifice on the [w]third day shall be burnt with fire.

18 And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings be eaten at all on the third day,[5] it [x]shall not be accepted, neither shall it be imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an abomination, and the soul that eateth of it [y]shall bear his iniquity.

CHAPTER VII. - Ver. 13. (1) The prohibition of leaven, in ch. 2. 11, related only to things burnt upon the altar; but he did not prohibit the offering of leavened bread for the priest's food. (2) This was a thank-offering to God for blessings, of which leavened bread was one. And it might denote that God rejects not the grateful services of his people, though tainted and mingled with corruption.

Ver. 15. This intimated that Christ and his grace should be received without delay, and with thanksgiving speedily returned; and it also prompted them to invite the poor, or strangers, to share in the entertainment.

Ver. 30. [The offerer must bring the offering with 19 And the flesh [b]that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten, it shall be burnt with fire: and as for the flesh, all that be clean shall eat thereof.

21 Moreover,[d] the soul that shall touch any unclean thing, as the uncleanness of man, or any unclean beast, or any abominable unclean thing, and eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings which pertain unto the LORD, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Ye[e] shall eat no manner of fat, of ox, or of sheep, or of goat.

24 And the fat of the beast that [f]dieth of itself, and the fat of that which is torn with beasts, may be used in any other use; but ye shall in no wise eat of it.

25 For whosoever eateth the fat of the beast, of which men offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, even the soul that eateth it shall be [g]cut off from his people.[5]

26 Moreover,[h] ye shall eat no manner of blood,[6] whether it be of fowl or of beast, in any of your dwellings.

27 Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.[7]

28 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

29 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, He that offereth the sacrifice of his peace-offerings unto the LORD, shall [i]bring his oblation unto the LORD of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings.

30 His own hands shall bring the offerings of the LORD made by fire; the fat with the breast, it shall he bring, that [k]the breast may be waved for a wave-offering[8] before the LORD.[9]

31 And the priest shall burn the [l]fat upon the altar; but the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons'.

32 And the right shoulder shall ye give unto the priest for an [m]heave-offering of the sacrifices of your peace-offerings.

33 He among the sons of Aaron, that offereth the blood of the peace-offerings and the fat, shall have the [n]right shoulder for his part.

34 For the wave-breast and the heave-shoulder have I taken of the children of Israel from off the sacrifices of their peace-offerings, and have given them unto Aaron the priest, and unto his sons, by a statute for ever, from among the children of Israel.

35 ¶ This is the portion of the [o]anointing of Aaron, and of the anointing of his sons,[1] out of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, in the day when he presented them to minister unto the LORD in the priest's office;

36 Which[p] the LORD commanded to be given them of the children of Israel, in the day that he anointed them, by a statute for ever throughout their generations.

37 This[q] is the law of the burnt-offering, of the meat-offering, and of the sin-offering, and of the trespass-offering, and of the consecrations, and of the sacrifice of the peace-offerings,

38 Which the LORD commanded Moses in mount Sinai, in the day that he commanded the children of Israel to offer their [r]oblations[2] unto the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai.

3 And gather thou all the congregation[2] together unto the [d]door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And Moses did [e]as the LORD commanded him; and the assembly was gathered together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

5 And Moses said unto the congregation, [f]This is the thing which the LORD commanded to be done.

6 And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, [g]and washed them with water.

[2] The word rendered oblations is a general name for all sorts of offerings or oblations to God. The root of the word is karab, to approach or bring near; and the term therefore denotes anything brought nigh to or offered or dedicated to the Lord, to whom also the offerer himself was, as it were, brought nigh, having access in the way appointed by the law. The comprehensive term is thus very appropriately introduced here at the conclusion of the account of the different offerings and sacrifices.—J.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The appointment and mode of the consecration of Aaron and his sons was given some time before, as we have it related in Ex. xxix., but the actual consecration was delayed till now, when all was prepared.—J.

[2] The Hebrew word translated 'congregation' signifies a select body of representative men—not the whole people, for which another word was employed. The exact number assembled is unknown; but it may not have been—there is nothing in the original of this passage to prove that it was—more than a few hundreds.—P. his own hands. The priest cannot bring it as his superior; nor his friend as his equal; nor his servant as his inferior. This points to the fact that none but Christ can offer the sacrifice of reconciliation; and that religion, or faith, repentance, holiness, is a personal concern between God and every man's own soul; of repentance, a bitterness which the world knoweth not; and of hope, a joy with which a stranger intermeddleth not. See Pr. 14. 10. C.]

Ver. 38. [Thanksgivings in the wilderness? Why are they not reserved exclusively for Canaan? Is not liberty, the liberty of the Son, abundant compensation for want of a 'continuing city?' Is not manna a sufficient substitute for 'milk and honey?' Whatever be your lot, 'rejoice in the Lord, O! ye righteous, for praise is comely for the upright,' Ps. 33. 1. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers of the gospel ought to be plentifully supplied with everything necessary and agreeable. And the more diligent any are in the services of religion, the more abundantly will they reap the advantages thereof. What glorious reward to himself, and redemption to his people, doth Jesus procure by his all-comprehending oblation! What robes! what delicious provision! May I and my friends share with him in his abundant nourishment and consolation! And let me not only timely perform my vows; but where I am left most at liberty, let me with cheerfulness give to the Lord. As there is no medium between God's acceptance and abhorrence of my works, let me examine myself, and take heed to my steps. Let my receiving and feeding upon Jesus be as early, and earnest, and social, as possible; and let me, by an after-improvement of divine ordinances, obtain the real benefit thereof. Never let me attempt to live in sinful pollutions along with feasting on Christ. But always beware of a licentious appetite after things prohibited of God. And while I manifest the utmost regard to Jesus and his atonement, let me, as a ransomed priest, feed upon him as my portion; feed upon his dearest love and choicest supports; always eyeing the grant, appointment, and command of God, as the rule and reason of my conduct.

8 And he [f]put the breastplate upon him; also he put in the breastplate the Urim and the Thummim.

9 And he [g]put the mitre upon his head; also upon the mitre, even upon his forefront, did he put the golden plate, the holy crown; as the LORD commanded Moses.

10 And Moses took the [h]anointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle, and all that was therein, and sanctified them.

11 And he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anointed the altar and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them.

12 And he [m]poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head,[1] and anointed him, to sanctify him.[2]

13 And Moses [n]brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and put bonnets upon them; as the LORD commanded Moses.

14 ¶ And[o] he brought the bullock for the sin-offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the bullock for the sin-offering.

15 And he [p]slew it; and Moses [q]took the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about with his finger, and purified the altar, and poured the blood at the bottom of the altar, and sanctified it, to make reconciliation upon it.

16 And he [r]took all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and Moses burned it upon the altar.

17 But [s]the bullock, and his hide, his flesh, and his dung, he burnt with fire without the camp; as the LORD commanded Moses.

18 ¶ And he [t]brought the ram for the burnt-offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

19 And he killed it; and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

20 And he cut the ram into pieces; and Moses burnt the head, and the pieces, and the fat.

21 And he washed the inwards and the legs in water; and Moses burnt the whole ram upon the altar: it was a burnt-sacrifice for a sweet savour, and an offering made by fire unto the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And [u]he brought the other ram, the ram of consecration: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.[3]

23 And he slew it; and Moses [x]took of the blood of it, and put it upon the tip of Aaron's right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

24 And he brought Aaron's sons, and Moses put of the blood upon the tip of their right ears, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet: and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

25 And he [y]took the fat, and the rump,[4] and all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and the right shoulder:

26 And out of the basket of unleavened bread, that was before the LORD, he took [z]one unleavened cake, and a cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, and put them on the fat, and upon the right shoulder:

27 And he put all [a]upon AARON'S hands, and upon his sons' hands, and waved them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

28 And Moses took them from off their hands, and [b]burnt them on the altar upon the burnt-offering:[5] they were consecrations for a sweet savour; it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

29 And Moses [c]took the breast, and waved it for a wave-offering before the LORD: for of the ram of consecration it was Moses' part; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 And Moses [d]took of the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his sons' garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

31 ¶ And Moses said unto AARON, and to his sons, [e]Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and there eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations, as I commanded, saying, Aaron and his sons shall eat it.

32 And [f]that which remaineth of the flesh and of the bread shall ye burn with fire.

33 And ye shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation in seven [6]days, until the days of your consecration be at an end: for seven days shall he consecrate you.

1 This anointing with oil was typical of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit. It was conferred on priests and kings, if not on prophets, to qualify them for their office. It specially pointed out the anointing with the Holy Ghost of Him who in his own person sustains all these offices to his church: and who was 'anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows,' to whom the Holy Spirit was given 'without measure' or limit, and upon whom he rested, Is.61.1, as compared with Lu. 4. 18. The anointing with oil conferred peculiar sacredness, and it was considered peculiarly heinous to injure the 'Lord's anointed.' Speedy and terrible destruction is denounced upon all who oppose him who was thus especially typified and styled, Ps.ii.—I.

2 Were this the minute detail of a mere ceremony, nothing could be more uninteresting. But as a picture of the consecration of the Lord Jesus, it becomes a most attractive object of contemplation to the believer. It consists of washing, clothing, crowning, anointing, in order to sanctification, that is, dying to sin, and living to God. All these meet in Christ—humanity washed that was sinless, 1 Pe. 3. 18; clothed, that is with righteousness, Re. 1. 13; crowned, that is with glory and honour, He. 2. 9; anointed, that is with the Spirit without measure, He. 1. 9; sanctified, as it is written, 'For in that he died, he died unto sin once, but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God,' Ro.6.10.—C.

3 Calmet informs us that 'among the Romans the consecration of the high-priest bore a close resemblance to that of the Jewish high-priest. The Roman high-priest, clothed in his pontifical, was conducted into a subterraneous place covered with a floor of boards pierced through with many holes. On this floor a bullock was sacrificed, whose blood, running through the holes, fell upon the priest who stood underneath to receive this sacred aspersion. Being completely covered with this sanguineous shower, he ascended and was acknowledged and adored by the people as Pontifex Maximus, or supreme high-priest.' These rites, which were in all probability originally borrowed from the Jewish ritual, and mixed and disguised with their own superstitions, are described minutely by Aurelius Prudentius.—I.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 30. From the commentary of David, Ps. 133. 2, we learn that this anointing was the emblem of brotherly unity. Why? It was one perfume sprinkled upon all the family, and diffusing its refreshing odour equally to all the worshippers; while the accompanying blood of the sacrifice was the bond of the council and covenant of peace. So Christians should be united, they are one family, Ga. 6. 10; so Christians should be united, they have one anointing and access by one Spirit to one Father, 1 Jn. 2. 27; Ep. 2. 18; so Christians should be united, they have one sacrifice, Ep. 2. 13, 16; so Christians should be united, they have one righteousness, Ro. 3. 22; so Christians should be united, they have one home, Jn. 14. 2, 3. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold how exactly everything in Jesus Christ, and his gospel-church, answers to the purposes of God, declared in the promises and predictions of his word! Before angels and men he is called to, prepared for, and solemnly set apart to, his mediatorial work. Holy, harmless, and undefiled, he steps forth, vested by his Father in a marvellous manhood and mediatorial function. Anointed with the Holy Ghost above measure, sanctified by his own blood, and made perfect through suffering, he himself and his Father rejoice in his office, and his execution of it. And the tabernacle of his body, the church, and all instituted ordinances, are, together with him, consecrated to the service of God in his oblation, blood, and Spirit. Let ministers of the gospel learn with what solemn and deliberate preparation they ought to enter on their work. Let every saint observe what solemn washing in the fountain opened for sin and uncleanness, what putting on of the Lord Jesus, what sprink-

A COPTIC CHURCH—IN THE CRYPT OF WHICH CHRIST IS SAID TO HAVE SPENT PART OF THE SOJOURN IN EGYPT WITH HIS MOTHER MARY. [LEVITICUS, ix.] —This picture is placed in connection with the ninth chapter of Leviticus because of its remote connection with Moses. Old Cairo is between New Cairo and Memphis, and Moses was brought up at Memphis and educated at Heliopolis. In going from Heliopolis to Memphis he would pass through Old Cairo. This church stands in the middle of the Roman Fortress of Babylon in Egypt. There is a crypt in the church twenty feet by fifteen, in which it is said that the Virgin and her Son spent a part of their time during their sojourn in Egypt to avoid the wrath of Herod. The general shape of the church is nearly oblong. The wooden pulpit inside is of rosewood, inlaid with designs in ebony set with ivory edgings. There are many specimens of very beautiful workmanship inside. There are very handsome carvings representing St. Demetrius, Mar George, Abu-sephen, the nativity and the Last Supper.

OLD CAIRO—NEAR THE ISLAND OF RHODA, WHERE MOSES WAS DISCOVERED. [Leviticus, viii:10.]—Old Cairo is upon the suburbs of Modern Cairo, and lies between Memphis, where Moses was brought up, and Heliopolis, where he was educated. It is in the neighborhood of the country in which the children of Israel dwelt in Egypt for 430 years. Near Old Cairo, according to Josephus, stood the fortress of the Babylon of Egypt, which was founded by the Babylonian mercenary soldiers of Cambyses, B. C. 525. Diodorus says that the Babylon of Egypt, which was occupied by the site where what is called Old Cairo now stands, was founded by Assyrian captives in the time of Rameses II., who was the Pharaoh who oppressed the children of Israel. This shows us that the particular site we see is connected with the early history of Egypt. During the reign of Augustus, Old Cairo was the headquarters of one of the Roman legions garrisoned in Egypt.

34 As he hath done this day, so the LORD hath commanded to do, to make an atonement for you.

35 Therefore shall ye abide at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation day and night seven days, and [h]keep the charge of the LORD, that ye die not: for so I am commanded.

36 So[i] Aaron and his sons did all things which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The first offerings of Aaron for himself and for the people. 8 The sin-offering, 12 and the burnt offering for himself. 15 The offerings for the people. 23 Moses and Aaron bless the people, and fire cometh out from the Lord upon the altar.

AND it came to pass, on the [a]eighth day,[1] that Moses called Aaron and his sons, and the elders of Israel;

2 And he said unto Aaron, [b]Take thee a young calf for a sin-offering, and a ram for a burnt-offering, without blemish, and offer them before the LORD.

3 And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying, [c]Take ye a kid of the goats for a sin-offering; and a calf and a lamb, both of the first year, without blemish, for a burnt-offering;

4 Also a bullock and a ram for peace-offerings, to sacrifice before the LORD;[2] and a meat-offering mingled with oil: for to-day the LORD will [d]appear unto you.

5 And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of the congregation; and all the congregation drew near, and stood before the LORD.

6 And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commanded that ye should do; and the glory of the LORD shall appear unto you.[3]

7 And Moses said unto Aaron, [e]Go unto the altar, and offer thy sin-offering, and thy burnt-offering, and make an atonement for thyself, and for the people: and offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them; as the LORD commanded.

8 ¶ Aaron therefore went unto the altar, and slew the calf of the sin-offering which was for himself.

9 And the sons of Aaron brought the blood unto him; and he [f]dipped his finger in the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar, and poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar:

10 But the [g]fat, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver, of the sin-offering, he burnt upon the altar; as the LORD commanded Moses.

Herein was set forth the perfection of our great high-priest, who, on the eighth day, after the seventh, Sabbath, rose from the dead, and entered upon his heavenly priesthood, in which he is able to save to the uttermost, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for us, He. 7. 24,25.—C.

2 Aaron having offered sacrifices for himself, the children of Israel are next commanded to offer a sin-offering for themselves; not a young bullock, but a kid of the goats, as on the great day of atonement. The people offering peace-offerings or offerings of thanksgiving and communion, which the priests partook, they did not require to offer any for themselves. The Lord was to appear unto them, to come down by fire to own their sacrifice, and to testify his acceptance of Aaron's typical priesthood; perhaps also to give some special manifestation of the divine presence.—I.

7 These were three offerings. The first a sin-offering, confessing guilt to a gracious God; the second, a burnt-offering, mercifully consuming it away; the third, a peace-offering, confirming reconciliation; and, after these, Aaron blesses the people. This was nothing less than 'the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ,' wherein sinners stand, confessing sin, yet confident of forgiveness, 1 Jn. 4 19. Nothing less than that 'love of God,' which he 'commendeth to us—in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us,' Ro. 5 8. This is nothing less than that communion of the Holy Ghost, which preserves between Christ and his church, and Christian and Christian, 'the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace,' Ep. 4. 3.—C.

This was the recognized token that the sacrifice was accepted, and that the divine favour was propitiated. It appears that there was already a fire upon the altar, there had been one for seven days. It consumed the offerings by the slow and ordinary process; but the fire of the Lord acted in a different way. It consumed the whole in a moment—probably by one vivid grand flash, which all the people could see, and which all must acknowledge to be divine. 11 And[k] the flesh and the hide he burnt with fire without the camp.

12 And he [l]slew the burnt-offering; and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled round about upon the altar.

13 And they presented the burnt-offering unto him, with the pieces thereof, and the head; and he burnt them upon the altar.

14 And he did wash the inwards and the legs, and burnt them upon the burnt-offering on the altar.

15 ¶ And he brought the people's offering, and took [k]the goat, which was the sin-offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first.

16 And he [l]brought the burnt-offering, and offered it according to the manner.[4]

17 And he [m]brought the meat-offering, and took an handful thereof,[5] and burnt it upon the altar, besides the burnt-sacrifice of the morning.

18 He [n]slew also the bullock and the ram for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, which was for the people: and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled upon the altar round about,

19 And the fat of the bullock and of the ram, the rump,[6] and that which covereth the inwards, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver:

20 And they put the fat upon the breasts, and he burnt the fat upon the altar:

21 And [o]the breasts and the right shoulder Aaron waved for a wave-offering before the LORD; as Moses commanded.

22 And Aaron [p]lifted up his hand toward the people, and blessed them; and came down from offering of the sin-offering, and the burnt-offering, and peace-offerings.[7]

23 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, [q]and came out, and blessed the people: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people.

24 And [r]there came a fire out from [s]before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt-offering and the fat:[8] which when all the people saw, they shouted, and [t]fell on their faces.

ling of his blood and Spirit, what feasting on his flesh as meat indeed, what self-dedication, what mortification of inward lusts during their whole week of life, are necessary to prepare them for their sacerdotal service in the house eternal in the heavens.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—Here also I behold my Redeemer offering up himself a sacrifice without spot unto God, to expiate sin, glorify God, and procure provision and peace to his people. I behold him, again and again, blessing the people: I discern the Almighty Father kindling his indignation against him, and kindly accepting his oblation in our stead. While I adore his grace and kindness, let me learn likewise a lesson of diligence and obedience. If I desire the benefit and comfort of divine appearances, I must attend upon divine ordinances; there no religious service can be acceptable to God till the guilt of my sin be removed by an actual interest in the great propitiation; and all, therefore, but especially ministers, ought to begin their religion at themselves. God's therein, and put incense thereon, and [b]offered strange fire before the LORD, which he [c]commanded them not.[1]

2 And there [d]went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them; and they died before the LORD.

3 Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the LORD spake, saying, [e]I will be sanctified[2] in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified. And Aaron held[f] his peace.

4 And Moses called [g]Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of Uzziel the uncle of Aaron, and said unto them, Come near, carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp.

5 So they went near, and carried them in their coats out of the camp; as Moses had said.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, [h]Uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes, lest ye die, and lest [i]wrath come upon all the people: but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel, bewail the burning which the LORD hath kindled.

7 And ye [k]shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: for the [l]anointing oil of the LORD is upon you. And they did according to the word of Moses.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, saying,

9 Do[m] not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations:[3]

10 And that ye may [n]put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean;

11 And that ye may [o]teach the children of Israel all the statutes which the LORD hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses.

12 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons that were left, Take the [p]meat-offering that remaineth of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and eat it without leaven beside the altar: for it is most holy.

13 And ye shall eat it in the holy place, because it is thy due, and thy sons' due, of the sacrifices of the LORD made by fire: for so I am commanded.

14 And [q]the wave-breast and heave-shoulder shall ye eat in a clean place;[4] thou, and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee: for they be thy due, and thy sons' due, which are given out of the sacrifices of peace-offerings of the children of Israel.

15 The heave-shoulder and the wave-breast shall they bring, with the offerings made by fire of the fat, to wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD; and it shall be thine, and thy sons' with thee, by a statute [r]for ever; as the LORD hath commanded.

16 ¶ And Moses diligently sought the [s]goat of the sin-offering, and, behold, it was [t]burnt: and he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying,

17 Wherefore[u] have ye not eaten the sin-offering in the holy place, seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you[6] to [v]bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the LORD?

18 Behold, [w]the blood of it was not brought in within the holy place: ye should indeed have eaten it in the holy place, as I commanded.

19 And Aaron said unto Moses, [x]Behold, this day have they offered their sin-offering and their burnt-offering before the LORD; and such

It is not said here that there was a positive command against offerings; but it is said that there was no instruction for it. It was unwelcome therefore, offered by Nadab and Abihu, who preferred reason to revelation. The sin of the offering consisted in this: 1. It was not commanded. 2. It was presented at a wrong time. 3. The fire was not taken from the altar; it was 'strange fire.'—P.

[4] There is no evidence, of any logical or historical connection between this injunction and the preceding incident. Had the sin of Nadab and Abihu arisen from drunkenness it would have been stated. [8] The goat here spoken of was a sin-offering for the people, closely. It ought to have been eaten by the priests, and the remaining flesh to have been consumed in the same manner as the remaining flesh of the other sacrifices. In the confusion, probably arising from the death of Nadab and Abihu, it seems to have been burned without the camp, or upon the altar. Moses is therefore angry at this deviation from the divine precept. He therefore expostulates, not with Aaron, already borne down by distress, but with his two sons, Eleazar and Ithamar, who by eating the sin offering were typically to bear and take away the sin of the people.—J.

presence in ordinances effectually attests them to be his. Displays of his divine glory ought to be entertained with joyful gratitude and holy reverence; and the fire of God's Spirit being once granted, to inflame our affections and consume our corruptions, must be cherished and supported with the daily fuel of meditation and prayer.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 2. Nadab and Abihu had been honoured with seeing God, Ex. 24. 9, 10, but how little privileges may be improved appears in their self-willed offering of strange fire, 'which God commanded them not.' What an unexpected event! The tabernacle service commences with rebellion and judgment; the perfume of the anointing oil is dissipated in devouring fire; the holy garments become winding-sheets; dear relatives become corpse-bearers; and no head is uncovered, no garment rent, lest wrath come upon all the people. Even the father's heart bows to the justice of the terrible sentence—'and Aaron held his peace.' It was thus the earliest and brightest day of Christianity also opened with the secret covetousness of Ananias and Sapphira, Ac. 5. 1-11, whose judgment tarried not, 'and fear came upon all the churches, and as many as heard these things.'—Note, These are not annals of curiosity: but 'these things happened to them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come,' 1 Co. 10. 11. C.]

Ver. 9. [From the vicinity of this prohibition to the judgment on Nadab and Abihu, some have imagined they had sinned through wine. But there is, first, no intimation of such a sin in the narrative; and secondly, it is not the manner of Moses to conceal any faults, even in his brother or sister; therefore we conclude that, not drunkenness, but self-will in the worship of God, both without and against divine authority, was the real transgression for which they died. Let Christians in the enjoyment of privileges beware of their abuse. Nadab and Abihu sin—the fire devours them, leaving not an instant for intercession. So John warns the church, 'If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it,' 1 Jn. 5. 16. C.]

Ver. 20. [Here there had been such a departure from the divine ritual that Moses was angry. Why then does no judgment come on Eleazar and Ithamar? And why is Moses content with an explanation which admits that the error was committed against knowledge? The very confession of the sin is one reason why it is pardoned, Pr. 28. 13; 1 Jn. 1. 9; not for any virtue in the confession itself, but because of that mercy of God in Christ which faith has apprehended, before the tongue can make confession of the sin of the heart. Moreover, the sin of Nadab arose from a proud self-sufficiency which would dictate to God; that of Aaron, Eleazar, and Ithamar from an erroneous fear of offending.—Note, This is a frequent sin with professing Christians, who abstain from the Lord's supper from an erroneous sense of unworthiness, and yet draw comfort from this supposed tenderness of conscience: but if men really judged themselves unworthy, they would flee to 'the Lamb that was slain;' and if conscience were really tender, it would seek to be 'sprinkled from dead works,' He. 9. 14. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Stand in awe, my soul, and sin not! Let no honours, no gifts, no graces, render thee proud or inattentive to God's institutions. Who can stand before this holy Lord God, the fire of whose zeal for his own institutions burns hottest the nearest to his altar! His noted favours and his tremendous judgments are often most closely connected: and, for the warning of others, he sometimes punishes the first transgressors with the most fearful severity, and deeply marks their sin in their punishment. How insufficient were the giving of the law, the typical tabernacle, or the ceremonial priesthood, to prevent either sins or judgments! When God severely afflicts me or mine, let me draw my heart-composing considerations from the word, the providence, the glory of God, as concerned in it; and never may my indulgence of private affection interfere with the honour or sovereign will of God, nor lead me to disgrace my spiritual unction with carnal cares, or the sorrow of the world, which worketh death. While my soul trembles at God's righteous judgments, never let my confusion occasion mistakes in any part of my duty: and, if I desire more of intimate fellowship with God, let me hearken to the voice of his messengers, and after all interruptions reapply myself to my work.—Let ministers seriously ponder how dangerous it is to change God's ordinances, even things have befallen me: and if I had eaten the sin-offering to-day, should it have been [q]accepted in the sight of the LORD?

20 And when Moses heard that, he was [r]content.

1 What beasts may, 4 and what may not be eaten: 9 What fishes: 13 What fowls. 29 The creeping things which are unclean.

AND the LORD spake unto [a]Moses and to Aaron, saying unto them,

2 Speak [b]unto the children of Israel, saying, These[c] are the beasts which ye shall eat among all the beasts that are on the earth.

3 Whatsoever[d] parteth the hoof, and is cloven-footed, and cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat.

4 Nevertheless, [e]these shall ye not eat, of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the hoof: as the camel, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

7 And [g]the swine, though he divide the hoof, and be cloven-footed, yet he cheweth not the cud; he is unclean to you.

8 Of [h]their flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcass shall ye not touch; they are unclean to you.

9 ¶ These shall ye eat of all that are in the waters: [i]Whatsoever hath fins and scales in the waters, in the seas, and in the rivers, them shall ye eat.

10 And all [k]that have not fins and scales in the seas and in the rivers, of all that move in the waters, and of any living thing which is in the waters, they shall be an abomination unto you:

1 Whether the word translated hare be the common hare, or another species, or altogether a different animal, is uncertain. Cowper of Olney, who domesticated hares, testifies, however, that they chewed the cud, so that it may possibly be the animal intended.—C.

2 The hare does not, scientifically speaking, 'chew the cud,' i.e. it does not, like real ruminants, draw up food after deglutition from the first stomach, and submit it to a mere thorough grinding process. But it does to a considerable extent chew its food a second time. After first nibbling and partially chewing, it deposits the food in its cheeks, and then when at repose it brings it out and chews it fully before finally swallowing. By the Hebrews the acts of 'chewing the cud,' and 'rechewing,' as the hare and coney do, were called by the same name, because they so closely resembled each other. Consequently the statement in this passage is not opposed to scientific investigation.—P.

Base and dangerous is it especially for them to be overcharged with surfeiting or drunkenness and the cares of this life, in a work of such importance and concern, which requires the most faithful attention to reprove the sinner, to comfort the believer, and tenderly to regard the reasonable excuses of such whose minds are distressed!

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 2. In this chapter God proceeds to provide against the idolatry of the appetite, Phi. 3. 19, first, by merciful and sufficient provision, so that there may be no just cause of complaint; secondly, by wholesome restraint, so that there may be a constant check upon indulgence. Two zoological marks distinguish the clean from the unclean animals —parting the hoof, and chewing the cud. (1) The parted hoof of the ox and sheep belongs to an animal inoffensive and peaceful; the claws of the lion and tiger are weapons of war and destruction. (2) Animals with parted hoof are more social in their habits, and regular in their march than others: the ox and the sheep congregate in the herd and the fold, and follow their leader through pastures and woods in one track. The lion and the tiger are unsocial in their habits, and follow merely the prey which they seek to destroy. These characteristics of the clean animals are daily monitors, that believers, restraining and mortifying all angry passions, 'be careful to give none offence,' 1 Co. 10. 32, to be 'followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises,' He. 6. 12, whilst they give testimony against those 'who separate themselves, having not the Spirit,' Jude 19, and 'whose feet are swift to shed blood,' and 'the ways of peace have they not known,' Ro. 3. 15, 17. The second characteristic of the clean and edible animals is chewing the cud, that is, the power and habit of bringing up their food, and subjecting it anew to mastication during the hours of recumbency, so that, except when they sleep, they are never altogether at rest. This is the emblem of the spiritual man, 'talking with himself on his bed while he is still,' Ps. 4. 4, 'remembering God upon his bed, and meditating upon him in the night watches,' Ps. 63. 6; and so evident is the similarity, that to ruminate signifies in the clean beast the act of 'chewing the cud,' while in man it also signifies the act of solemn meditation. The influence of these dietetic arrangements in preserving the Jews a separate people, continues till this day: they were peculiarly calculated and intended to preserve them from the dangerous infection of idolatrous feasts, or even from those dangerous intimacies which are often cemented at the social intercourse of the table, and so often 'become a snare and a trap' to the self-indulgent, Ps. 69. 22. While to Christians these arrangements are not binding, they nevertheless convey to them an obligatory lesson on purity of church fellowship, reminding us of the apostolic rule, 'not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat,' 1 Co. 5. 11. C.]

Ver. 5. [The coney is described, Ps. 104. 18, as shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even; they are unclean unto you.

29 ¶ These also shall be unclean unto you among the [t]creeping things that creep upon the earth: The weasel, and the mouse, and the tortoise after his kind,[2]

30 And the ferret, and the chameleon, and the lizard, and the snail, and the mole.[3]

31 These are unclean to you among all that creep: [u]whosoever doth touch them, when they be dead, shall be unclean until the even.

32 And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean; whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack, whatsoever vessel it be wherein any work is done, it must be [x]put into water, and it shall be unclean until the even; so it shall be cleansed.

33 And every earthen vessel whereinto any of them falleth, whatsoever is in it shall be unclean; and [y]ye shall break it.[4]

34 Of [z]all meat which may be eaten, that on which such water cometh shall be unclean: and all drink that may be drunk in every such vessel shall be unclean.

35 And every thing whereupon any part of their carcass falleth shall be unclean; whether it be oven, or ranges for pots, [a]they shall be broken down: for they are unclean, and shall be unclean unto you.

36 Nevertheless a [b]fountain or pit, wherein there is plenty of water,[5] shall be clean:[6] but that which toucheth their carcass shall be unclean.

37 And if any part of their carcass fall upon any [c]sowing seed which is to be sown, it shall be clean.

38 But if any water be put upon the seed, and any part of their carcass fall thereon, it shall be unclean unto you.

39 And if any beast, of which ye may eat, die; he that [d]toucheth the carcass thereof shall be unclean until the even.

40 And he that [e]eateth of the carcass of it shall[f] wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: he also that beareth the carcass of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

41 And every [g]creeping thing[7] that creepeth upon the earth shall be an abomination; it shall not be eaten.[8]

42 Whatsoever [h]goeth upon the belly, and whatsoever goeth upon all four, or whatsoever hath more feet[9] among all creeping things that creep upon the earth, them ye shall not eat; for they are an abomination.

43 Ye[i] shall not make yourselves[1] abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby;

44 For [k]I am the LORD your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy; for I am holy: neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

45 For[l] I am the LORD that bringeth you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: [m]ye shall therefore be holy; for I am holy.

46 This[n] is the law of the beasts, and of the fowl, and of every living creature that moveth in the waters, and of every creature that creepeth upon the earth;

47 To [o]make a difference between the unclean and the clean, and between the beast that may be eaten and the beast that may not be eaten.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The purification of a woman after child-birth. 6 Her offerings for her purifying.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a [a]woman have conceived seed, and born a man-child, then she shall be unclean seven days; according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean.

3 And in the [b]eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.

4 And she shall then [c]continue in the blood of her purifying [d]three and thirty days: she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.

5 But if she bear [e]a maid-child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.[1]

6 ¶ And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled for a son, or for a daughter, she [f]shall bring a lamb of the first year[2] for a burnt-offering, and a young pigeon or a turtle-dove for a sin-offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest;

1 Thus the female sex was marked with dishonour till Christ came. [Though the venerable Brown and others look upon this doubling of the time for purification after the birth of a female as a mark of dishonour upon her sex, we dare not adopt the opinion, nothing seems more contrary to the spirit of the Scripture than any such dishonourable distinction. The original promise to 'the seed of the woman,' the dignity of Sarah, as representative of the covenant of grace, Ga. 4. 24; Solomon's inspired and glowing description of female excellence, Pr. xxxi. combine, with many similar references and records, to induce us to search for an explanation, not implying dishonour, but embodying some important lesson. May not the explanation be found in the double transgression of the woman in Eden? 1. Her error of judgment, which lay in two things: viz. disregarding God's threatening, and believing Satan's promise. 2. Her actual sin, which also lay in two points: viz. herself first eating, then giving to her husband. This view seems clearly supported by Paul, 1 Ti. 2. 14: 'And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.' We discover, therefore, in this law, not a stigma affixed, but an abiding memorial set up, and an instructive lesson delivered to all the daughters of Eve. It is a repeated memorial of the original sin and its heavy but deserved sentence; it is a solemn warning to guard against deception, to distrust specious promises, as those of the serpent were, and to seek the wisdom that cometh from above, and to continue in the faith of 'the promised seed,' the 'child' to be born, the Son to be 'given,' the Saviour of the body.' finding its refuge in the rocks; and in Pr. 30. 26 they are described 'as a feeble people, yet making their dwelling in the rocks.' The rabbit cannot therefore be the animal meant, as it chooses its dwelling in dry sandy earth. Bruce seems clearly to prove that the modern name of this animal is ashkoko; that it differs much in form from the rabbit, is an inhabitant of rocks, and is abundant in Horeb and Sinai. C.]

Ver. 9. [Two marks distinguish unclean fishes. As an example of fish without scales, we may take the murderous shark; of these without fins, the misshapen walrus. It is remarkable that four times these creatures are denounced as an abomination. Being less acquainted with the dispositions and habits of fishes than of land animals, we are the less able to assign the reasons of the distinction; for beyond mere will, there is no doubt a reason; and in mere unwholesomeness, as some think, we do not believe it to exist; we seek it rather in the predacious and destructive dispositions of some, the foul and muddy resorts of others, and even in the monstrous appearance by which many of the legally unclean fishes are distinguished from those that are clothed with scales and furnished with fins. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Highly it becomes me, as the servant of God, to live as one separated from the world to his service, always to follow his directions, whether with respect to soul or body, and to eat for health, not from lust. Let even my body, therefore, be carefully preserved as a temple of the Holy Ghost, while in a becoming manner I imitate these clean animals, and become not almost but altogether a Christian. Let me be addicted to meditation on the truths of God, which I have received for my spiritual food, and be steady in my steps, and inclined to render unto God and men their respective dues.—Clothed and protected with Jesus' righteousness and grace, let me, by faith and love, swim against the tides of corruptions and troubles, avoiding intimacy with cruel, self-seeking,

8 And if [i]she be not able to [2]bring a lamb,[3] then she shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons; the one for the burnt-offering, and the other for a sin-offering: and the priest shall make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 The laws and tokens whereby the priest is to be guided in discerning the leprosy.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, saying,

2 When a man shall have in the skin of his flesh a rising,[1] a scab, or bright spot, and it be in the skin of his flesh like [a]the plague of leprosy; then he shall be brought unto Aaron the[b] priest, or unto one of his sons the priests:[2]

3 And the priest shall [c]look on the plague in the skin of the flesh; and when the hair in the plague is [d]turned white, and the plague in sight be [e]deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a plague of leprosy: and the priest shall look on him, and [f]pronounce him unclean.

4 If the bright spot be white in the skin of his flesh, and in sight be not deeper than the skin, and the hair thereof be not turned white; then the priest shall [g]shut up him that hath the plague seven days.

5 And the priest shall look on him the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague in his sight be at a stay, and the plague spread not in the skin; then the priest shall shut him up seven days more.

6 And the priest shall look on him again the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall [h]pronounce him clean:

[4] When the leprosy has covered all the flesh, why is the patient pronounced clean? It was the symptom that the diseased action was over, and that nothing but the marks of its ravages remained. Even so is it with sin. When the sinner has disburdened the full extent of his misery, and cries out, 'Wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?' Ro. 7. 24, then, and not till then, can he thank God for healing, through Jesus Christ his Lord.—C.

[5] The principal symptoms to be noted in these verses 19–17, are 'the quick raw flesh in the tumour,' indicating a sharp, corrosive humour, breaking through the skin in a particular part. It was thus distinguished from a disorder, called milkeed, the leprosy, but of another nature, which freely broke out in a white scurf all over the body, but without the raw flesh. The former indicated an inveterate leprosy, and whenever it appeared rendered the person unclean; but the latter did not. 'As these are thus contrasted, the latter aptly represents that consciousness of sin which produces unreserved ingenuous confessions, and patience of reproof; and the former may perhaps denote the disposition of unhumbled sinners to resist conviction, and manifest the clearest evidence of criminality, to be angry with the mildest reproof.—I.

it is but a scab: and he [i]shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

7 But if the scab [k]spread much abroad in the skin, after that he hath been seen of the priest for his cleansing, he shall be seen of the priest again.

10 And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the rising be white in the skin, and it have turned the hair white, and there be [l]quick raw flesh[3] in the rising,

11 It is an old leprosy in the skin of his flesh; and the priest shall pronounce him unclean, and shall not shut him up; for he is unclean.

12 And if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin, and the leprosy [m]cover all the skin of him that hath the plague, from his head even to his foot, wheresoever the priest looketh;

13 Then the priest shall consider: and, behold, if the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague; it is all turned white: he is clean.[4]

sensual, superstitious, and earthly-minded men, and even the most distant approaches and temptations to it. But if at any time I be defiled therewith, without delay should I apply the cleansing blood and Spirit of Jesus Christ to my soul; bitterly lament that the tendency will not be wholly extirpated till the evening-tide of my death; and, if I am the Lord's, diligently aim to be holy as he is holy, and perfect as my Father who is in heaven is perfect.

CHAPTER XII. REFLECTIONS. — What alarming stigmas the Lord put upon that sex by which sin entered into our race, till Jesus, the woman's seed, had finished trangression! but alas! sinful uncleanness cleaves to all, yea, even to our most natural and necessary actions, and would for ever exclude us from fellowship with God in his ordinances, and in heaven, had not he sent forth his Son to be the propitiation for our sins, and the fountain opened to purge away our sin and our uncleanness. So infectious is original corruption, and so infinitely necessary is it to improve Jesus' atonement and purifying influence, while we thank him for his mercies, and devote ourselves to his service.—Let parents consider what gratitude, what thanksgiving, what solemn dedication of themselves and seed to God ought to attend safe deliveries in childbirth, and how desirable, comfortable, and edifying to have children early circumcised with the circumcision which is of Christ!

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 2. Leprosy, derived from a Greek word signifying a scale, is one of the most terrible of the many diseases our 'flesh is heir to.' Willan describes three varieties that have been observed in Western Europe, and Mason Good, who examined the subject, not merely as a physician, but as an expositor of Scripture, considers them as identical with the three forms described by Moses about 3000 years ago. Bateman is disposed to consider the Jewish leprosy as confined to one incurable form: but, under the general name bahereth, Moses includes three specific varieties, one of which (ver. 39) does not even render the patient unclean. These three forms of the disease are all characterized as commencing with bright spots, depressed in the centre, or as Moses describes it, lower than the skin, and surrounded by reddish prominent circles. Sometimes these spots are as small as if produced by the puncture of a pin, and frequently situated on the front of the legs, immediately below the knees, or about the elbows, and sometimes on the face; they soon enlarge, generally preserving a circular form, and are propagated to different parts until they finally coalesce and cover the whole body; in one species with white scaly incrustation, in another with patches dark and livid, and in either case extremely loathsome to the beholders and distressing to the sufferer. But though the leprosy appears at first as a mere local disease in the skin, it afterwards discovers its constitutional character, and the bones and joints, and in some cases the teeth, are affected; the toes and fingers fall off in succession, and the body remains a miserable fragment of its former self, where life still lingers in the midst of indescribable torments. The disease, in certain of its stages and circumstances, is confessedly contagious, though this characteristic, on an imperfect induction of observations and facts, Rayer has ventured to deny; and in every sense in which a disease can be so called it is also hereditary. Amongst the most striking peculiarities of this disease, as observed by medical travellers in some of the Asiatic islands, is the fearful and disgusting demoralization which reigns in the separated dwellings of the miserable outcasts; and in this combination of sin and misery, mutually producing one another, the victim frequently lingers during fifty years, in body and spirit waxing worse and worse—the emblem of sin, the warning of judgment to sinners. C.]

Ver. 3. [The whitening of the hair by age is one of the natural admonitions whereby man is warned, 'Prepare to meet thy God,' Am. 4. 12. A similar but premature whitening by the leprosy gave warning

INTERIOR OF THE MOSQUE OF AMR—NEAR WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED. [LEVITICUS, xiii :1.]—We give here a view of the Mosque of Amr, because it helps us to see a place of worship as it looks to-day, in the land of Egypt, where Moses grew up. This is in the neighborhood of old Cairo, and as Moses grew up at Memphis and was educated at Heliopolis, in going from Memphis to Heliopolis he would pass through this same neighborhood where this mosque stands to-day. This is the most interesting mosque in Cairo. There is almost a wilderness of columns of different styles of architecture, perhaps taken from older buildings and brought together here to adorn this one. There are a couple of columns on the west side of the mosque once used as a test of character. They were said to be so close together that only an honest man could squeeze through them. The Khedive has now walled up this space.

19 And in the place of the bile there be a white rising, or a bright spot, white, and somewhat reddish,[6] and it be showed to the priest;

20 And if, when the priest seeth it, behold, it[o] be in sight lower than the skin, and the hair thereof be turned white, the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague of leprosy broken out of the bile.

21 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hairs therein, and if it be not lower than the skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days:

22 And if it spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague.

23 But if the bright [p]spot stay in his place, and spread not, it is a burning bile; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

25 Then the priest shall look upon it: and, behold, if the hair in the bright spot be [q]turned white, and it be in sight deeper than the skin, it is a leprosy broken out in the burning; wherefore the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

26 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hair in the bright spot, and it be no lower than the other skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days.

27 And the priest shall look upon him the seventh day: and if it be spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

28 And if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not in the skin, but it be somewhat dark; it is a rising of the burning, and the priest shall pronounce him clean: for it is an inflammation of the burning.

29 ¶ If a man or woman have a plague upon the [r]head or the beard;[1]

30 Then the priest shall see the plague: and, behold, if it be in sight [s]deeper than the skin, and there be in it a yellow thin hair; then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a dry scall, even a leprosy upon the head or beard.

31 And if the priest look on the plague of the scall, and, behold, it be not in sight deeper than the skin, and that there is no black hair in it; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague of the scall seven days.

32 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the plague: and, behold, if the scall spread not, and there be in it no yellow hair, and the scall be [t]not in sight deeper than the skin,

33 He shall be [u]shaven, but the scall shall he not shave; and the priest shall shut up him that hath the scall seven days more.

34 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the scall: and, behold, if the scall be [v]not spread in the skin, nor be in sight deeper than the skin; then the priest shall pronounce him clean: and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

35 But if the scall [w]spread much in the skin after his cleansing;

36 Then the priest shall look on him: and, behold, if the scall be spread in the skin, the priest shall not seek for yellow hair; he is unclean.

37 But if the scall be in his sight [x]at a [2]stay, and that there is black hair grown up therein; the scall is healed, he is clean: and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

38 ¶ If a [y]man also or a woman have in the skin of their flesh bright spots, even white bright spots;

39 Then the priest shall look: and, behold, if the bright spots in the skin of their flesh be darkish white; it is a freckled spot that groweth in the skin: he is clean.

40 And the man whose [z]hair is fallen off his head, he is bald;[3] yet is he clean.

41 And he that hath his hair fallen off from the part of his head toward his face, he is forehead-bald; yet is he clean.

42 And if there be in the [a]bald head, or bald forehead, a white reddish sore; it is a leprosy sprung up in his bald head, or his bald forehead:

43 Then the priest shall look upon it: and, behold, if the rising of the sore be white reddish in his bald-head, or in his bald forehead, as the leprosy appeareth in the skin of the flesh,

44 He is a leprous man, he is unclean: the priest shall pronounce him utterly[4] unclean; his plague is in his head.

45 And the leper, in whom the plague is, [b]his clothes shall be rent, and his head bare, and he shall put a covering upon his upper lip, and shall cry, [c]Unclean, unclean.

46 All the days wherein the plague shall be in him he shall be defiled; he is unclean, he shall dwell alone; [d]without the camp shall his habitation be.[5]

[6] Here the priests are directed how to distinguish between any ordinary malady which might follow an old ulcer after it had been healed, and the leprosy breaking out on the spot. The word rendered 'reddish' probably signifies 'very shining,' and seems distinguished from a dusky white, as a symptom of leprosy.—J.

[7] Heb. a burning fire.

[8] This is a case of leprosy springing from another skin affection—such as a burn, or a carbuncle, or a boil.—F.

[9] Bright spot. How expressive as an emblem of sin and sinners. It is but a spot, for which the sinner pleads as Lot for Zoar, 'Is it not a little one?' Ge. 19. 20. Nay, of which he affirms, as rebellious Israel, 'I am innocent, I have not sinned,' Je. 2. 35. It is a bright spot, the florid complexion of youth and health. So, the fools that 'make a mock at sin,' Pr. 14. 9. do also often glory in their shame, Phi. 3. 19. And in this false judgment the world cordially joins, and 'they that forsake the law praise the wicked,' Pr. 28. 4. The wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the Lord abhorreth, Ps. 10. 3. And knowing the judgment of God, that they who commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them.—C.

[1] The priests were here taught to distinguish the leprosy among the hair on the head or beard from other disorders which might resemble it. The yellow thin hair, instead of the white, was here the symptom of leprosy in connection with the marks before laid down, and the black hair of the contrary.—J.

[2] Leprosy brought to a stay was healed. So 'wicked men and seducers naturally wax worse and worse,' 2 Ti. 3. 13. but if their sin be once arrested in this downward course, the sinners is saved. He that, by grace, 'stands still, sees 'the salvation of God,' Ex. 14. 13. Paul the persecutor is smitten to the ground, and rises Paul the apostle and faithful servant of Jesus, Ac. 9. 4, 20.—C.

[3] Mi. 3. 1, 11. Is. 9. 15. 2 Th. 2. 10, 12. 2 Ch. 28. 22.

[4] It is a well-known medical fact, that certain eruptions on the head are peculiarly inveterate. The leprous head is pronounced 'utterly unclean;' spiritually it is the disease described, Ro. 1. 22, 28. in which men 'professing themselves wise, become fools,' when, 'even as they do not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gives them over to a reprobate mind.' These are utterly unclean, their leprosy is in their head.—C.

[5] It is a remarkable circumstance, that the Jews, who are so scrupulous in their observance of the ceremonial law, have not the least regard to this law of leprosy, but suffer lepers to live among them, and to converse with them, as if they were not unclean.—J.

[8] The leprosy in the bald head is here distinguished from mere baldness. The word rendered 'reddish' here also means very shining. It is observable that he that was leprous in the head was pronounced 'utterly unclean.' This denoted the great danger of bad principles.—J.

[c] It would seem that a number of cutaneous diseases, different in origin, in symptom, and in kind, are here grouped under the one name leprosy. Some of them do not render the person affected unclean; some are curable; while some are said to be utterly unclean, and appear to have been considered incurable. There is little, if any, resemblance between any of these forms of what may be termed Mosaic leprosy and the loathsome disease which now gets that name in the East. The so-called leprosy of modern Syria is Elephantiasis Graecorum. It is common in some few villages in the country. In Damascus there are two hospitals for lepers or persons afflicted with elephantiasis, but I have never heard of a native Damascene being afflicted with it.—P.

49 And if the plague be greenish or reddish in the garment, or in the skin, either in the warp or in the woof, or in any thing of skin; it is a plague of leprosy, and shall be showed unto the priest.

50 And the priest shall look upon the plague, and shut up it that hath the plague seven days.

51 And he shall look on the plague on the seventh day: if the plague be [h]spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in a skin, or in any work that is made of skin, the plague is a [i]fretting leprosy; it is unclean.

52 He shall therefore [k]burn that garment, whether warp or woof, in woollen or in linen, or any thing of skin, wherein the plague is: for it is a fretting leprosy; it shall be burnt in the fire.

53 And if the priest shall look, and, behold, the plague be not spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin;

54 Then the priest shall command that they wash[l] the thing wherein the plague is, and he shall shut it up seven days more.

55 And the priest shall look on the plague after that it is washed: and, behold, [m]if the plague have not changed his colour, and the plague be not spread, it is unclean; thou shalt burn it in the fire: it is fret inward, whether it be bare within or without.[7]

56 And if the priest look, and, behold, the plague be somewhat dark after the washing of it; then he shall rend it out of the garment, or out of the skin, or out of the warp, or out of the woof;

57 And if it appear still in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin, it is a spreading plague; thou shalt [n]burn that wherein the plague is with fire.

58 And the garment, either warp, or woof, or whatsoever thing of skin it be, which thou shalt wash, if the plague be departed from them, [o]then it shall be washed the second time, and shall be clean.

59 This[p] is the law of the plague of leprosy in a garment of woollen or linen, either in the warp, or woof, or any thing of skins, to pronounce it clean, or to pronounce it unclean.

A.M. 2514. B.C. 1490.

6 The transmission of the worst contagion by garments is the opinion of the highest medical authorities, Mead, Russel, &c., and it is admitted in the sanitary regulations of all civilized countries; but the specific symptoms of disease in garments have not been noticed by these writers. Michaelis, on the authority of an experienced manufacturer, describes a disease in woollen cloth, analogous to that described by Moses, and which he attributes to the combustible nature of dead wool—that is, the wool of sheep that had died by disease. Calmet attributed the disease both in men and in garments to microscopic animalcule, an idea that in stern observation and discovery renders not improbable. The Law whereby the suspected garment was to be tried by washing, and, if found infected, which condemned it to be rent or burned, ver. 56, 57, operated at once as a check upon the sale of pestilentious clothing, and the most effectual preservative of the public health; while it reminded the possessor of the moral contagion that may lie in the love of 'purple and fine linen,' Lu. 16. 19, the necessity of washing his robes, and making them white in the blood of the Lamb,' Re. 7. 14, 'of being saved with fear, pulled out of the fire,' and of 'hating even the garment spotted by the flesh,' Jude 23. —C.

CHAPTER XIV.

2 The rites and sacrifices in cleansing of the leper. 33 The signs of leprosy in a house. 48 The cleansing of that house.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 ¶ This shall be the law of the leper in the day of his cleansing: He [a]shall be brought unto the priest.

3 And the priest shall go forth out of the camp: and the priest shall look, and, behold, if the plague of leprosy be [b]healed in the leper;

4 Then shall the priest command to take for him that is to be cleansed [c]two birds[1] alive and clean, and [d]cedar-wood, and scarlet, and hyssop.

5 And the priest shall command that one of the birds be killed in an [e]earthen vessel over running water.

6 As for the [f]living bird, he shall take it, and the cedar-wood,[2] and the scarlet, and the hyssop,[3] and shall dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water;[4]

7 And he shall sprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed from the leprosy [g]seven times, and shall pronounce him clean, and shall [h]let the living bird loose into the open field.[5]

8 And he that is to be cleansed shall [i]wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, and wash himself in water, that he may be clean: and after that he shall come into the camp, and shall tarry abroad out of his tent seven days.[6]

9 But it shall be on the seventh day, that he shall shave all his hair off his head, and his beard, and his eyebrows, even all his hair he shall shave off: and he shall wash his clothes, also he shall wash his flesh in water, and he shall be clean.

10 And on the eighth day he shall take [k]two he-lambs without blemish, and one ewe-lamb

REFLECTIONS.—In this filthy distemper, for which no cure but the power of God is prescribed, with shame and confusion of face I behold the penal, the dreadful, the defiling, the spreading, and obstinate nature of reigning corruptions, and how they exclude from fellowship with God and his people! Jealous of myself, it becomes me to present my heart and my ways before my all-seeing High-priest that he may search and try me. If he find me pining away in mine iniquity, wilfully increasing unto more ungodliness, depending on self-righteousness as the ground of my acceptance with God, habitually disposed to rage at reproof, fixed in gross heresy, or given to boast of that which is plainly sinful, I am certainly a leper, a servant of sin; and let me with the deepest agony and grief bewail my condition, while by faith I apply to him, for his word only can effect the cure, and his grace relieve the misery. If he find in me the opposite marks of real grace, particularly a deep sense of universal filthiness in heart and life, still let me wash myself in Jesus' blood, on account of my remaining corruptions and daily infirmities.—Let me submit to his trial the garments of my conversation, that he may purge out what is amiss, and save my soul though my works should be burned up.—Let ministers learn with what tenderness and exact attention to God's prescriptions they should judge of the states of others in order either to admit them to, or exclude them from, the seals of God's covenant.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 4. The cedar wood mentioned here, and in Nu. 19. 6, is said not to be the cedar of Lebanon, so distinguished in Scripture for the uses of architecture, but the fragrant wood of the Juniperus Oxycedrus, which grows abundantly in Syria and Palestine. We are led, however, to believe it to be the cedar of Lebanon, and that it is used with the hyssop; (1) as representing the two scriptural limits of vegetation. Thus it is written, 1 Ki. 4. 30–33, 'And Solomon's wisdom excelled all the wisdom of the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt, and he spake of trees, from the cedar of Lebanon even to the hyssop that springeth out of the wall.' Now, as under the blessing of Heaven a wholesome vegetable diet is one of the chief remedies in cutaneous diseases, these two extremes might well represent the whole vegetable family. (2) The cedar, as an uncorruptible wood, might naturally represent the constitution restored from corruption, and spiritually that better and incorruptible life of which bodily health is the best similitude, 1 Pe. 1. 23; while the hyssop might naturally set forth gratitude for those sanative qualities which God has so largely infused into the vegetable tribes, and spiritually those 'leaves for the healing of the nations,' Re. 22. 2, which flourish unfading on the tree of eternal life. By comparing He. 9. 19 with Is.

MOSQUE OF AMR—STANDING NEAR THE ISLAND OF RHODA WHERE MOSES WAS FOUND IN THE RIVER NILE. [Leviticus, xiv.] We give here a picture of the oldest mosque in Egypt to illustrate further the land of Moses. It is in Old Cairo, and its foundations were laid A. D. 643. It is called the Mosque of Amr because the land upon which it is built was given by Amr-ibu-el-Asi. Of the original mosque it is said very little remains. Nearly all of that building was burned down at the end of the ninth century. During the tenth century the mosque was enlarged and rebuilt. The court measures 350 by 400 feet, and the building contains 366 pillars. There is one row on the west side, three rows on the north and south sides, and six rows on the east side. In the northeast corner is the tomb of Abdallah, the son of Amr. Upon one of the pillars is the name Mu-ham-med. These pillars are of all styles of architecture, which is supposed to grow out of the fact that they were brought from other buildings in Cairo.

11 And the priest that maketh him clean shall present the man that is [8]to be made clean, and those things, before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

12 And the priest shall take [m]one he-lamb, and offer him for a trespass-offering, and the log of oil, and wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

13 And he shall slay the lamb [n]in the place where he shall kill the sin-offering and the burnt-offering, in the holy place: for as the sin-offering is the priest's, so is the trespass-offering: it is most holy.

14 And the priest shall [o]take some of the blood of the trespass-offering, and the priest shall put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

15 And the priest shall take some of the log[9] of oil, and pour it into the palm of his own left hand:

16 And the priest shall dip his right finger in the oil that is in his left hand, and shall sprinkle[q] of the oil with his finger seven times before the LORD.[8]

17 And of the [r]rest of the oil that is in his hand shall the priest put upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot, upon the blood[9] of the trespass-offering.

18 And the remnant of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall [s]pour upon the head of him that is to be cleansed; and the priest shall make[t] an atonement for him before the LORD.

19 And the priest shall [u]offer the sin-offering, and make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed from his uncleanness, and afterward he shall kill the burnt-offering.

20 And the priest shall [w]offer the burnt-offering and the meat-offering upon the altar: and[y] the priest shall make an atonement for him, and he shall be clean.

21 And if he [z]be poor, and cannot get[1] so much; then he shall take one lamb for a trespass-offering to be waved,[2] to make an atonement for him, and one tenth-deal of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat-offering, and a log of oil;

23 And[a] he shall bring them on the eighth day, for his cleansing, unto the priest, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, before the LORD.

24 And the priest shall take the lamb of the trespass-offering, and the log of oil, and the priest shall wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

25 And he shall kill the lamb of the trespass-offering, and the priest shall [b]take some of the blood of the trespass-offering,[3] and put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

26 And the priest shall pour of the oil into the palm of his own left hand.[4]

27 And the priest shall sprinkle with his right finger some of the oil that is in his left hand seven times before the LORD.

28 And the priest shall put of the oil that is in his hand upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot, upon the place of the blood of the trespass-offering.

29 And the [c]rest of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall put upon the head of him that is to be cleansed, [d]to make an atonement for him before the LORD.

32 This is the law of him in whom is the plague of leprosy, whose [f]hand is not able to get that which pertaineth to his cleansing.

33 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

34 When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I [g]give to you for a possession, and I [h]put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession;

35 And he that owneth the house shall come and tell the priest, saying, It seemeth to me there is as it were a plague in the house:

1. 18 we discover that the scarlet represents here the deep dye of sin, which, dipped in the living waters of mercy, become as wool and as snow. C.]

Ver. 5. [The earthen vessel represents the humiliated body in which Christ died; the running water is the emblem of that ever-enduring, that eternal life, the current of which is never exhausted, which our Lord possessed in himself, and which he freely bestows on all who hear him, Jn. 10. 28. C.]

Ver. 35. [Would we judge aright of these ancient laws delivered to Moses, we must examine them in their bearing upon modern circumstances. Now, viewed in this light, there are few things in modern times more requiring legislative interference and remedy than the houses ordinarily provided for the poor. Damp and ill-ventilated in one apartment, or admitting every blast in another, producing in proportion to their cost a larger return to the owner than the splendid dwellings of the rich—they furnish the perennial seeds of disease, waste and destroy their numerous and miserable inmates, become in the result an intolerable tax upon the community, who totally overlook the public nuisance concealed under the mask of private property. Now under these circumstances modern European jurisprudence offers to the miserable inhabitant of the unhealthy hovel no redress, beyond removal—a removal to as bad if not to worse; with still no remedy.

36 Then the priest shall command that they empty[6] the house before the priest go into it to see the plague, that all that is in the house be not made unclean; and afterward the priest shall go in to see the house.

37 And he shall look on the plague,[7] and, behold, if the plague be in the walls of the house with hollow strakes, greenish or reddish, which in sight are lower than the wall;

38 Then the priest shall go out of the house to the door of the house, and shut up the house seven days.

39 And the priest shall come again the seventh day, and shall look: and, behold, if the plague be spread in the walls of the house:

40 Then the priest shall command that they take[k] away the stones in which the plague is, and they shall cast them into an unclean place without the city.

41 And he shall cause the house to be scraped within round about, and they shall pour out the dust that they scrape off without the city into an unclean place.

42 And they shall take other stones, and put them in the place of those stones; and he shall take other mortar, and shall plaster the house.

43 And if the plague come again, and break out in the house, after that he hath taken away the stones, and after he hath scraped the house, and after it is plastered;

44 Then the priest shall come and look, and, behold, if[c] the plague be spread in the house, it is a fretting leprosy in the house: it is unclean.[8]

45 And he shall [l]break down the house, the stones of it, and the timber thereof, and all the mortar of the house; and he shall carry them forth out of the city into an unclean place.

46 Moreover, he that goeth into the house all the while that it is shut up shall be unclean until the even.

47 And he that lieth in the house shall wash his clothes; and he that eateth in the house shall wash his clothes.

48 ¶ And if the priest shall come in,[9] and look upon it, and, behold, the plague hath not spread in the house after the house was plastered; then the priest shall pronounce the house clean, because the plague is healed.

49 And he shall take to cleanse the house [m]two birds, and cedar-wood, and scarlet, and hyssop.

50 And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water.

51 And he shall take the cedar-wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times.

52 And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird, and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar-wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet.

53 But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and make an atonement for the house: and it shall be clean.

54 This[n] is the law for all manner of plague of leprosy, and scall.

55 And for the leprosy of a garment, and of a house,

56 And for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot;

57 To [o]teach when it is unclean, and [l]when it is clean: this is the law of leprosy.

7 This plague represented corruptions in families, nations, and churches.

The house leprosy here described has occasioned much perplexity to inquirers, and the difficulty has probably arisen from being led by the name to look upon this leprosy as we do as that in clothes, as something akin to the human disease so called. Here, clothes, and stones have not the same powers, but from some analogous circumstance, real or fanciful, the Israelites of men may be, and have been, by a figure of speech, applied to diseases in other things. Indeed, to this day, there are certain kinds of trees in Egypt and Palestine to which the name of leprosy is given. In Switzerland also they speak of a manner in buildings on the same principle, and why should we not understand the leprosy in buildings of the present text as something of a similar description? If we believe that the house leprosy was anything related to the disorder of the same name in man, it is extremely difficult to account for the symptoms and mode of treatment; and we cannot do better than agree with the rabbins and some of the early Christian fathers, who believed that this leprosy was not natural, but was sent by God as an extraordinary punishment upon evil-doers, to compel them to the public acknowledgment and abandonment of some understood crime whereby others had been injured. — Pict. Bible. Various attempts have been made to explain this subject from infection from man and other natural causes; but there is no intimation whatever that the house leprosy was infectious to man. — A.

2 It is not needful for us particularly to consider the laws contained in this chapter, they are not binding on us. In some cases the disease mentioned, might be the result of wickedness; farthers of disease or infirmity, and even where neither guilt or disease but actual sin was implied, might be thus marked, to show how a fallen nature pollutes everything we do. — Scott.

2 The running issue evidently included all forms of inflammation terminating in a constant purulent discharge; ver. 8 seeming evidently to include disease of the lungs; and these, whether contagious or otherwise, are all ranked, and most justly, under one common character of unclean issue: but why, if the issue be stopped, is the patient still unclean? He remains so only till he make public acknowledgment of the mercy of God. Note. The regenerate soul, in which the power of sin is stopped, feels most sensitively the stains of its former disease. Paul ranked weekly and justly amongst the chief of saints. But Paul's awakened memory and sensitive conscience pronounced him the chief of sinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15–17.

but the reiterated renewal of the still hopeless experiment. Upon this scene of darkness let us pour the light of God's law by Moses. The owner, the occupying tenant, ver. 35, states to the priest his suspicion that the house is infected. It must be no bare attempt at annoyance to his superior, for all the furniture of the occupant must be removed, and he must seek another residence while due examination is made. Should the examination lead to suspicions, cleansing and due repairs are employed, and should these suspicions be confirmed, the wretched dwelling is razed to the very foundation, and its very dust is carried forth out of the city lest its floating particles should endanger the public health! Were a commission of learned, philanthropic, and godly physicians, carrying this law in their hands, to pass through the narrow and miserable lanes of our towns and cities, and visit the unhappy refuges of our condensed and diseased pauperism, what an architectural revolution would be produced! and how deeply would public health and private comfort be bound to offer the sacrifice of thankfulness to God! But while the fact of house contagion cannot be doubted, its causes are so obscure that little is yet accurately known. Decaying materials, confined air, microscopic animalculæ and plants; various miasmata, and animal exudation may all, with other causes, be the instruments of the judgments of God. But the cause of heart contagion the word of God has clearly developed, and we know that because of sin 'the earthly house of this tabernacle' has been condemned by the priest that examined it, and must be 'dissolved,' and that believers change their unhealthy residence for a 'building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens,' 2 Co. 5. 1. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—No human endeavours, but God alone, can cure my spiritual plagues. By his grace, through the application of the blood and Spirit of Jesus, the God-man—of Jesus, the once slain, but now living and ascended Saviour—I must be cleansed from my reigning corruptions. Thus shall I have access into God's camp, his church below, and as a bird escaped, fly away towards heaven, rejoicing in my deliverance. But not till, through the Spirit, I repeatedly wash myself and my performances in the fountain of his blood, till I search out and mortify my corruptions, the deeds of my body, and receive the full efficacy of Jesus' righteousness, and the influences of his blessed Spirit, for the sanctification of my whole powers and members, shall I be admitted to my real habitation, or enter into unreserved and immediate fellowship with divine persons, holy angels, and glorified saints. But blessed be the Lord that my all-comprehending offering, Christ Jesus, suits me, whether I be poor or rich, and renders my person, and all my services, constantly acceptable before God. —In this plague of the house, let me observe how sin worketh the dissolution not only of human bodies, but of families, nations, and churches, and that no human projects, but Jesus and his Spirit preached and applied, can prevent their destruction, and that where there is a continued obstinacy in sinning, notwithstanding mercies and judgments, inevitable ruin must necessarily ensue.

A.M. 2514. B.C. 1490.

5 And whosoever toucheth his bed [f]shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

6 And he that sitteth on any thing whereon he sat that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

7 And he that toucheth the flesh of him that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

8 And if he that hath the issue [g]spit upon him that is clean; then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

9 And what saddle soever he rideth upon that hath the issue shall be unclean.

10 And whosoever toucheth any thing that was under him shall be unclean until the even: and he that beareth any of those things shall wash[h] his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

11 And whomsoever he toucheth that hath the issue, and hath not rinsed his hands in water, [h]he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

12 And the [i]vessel of earth that he toucheth which hath the issue shall be broken;[4] and every vessel of wood shall be rinsed in water.[5]

13 And when he that hath an issue is cleansed of his issue,[6] then he shall number to himself seven[k] days for his cleansing, and [l]wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in running water, and shall be clean.

14 And on the eighth day he shall take to him [m]two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, and come before the LORD unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and give them unto the priest.

15 And the priest shall offer them, the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering: and the [n]priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD for his issue.

16 And if any man's [o]seed of copulation go out from him, then he shall wash all his flesh in water, and be unclean until the even.

17 And every garment, and every skin, whereon is the seed of copulation, shall be washed with water, and be unclean until the even.

18 The [p]woman also with whom man shall lie with seed of copulation, they shall both bathe themselves in water, and be unclean until the even.

19 ¶ And if a woman [q]have an issue, and her issue in her flesh be blood, she shall be put apart[7] seven days; and whosoever toucheth her shall be unclean until the even.[8]

20 And [r]every thing that she lieth upon in her separation shall be unclean; every thing also that she sitteth upon shall be unclean.

21 And whosoever toucheth her bed [s]shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

22 And whosoever toucheth any thing that she sat upon shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

23 And if it be on her bed, or on any thing whereon she sitteth, when he toucheth it, he shall be unclean until the even.

24 And if any man [t]lie with her at all, and her flowers be upon him, he shall be unclean seven days; and all the bed whereon he lieth shall be unclean.

25 And if a woman [u]have an issue of her blood many days out of the time of her separation; or if it run beyond the time of her separation; all the days of the issue of her uncleanness shall be as the days of her separation: she shall be unclean.

26 Every bed whereon she lieth all the days of her issue shall be unto her as the bed of her separation; and whatsoever she sitteth upon shall be unclean, as the uncleanness of her separation.

27 And whosoever toucheth those things shall be unclean, and [v]shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

28 But if she be cleansed of her issue, then she shall [w]number to herself seven days, and after that she shall be clean.

29 And [x]on the eighth day she shall take unto her two turtles, or two young pigeons,[9] and bring them unto the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

30 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering: and the priest shall make an atonement for her before the LORD for the issue of her uncleanness.

31 Thus[a] shall ye separate the children of Israel from their uncleanness; that they die not in their uncleanness, when they defile my tabernacle that is among them.[1]

32 This[b] is the law of him that hath an issue, and of him whose seed goeth from him, and is defiled therewith;

33 And of her that is sick of her flowers, and of him that hath an issue, of the man, and of the woman, and of him that lieth with her which is unclean.[2]

[k] Eight points require watchfulness, in order to avoid uncleanness by intercourse with the unclean. The bed, the seat, the flesh, the spittle, the saddle—rather litter—anything that has been under him—the person touched by him—must all be scrupulously avoided, and the vessels he has used must according to their material, be washed or broken. What a memento of spiritual watchfulness against those "evil communications that corrupt good manners!" 1 Co. 15. 33.—C.

[h] The vessel of earth that the unclean has touched must be broken—that is, not every time he has touched it, but when he has ceased to use it: and whether such vessels may have been of the porous and absorbing character of much of the modern pottery of the East, used for cooling water by filtration and evaporation, or of a glazed and more perfect manufacture, still the breaking was a valuable sanitary regulation; while it ministered to the recovered invalid a sanitary memorial, that, at best, he "dwelt in a house of clay," Job 4. 19, soon to be broken in pieces. The vessel of wood was merely used in order to its cleansing; most probably the beautifully varnished wooden ware of eastern countries rendered impervious to fluids and thereby enabled to resist or cast off any contagious matter. The distinction between the vessels forms a just emblem of the state of man; the body must be broken, the spirit washed, Jn. 3. 5; the body is for sacrifice, the spirit for renewal, Ro. 12. 1, 2.—C.

[9] In the cases of uncleanness here specified, even where they are properly called infirmities, yet springing from natural corruption, moral pollution is implied, and sacrifices for atonement and purification must therefore be offered; and in this case the woman must present both a sin-offering and a burnt-offering.—I.

[1] It is here intimated that these laws were principally intended to teach the Israelites reverence for God in his sanctuary; and that being sinners, and stained with pollution in all their services, they constantly required forgiveness and purification through the blood of atonement and the sanctification of the Holy Spirit.—I.

[b] See ver. 2–30; ch. xv.; 11. 46. Nu. 5. 29; 6. 13; 19. 14.

[2] All the before-mentioned laws concerning uncleanness and the rites of purification were designed to impress on the Hebrew people the necessity of inward cleanness and purity of mind. And were further intended to prevent the Israelites from being drawn into idolatry by establishing a wide difference of customs and habits between them and the surrounding heathen.—Wells.

fectious are the scandalous outbreakings of original and inward corruption, and particularly those which are anyway connected with fleshly lusts. Neither the corrupters nor the corrupted can have fellowship with God or his people, but in a believing improvement of Jesus' blood and Spirit, and in bitter and unfeigned repentance of their sin. Let my body, therefore, as well as my soul, be kept pure for the Lord. Let me, with the most earnest care, avoid the company of apostate, erroneous, unchaste, frothy, and wicked persons; and have no fellowship in thought, word, or deed, with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Without this circumspection and care, I shall certainly contract guilt, stains, infamy, and hurt, which will not be purged away, but follow me till I die.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 How the high-priest must enter into the holy place. 11 The sin-offering for himself. 15 The sin-offering for the people. 20 The scape-goat. 29 The yearly feast of the expiations.

AND [a]the LORD spake unto Moses, after [b]the death of the two sons of Aaron, when they offered before the LORD, and died;

2 And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he [c]come not at all times into the holy place within the vail before the mercy-seat, which is upon the ark, that he die not: for I will [d]appear in the cloud upon the mercy-seat.[1]

3 Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place; with[e] a young bullock for a sin-offering, and a ram for a burnt-offering.

4 He shall [f]put on the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with the linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments; therefore shall he [g]wash his flesh in water, and so put them on.

5 And he shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel two [h]kids of the goats for a sin-offering, and one ram for a burnt-offering.

6 And Aaron shall offer [i]his bullock of the sin-offering which is for himself, and make an atonement for himself, and for his house.

7 And he shall take the two goats, and present[k] them before the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And Aaron shall cast [l]lots[2] upon the two goats; one lot for the LORD, and the other lot for the scape-goat.[3]

9 And Aaron shall [m]bring the goat upon which the LORD's lot fell,[4] and offer [n]him for a sin-offering.

10 But the [o]goat on which the lot fell to be the scape-goat shall be presented alive before the LORD, to make an atonement with him, and to let him go for a scape-goat into the wilderness.

11 ¶ And Aaron shall bring the bullock of the sin-offering which is for himself, and shall make an atonement for himself, and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin-offering which is for himself.

12 And he shall [p]take a censer full of burning coals of fire from off the altar before the LORD, and his hands full of sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the vail.

13 And[q] he shall put the incense upon the fire before the LORD, that the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy-seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not.

14 And [r]he shall take of the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it with his finger [5]upon the mercy-seat eastward; and before the mercy-seat shall he sprinkle of the blood with his finger seven times.[6]

15 ¶ Then shall he [s]kill the goat of the sin-offering that is for the people, and bring his blood within the vail, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon[7] the mercy-seat, and before the mercy-seat.

16 And he shall [t]make an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins; and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation that remaineth[8] among them [u]in the midst of their uncleanness.

17 And there shall be [z]no man[9] in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel.[1]

18 And he shall [y]go out unto the altar that is before the LORD, and make an atonement for it; and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar[2] round about.

19 And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and [z]hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

20 ¶ And when he hath made an end of [a]reconciling the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the [b]live goat:

21 And Aaron shall [c]lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man[3] into the wilderness.

22 And the goat shall [d]bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited:[4] and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness.

23 And Aaron shall come into the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall [e]put off the linen garments[5] which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there;

24 And he shall [f]wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments, and come forth, and offer his burnt-offering, and the burnt-offering of the people, and make an atonement for himself, and for the people.

The putting on of robes of white linen, to denote at once humility and purity. 3. The offering for the people — two goats. 4. The burning of incense so that its smoke might cover the mercy-seat. 5. 1 Jewish tradition states that the 'lots' were originally of box-wood, but afterwards of gold. On one was inscribed, 'for Jehovah,' on the other, 'for azazel.'—P.

2 The Hebrew word translated 'scape-goat' is azazel, and has been variously interpreted —1. Some say it means the goat itself, which was so called from the fact of its being sent away free; hence the English phrase 'scape-goat.' 2. Some say Azazel is a place to which the goat was sent. And many thus regard it as a proper name. 3. Others say it means an evil spirit. 4. Others, the devil. 5. Others regard it as an abstract noun, and interpret, 'for complete sending away or removal.' The last seems to be the true meaning. The sins of the people being confessed by the priest over the head of the goat, and thus transferred or imputed to it, the goat was then sent away to the unpeopled desert. The rite thus symbolized the complete removal of sin and guilt.—P.

9 The high-priest was the most eminent type of Christ, and the sacrifices on this the great day of atonement the most striking representation of the sufferings of Christ on earth, and of his intercession in heaven. It is interesting to observe that all other persons, even the priests, were strictly prohibited from entering within the tabernacle while the high-priest officiated, intimating that no other could share the honours of Christ's mediatory office.—J.

1 It would appear from the description here given that the high-priest went at least three times within the veil to the holy of holies on the day of atonement 1. With the incense, ver. 12; 2. To sprinkle the blood of the bullock, ver. 14; and 3. With the blood of the goat. According to the Talmud he went in a fourth time to bring out the censer of incense. This is not opposed to the statement of Paul in He. 9. 7, for they were only parts of one great annual festival.—P.

Ver. 10. [To a few special points in this divine ordinance let us direct our attention—matters common to this and other sacrifices require no particular notice. The lot was a divine ordinance, Pr. 18. 18, constituting an authorized appeal to the omniscience and providence of God. So it was according to 'the wisdom and constant self-sacrificing love of God,' Ac. 2. 23, that Christ should suffer in the flesh, as the one creature died; and that he should be 'quickened by the Spirit,' 1 Pe. 3. 18, as the other escaped. C.]

WATER CARRIERS—CHARACTERISTIC OF EGYPT FROM THE TIME OF MOSES TO THE PRESENT. [LEVITICUS, xvi.]—Change is a characteristic of modern civilization. But in the civilization of Egypt, customs and habits have continued to the present time very much as they were in the days of Moses. The scene we give above of the water carriers of Egypt is one common to the country in all ages of its history. The water carrier is called the sakka. He plies his trade in the streets of Cairo. He carries a goat-skin upon his shoulder, and goes from house to house, and makes the bare means of subsistence by supplying the people with water. During eight months of the year he brings the water all the way from the Nile, but during the remaining four months, while the river is rising, he obtains his supply from the canals which intersect Cairo. These sakkas sell water also to people on the streets. The thirsty passer-by receives his draught in a brazen chalice, and for this he often bestows a small copper coin on the dispenser.

25 And the [g]fat of the sin-offering shall he burn upon the altar.

26 And he that let go the goat for the scape-goat shall [h]wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp.

27 And[i] the bullock for the sin-offering, and the goat for the sin-offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung.

28 And he that burneth them [k]shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

29 ¶ And this shall be a statute [l]for ever unto you: that in [m]the seventh month, on the tenth day of the month, ye shall [n]afflict your souls,[6] and do [o]no work at all, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you:

30 For on [p]that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, to cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sins before the LORD.

31 It[q] shall be a sabbath of rest unto you, and ye shall afflict your souls, by a statute for ever.

32 And [r]the priest whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall consecrate[7] to minister in the priest's office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement, and shall put on the linen clothes, even the holy garments.

33 And he shall make an atonement for the holy[s] sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar; and he shall make an atonement for the priests, and for all the people of the congregation.[8]

34 And this shall be an [t]everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins [u]once a year. And he did as the LORD commanded Moses.

Ver. 29. [Why is the day of atonement a day of affliction? Because it was the stated anniversary for confessing 'all iniquities and transgressions,' ver. 21, in the presence of God: and confession implies repentance, else it is lip-service and mockery; and repentance implies grief for and hatred of our sins, even when 'turning from them to God, with full purpose of and endeavour after new obedience;' the Saviour 'bearing our griefs, and carrying our sorrows,' Is. 53. 4, is no doubt a sight of 'great joy,' Lu. 2. 10, to believers; but the remembrance that he 'was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities,' Is. 53. 5, that 'in all our afflictions he was afflicted,' Is. 63. 9; nay, that by the sins of professed believers he is even now 'crucified afresh,' He. 6. 6, 'and put to an open shame'—these are the things that convert the day of atonement into a day of affliction, and commingle tears of sorrow with songs of joy. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In these ceremonial observances I am still directed to Jesus, as appointed by God, and fully qualified to make atonement for all the sins of a lost world. I behold him, in his debasement, stripped of his glorious robes of light and majesty, clothed with a mean but pure manhood; and at once standing as the laborious High-priest, and as the God-honouring and sin-pardoning sacrifice. He needed not to offer for himself; but the Lord lays upon him the iniquities of us all. As our sacrifice he atones for them, and as our scape-goat he carries them all into the land of forgetfulness; dying for our offences, but raised again, and ascending to glory, for our justification. Behold him entering into the celestial oracle in the virtue of his sacrifice! There he appears in the presence of God for us, pleading his own merits, and offering up the incense of continual intercession for us, putting off his robes of debasement, laying aside every vestige of the likeness of sinful flesh, and clothed and crowned with glory and honour. The sprinkling of his blood sanctifies the church, and all the ordinances of it; and renders our sacrifices and incense of grateful obedience, of fervent prayer and praise, acceptable to his Father. He returns also in the Spirit from within the veil to bless all nations in the gospel; and at last will return personally in the clouds, without sin, unto our eternal salvation. But while, in the purification of these agents after their sacred work, I perceive the imperfections of the most noted ceremonies for purging the conscience, let me diligently observe what pollution I contract in my most religious, my most solemn services, and let me live by faith, looking to Jesus whom I have pierced, and mourning bitterly over my transgressions as the cause of his sufferings! Nor let me ever forget what infinite glories must dwell in Christ, who answers, nay, infinitely more than answers, to all these sacrifices, these oblations, these priests, these means of purification, of which I have hitherto read!
